The Cuban Missile Crisi A Nuclear Order of Battle October/November 1962 by Robert S. Norris A Presentation at the Woodrow Wilson Center

II. A Regional Nuclear War in the European Theater

Nuclear weapon systems on both sides were available in and around Europe and could have been employed if escalation had occurred. If the nuclear exchanges were confined to Europe and the western part of the USSR the numbers of weapons were approximately equal, a scenario unlikely at the time since Atlantic Command and European Command forces were part of the SIOP. Nevertheless, it is instructive to estimate Europe's possible role in the crisis and the destruction that might have ensued. Medium-range and intermediate-range missiles and fighter bombers made up US/NATO and Soviet regional forces in the European theater.

U.S./NATO weapons facing east. In 1962 the U.S. had approximately 4375 nuclear weapons deployed in Europe.22 Most were tactical nuclear weapons (e.g., 155 mm and 203 mm artillery shells, Nike Hercules SAMs, land mines and shortrange missiles) intended for the nuclear battlefield. But roughly ten percent or so, about 450 nuclear weapons, were for ballistic missiles (Thor and Jupiter), cruise missiles (Matador and Mace), and bombs for Air Force fighter-bombers at US/NATO bases and Navy carrier-based planes within range to hit targets in the Soviet Union or Warsaw Pact nations. The U.S. and NATO fighter bombers had a supply of nuclear bombs deployed at bases in Germany, Italy, Greece, Turkey, the United Kingdom and the Netherlands and aboard for U.S. Sixth Fleet aircraft carriers. 23 The Air Force and Navy planes would have had to contend with a formidable Soviet air defense system on their way to targets in the Soviet Union.

Soviet weapons facing west. In 1962 the Soviet Union had over 550 SS-4s and SS-5s. 24 Many were likely aimed at European targets with a portion targeted on U.S. bases and U.S. allies in the Pacific region. Soviet fighter bombers based near the western border of the Soviet Union may have had missions to hit targets in Western Europe. In sum, there were approximately 500 nuclear weapons available to the United States to attack targets in the western USSR and a slightly higher number of Soviet nuclear weapons that would have hit European targets with catastrophic results.

III. A Local Nuclear War in and around Cuba

Initial use of a nuclear weapon might have begun in and around Cuba. The most likely scenario would have been use of Soviet tactical nuclear weapons to attack and repel American forces during an invasion of Cuba. If American soldiers were killed, as they surely would have been, the United States would have had to retaliate and more than likely the Soviets would have responded. A most dire situation for the United States would have been the launching of SS-4 MRBMs to American cities within its range of 1300 statute miles. According to Major General Igor Stastenko, commander of the Soviet missile troops on Cuba, there were only six to eight missiles operational on October 28, when the dismantlement order from Moscow arrived. We do not know precisely how ready they were or whether they were specifically targeted at American cities. Cities along the eastern seaboard as far north as Washington, DC were within range as were New Orleans, Houston, and Dallas to the west and Cincinnati to the northwest. Even with its poor accuracy a one megaton detonation in or around those American cities would have caused hundreds of thousands of deaths. We do not know what role nuclear weapons played in various OPLANS that were outlines to be used to invade Cuba. The majority view within the American military was that conventional forces were probably adequate to attack and destroy Soviet forces on Cuba without the use of nuclear weapons.

During the Second World War, Edward of Wales (who had abdicated as King 1936) was at first stationed with the British Military Mission to France but after the fall of France was appointed Governor [military] of the Bahamas. After the war, Edward spent the rest of his life in France. He and Wallis remained married until his death in 1972; they had no children. Ed Donegan asserts he signed military defense deals with Bermuda operating with the CIA through Bermuda Dunes and El Mirador (Guatemala lookout natural feature) for Guatemala and Indonesia, Cuba, and other subversion and overthrow activity under Eisenhower and V.P. Nixon. This included per Col Prouty (friend of the Donegan's) plans in 1958 for Indonesia and credible sources (not police sources) show the CIA created and groomed the Obama Jr family.

I am Edward Paul Donegan a first hand witness to what is Super-conspiracy Theory and I have experienced illegal harassment from high level programs run by the FBI and others who fear the historical connections their agencies and parents or grand parents had in a very long running Special Relationship of corruptly crony backed global businesses subverting governments including the USA around the world.

Part of the Super-conspiracy Theory to be outlined here is that George H.W. Bush and family of his before and after participated in the assassination of JFK and have covered up that and other assassinations but the information is now becoming available despite the cover-up and here is where Jen Moore and Ed Donegan and Col. Fletcher Prouty (among others who can corroborate our combined story) fit in to the timeline.

Introducing the 3 Kennedy Assassination sources

- Col Fletcher Prouty Wrote Guns of Dallas, VP Nixon Indonesia 1958, became basis of JFK movie by Oliver Stone and same book introduced by Jesse Ventura. Ed was in Donegan family as frinds of Prouty but as child too young to understand it all.

> Specific Contributions Col Prouty wrote about Big Business and disputes between Nixon controlled Los Angeles Aerospace and LBJ controlled Texas Aerospace, and the Military Industrial Complex generally, regime change, and to over throw Indonesia and the entire world with a CIA Coup De Tat.
> Prouty was an insider to the Eisenhower-Nixon 1950s CIA overthrow plans and later in the JFK admin in the same role. His books most notably were JFK: The CIA, Vietnam, and the Plot to Assassinate John F. Kennedy and the very similar book The Secret Team: The CIA and Its Allies in Control of the United States and the World the latter being team of big business buddies tied of world commerce and CIA plans for that activity.

He also wrote articles such as The GUNS of DALLAS published separately showing the CIA killed JFK and he also wrote Indonesia 1958: Nixon, the CIA, and the Secret War showing from his own work the plan to overthrow Sukarno with Suharto and that plan underway in 1958 as Eisenhower signed off on it in 1957. This was one of the Secret Teams Secret Wars.

Edward Paul Donegan and the Donegan family are also connected to this piece as was the birth of Barrack Obama Jr under CIA plans for Indonesia started with an agreements force on the Donegan's in 1957 and initiated in 1958 culminating with the birth of Barrack Obama Jr. in Los Angeles in 1961 to a CIA concocted family whose goal was to give him deep cover from a very early age, starting at birth.

- Ted Gunderson FBI picks up trail The well placed well informed Ted Gunderson suspects an inside job of big businesses as Prouty said, and is correct but dies under FBI harassment.

Specific Contributions Ted Gunderson was an insider to the Kennedy administration certainly to Robert F. Kennedy as an anti-mob anti rackets FBI agent and later investigator of the JFK assassination. Likely he knew Dorothy Kilgallen and was a source for her. His works were on World Global Business of corruption, sex workers, Illuminati parties of Free Mason groups, drug dealing, etc., and how the NWO big business keeps troops loyal in corrupt Cabal. He considered these activities and form of organizations Satanic in their principles and practices many of whom use that in logos such as Roths Childs "devils children" for whatever sense they are their logos mean that.

Ted Gunderson realized some master plan for some reason included Marilyn Monroe, McMartin child abuse, Jeffery McDonald's family, Sunny Bono, and others.

- Ed Donegan in combination with Jen Moore can complete the entire picture. The DOnegan family OSS CIA history is where the conspiracy grew out of, grooming CIA FBI projects for anti communism during the Cold War the CIA wanted, now those big business families have moles and sleepers still in power still alive or as second generation civil servants.

> Specific Contributions Behavioral Research familiar Jen Moore and Ed Donegan who are insiders to Donegan family history recognize FOXP2 Minimal Brain Disorder, Borderline Personality Disorder, problems with neuron-regulation. The Tavistock Institute, Dr Cameron, and Rockefeller Psychiatry have in interest in these genes and many powerful families carry and talk about them. VP David Rockefeller will talk about attention deficit > like problems in school and let people know it something that can be overcome. The Donegan's carry this gene, Glorian Donegan and Edward Donegan, and that comes from Maria Kutchera who carried it and the Windsors who also carry it and research on it in early childhood.

Introducing the Super-Conspiracy Theory

- In the 1946 to 1952 US Political Era Richard Nixon left the Navy and working with WWII and even WWI War Industries Board build a Secret Team of W. Averell Harriman, John Foster Dulles and Allen Dulles, Wild Bill Donovan, and others made post war plans of WETDIVISION a form of governing that tilts governments and leadership of nations by illegal and covert means. Some of this occurred under legislation including the Mutual Security Act and other planning and activities were directly out of the Whitehouse or even corporations and criminally funded and criminally operating NGOs. lThis included the Vatican Bank.

  Psychological Operations (PSYOP) Soldiers benefit the Army's missions by using unconventional techniques. Their intelligence, interpersonal skills, cultural sensitivity, and foreign language proficiency help sway opinions and actions of foreign governments, groups, and individuals.

- In 1961 British American Joseph Kennedy Sr as an Agent of Influence groomed first himself and later his children to become President of the USA as part of the elites of post WWII allies families who came to fame and influence during the war; for instance Joseph Kennedy behind the scenes working to support Undersecretary of the Navy Franklin Delanour Roosevelt in WWI by as a business executive fullfulling deals for steel and ships on-time to the Navy and later an Ambassador to England and working with their and our US NAVY plans leading up to and into WWII.

The Mob had been useful fighting the Nazis in Europe including La Cosa Nostra of Italy and its Jewish counterparts that took root in Chicago known as The Yids, The Yiddish Mafia, La Kosher Nostra, and other names, it ran "numbers" gambling tickers in Chicago, The the bright lights of resort city Las Vegas with Bugsy Seigel and his more quiet and then former partner in Florida Meyers Lansky. Lanksy, Chauncey Holt and others profited from legal gambling and drinking in reosrt city of Havana a short flight from Florida under US backed Batista in the 1950s and radio signals carrying the numbers winners in cuban radio broadcasts weakly as gamblers checked their cards in Florida with the bets that people like Charles Harrelson and Meyers Lanksy and Holt operators or foot soldiers took in the USA.

- That in 1963 John F. Kennedy soured on the British East-India United Fruit Company British Methods and British Goals

JK was assassinated by the 1946-1952 Red State Protestant Republican (GOP) bigwhigs including George H.W. Bush, Lansdale, Charles Cabell, General CD Jackson and others covering up the hit

- Those sworn into power following the JFK assassination or who remained in power (J. Edgar Hoover, other CIA figures such as Allen Dulles returning to the CIA continued the cover-up

  On rising to power following the JFK hit Lyndon B. Johnson who had helped as an oil connected interest helped the Rockefeler Republicans came to power. The Bush and Nixon presidencies continued the cover-up though Carter was a CIA reformer. Ford and others were Rockefeller Republicans and served with Rockefeller, Dulles, and others on "investigations" that white washed what really happened taking their own dirty roles out of the history.

- Part of the Overthrow Plans Meant Using Planted Agents of Influece in the media, academics, business and cultural, and government of foreign lands and Barrack Obama Jr was groomed for possibly use in Kenya, Palestine, Indonesia, or the USA and was born in the USA in a CIA backed plan having multiple in-place birth certificates to be relied upon later or destroyed later

  Mayne Madsen, Col Prouty, and others hagve talked of the 1950s forward plan to control Indonesia and the CIA grooming Barrack Obama for possible Agent of Influence in country that will oust Sukarno in favor of US backed strong-man Suharto but Obama was meant as an adult to become a possible player in Indonesia and given a planned background there from early on. This is part of Birther Theory that is a subplot of the larger Truther theory.

- That Franlin Nebraska where Malcom X was from and the Boystown scandal erupted in were part of the plan to ship US backed agents of Influence still youths around the world using who were Orphans with not identifiable parents; rather possible sperm bank donors and then adoptive parents and assumed names not the real parents names.

  There have been large-scale orphanage and pre-school scandals around the world including McMartin School, Los Angeles County California Manhattan Beach City I am from (Edward Paul Donegan) the Family in Australia, Jonestown Guyana of Jim Jones, and many of these locations have CIA ties being covered up in a Conspiracy of Silence.

- The Jen Moore and Edward Paul Donegan (me) are the only two left alive with the real answer, secret families are connected because the 1920s world figures hid the identities of those moved around the world in Underground Railroads

  Since the early 1900s Great Britian's royal family has known of a Minimal Brain Dysfunction gene FOXP2. The children of Mary of Tek (Romania area Geral Sosbee was a language and intelligence expert in for the FBI) including Prince Albert of York who gave The [future] Kings Speech in 1925 had out of wedlocks with Maria Kutschera including Norma Jean, Glorian Donegan, possibly Julie Andrews, and others were placed into the secret identities adoption system here in the USA

  The fears the elites today have is that Maria Kutschera was niece of Franz Kutschera an Austrian SS figure who with Heinrech Himler was connected to death camps. At the end of WWII General Patton and the OSS found those death camps and files at the

Slazburg hide-away Franz Kutschera had used, the former home of Barron Von Trapp in the Eagles Nest of Nazi leadership in the mountains of Central Europe

Today's powerfull elite families are hiding the truth of this story by illegal Targeting of those who know too much about it.

1) The Death Bed statement of Jen Moore as she feared for her life documenting being Stalked by the CIA and others who told her she would be murdered of she talked but continued to do so leaving Death Bed statements on line about Glorian Donegan and Edward Donegan and as she states explicitly that the story of WWII history even going back to Vienna and the CIA following WWI is part of the assassination facilitated infiltration of the US Government by operatives associated with a globalism plan the JFK objected to and this is tied to the Donegan history of 850 N. Randolph Street #221 Arlington Virginia and Glorian Donegan's and Edward Paul Donegan's story.

2) The living statement of Edward Paul Donegan that his is Targeted by illegal programs including a mafia slush fund built on using his own assets for his own destruction, mafia paying themselves to make false allegations against Edward Paul Donegan, and that Edward Paul Donegan can confirm with specifics from Oral history inside the Donegan family I have written about for thirty years or so and talked about during that time frame and by existing photos and the process evidence destruction of other photos created and public records on major events in history tie "Elites" of today's globalist government to CIA OSS Vatican plans for assassinations and overthrow, the WWII was in part a dispute of British Colonialism versus European Nationalism, and that the Kennedy family while not racist embraced the anti-British colonialism plans, was assassinated and Colonialists then and now tied to the assassination by themselves or groomed for government generations are now silencing witness to the misconduct (murder and assassinations) tied to the Colonialism history.

Additionally Ed Donegan asserts as James Paul Donegan stated all of his life a pro British colonialism historical revisionism is deeply rooted in the US fiction entertainment and news companies and these pro globalist factions argue against theories whistle-blowers are offering of promulgating.

Introducing the 3 Kennedy Assassination sources

- Col Fletcher Prouty Wrote Guns of Dallas, VP Nixon Indonesia 1958, became basis of JFK movie by Oliver Stone and same book introduced by Jesse Ventura. Ed was in Donegan family as frinds of Prouty but as child too young to understand it all.

These observation together confirmed by historians is Eugenics research tied to the Bush family, LBJ, Rockefeller's, and others, and secretive brain research pre and post WWII, and the generations of people involved in it and secret identities or histories of families like Arnold Schwarzenegger or perhaps many others who have FOXP2 and a collection of symptoms in a group not always identically but in an overlay of likely-hood per symptom if the syndrome is present at all.

Edward Donegan and more vaguely Jen Moore assert some elite families and Barrack Obama JR likely were part of secretive testing of possible future leaders IF FOXP2 did not show and grew up under hidden identities created under MK-ULTRA and the assassinations and overthrow plans including for Indonesia.

Edward Donegan notes his father leaving Catholicism and Vatican participation in Regime Change as Paul Williams points out in Gladio the unholy alliance between the Vatican and the Mafia (mobster irregular armies of civil war.)

Rather than read the existing literature on this matter (YouTube and bitchute videos, conference calls recorded, substantiating books such as The Devils Chessboard (Talbot about CIA plans under Dulles Cabell and others) and other works or again repeating already cited public records supporting Ed Donegan and Jen Moore's assertion of the Deep State this document only calls attention to the existing data and and refers the two statements, Jen Moore's and mine, to some future prosecutor or member of the press.

Jen Moore (along with Ed Donegan and Ted Gunderson) have asserted she or we would be and others might be "Silenced" (Silence of the Grave) and I assert she was attempts have been made to afflict such egregious injury to me in my life in Conspiracy Against Rights murder or attempted murder charges and obstruction of justice charges are easily due on any number of statues but probably best fit under Title 18 USC Chapter 73 used with Jen Moore and I facing attempts to Silence us and other witnesses.

We should think here about three witness to one fact and three witness to separate columns each holding up a single theory differently for this latter piece is the Prouty, Gunderson, and Jen Moore Ed Donegan combo.

Ted Gunderon was FBI with insider information. Jen Moore was psychology and ex-police. Ed Donegan is from a victim family tied to WI and WWII and the Cold War.

The stories each of which are arcane and differ converge when stitched together into the most powerful events in history as described by these four people in their recorded notes and information.

Each of the pillars are needed for the larger story and each of the three is independent and in its own and combined reliable.

Known as the British Pilgrim Society and US Council on Foreign Relations policy think tank system the Cecil Rhodes plan for a British led British friendly empire was the Secret Society of Blue Bloods whose out of wedlock biologically or at least by families close to each other in the events of history and life were a secret team of people.

Some individual Roman Catholics objected though most of Knights of Malta and Vatican II and free masonry have united the Vatican globally with the anti communist program and but Roman Catholic politicians in the USA have bucked upon learning the depth of the Deep State Shadow Government and been assassinated.

Most witness to that also have been hit including preemptively by a Stasi of Free masonry operating and hiding its hand in long running suspicious deaths.

Zersetzung (Decomposition of a person 'Targeted' by Espionage Agencies retrieved from Wikipedia and copied or modified to here

The Ministry for State Security (German: Ministerium für Staatssicherheit, MfS, German: [ɛmɛfˈʔɛs] (listen)), or State Security Service (Staatssicherheitsdienst, SSD), commonly known as the Stasi (German: [ˈʃtaːziː] (listen)),[n 1] was the official state security service of the German Democratic Republic (East Germany, GDR) from 1950 to 1990. It has been described as one of the most effective and repressive intelligence and secret police agencies to have ever existed.

Zersetzung (Decomposition of Targeted persons life by hidden hands)

By the 1970s, the Stasi had decided that the methods of overt persecution that had been employed up to that time, such as arrest and torture, were too crude and obvious. Such forms of oppression were drawing significant international condemnation.

The Stasi perfected the technique of psychological harassment of perceived enemies known as Zersetzung a term borrowed from chemistry which literally means "decomposition".

…the Stasi often used a method which was really diabolic. It was called Zersetzung, and it's described in another guideline. The word is difficult to translate because it means originally "biodegradation". But actually, it's a quite accurate description. The goal was to destroy secretly the self-confidence of people, psychiatric drive them into fights or violent emotions, for example by damaging their reputation, by organizing failures in their work, and by destroying their personal relationships. Considering this, East Germany was a very modern dictatorship. The Stasi didn't try to arrest every dissident. It preferred to paralyze them, and it could do so because it had access to so much personal information and to so many institutions.

Various people are harassed in a manner based upon the specific person being targeted i.e. they were tailored based upon the target's psychology and life situation. Ed Donegan notes Veronica Hoffman was a Jewish artist was driven into a psch ward after being framed in a lark wearing Nazi clothes and being around Alt Right Lyndon Larouche anti semites association themselves with the proximity of her.

Tactics employed under Zersetzung usually involved the disruption of the victim's private or family life. This often included psychological attacks, such as breaking into their home and subtly manipulating the contents, in a form of gaslighting i.e. moving furniture around, altering the timing of an alarm, removing pictures from walls, or replacing one variety of tea with another etc.

Other practices included property damage, sabotage of cars, travel bans, career sabotage, administering purposely incorrect medical treatment, smear campaigns which could include sending falsified, compromising photos or documents to the victim's family, denunciation, provocation, psychological warfare, psychological subversion, wiretapping, bugging, mysterious phone calls or unnecessary deliveries.

Deliveries even including sending a vibrator to a target's wife. Increasing degrees of unemployment and social isolation could and frequently did occur due to the negative psychological, physical, and social ramifications of being targeted.

Usually, victims had no idea that the Stasi were responsible. Many thought that they were losing their minds, and mental breakdowns and suicide were sometimes the result. There is on-going debate as to the extent, if at all, that weaponised directed energy devices, such as X-ray transmitters, were also used against victims.

More on Stazi Saboutuers

It was realized that psychological harassment was far less likely to be recognised for what it was, so its victims, and their supporters, were less likely to be provoked into active resistance, given that they would often not be aware of the source of their problems, or even its exact nature. International condemnation could also be avoided. Zersetzung was designed to side-track and "switch off" perceived enemies so that they would lose the will to continue any "inappropriate" activities.

Often times a GangStalk will proke a person into street fights throwing the first punch or to suicide from being stalked or from things going wrong in their lives and from bad appearances that seem to dog their activities.

In Ed DOnegan's case he seems to be paying for pictures of children photographed in the area he himself is in the children and homeless people describing themselves as "his pornography."

Dulles survived the 1918 Flu pandemic, and in 1926, Dulles became a lawyer and joined his brother, John Foster Dulles at the Wall Street law firm of Sullivan and Cromwell. (John was future Secretary of State to President Eisenhower, and famously drew the wrath of Winston Churchill who described him as "A bull who carried his own china shop around with him." Churchill also created a stinging superlative adjective: "dull, duller, Dulles.") https://www.nationalww2museum.org/war/articles/wwii-spy-allen-dulles

In 1940, Dulles ran into a fellow Wall Street lawyer at the Republican Party convention. His friend, William Donovan, the future chief of the OSS, suggested that Dulles might be interested in joining a proposed American intelligence service if the US was pulled into the current European war. When the US did join the war after December 7, 1941, Dulles joined the newly formed OSS as Agent 110 and he requested assignment to Switzerland, based on his prior experiences there.

Dulles arrived in Switzerland in November, 1942, where he made little effort to disguise his role in Bern. Swiss newspapers identified him as a personal representative of President Roosevelt, with "special duties." Dulles preferred this high profile as it encouraged potential agents to flock to him. His British counterpart, Frederick Vanden Huevel, the Secret Intelligence Service (SIS) station chief in Bern had a few pangs of jealousy over this and Dulles' lavish budget. (SIS is the official title of "MI6"). Dulles soon developed two important contacts: a German diplomat, Fritz Kolbe, and Hans Bernd Gisevius, attached to the German Consulate in Zurich, but in fact an Abwehr officer. Gisevius would later be a key witness at the post war Nuremberg trials.

One great advantage of the harassment perpetrated under Zersetzung was that its relatively subtle nature meant that it was able to be plausibly denied, including in diplomatic circles. This was important given that the GDR was trying to improve its international standing during the 1970s and 80s, especially in conjunction with the Ostpolitik of West German Chancellor Willy Brandt massively improving relations between the two German states. For these political and operational reasons Zersetzung became the primary method of repression in the GDR.

Reinhard Gehlen (3 April 1902 - 8 June 1979) was a German lieutenant-general and intelligence officer. He was chief of the Wehrmacht Foreign Armies East military intelligence service on the eastern front during World War II, spymaster of the CIA-affiliated anticommunist Gehlen Organisation (1946-56) and the founding president of the Federal Intelligence Service (Bundesnachrichtendienst, BND) of West Germany (1956-68) during the Cold War.

Gehlen became a professional soldier in 1920 during the Weimar Republic. In 1942, he became chief of FHO, the German Army's military intelligence unit on the Eastern Front (1941-45). He achieved the rank of major general before he was fired by Adolf Hitler in April 1945 because of the FHO's "defeatism", the pessimistic intelligence reports about Red Army superiority.

Self-Portrait of a Scoundrel. A Memoir of Spooks, Hoods and the Hidden Elite

The How of killing JFK

The Seigal Lanksy Mob of Chicago like other Yids (Yiddish Mafia) grew out of prohibition Chicago Al Capone allowing bootlegers to bring Candadian booze across the great lakes to Chicago and Speak Easys.

Bugsy Seigel left for Vegas and and Myers Lansky to Florida as they grew apart. In Vegas gamnling was legal. I Cuba gambling was legal. Short flights to Cuba during Batista of the 1950s allowed travelers Havana club life the Florida mob could offer up and use printed numbers cards inside Florida to work with Batista run loteries.

Chancy Holt was was the mob accontant to Meyers Lansky and could do the graphics and other work on altered books, etc., This mob was offered Havana back if they could help the CIA hit Castro. J. Edgar Hoover recruited and used them. Holt tells the story of being uner Lanskey and how the orders reach him though he did not have the higher level knowledge of what was planned, did do things like print fake Secret Service IDs and Fair Play for Cuba flyers and work with Lee Harvey Oswald in the plan.

Unsolved Mysteries and Sam Giacanca

The Means of Hitting JFK.

Dennis Farina narrates and expose that

Jack Ruby and others get back to Cuba if they help eliminate Castro and help put someone more like Batista back into power. Charles Harreslon and others in the 1950s were flying US partiers into Havana but that ended when Fidel Castro shut all the gambling houses down.

World History of Western Civilization often focuses on legal racial oppression and slavery which is a sub-component or driving compenent of a lateral story,.

The religious conflict between Roman Catholic and ohter religions or unitariania has followed both legal and economic oppression.

In Boston a world history changing field of struggle existed. The mostly WASP wealthy class oppressed the Irish which was a theater of the larger war between England and during Englands war with Catholic France the conquest and oppression of Catholic Ireland.

> The Pentagon is the world's largest office building, with about 6.5 million square feet (150 acres; 60 ha) of floor space, of which 3.7 million sq ft (85 acres; 34 ha) are used as offices. Some 23,000 military and civilian employees, and another 3,000 non-defense support personnel, work in the Pentagon. It has five sides, five floors above ground, two basement levels, and five ring corridors per floor with a total of 17.5 miles (28.2 km) of corridors. The central five-acre (2.0 ha) pentagonal plaza is nicknamed "ground zero" on the presumption that it would be a prime target in a nuclear war.

> The most classified information is stored there and those who read and write those documents work there.

The poor of Chicago's Catholics, the Catholic dock workers of New York and Boston, and other locations will organize against the WASPS at times but also become private suppliers of Mafia resources to WASPS.

The battle between the WASP business interests and nations, and the Catholic mobs hired as their thugs will be struggle for control and this stuggle becomes emphasised as world religions battle for control of nations and continents in Espionage activitites of mercenaries , sleeper agenets, and assasinations.

My premise is that an enigmatic #MKULTRA #DeepSate has a

The House of Windsor came into being in 1917, when the name was adopted as the British Royal Family's official name by a proclamation of King George V, replacing the historic name of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. It remains the family name of the current Royal Family.

The present Queen has familial ties with most of the monarchs in Europe.

“The Queen remains the head of British state, the highest representative of the United Kingdom on the national and international stage. The head of the British government, however, is the Prime Minister. One serves as a symbol of the country and the other serves as the chief executive of the government.

In her role as head of state, Queen Elizabeth II gives a regular speech at the opening of each new Parliament and makes official appearances and speeches on holidays and special occasions. The Queen keeps in close contact with the Prime Minister and is regularly briefed on all important national matters, but never publicly weighs in on political debates-nor are any final decisions up to her.

As the Royal Family has shed most of its political powers, Queen Elizabeth, her husband and her children have emphasized their roles in various charitable organizations-the Queen is the titular “patron” of over 600 charities, although this role consists mostly of drawing attention to the causes. Her presence during some of the great crises in recent British history, including the COVID-19 pandemic, has drawn praise.

As Britain’s global empire crumbled in the wake of World War II, a number of its formal colonies declared independence but chose enter the Commonwealth of Nations, of which the Queen remains the figurehead. Citizens of Australia, Canada and many island nations across the world consider themselves subjects of Queen Elizabeth, who famously toured 13 of these “Commonwealth realms” in 1953.

Medical Outcomes - and tilting the playing field as referee

It is my belief Sidney Gottleib, the CIA, FBI, DARPA, and espionage agencies unknown became entangled with illegal use of the good but rare DNA line I come from, FOXP2, and have and continue to use it illegally, even in bio sciences now as genetics shopping in custom IVFs, and while I have been forced into harassed conditions not favorable to normal living, abusive skid row claimants.

KOMPROMAT, Compromising Material which is exploited minors and other victims photo-bombing me walking around, and social stigmatizing harassment - placing exploited children around me - has harmed me to women and society as has other social defaming harassment and while I have not had my genome under my control (because of claims it is covered under the will and trust fund Glorian Donegan) fake claims to the goods of those enjoying normal un-harrassed lives can avail themselves of custom genetics by asserting (incorrectly) they are “my pornography” which they are not but if they take pictures of themselves a medical genes rights conservancy can manufacture control genetics rights payouts to those seeking genetics rights, all tied to me being in isolated skid row without a partner, held their by the social services serving up claims against me to the other tenets of skid row, repugnant elder abuse in every way.

Hours before dying in a fiery car crash, award-winning journalist Michael Hastings sent an email to his colleagues, warning that federal authorities were interviewing his friends and that he needed to go “off the rada[r]” for a bit.

Hey (redacted names) - the Feds are interviewing my "close friends and associates." Perhaps if the authorities arrive "BuzzFeed GQ," er HQ, may be wise to immediately request legal counsel before any conversations or interviews about our news-gathering practices or related journalism issues.

This is Edward Donegan's book and it is a message to the Rank and File of Career Professionals in counter intelligence that your the threshold of facts does exist your bosses my be guilty of elitist NWO operations and subversion of the USA and also guilty of Conflicts of Interests motivating them.

This book with public and private records proves that WWI and WWII MKULTRA allied Illuminati NWO MKULTRA Prescott and Herbert Walker Bush, Vatican and CIA, espionage agencies rescued Maria Kutschera and Windsor co-progeny hidden from public but had compliment of beneficial constellation of brain genes during Eugenics and murders.

It proposes there are descendents, created by Sidney Gottlieb, of Kings Daughters in the USA, "Kings" Daughters "88" Bed children's Psychiatric Hospital in Norfolk Virginia started in 1961 and that is who JFK, Thorkil Krisstsen of the OECD, and George Ball of the State Department were on the phone with, communicating with Sidney Gottlieb near his lab equipment.

Children's Hospital of The King's Daughters, located in Norfolk, Virginia, United States, is the only freestanding children's hospital in Virginia. The hospital treats infants, children, teens, and young adults aged 0-21 and even some adults who require pediatric care. Wikipedia

It is the story of British Oil Imperialism plans for Middle East North Africa and creating in British Kenya a sleeper agent in 1961, or at least a birth record there, and later a plan for Indonesia as the missile crisis grew, and assassinations and overthrows were started around the world, Bay of Pigs Cuba, Indonesia Suherto Group, Vietnam, Hawaii, and elsewhere, this the matter of the CIA, assassinations and overthrows, and MKULTRA.

Kennedy narrowly defeats Nixon, Nov. 8, 1960

After JFK is dead, Tricky Dick is in the White House with his secret plant win the war of the Pacific, MKULTRA, with the ol' CIA gang.

> Everette Howard Hunt Jr. (October 9, 1918 January 23, 2007) was an American intelligence officer and author. From 1949 to 1970, Hunt served as an officer in the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), particularly in the United States involvement in regime change in Latin America including the 1954 Guatemalan coup d'état and the 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion. Along with G. Gordon Liddy, Frank Sturgis, and others, Hunt was one of the Nixon administration "plumbers" From Wikipedia the free encyclopedia

The Kill Team that took out JFK, including Nixon, now has and keeps the White House and the secret of the JFK assassination.

A British plan backed by Standard Oil (Rockefeller, Bush family, Howard Hunt, Hoard Hughes) for Africa. As a young man, Onyango[Hussein] Obama [Sr] traveled widely, enlisting in the British colonial forces and visiting Europe, India, and Zanzibar. There, he converted from Roman Catholicism to Islam and took the name Hussein. He became a cook for missionaries and a local herbalist in Nairobi.

When Obama (Sr.)(Died November 24 1982)was about six years old and attending a Christian missionary school, he converted from Islam to Anglicanism when strongly encouraged by the staff. He changed his name from “Baraka” to “Barack”. [1]

In false democratization, the eugenics became more widespread of the DNA used for leaders from stolen samples, stolen ovum, and planned for the full populations of struggling countries.

Glorian Donegan was the source the DNA was stolen from and the is an illegal harassment of me her son illegally in a Twins Study by MKULTRA.

Frank Olson of MKULTRA ARTICHOKE pushed from window

On December 14 [December 13 + 1 day), 2011, Vornado proposed to delay the demolition of the Hotel Pennsylvania (Penn Station Statler Hotel in Manhattan) due to market conditions.[30][31] The Hotel Pennsylvania was built by the Pennsylvania Railroad and operated by Ellsworth Statler. It opened on January 25, 1919[2] and was designed by William

Symmes Richardson of the firm of McKim, Mead & White,[3] which also designed the original Pennsylvania Station located across the street.[4]

Frank Olsen Murder and Drugging

Frank Olson was covertly dosed with LSD by his colleague Sidney Gottlieb (head of the CIA's MKULTRA program) served as a captain in the U.S. Army Chemical Corps. Later he was recruited as civilian employee to Camp Detrick, and to the U.S. Army Biological Warfare Laboratories, by the distinguished UW scientist Ira Baldwin, the technical director there. (Baldwin had been his departmental advisor at UW.)

Ira Lawrence Baldwin (August 20, 1895 - August 9, 1999) was the founder and director emeritus of the Wisconsin Academy Foundation. He began teaching bacteriology at the University of Wisconsin in 1927 and a few years later moved into what became a career in administration. He held positions as chair of the Department of Bacteriology, dean of the Graduate School, dean and director of the College of Agriculture, university vice president for academic affairs, and special assistant to the president. He was also involved in programs for agricultural development both in the United States and abroad. Among Baldwin's many achievements was a review of Rachel Carson's Silent Spring, titled "Chemicals and Pests" in the journal Science.

Baldwin attended college at Purdue and earned a Ph.D. at the University of Wisconsin

Silent Spring by his wife Rachel Carson was met with fierce opposition by chemical companies, it spurred a reversal in national pesticide policy, which led to a nationwide ban on DDT and other pesticides. It also inspired a grassroots environmental movement that led to the creation of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.[3] Carson was posthumously awarded the Presidential Medal of Freedom by President Jimmy Carter.

Rachael Carson began her career as an aquatic biologist in the U.S. Bureau of Fisheries, and became a full-time nature writer in the 1950s.

At some point while assigned as a civilian U.S. Army contractor, Frank Olson began working as a CIA employee [1]

In May 1952, Frank Olson was appointed to the committee for Project Artichoke, an experimental CIA interrogation program.[5]

Frank Olson was appointed to head Special Operations Division, but later stepped down from that role.[6] [better source needed]

A retreat was scheduled at a cabin at Deep Creek Lake for Wednesday November 18 to Friday November 20, 1953. A tentative participants list included eleven names.[19][20]

A former employe of the Central Intelligence Agency said yesterday he believed that a scientist who plunged to, his death from a Manhattan hotel window 22 years ago had knowingly participated in a C.I.A. experiment with LSD shortly before. The statement by Robert V. Lashbrook in a telephone interview appeared to contradict report by the Rockefeller commission *

My father James Paul Donegan and mother Glorian Donegan are tied to Sidney Gottlieb illegal science and the FOXP2 speech and language gene CIA Speech Pathologist Biologist in Assassinations division was a part of, in the MKULTRA Manhattan Project and I was born under atomic testing at Manhattan Beach to an Atomic Bombing and Atomic Testing USA Army Air Corp family.

I have the same risk and similar information about the CIA that Frank Olsen had and my life is in danger.

This book suggests, documents, and I think even proves a Sovereignty war meant to be avoided by Foreign Titles perhaps like Scottish Rights or other Masonry.

Starting 1n 1920s and Eugenics disputes turning into Genocide wars, the Masons intervening with under ground railroads of various famous people and the relocation of the those people.

These were Prescott Bush, the Rockefellers, Wild Bill Donovan, the Kennedy's, the Vatican, and others.

From this history came a “property” dispute over the genome and study of the rescued famil lines now living in the USA.

Under JFK the Masons including George H.W. Bush, then CIA, won and Donald Barr a high ranking mason was involved, likely with Alma and Colin Powell and others.

The connection between auditory study, speech, and speech therapy is central to this book and The Kings Speech.

This book questions deaths like these already questioned on the Internet.

> Paula Grober - Clinton’s speech interpreter for the deaf from 1978 until her death December 9, 1992. She died in a one car accident.
> Died in a one-car accident during the afternoon. Paula’s car overturned at a curve in the highway. There have been no known witnesses of this accident. Her body was thrown 33 feet from her car.
> Paula was an attractive women, she traveled extensively with Clinton from 1978 until her death. *

The dispute regarded I think Glorian Donegan with people like Frank Olsen objecting to unauthorized use of her genome for ongoing Masonry study.

The FOXSP2 gene is tied to Central Europe and the Windsors and Kutcheras have it. Studying it by Masons from St. Louis Missouri and NASA DARPA was part of understanding the history and even psychology of WWII and its leaders, and the history and genetics of the Windsors and Kennedy's and others, particularly in “the lab” of the USA and a little outside of Windsor family genetic legacy in England.

Micheal Mulcasey then of Columbia University Manhattan Project and others were on the side of Masons and the Bush Administration, the Arkansas based Rockefeller masons, and others continued the world programs at expense of the sovereignty of the USA.

The issue of control, WHO would make this decision, and the assertion of control is likely the higher level issue that led to JFKs assassination and I assert these assassinations continue today with Roll and Scalia of the Judiciary, Thomas C. Wales and various CIA as Executive Branch, Ronald Reagan assassination attempt, and attempts on my own life, my own life a data point where these USA / Masons schism is visible.

An Organized Stalk uses assailants to keep me in an inflamed state, “tirggering” strong emotions which then creates a reactive me complaining about assailents selected to attack me.

I think and I have seen reports the USA who used my genome in many families including during CIA research tied to Barrack Obama wishes to downplay or disavow much of history of leadership in my genome which has out of wedlock members throughout world policts researched in this book.

Starting from the problem of racial, economic, housing, sexual reproductive, and other Color of Law entanglement assaults upon me, assaults on former friends, which completely defied any rational explanation I could find until information led to the history of my father and mother in Atomic Testing and racial and twins studies espionage-agency 1960s research history.

A book researching why an openly hostile MKULTRA DARPA Brain Program including DIA interrogation techniques of tailored psychological harassment and research stem from Atomic Testing Program, its ongoing research entanglement with me through Austrian Nazi lineage, inciting that by British MI5 USA OSS interests who wish my genealogy discriminated from other genealogy in Western politics covertly sharing that lineage.

CIA and Espionage elites in brain research Eugenics assassinated JFK to protect their VonTrapp/ Windsor plans of Gottlieb genetics miss usage and now use insider knowledge of secret husbandry family lines, the secret history of the FOXP2 gene in those families to fund clandestine lethal espionage "Gangstalk" cover-up including theft of brain genes rights for Jeffery Epstein, Donald Barr, William Pelham Barr Columbia University MKULTRA operations, Manhattan [Island] Beach world geo populations meanwhile subverting the reproductiy of source genome families.

The USA lives under Media Enforced Psychosis, including the subversion of my standing and worth, my listeners for the story I have to tell which undermines the official State version. You are participating in the mass psychosis. DARPA CIA use capabilities like cross switching phone calls at cell towers and paying off or dupes or front capabilities help the CIA subvert dirt about the agency.

I assert the Masons had the power and money to get into the leadership positions needed to suppress evidence which would mount against them, but if the original acts were unsolved then the cover-ups of the Illuminati may go unsolved too.

This in fact came to a head at Californoia Stay and Play where I was challenged to to try to comprehend why a series of frauds were underway which seemed to lack any motive, thus may be false alarms to a fraud rather than a real fraud in progress.

This is husbandry including sleeper agents as Western groomed puppets, exposed by data increasingly found in Family Genome Databases and also part of the NASA Cheyenne Mountains assassination of of judge Roll and Associate Justice Scalia.

This appears to be directed towards white side theories of Barrack Obama, the Dunham side, leading to PsyOps against Tom Dunhma, possibly tied to that family line as well as tied to me, and also other descendents of Glorian Donegan, another white female whose genome was used by MKULTRA including it seems the white side of Barrack Obama Jr., whose possible February 20 November 18 December 13 1961 maternal side is tied to me and the JFK assassination, other assassinations under MKULTRA since.

It is not now nor was it ever my belief Barrack Obama Jr POTUS is or was a Muslim.

In researching Obama connected activities regarding my family history I joined the small group believing his biological father is Malcom X (born 1925. As for Barrack Obama Jr and Sr he (Sr) appears to have been selected as a role model for conversion to Anglican in African Regions controlled by the Crown thus extending the Crown.

Twenty people as of 1975 or so were stalked thousands run by the CIA, NSA, and others, the Family Jewels project and the media is participating in MKULTRA

> "Those, which they have cloned, to look like those, who will be taken out, will begin to drop dead like houseflies. (what Glorian and Edward Donegan have experienced)

I believe the CIA and the Illuminati references to houseflies as clones and families of family jewels is this twins study underway and pruning away certain twins or half twins and promoting the others as the originals.

These were test experimental births from the underground hidden identities of perhaps scienfically desirable philandering habits of the Windsoer family from 1902 through 1926 or later and hidden identities of research around the world leading possibly to new Windsor Houses under differing names, differing nationalities, and differing flanges spoken.

The Bush family, Pence, Nixon, Obama Jr., and Kelly brothers, Jack Dorsey, Megan Kelly and members of the females side of the Trump family seem to be part of this as well as the Maxwell family tied to Espstien, Barr family, Mueller Family, Gottlieb, and others.

Those are the known members of the Cabal as some see it and believe it to be an NWO CIA operation as I do. As for those under hidden identities like most, like Marilyn Monroe, it seems we are all dropping like houseflies and leakers in the from of dreams about aliens running NASA DARPA Navy Seals say this.

The Finders program run under cover Satanist group facilitation are looking for Nazi German era "aliens" created as some form of Knights-to-be of an Alien Race who like the Donald Barr book predicts will become king like in countries around the world who see them as king-like.

Demoting some socially, promoting others.

White Side Being Subverted	Black Side Being Built up ↑
Said to be Dunham, is Gloria Donegan	Said to be Barrack Obama Sr. is Malcom X

If this speculative chart looks like it benefits Barrack Omaba Jr. and his family origins then like me you have taken a first pass at its meaning.

I later came to believe that those who created Obama as a study in leadership to groom him to rule Indonesia are those who really benefit from hiding the real identity of Barrack

Obama and hundreds of other “4AMPs” in our society of CIA backed industrial, entertainment, and political families.

I call this “MKULTRA Truther” in that the program was operated (and is operated under MKULTRA, MKULTRA never ended) and the Truth is Barrack Obama jr. was groomed by the Windsor family, Church of England, Mossad, CIA,the USA State Department, US DARPA Agency, and others, most of whom protect themselves by protecting Barrack Obama Jr and hundreds of others as CIA Backed.

At one point this book was Genoracketeering, I considered for a while Stand Down, that carrerr profesinalls would not investigate with Medieval World Order now called the New World Orde4r of Masonry, then I renamed it to Illuminati Dawn wanting WWIII against the MWO/NWO but never came, thus Medical State, again, an earlier title which reflects a version of what might be called the Posse Comitatus Act in the form of a Russian Proverb.

> To carry fire in one hand and water in the other
> В глаза льстит, а за глаза пакостит
> Illuminati Dawn Usage: The FBI and DOJ should investigate, not be infiltrated by OSS CIA DARPA tied science criminals, Free Masonry MKULTRA NWO

Internal Law Enforcement should stop Espionage agencies in the USA from espionage against the USA.

Much of this story if not all of it is circumstantial evidence created surrounding me and obvious misdiagnosis of me subverting my reputation and accomplishments, even altering the context I am living under to very frustrating conditions under being stalked by hostile parties rather than me observed in normal conditions. In normal or stalked conditions my reactions are normal including angry towards aggressors / micro aggressors / triggers when under annoying aggression.

The correct reaction if calls to law enforcement fail is to document the stalking and this book does as well as explores it history to illegal science and the MKULTRA project.

Bugsy Seigel left for Vegas and and Myers Lansky to Florida as they grew apart. In Vegas gamnling was legal. I Cuba gambling was legal. Short flights to Cuba during Batista of the 1950s allowed travelers Havana club life the Florida mob could offer up and use printed numbers cards inside Florida to work with Batista run loteries.

Chancy Holt was was the mob accontant to Meyers Lansky and could do the graphics and other work on altered books, etc., This mob was offered Havana back if they could help the CIA hit Castro. J. Edgar Hoover recruited and used them. Holt tells the story of being uner Lanskey and how the orders reach him though he did not have the higher level knowledge of what was planned, did do things like print fake Secret Service IDs and Fair Play for Cuba flyers and work with Lee Harvey Oswald in the plan.

Guess what JFK thought about all of this?

The exact military groups across time I do not know but it ties to the Von Trapp family and his future wife Glorian Gainey.

- 1902 to 1911: Great Britain - GB resumes active imperialism but also has a genetic defect from Central Europe. Albert of York and Edward of Wales two future kings of England (one very briefly) are fro this family and Albert shows the defect.

- 1925 to 1936 Windsor -Kutschera family - Probably Albert by maybe Edward is fooling around with Maria Kutschera following The Kings Speech of 1925. In early 1926 Maria Kutschera in a convent in Salzburg Austria gets pregnant and re-assigned to the widowed Capt Von Trapp in his villa formerly his home with Agatha Whitehead and the Whitehead VonTrapp children. During this time the uncle Franz Kutschera will get a favor back. The dark ties to Franz Kutschera are burried but start to emerge here there.

- 1951. King George V is dying, his wife probably introduced the gene. Alber of York has it and he is second in line to replace Geroge V. Edward of Wales is first in line but quickly falls of the throne with Nazi ties and marries Wallis Simpso (former wifre of a british aristocrat) and the live in the USA as the Duke and Dutchess. One of King George's children is Princess Elizibeith borb in 1925. She becones queen in 1952.

- In 1952 to 1962 USA OSS CIA - life is progressing for the Windsor-Kutshera children. Glorian Gaiey has met and married James Donegan Roman Catholic fro Boston tied to the Kennedy family. There is pressure on him to conceal the entire story since he is a war hero of the P-51 and atomic testing and two atomic bombs. Since the Donegan DNA is part of atomic testing more tests are conducted with Glorian DNA and I think Barrack Obama Jr is planned by the CIA with a changin set of potential parents he could be placed with. An Indonesian family and CIA tied official in Kenya are part of the complex CIA picture as other children remotely connected to these familes now in the USA andn elsewhere proliferate in orphanges and elsewhere but the CIA still needs to silence them and this includes the assasintion of JFK who opposed the CIA plans under VP Nixon with the Rockefeller fund, Office of Policy Coordination, etc. that Averell Harriman, Sullivan and Crowell, Allen Dulles, and others including Donald barr and Robert Mueller of Dupont arranged for.

Established as a dive-bomber squadron in early 1943, trained under Third Air Force with A-24 Banshees (the USAAF version of the Navy Douglas SBD Dauntless). Converted to a P-39 Aircobra squadron in August and finally into a P-47 Thunderbolt fighter squadron in late 1943.

Deployed to the European Theater of Operations (ETO), being assigned to IX Fighter Command in England in early 1944. Engaged in ground attacks of enemy fortifications; controlled bridges, railway lines, roads, armor and troop concentrations in Occupied France and the Low Countries; carrying out fighter sweeps of Luftwaffe-controlled airfields. Flew patrols over the Normandy Landing Beaches, 6 June 1944, later taking up station in newly constructed airfields in liberated areas of France. Engaged and completely destroyed a German armored division near Avranches, France, 29 July 1944. After immobilizing leading and trailing elements of the 3 mile (4.8 km) long column, the rest of the tanks and trucks were systematically destroyed with multiple sorties.

After the breakout at St Lo; squadron's mission was to provide air support in advance of the United States Third Army as it moved eastward across France, and as part of the Western Allied invasion of Germany in March 1945. Continued attacking ground targets until German Capitulation in May 1945. Gradually demobilized as part of the United States Air Forces in Europe occupation forces during the summer of 1945, inactivated in the United States as an administrative unit in October.

Pacific Air Forces Reactivated in 1952 as a Tactical Air Command squadron under Ninth Air Force. Equipped with F-84 Thunderstreaks, later upgrading to F-100

George H.W. Bush and Big Business use not just Irish Mafia but Hispanic Mafia as well.

It was likely Joseph Kennedy Sr was a British pick for US support and future US presidents via Rose Kennedy but JFK and RFK turned against loyalty to England and rejected Mafia backed activities.

In 1902 the London King Edward VII language Minimal Brain Dysfunction gene will be recognized in the Windsors and researched. These are the times of Prescott Bush, George H.W. Bush, and close English ties in WASP land.

Worldwide studies of the genes in families included in the Bush, Kennedy, and other families including Kutscheeras of Austria.

Its a secret kept by medical research. The scheme moves through the Manhattan Project, atomic testing, radiation and genetics studies and Bletctly Park code breaking language sub groups and Princeton.

By this time Donald Barr and others have programs long underway and George W. Bush is just turning adult, a planed president. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, commonly known as the United Kingdom (UK) or Britain, is a sovereign country in north-western Europe, off the north-western coast of the European mainland. The United Kingdom includes the island of Great Britain, the north-eastern part of the island of Ireland, and many smaller islands within the British Isles. Northern Ireland shares a land border with the republic of Ireland. Otherwise, the United Kingdom is surrounded by the Atlantic Ocean, with the North Sea to the east, the English Channel to the south and the Celtic Sea to the south-west, giving it the 12th-longest coastline in the world. The Irish Sea separates Great Britain and Ireland.

These had formerly been the Three Kingdoms (Ireland, Scotland, England) until One Kingdom, one country, Great Britain conquered the others.

Canada, Spain, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, Lebano, and many other are imperial colonies of Great Britain or are in imperial allegiance with Great Britain.

There are also 14 British Overseas Territories, the last remnants of the British Empire which, at its height in the 1920s, encompassed almost a quarter of the world's landmass and a third of the world's population, and was the largest empire in history. British influence can be observed in the language, culture and the legal and political systems of many of its former colonies.

Harold MacMillan, British Prime Minister, helped begin decolonization. There was no one process of decolonization. In some areas, it was peaceful, and orderly. In many others, independence was achieved only after a protracted revolution. A few newly independent countries acquired stable governments almost immediately; others were ruled by dictators or military juntas for decades, or endured long civil wars. Some European governments welcomed a new relationship with their former colonies; others contested decolonization militarily. The process of decolonization coincided with the new Cold War between the Soviet Union and the United States, and with the early development of the new United Nations. Decolonization was often affected by superpower competition, and had a definite impact on the evolution of that competition. It also significantly changed the pattern of international relations in a more general sense.

The creation of so many new countries, some of which occupied strategic locations, others of which possessed significant natural resources, and most of which were desperately poor, altered the composition of the United Nations and political complexity of every region of the globe. In the mid to late 19th century, the European powers colonized much of Africa and Southeast Asia. During the decades of imperialism, the industrializing powers of Europe viewed the African and Asian continents as reservoirs of raw materials, labor, and territory for future settlement. In most cases, however, significant development and European settlement in these colonies was sporadic. However, the colonies were exploited, sometimes brutally, for natural and labor resources, and sometimes even for military conscripts. In addition, the introduction of colonial rule drew arbitrary natural boundaries where none had existed before, dividing ethnic and linguistic groups and natural features, and laying the foundation for the creation of numerous states lacking geographic, linguistic, ethnic, or political affinity.

During World War II Japan (itself a significant imperial power) drove the European powers out of Asia and Africa.

After the Japanese surrender in 1945, local nationalist movements in the former Asian colonies campaigned for independence rather than a return to European colonial rule. In many cases, as in Indonesia and French Indochina, these nationalists had been guerrillas fighting the Japanese after European surrenders, or were former members of colonial military establishments. These independence movements often appealed to the United States Government for support.

While the United States generally supported the concept of national self-determination, it also had strong ties to its European allies, who had imperial claims on their former colonies. The Cold War only served to complicate the U.S. position, as U.S. support for decolonization was offset by American concern over communist expansion and Soviet strategic ambitions in Europe. Several of the NATO allies asserted that their colonial possessions provided them with economic and military strength that would otherwise be lost to the alliance. Nearly all of the United States' European allies believed that after their recovery from World War II their colonies would finally provide the combination of raw materials and protected markets for finished goods that would cement the colonies to Europe.

Brittian had ruled through proxies who reported to London in a system of "Independent rule" the British used for recognized African Continent governments.

After the Russian people over through the European Royal Tsars, and did so on the basis of Hemophelia in part piercing or at lest hemming in the ability of the Royal claims on rule Trotsky wrote in 1936 of the betrayal of the Russian Revolution likely believing (on August 4 1936 when he submitted his works to the publisher) that an Indirect Rule of Russia through Stalin recreated what had been thrown off.

A British resident or district officer served as the liaison between the traditional ruler and the colonial regime. Lugard's system became the model for all of British West Africa.

Parts of the Gold Coast (present Ghana) were acquired by Britain at different times. The Gold Coast crown colony, on the Gulf of Guinea coast, was established in 1874 in Fante and Ga lands near the British coastal trading forts. The mighty Asante empire to the north was conquered and made a protectorate in 1900-01. The far north, too, became a protectorate. Sir Gordon Guggisberg, who served as governor from 1919 to 1929, introduced indirect rule by restoring the Asante king to his title.

The Horn of Africa, Ethiopia a nation at its constricting throat of the mouth of the Gulf of Aden is the easternmost peninsula of the African continent, excluding African islands. This will observe an important distinction between Fuedalism and Liberalism and some of the implications we should be aware of.

Fuedalist government is defined by the ruling sovereign and its system of family perptuity of rule from generation to generation and tending towards arbitrary power of soveriegns to protect their seat on the throne against insurrection or rebellion.

In liberalism all are equal, there is no arbitrary power or abuse of power, and the function of the State power is the protection of the citizen and no other usage.

I allege entanglement with non US powers has created a spaghetti of operations in espionage with is a threat US republican government and includes monarchists of industrialists interests in abuse of power so a Shadow Government can operate covertly, profitably, and even criminal and yet overlay with law abiding government, and that this NWO Cartel power is similar to the spaghetti of agreements that lead into WWI.

Both the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. continue their road-building projects in Afghanistan. The U.S. grades and paves the road from Kabul to Peshawar (Pakistan) and is building another road, costing more than $30,000,000, from Kabul to Kandahar and thence to the Pakistan border. The Soviets are building a tunnel to connect the modern road from the Oxus river (their frontier with Afghanistan) to Kabul, at an estimated cost of $40,000,000.

February 25, 1963, A Soviet-Afghan trade protocol is signed in Moscow, pursuant to which Afghanistan is to export wool, cotton, dried and fresh fruits, and oilseeds in exchange for motor vehicles, rolled steel, oil products, and consumer goods.

For the first time in Afghan history, a new administration is formed with no members of the royal family in the cabinet, when Sardar (Prince) Mohammad Daud Khan resigns and a commoner, Mohammad Yusuf, is appointed to the prime ministership. The new Prime Minister announces his cabinet on March 13, 1963; he makes several shifts within the cabinet, taking charge of external affairs, appointing new First and Second Deputy Premiers, and changing other posts. His most controversial appointment is the designation of Gen. Mohammad Khan, who was dismissed as governor of Kandahar by a previous cabinet, as Defense Minister. The new Prime Minister undertakes serious currency reform, abrogating multiple rates which priced the Afghani to the U.S. dollar at anything from 20 to 57, while the free market rate was near 50.7. The new, uniform rate establishes 45 Afghanis to the dollar for all transactions. The reform is supported by the International Monetary Fund, which assigns Afghanistan a drawing fund of $5,625,000 to support Afghan foreign exchange reserves during the transition period.

An announcement is made that the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) has granted Afghanistan a loan of $2,652,000 for the purchase of three U.S. passenger aircraft to be used by Ariana Afghan Airlines.

Week of May 11, 1963 Sarvepalli Radhakrishnan, the president of India, visits Kabul.

June 4, 1963 The prime minister receives a unanimous vote of confidence from the National Assembly. During the same month a constitutional commission, aided by the French expert Louis Phojean, enters the final phases of drafting a new constitution.

Late July 1963 In pursuance of better relations, the Afghan-Pakistan frontier is reopened, largely through the peace efforts of the Shah of Iran.

Early September 1963 King Mohammad Zahir Shah and his queen pay their first state visit to Washington, D.C.; on September 7 the king and U.S. Pres. John F. Kennedy issue a joint statement at a public event which places special emphasis on the Afghan policy of Sardar Mohammad Nadir Naeem (born 1965) is a politician in Afghanistan, and a member of the former ruling Barakzai dynasty.[1] He announced his candidacy in October 2013 to stand candidate in the 2014 Presidential elections. His running mates are Taj Mohammad Akbar and Azizullah Puya.

Naeem was born in 1965 in Afghanistan. He was the grandson of then King Mohammed Zahir Shah. Following the 1973 coup d'état, where Mohammed Daoud Khan overthrew the monarchy, Naeem moved to the United Kingdom. He returned to Afghanistan following the 2001 invasion and the fall of the Taliban government.

Following his return to Afghanistan he worked as a secretary to his grandfather, Mohammed Zahir Shah.

The two branches of the Barakzai dynasty "sons of Barak")[1] ruled modern day Afghanistan from 1823 to 1973 when the monarchy ended under Musahiban Mohammed Zahir Shah.

All the politicians on stage were Democrats. Kennedy represented a different kind of Democrat. His speech that day hinted at the racial problems of the region and deftly focused on the promises of a new South, an economically prosperous new South.

"The old South has its problems, and they are not yet over," Kennedy said, "nor are they over in the rest of the country, but there is rising every day, I believe, a new South."

Jacqueline Lee Bouvier was born on July 28, 1929, at Southampton Hospital in Southampton, New York, to Wall Street stockbroker John Vernou "Black Jack" Bouvier III and socialite Janet Norton Lee.[7] Her mother was of Irish descent,[8] and her father had French, Scottish, and English ancestry.[9][a] Named after her father, she was baptized at the Church of St. Ignatius Loyola in Manhattan and raised in the Catholic faith.

A popular first lady, she endeared the American public with her fashion sense, devotion to her family, and dedication to the historic preservation of the White House. During her lifetime, she was regarded as an international fashion icon.

After graduating with a Bachelor of Arts in French literature from George Washington University in 1951, Jacqueline Bouvier started working for the Washington Times-Herald as an inquiring photographer.[2] The following year, she met then-Congressman John Kennedy at a dinner party in Washington. He was elected to the Senate that same year, and the couple married on September 12, 1953, in Newport, Rhode Island. They had four children, two of whom died in infancy. Following her husband's election to the presidency in 1960, Kennedy was known for her highly publicized restoration of the White House and emphasis on arts and culture, as well as for her style.[3][4] At age 31, she was the third-youngest first lady of the United States when her husband was inaugurated.

Columbia University was founded in 1754 as King's College by royal charter of King George II of England. It is the oldest institution of higher learning in the state of New York and the fifth oldest in the United States.

During the presidency of Nicholas Murray Butler (1902-1945), Columbia emerged as a preeminent national center for educational innovation and scholarly achievement. The School of Journalism was established by bequest of Joseph Pulitzer in 1912. John Erskine taught the first Great Books Honors Seminar at Columbia College in 1919, making the study of original masterworks the foundation of undergraduate education, and in the same year, a course on war and peace studies originated the College's influential Core Curriculum.

In 1902, the Department of Anthropology at Columbia University was established-the first in the United States. While there were lecturers and teachers of anthropology (often meaning “physical anthropology”) in the United States before 1902, there was no independent department in any American university until Columbia’s. In 1896, the formidable and brilliant scholar Franz Boas, often recognized as the founder of modern American anthropology, became a lecturer in anthropology at Columbia. In 1899, he became a professor, and in 1902, he became the head of the newly formed department.

Controversy surrounded the founding of the new college in New York, as it was a thoroughly Church of England institution dominated by the influence of Crown officials in its governing body, such as the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Secretary of State for the Colonies. Fears of the establishment of a Church of England episcopacy and of Crown influence in America through King’s College were underpinned by its vast wealth, far surpassing all other colonial colleges of the period.[12] From Wikipedia the free encyclopedia

Fine Gael is currently the third-largest party in the Republic of Ireland in terms of members of Dáil Éireann and largest in terms of Irish members of the European Parliament.

"[The United States' goal in Angola] was not to keep out the Cubans and Soviets but to make their imperial efforts as costly as possible to prove that, after Vietnam, we were still capable of response, however insane. It is the story that has been told, and in impressive and convincing detail, by John Stockwell, the former chief of the CIA's Angola 'task force.' His book should not be missed. Since strategic thought survives by ignoring experience, it has a highly professional interest in avoiding accounts such as this. By the same token, all who are alarmed about the tendency toward such strategic thinking should strongly welcome Mr. Stockwell's book." —John Kenneth Galbraith, New York Review of Books

In Search of Enemies is much more than the story of the only war to be found when the CIA sought to recoup its prestige after the Vietnam debacle. Though no American troops were committed to Angola, only "advisors," many millions were spent, many thousands died, and many lies were told to the American people, in waging a war without purpose to American vital interests and without hope of victory.

A number of allegations have been written about several investigations that have taken place related to the Mena Airport as a CIA drop point in large scale cocaine trafficking beginning in the latter part of the 1980s. More from the author.

The topic has received some press coverage that has included allegations of awareness, participation and/or coverup involvement of figures such as future presidents Bill Clinton, George H. W. Bush, and George W. Bush, as well future Florida Governor Jeb Bush and Saline County prosecutor Dan Harmon (who was convicted of numerous felonies including drug and racketeering charges in 1997). The Mena airport was also associated with Adler Berriman (Barry) Seal, an American drug smuggler and aircraft pilot who flew covert flights for the CIA and the Medellín Cartel.

A criminal investigator from the Arkansas State Police, Russell Welch, who was assigned to investigate Mena airport claimed that he opened a letter which released electrostatically charged Anthrax spores in his face, and that he had his life saved after a prompt diagnosis by a doctor. He also claimed that later, his doctor's office was vandalized, robbed, and test results and correspondence with the CDC in Atlanta were stolen,

An investigation by the CIA's inspector general concluded that the CIA had no involvement in or knowledge of any illegal activities that may have occurred in Mena. The report said that the agency had conducted a training exercise at the airport in partnership with another Federal agency and that companies located at the airport had performed "routine aviation-related services on equipment owned by the CIA".

CIA NSA DARPA Behavioral Research, What Each Donegan Knew, and when they Knew It

Before Eward Pauld Donegan was the last known living family of origin member of James Paul Donegan GLorian Donegn Tom Donegan (Barrack Obama Jr.) Ed Donegan

- Edward Paul Donegan: Younger brother of Tom Donegan. Tom graduated from a university with a Bachelors degree in business, worked for several companies before a long career with AOL then AOL Time Warner. Edward Donegan (myself) was told I had some quirk, my parents noticed when I dropped a milk bottle from my high chair I reacted strongly was not like other children. Underwent testing and EEGs at an early age as first diagnosed with Minimal Brain Dysfunction 1960s, later I felt I had Dyslexia, and finally in 2002 diagnosed with ADHD

- Glorian Donegan: Raised on a farm in North Carolina until Festus Gainey died when she was 9 years old. Moved from North Carolina to South Carolina and the Dew Family, Grace and Ellen, and Dot Dew as a sort of sister living under Grace and Ellen. She and Harold appear to be of three hidden Maria Augusta Kutschera children and these were out of wedlock with either King Edward VIII Prince of Wales OR King George V Prince Albert of York with Maria Augusta Kutschera, niece of first protector Fanz Kutsschera Austrian Gestapo general and cohort of Heinrich Himmler. The Second protector of Maria August Kutschera was likely the Vatican through a Convent but a pregnancy and possible free spirit ended a religiously disciplined cloister life. The Third Protector of Maria Augusta Kutschera was being hidden in the USA while the other 7 children, them by Captain Von Trapp, likely not having the FOXP2 Gene and Minimal Brain Disorder Syndrome, went on to fight the Nazi with Allies loyalist counter propaganda.

- James Paul Donegan: Partially informed and also misinformed by others. He knew I had a brain quirk, was an emotional type, and he feared it may have been the Kutschera side and he was afraid he was harboring a possibly Nazi and loved me and Glorian and wanted to help research the Syndrome, knowing I was the grandson of a King Edward though also as in Irish Immigrant Roman Catholic anti British, this though he flew the Spitfire made in the USA as North American Aviation P-51 Mustang licensed by the British as a US plant to fly escort for B-17, B-29 Bomber flights, defend England and conduct air combat in WWII above England, in German skies, and over Japan in the first and second atomic bombing, and later are F-86 Sabre recon in Korea and above ground atomic testing in Los Vegas.

- Barrack Obama Jr. and others created by the CIA in MKULTRA: As these genes were being researched involuntary lab work was being done by Speech Therapist biologist Sidney Gottlieb. Also tied to assassinations, the idea was to take good DNA, and James Paul Donegan and Glorian Donegan both had it, and see in which offspring the gene would show had how when it did show the gene was expressed. Barrack Obama Jr from Malcolm X and Glorian Donegan seems to be one such experiment of many

- Tom Donegan: Also fooled a bit, but more hostile as far as being a fraud. He too was told the gene existed but was eager to smear my mother and I as some form of Nazi he could identify with his sociology intellect. At the same time he could get me ousted from high functioning life on smear of me and did so, furthering the importance of his work he had a loser on his hands, me and Glorian, but he might find a cure for Nazism. As I am pushed from success by his undermining the prerequisites (clothing, food, gym fees, etc.,) I moved apart from similarity to various political leaders who have the same lineage as me, the Obamas and others.

It is my belief both Kamala Harris and AOL Time Warner were part of a smear of me which was tied to leftism fighting and discrediting Nazism via shaping me in to a Nazi as I grew racially resentful of, sensitized to racially aggressive conduct towards me. At the same time the present of racial fights replacing normal life shortened the blossoming of my life and as an unwanted family member of rich and famous people.

My not finding a niche for myself I could blossom in was part of the social outcome sabotage of me Kamala Harris helped Tom Donegan with as I was accused of harming her social justice causes, minors and racially disenfranchised exploited people.

I should not that while I believe in limited government I have also believed in limited class society. We are all one, citizens, and not distinguished by any other arbitrary characteristic.

Lt. Col. Christopher Raible's name appeared near the canopy of an F-35B prepping for the strike on the deck of the Wasp-class amphibious assault ship Essex. Often it's a current pilot in the squadron whose name is on the plane.

Raible, the former commander of Marine Fighter Attack Squadron 211, or VMFA 211, was killed on Sept. 14, 2012, when roughly 15 Taliban militants stormed the sprawling Camp Bastion military base.

At the time, Bastion housed thousands of Marines and British troops and military aircraft operating in Helmand province, Afghanistan.

Taliban fighters armed with machine guns, suicide vests and RPGs breached the highly secured compound and attacked the flight line where Marine Corps Harriers sat on the deck.

Raible, armed only with a pistol, spearheaded a counterattack against the militants and was eventually killed when an RPG exploded nearby.

Six Harriers were destroyed in the onslaught and a second Marine, Sgt. Bradley Atwell, also was killed in the attack.

Raible was posthumously awarded the Silver Star for his heroic actions in fighting of the Taliban attack.

The Spy Business and Boeing Bombers

The bombing of Dresden and various german ammo, tank, airplane, and other industrial or trasportation infrustructure was a joint British American operation conducted in the European theater often with the B-17 Bomber under fighter escort, often the Spitfire or the Spitfire as its US version, the P-51.

During the bombing of Japan the same bombing composite group formation was used but the B-29 Stratofortress became available for long range survivable bombing flights.

> The bombing of Dresden was a British-American aerial bombing attack on the city of Dresden, the capital of the German state of Saxony, during World War II. In four raids between 13 and 15 February 1945, 722 heavy bombers of the British Royal Air Force (RAF) and 527 of the United States Army Air Forces (USAAF) dropped more than 3,900 tons of high-explosive bombs and incendiary devices on the city.[1] The bombing and the resulting firestorm destroyed more than 1,600 acres (6.5 km2) of the city centre.[2] An estimated 22,700[3] to 25,000[4] people were killed.[a] Three more USAAF air raids followed, two occurring on 2 March aimed at the city's railway marshalling yard and one smaller raid on 17 April aimed at industrial areas.

British Prime Minister Winston Churchill, who indicated a need after Dresden to reduce attacks primarily affecting civilians.

Coventry and Ultra (1940)

In his 1974 book The Ultra Secret, Group Captain F. W. Winterbotham asserted that the British government had advance warning of the attack from Ultra: intercepted German radio messages encrypted with the Enigma cipher machine and decoded by British cryptanalysts at Bletchley Park.

He further claimed that Winston Churchill ordered that no defensive measures should be taken to protect Coventry, lest the Germans suspect that their cipher had been broken.[17] Winterbotham was a key figure for Ultra and supervised the "Special Liaison Officers" who delivered Ultra material to field commanders.

Immediate German propaganda claims following the attacks and postwar discussions[5] of whether the attacks were justified have led to the bombing becoming one of the moral causes célèbres of the war.[6] A 1953 United States Air Force report defended the operation as the justified bombing of a strategic target, which they noted was a major rail transport and communication centre, housing 110 factories and 50,000 workers in support of the German war effort.[7]

Several researchers claim that not all of the communications infrastructure, such as the bridges, were targeted, nor were the extensive industrial areas outside the city centre.[8] Critics of the bombing have asserted that Dresden was a cultural landmark while downplaying its strategic significance, and claim that the attacks were indiscriminate area bombing and not proportionate to the military gains.[9][10][11] Some have claimed that the raid constituted a war crime.[12] Some, mostly in the German far-right, refer to the bombing as a mass murder, calling it “Dresden’s Holocaust of bombs”.[13][14]

According to the RAF at the time, Dresden was Germany’s seventh-largest city and the largest remaining unbombed built-up area.[36] Taylor writes that an official 1942 guide to the city described it as “one of the foremost industrial locations of the Reich” and in 1944 the German Army High Command’s Weapons Office listed 127 medium-to-large factories and workshops that were supplying the army with materiel.[37] Nonetheless, according to some historians, the contribution of Dresden to the German war effort may not have been as significant as the planners thought.[38]

July 29: The Japanese government rejects the Potsdam surrender demand. The five C-54 transports arrive at Tinian. All components for Little Boy are now on site, but no Fat Man bomb assemblies have yet arrived. July 30: The nuclear components (target, projectile, and 4 initiators) are inserted into bomb unit number L11. The USS Indianapolis is attacked by a Japanese submarine and sinks. July 31: The assembly of Little Boy is completed. It is ready for use the next day.

August 1: Typhoon approaching Japan prevents launching an attack with Little Boyz. Several days are required for weather to clear. Early morning: Colonel Paul Tibbets drafts the top secret order for the first atomic bombing attack in history.

It only took him a few minutes to write it. The order was sealed and sent by special courier to General Curtis LeMay’s headquarters in Guam. Tibbets then selected which of his crews would fly with him on the mission.

A total of seven B-29’s would be used in the mission. One would be located at Iwo Jima to serve as a stand-by aircraft.

Three aircraft would fly ahead of the plane carrying the atomic bomb to assess the weather of the three target cities. This information would then be relayed back to the atomic bomb carrier. The remaining two B-29's will accompany the atomic bomb carrier as observation aircraft.

Afternoon: At his Washington D.C. headquarters, General Groves receives a cablegram from General Thomas Farrell. General Farrell was Groves's deputy. The cablegram reads, "As of 1000 hours Eastern War Time, the atomic bomb was ready to drop over Japan."

August 2: Fat Man bomb cases F-31 and F-32 arrive on Tinian, carried by 509th B-29's Luke the Spook and Laggin' Dragon. Fat Man assembly begins. Bombing date is set for August 11.

Tony King was one of the lucky ones. When he and nearly 1,200 USS Indianapolis crew members sailed from Mare Island, California, on July 16, 1945, no one aboard dreamed that in exactly two weeks they would be cast adrift while their beloved Indianapolis, the 5th Fleet flagship, lay at the bottom of the sea. Or that its sinking would precipitate the worst sea disaster in the U.S. Navy's history.

No one dreamed that Indianapolis would be at sea at all, the war being almost over. On March 31, 1945, the eve of the Allied landing at Okinawa, a Japanese kamikaze struck Indy, killing nine sailors and sending the ship to Mare Island, California, for repairs. Most men thought that meant they'd sit out the balance of the war. But Manhattan Project scientists had just completed the world's first operational atomic bomb, and Lieutenant General Leslie Groves needed to move the uranium core of the weapon to within striking distance of Japan.

My father and I used to go sailboarding at Lake DelValle Californina, sit, eat sandwiches, drink Near Beer and talk near Lawwrence Livermore Lab, as we did go to Lawrence Hall of Science. He told me of his war budies and their refusal to wear "yum yum yellow" life jackets because the believed it as a nice look for sharks to find. Nice, he thought the lake had no sharks and the life jackets were not "yellow."

Early afternoon: Tibbets and his bombardier, Thomas Ferebee, arrive in Guam to meet with General LeMay to complete the remaining details of the mission order. The first order of business is to find out which target city was preferred by LeMay. LeMay's answer was "Paul, the primary's Hiroshima." Tibbets provided an immediate response: "I've always preferred it as the target."

After some discussion on whether to fly into the wind or downwind for safety and bombing accuracy reasons, the conversation ends with a unanimous agreement to fly into the wind. The last order of business is for Ferebee to select his aiming point. Without hesitation, Ferebee places his index finger on the T-shaped Aioi Bridge located in the center of Hiroshima. LeMay nodded his head and Tibbets agreed, stating, "It's the most perfect aiming AP [aim point] I've seen in this whole damn war."

August 4: Tibbets briefs the 509th Composite Group about the impending attack. He reveals that they will drop immensely powerful bombs, but the nature of the weapons is not revealed the B-29 crews and P-51 escorts (both as recon camera crews and fighter protection of the B-29s]

Manchuria 1945

August 9th, 1945

Soviet invasion of Manchuria retrieved from Wikipedia and copied or modified to here

The Manchurian Operation (Маньчжурская операция), began on 9 August 1945 with the Soviet invasion of the *Japanese puppe*t state of Manchukuo. It was the largest campaign of the 1945 Soviet-Japanese War, which resumed hostilities between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the Empire of Japan after almost six years of peace. Since 1983, the operation has sometimes been called Operation August Storm after U.S. Army historian David Glantz used this title for a paper on the subject.[1]

As agreed with the Allies at the Tehran

Conference in November 1943 and the Yalta Conference in February 1945, the Soviet Union entered World War II's Pacific Theater within three months of the end of the war in Europe. The invasion began on 9 August 1945, exactly three months after the German surrender on May 8 (9 May, 0:43 Moscow time).

Although the commencement of the invasion fell between the American atomic bombing of Hiroshima, on 6 August, and only hours before the Nagasaki bombing on 9 August, the timing of the invasion had been planned well in advance and was determined by the timing of the agreements at Tehran and Yalta, the long-term buildup of Soviet forces in the Far East since Tehran, and the date of the German surrender some three months earlier; on August 3, Marshal Vasilevsky reported to Premier Joseph Stalin that, if necessary, he could attack on the morning of 5 August.

Though the battle extended beyond the borders traditionally known as Manchuria-that is, the traditional lands of the Manchus-the coordinated and integrated invasions of Japan's northern territories has also been called the Battle of Manchuria.[18] It has also been referred to as the Manchurian strategic offensive operation.

Japanese Unit 731 retrieved from Wikipedia and copied or modified to here

Unit 731 (Japanese: 731部隊, Hepburn: Nana-san-ichi Butai),[5] short for Manshu Detachment 731 and also known as Kamo Detachment,[3]:198 Ishii Unit,[6] was a covert biological and chemical warfare research and development unit of the Imperial Japanese Army that undertook lethal human experimentation during the Second Sino-Japanese War (1937-1945) of World War II. It was responsible for some of the most notorious war crimes carried out by Imperial Japan. Unit 731 was based at the Pingfang district of Harbin, the largest city in the Japanese puppet state of Manchukuo (now Northeast China), and had active branch offices throughout China and Southeast Asia.

The researchers involved in Unit 731 were secretly given immunity by the United States in exchange for the data they gathered through human experimentation.[7] Other researchers that the Soviet forces managed to arrest first were tried at the Khabarovsk War Crime Trials in 1949. The Americans did not try the researchers so that the information and experience gained in bio-weapons could be co-opted into their biological warfare program, much as they had done with German researchers in Operation Paperclip.[8] On 6 May 1947, Douglas MacArthur, as Supreme Commander of the Allied Forces, wrote to Washington that "additional data, possibly some statements from Ishii, can probably be obtained by informing Japanese involved that information will be retained in intelligence channels and will not be employed as war crimes evidence".[7]

Such a person, a Manchurian Candidate, could be used to create Communis/ Leftist Groomed sleeper agents of Peace around the world, Ford Foundation, Peace Corps, USAID, the OSS/CIA, East-West Center of Hawaii, Russia and England, the Allies.

This is the story of secret Illuminati MKULTRA World Ecosystems Eugenics and Sleeper Agents in the Illuminati and elsewhere for the 21st Century world economies and beyond ongoing family line Eugenics especially during gene therapy and in telling that story it is also the story of the shot callers who run MKULTRA and their control of the Media and Government in the Deep State and their sapient cover up cover stories operations.

The warfare type is called Irregulars which depend on non uniformed soldiers and “Leverage” activities such as the assassination and or replacement of foreign sovereigns, murder of journalists or disruption of civilian economic activity, use of moles, blackmail, and other special operations.

A battle for Alepo fought by Irregulars is easy to spot, the rights to use a Genome and Irregular Warfare surrounding the rights to is is harder to catch on camera though in this book I have both photos and emails from the Irregulars as to their acts.

It includes “wetworks” “sleeper agents” and moles and I believe it is based largely on cove ups as well as original goals.

Irregular Warfare which John F. Kennedy signed int law as part of the US Military and Espionage capabilities I believe now have taken on a life of their own and are defending their mistakes increasingly biologically detectable and George Bush, Gregg Abbot, Donald and William Barr, the OBamas, the Trumps, and others, Masons, are abusing state powers of harassment against me in the same illegal covert irregular operation which have been illegal in the USA so far, but the PsyOps can protect is wrongdoing with further hits and espionage.

The Abuse of Power is using State resources and agencies to deny me the correct identification such as REAL ID, Social Security Number, right to Due Process and attending hearings, right to property for myself in the Glorian Donegan trust now misused under RICO by State False-flags State Sponsored Crisis pretexts, Free Mason claims against the Trust as though it was ME who caused the crisis which was staged by Free Mason moles in gov) and the Moles in Government to protect themselves are subverting by basic rights, existence, and life, and I belief my existence, its detection is threat to their misuse of Donegan biology.

In short false claims harass me and subvert me in society and masons are making those false claims in a “kill list” way in which assets are seized away from and to to Masons who always wanted and always had them.

Like most illegal acts their only defense is escaping detection and reporting and this book tries to defeat the scheme in that way.

Espionage is the placement of invisible rocks to the path of Sovereignty of Nations by non national or international interests the flow of Nations of the world are controlled by the invisible rock, and the rock use of Assassination, Regime Change, and other espionage techniques plausibly asserted to be their but plausibly denied as having been put there.

It is also the story of oil money, big money, and big finance as the Standard Oil (Rockefeller) the Bush family from Texas, Howard Hughes, and others planned the Middle East and the Rotchschilds Rockefeller and George and Neil Bush pharmaceutical planned to make money on the world economies forming the Masonry New World Order and PsyOps behavioral research into world populations and economies by the British Empire in the Middle East North Africa (MENA)

Bear in mind during the reading of the timeline of the troubles that my father and JFK were Catholics at that time and that this issue of me having an abdicated King Edward grandather tied to Ireland in some way.

Part of the confusion may have been the context of the English Irish dispuate at the time and British Monarchy plans. Again, the issue of my King Edward granfather had according to my father tied in to the changes that where happending between the British and Irish rule or self rule legal changes.

Timeline of the Troubles From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

The Troubles were a period of conflict in Northern Ireland involving republican and loyalist paramilitaries, the British security forces, and civil rights groups. They are usually dated from the late 1960s through the Good Friday Agreement of 1998.

However, sporadic violence continued after this point. Those that continued violence past this point are referred to as “dissident republicans and loyalists”. By 1998 the Troubles had claimed roughly 3500 lives.

Prior to 1960

Since partition, the IRA had started a number of military operations in Northern Ireland designed at bringing about their goal of a United Ireland. The intensity of this activity increased towards the end of 1941, where the IRA decided to step up its campaign of attacks in Northern Ireland.[5] In response to this activity the Unionist authorities under John Miller Andrews introduced internment and using provisions of the Emergency Powers Act, instituted increasingly restrictive policies in Northern Ireland. This pattern of paramilitary violence, followed by increasingly restrictive measures on the behalf of the authorities came to define the run-up to the Troubles.

Since 1964, civil rights activists had been protesting against the discrimination against Catholics and Irish nationalists by the Ulster Protestant and unionist government of Northern Ireland. The civil rights movement called for: ‘one man, one vote’; the end to gerrymandered electoral boundaries; the end to discrimination in employment and in the allocation of public housing; repeal of the Special Powers Act; and the disbanding of the Ulster Special Constabulary.

My father tells me we stopped going to church at about my two years old, his friend bitterly betrayed by the Church, and in Rumor Has It Analogy I of my book my speculation is the Windsors and Vatican killed JFK over the issue of creating English sleeper agents my father and JFK would oppose.

This book and CIA DARPA murders are about the history of and plans discussed and February 20 1961 tested between George Ball, JFK, and OECD’s Thorkil Kristensen and the Brain, Economies, and Eugenics

It is also about the Pacific Ocean, war in the Pacific Ocean, and the war for the Pacific Ocean after the attack on Peral Harbor, the battle for the Philipine Islands, and during the Pacific Missile Crisis with China in the early 1960s.

This is the story of espionage abuse of my family, family history in the Manhattan Project Los Angles blast exposure testing, MKULTRA, and the Pacific Missile Crisis. It is the story of new radiological attacks on my midsection, twice. It is the story of CIA DIA radiation experiments, DNA studies, and illegal science, illegal Eugenics, and the Missile Gap scare. It is the story of assaultive stalking as psychological harassment and study of me along with psychological warfare against me via staged photos and Frank-Olsen-Class espionage harassment of me.

How did any of this relate? I was born under the Manhattan Project, Manhattan Beach Los Angeles to my Nuclear Air Force Wing TRIAD MKULTRA father James Paul Donegan, Cape Cod family tied to JFK who was at my birth.

Why would this all fit together? I think my mother, and out of wedlock Maria Von Trapp and Windsor daughter, with the FOXP2 CIA DARPA studied defect, was being studied in twins studies and with my DNA elsewhere from Sidney Gottlieb science it has exposed me to Defense Advance Project Research MKULTRA hostility and espionage attacks.

My story of being harassed by espionage agencies is the fallout from ongoing allies espionage history of thumb on the scale meddling and now hiding the impact of meddling in complex biological systems war against the Axis all part of the Military Industrial Complex General Eisenhower warned of.

Our psychiatry history in the Diagnoses (Dx) of racial strife and racial international warfare, Prognosis (Px) of future impacts, and secretive medical interventions (Rx) in classified biological research activity unethical, criminal, and now exposed in this book.

It is the story of Palliative Delusions rather than Tough Love in Race Theory, defending the feelings of non whites and gays while concealing the lurking dangers until a black market system arose which met the needs hidden by societal delusion and failed DARPRA They Human Brain Program attempt at secretive illegal twins studies with illegally used DNA samples and test victims.

It is also the story of international Genome Trafficking in black markets when science insiders had black marketable genome sources for the awaiting in surface affects created by the hidden deeper covert story fundamentals.

Finally it is about Abuse of Power and Abuse of Power in Conspiracy Against Rights as Espionage connected people and interest have gained control of political offices such as FBI, Dept of Justice, Court Offices, and also private partnerships and private interests to , as moles, cover-up history in their own interests and not serve my or the People’s nor the Agencies or Offices statutory mission or use of powers.

It is not about Barrack Obama or the theory that Malcom X (born 1925 and Glorian Donegan, a Windsor/Von Trap FOXP2 gene carrier are the real parents of Barrack Obama though it does include that theory.

This is a book about DARPA and genes lines far beyond that which flowed out of by February 20 November 18 fertilization to birth under MKULTRA Manhattan Project, tied to both Chicago Illinois and Cap Code Massachusetts where my family grew up with the Kennedy's.

Wikipedia and How Stuff Works

> Capacitors and Creating Capacity
>
> One way to visualize the action of a capacitor is to imagine it as a water tower hooked to a pipe. A water tower “stores” water pressure - when the water system pumps produce more water than a town needs, the excess is stored in the water tower. Then, at times of high demand, the excess water flows out of the tower to keep the pressure up. A capacitor stores electrons in the same way and can then release them later. https://electronics.howstuffworks.com/capacitor.htm
> Infiltration and Incapacitation

Incapacity: physical or mental inability to do something or to manage one's affairs

Incapacity refers to the situation where an employee is unable to carry out or perform to his/her contracted obligations due to the inherent inability on the part of the employee. Incapacity is distinguished from misconduct and discipline in that 'fault' or; blame' is not alleged in incapacity

Infiltration

This book asserts those tied to the JFK assassination and world NWO plans since had the financial and espionage clout to infiltrate US elite offices in media and government and use contracts, etc., for dirty jobs, often disguising the work being done by the use of dirty tricks espionage capabilities are the source of.

Seeking the genome center of this, mine and my mothers and fathers was my journey into MKULTRA and the Manhattan Project and DNA research and the racial strife and studies in Eugenics in the 20th Century.

The need this book fulfills is a need for an Epiphany view of world genomic history, now only held by the Illuminati and controlled by the Illuminati and denied to the public, a public with no credible larger view of it all, a public with not working theories of race and racial strife that truly make sense.

This book is the result (much like the case of Citizens United) to widen the scope of the inquiry until the scope of the inquiry includes all the material elements.

The gaps on genes required for Modernity in Sub Sahara in particular and the secret desire to close the gaps before the gaps were another source of war and how this tied into 20th Century including test babies like Barrack Obama and the Mark and Scott Kelly brothers and NASA DARPA is the large scale scope of this book and it seeks an Epiphany of collective acceptance of memes disputed in single such as the CIA role in the JFK assassination, racial cognitive variation, effects of GDP on political systems, and the role of Masonry and Secret Soviets all come in to this epiphany view and story, not defeating politically correct memes one by one or just one or two but rather all of them collectively.

Evolution, race, and Twins Studies

This book is a book about evolution.

My belief is racial evolutionary gaps and differences exist, are larger or were larger than believed, and those who deny those gaps (Like Free Masons or others) are eroding the theories of wrongdoing in racial matters or racial research such as the assassination of JFK who did not agree to more extensive twins studies and racial research as one test twins birth, me being one of the twins studies the Church Committee on illegal conduct could not fully stop.

The evolution of Human Kind and the evolution of scientific ideas as competition for fitness moves theories in and out of scientific understanding.

It is also about the evolution of criminal conspiracies in world politics, how they started, what drives them, and what they have turned into, and the fittest theory to describe the criminal conduct of Espionage agencies and politicians from espionage agencies is what originates in this book.

My theory that the CIA QEII Mafia killed Marilyn and JFK and RFK either knew it and or later learned of it, and why the CIA

Mafia murdered her. She, Marilyn, could have been the Narrator (provide the Narrative) of how extensive and murderous the CIA mafia really was. Thus the mafia silenced Marilyn who was born: June 1, 1926, Los Angeles, CA Died: August 4, 1962, Brentwood, Los Angeles, CA. Happy Birthday Queen Mother!

A plan existed for Indonesia created by the Anglicans and Vatican working together. This was the Puritan side of JFK, RFK, and the Peace Corps and USAID. The Profiteer side was Sullivan and Cromwell, United Fruit Company, Railroad Robber Barrons, oil money, and casinos and gun and drug runners.

The puritanical side won in 1960 but a bullet overturned the election and the plan was taken back over by the criminal mafia elites of big business money.

The book by Dr Greg Poultrain is expertly written and researched, contains comments on it by James Eugenio and Oliver Stone, and so far as I read it supports and is consistent with my theory that Barrack Obama Jr was a project of the CIA for Indonesia, tied to the Manchurian Candidate, and this also ties to the Donegan family.

The NDAA

NDAA

The National Defense Authorization Act (NDAA) is the name for each of a series of United States federal laws specifying the annual budget and expenditures of the U.S. Department of Defense. The first NDAA was passed in 1961. * Wikipedia

Fusion Center aka Law Enforcement Intelligence Unit

Fusion Centers are designed to promote information sharing at the federal level between agencies such as the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the U.S. Department of Homeland Security, the U.S. Department of Justice, and state, local, and tribal law enforcement. Wikipedia

The Medical State usage of Fusion Centers: Fusion Centers, Law Enforcement Intelligence Units empowered Shadow Government to military acts and assets seizures are effectively a return to Star

Double Agent

A Double Agent is a person planted or recruited to appear to work for one organization while being an Agent (for an exogenous group) In Place (the infiltrated place)

In this book I assert Richard Cheney likely learned British Propaganda in the form of fiction, historical dramas, or dramas based on historical figures often represent secret or unknown history and operations. In 1962 Dick Cheney likely met his wife being introduced to British espionage operations like The Sound of Music (English version) and he married in

Deceitful backstories about people Espionage agents use for themselves to create Cover Stories or Espionage agents create about others to smear or praise them. Legends arise from faked documents, stories or lore planted in undercover coworkers or in newspapers, etc., unfair treatment of facts about a person such as who started a fight when a fight occurred, etc.,

Legends (acted out events by Espionage Operatives) are the needs of Infiltrators who have Government or Business Offices to abuse to alter the perception of history and destroy the Constitutional outcomes of contemporary events which create the alternative reality criminals (Too Infamous to run or hide) can survive and prosper under.

This book will allege Criminal Harassment Under Color of Law will plant evidence through White House Plumbers and Confidential Informants operated out of the White House to then invoke this asset seizures system which is exploitable such as notifying misrepresentation of a person of asset seizures OR ex-parte proceedings such as Grand Juries, FISA Courts, etc.,

World terrorism and assassinations, Gorilla Warfare internally in affected nations, and Deep State even large wars have been in the world events history of these efforts of Great Britain and some allied co-rulers of the USA in league with Great Britain, oil companies, and other strategic and propaganda enterprises.

In the USA this has variously been the Business Plot, Operation 40, the CIA Mafi, Cali Cartel, and other organizational forms under MKLUTRA generally.

The Shadow Government of Private Equity and Show Government strategic and financial involvement started in 1901 or variously cited as 1902 or 1905

It was during this time Theater experts, psychologists, eugenicists, and other scientists were ogranzied to study the FOXP2 around the world in various world locations. It also involved the simultaneous use of secretive out of registry blue bloods in those other world location like the acting and speech experts to be part of a large scale secret study including the Temporal Lobe, language generally, IQ and economies, and world planning.

It is this shadow government that has controlled much of history and groomed many of the 21 Centuries leaders in media, law, business, and government and they don't like being found out.

The Unwritten Constitution of Britain by historic conventions guide the wheels of the relationship between the ancient institutions of State *. The Unwritten Co-Rule of the USA as a "Special Relationship Commonwealth" exists as well.

NORMAN O. FREDERIKSEN, 9 Sherman Terrace, states that he is studying for his doctor's degree in geology at the University of Wisconsin since September, 1963 but that he was formerly employed as a geologist in the Socony Research Laboratory near Dallas, Texas. FREDERIKSEN recalled meeting LEE HARVEY OSWALD on only one occasion under the following circumstances:

EVERETT GLOVER, also a research geologist with the Socony Laboratory at that time during about February, 1963, gave a party attended by persons who were interested in hearing about Russia and which group is comprised mostly of people who could speak Russian. FREDERIKSEN recalled as included in the attendance GEORGE DE MORHENSCHILDT, an independent geologist at Dallas, Texas, and his wife, a RICHARD L. PIERCE, who lived with GLOVER, PIERCE's friend, BETTY MC DONALD, and a RUTH PAINE as well as LEE OSWALD and his Russian born wife.

OSWALD spoke and then answered questions and in doing so FREDERIKSEN recalls that OSWALD intimated that he went to Russia because he thought it was a dynamic society going someplace and that its people were working enthusiastically to move it ahead but he, OSWALD, discovered in the factory where he worked that these people only worked so as to get paid and that the only interest they had in putting in extra working hours was to get some extra pay and that this disillusioned OSWALD. FREDERIKSEN said that OSWALD never to FREDERIKSEN's recollection of the night, said he was a Communist or was a member of the Communist Party and that OSWALD in his talk stayed away from political talk and talked about the people and living conditions in Russia. The President's Daily Brief: Kennedy, Johnson, and the CIA, 1961-1969

Once called "the most highly sensitized classified document in the government," the President's Daily Brief (PDB) is a Top Secret CIA digest of essential intelligence presented every morning to the president and a handful of his closest advisers. Spotlighting the most sensitive world flash points, the PDBs provide insight into what presidents knew and when they knew it about the most critical issues of the day.

The National Security Archive - in partnership with others in the academic community - was instrumental in paving the way for the first substantial release of PDBs through a campaign of public education and pressure finally leading to litigation. In 2007, the Archive joined with Professor Larry Berman, then a professor of political science at the University of California, Davis, in a suit against the CIA. Though the court denied the plaintiffs' immediate request, it rejected the CIA's attempt to obtain a blanket exemption for all PDBS, opening the door for the eventual release of the 2,500 documents and nearly 19,000 pages included in this collection.

These highly succinct records provide a day-by-day glimpse into the historic global challenges facing the Kennedy and Johnson administrations. Themes covered include Cold War conflicts over access to West Berlin; the Cuban missile crisis; the Vietnam War; the Six-Day War; conflicts sparked by decolonization in Africa, Indonesia, and the Middle East; political turmoil in Central and South America; NATO and EEC concerns; and reporting on the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, among other topics.

While the extreme secrecy that has shrouded these 40-year-old documents now seems dubious, this collection nonetheless serves as a rich source not only on a pivotal period in modern world history but on the workings of government and the national security system, especially presidential decision-making, CIA intelligence production, and government secrecy.

JFK, Dave Powers, at Santa Monica/Manhattan Beech LA County California on November 19 as I was also being born.

Some text is underlined. In particular I underline February 20 November 18, my birth, November 19 my Birth Certificate, and Dec 13 my mother's birthday, all tied to my fertilization and birth or August 4 which is Barrack Obama's said birth also in 1961.

August

4this the said birthday of Barrack Obama Jr. and this book poses the theory he was really part of a Manhattan Project Atomic Energy and DNA Science program born November 18 at Manhattan Beach California but ascribed to an August 4 Hawaii birth certificate for later introduction into Indonesia as a CIA bred and groomed Sleeper agent.

In Event Driven Architecture (of event) at a 2 year mark, November 18 1963, you can compare me or someone else 2 years in in developmental psychology metrics rather than gathering a baseline population of 17 months old or 27 month old babies in Developmental Psychology. I observe at the time I and Barack Obama, 2 years old, studied for speech development JFK was assassinated upon results discussion.

JFK Assassinated: November 22, 1963 One Speech Spasmodic me with two copies of FOXP2, Barack Obama with one copy of the gene.

That is the premise of this book February 20 1961 Fertilization of Barack Obama and Edward Paul Donegan from Glorian Donegan Ovum (she born Dec 13 from King Edward VIII/ Maria Von Trapp parents) birth Nonmember 18 1961 JFK assassinated at 2 year mark.

    - Jen Moore Video: OSS to CIA, black budgets, Operation Paperclip, & Hidden Identities
        - Hidden Identities / Operation Paperclip My theory that the King

Edward that was my grandfather on one side of my family I thought had been on the paternal side of some Irish Vanity Estate was actually on the Maternal side and was King Edward VIII who with Maria (Kutschera) Von Trapp was a Windsor Nazi Kings Daughter, out of wedlock DNA tied to leadership but speech a speech defect

- CIA Black Budgets: The CIA knows people want certain genes and if they know the desirability or quality of certain genes they can exploit that genome value using rights to it self enriching on spending the rights to it, this is the source of "black money" a black markets term, secretive money which is laundered illegally

- Blackmail: the black money is introduced into black markets as CIA backed people allow themselves to be blackmailed for rights to the genes in massage parlors, caught with Tree House porn, minors in public exploitivley photographed by child porn freaks

- Moles of CIA-Past hidden in Law Enforcement Corruption Today in an Ordered List

    1. The CIA operation is both profitable creating secret CIA budget for lewd activities and phony-crimes solving, and real budgets for solving phoney crimes taken from the worth of the DNA being taking by impersonators of me into the adult entertainer industry.

2. Moles not only self enrich in the illegal operation they use the money for a dark budget dark operation which is used for cleanup operations of earlier CIA blunders, a cleanup operation which could not exist ” on the grid.”

3. Moles running the operation likely wish to normalize that DNA can be used for legal debts IF the DNA is used for erotic misconduct as if to create a reproductive-event-exchange and this is the medical legal ethics dividing James Comey and the Free Masons in which Donald Trump sided with Rod Frankenstein, the US PHS Commissions Core US Marshalls over opinions from Comey, Sessions, Whitaker, and perhaps others

- The summary of this book and Jen Moore videos is that the Rockefeller's, Bidens, Bush family, Clinton's, Kennedy's, Trump family, Obama family, and others have a long term perhpas family jewels CIA twins program underway inside the Illuminati elites and it is tied to assassinations and other black-opps cover-ups including Jeffery Epstein and the VI Brain Foundation, Columbia University and the Manhattan Project, and financing and this is the illegal world of MK-ULTRA and creation of [Economic] “Super Soldiers” captions of industry world wide.

“Father Franz” who is represented by the character Max Detweiler in the play is actually Franz Kutschera who will later become a Gestopo general, but was an early father figure to Maria when her own parents died. The future Nazi course of Germany was predicted and the move from Max was made by the Von Trapps

It is my belief then Edward Prince of Wales later King Edward VIII like the Von Trappss were too close to Max, and in fact Maria Von Trappp had out of wedlock children, my mother one of them, in 1926 with Maria Von Trapp.

Video 11 (ans several other MKUULTRA Secrit Identties videos camera Poined at GLorian and Ed Donegan Arlingtoin VA Apartment building and floor)

Okay this is video number 11 and underneath this envelope is three cases and you can zoom in they say US District Court District of Columbia Washington DC the top case is in a pills case closed type II so as I go on on my youtube journey I’m going at some point to expose in some way what is under this yellow or manila envelope and under it are cases that involve the identities of some people who would rather not that that not be done.

I think it’s important for the American people to know some of these facts so in the past week or so as I just started out this YouTube channel I’ve been doing a series of interviews on another YouTube channel with farmer Jones and the interviews have to do with things such as MKULTRA, the Vatican the Vatican’s connection to the CIA how MKULTRA was started DETAILS about pre-world War one and what led into the Second World War and things like at the MKULTRA program which many people have heard about.

It talks a lot about Sigmund Freud who was kind of the founder of MKULTRA or one of them he's known as the father of psychology the father of psycho psycho analysis different titles like that but his history has been sanitized and even most psychologists or doctors psychology do not know a lot of this history and I do for a variety of reasons I'll get into and even going further into people like dr. Carl Jung it's Ju and Ji Young in theory is very well known the realms of psychology and psychoanalysis many people don't know is that mr. young was our doctor young was also Karl or allan dulles secret agent agent 488 and Allen Dulles was the founder of the CIA he originally was an OSS which was our initial United States of America their intelligence service and then it moved into the CIA during and following World War two and Allen Dulles was the first director of that of the CIA.

His brother Lewis John Foster Dulles was also in there and Allen Dulles was a CIA agent at the time of JFK's assassination so that is an interesting part that will come out as well so I've been doing a series of interviews with another YouTube channel farmer Jones who's been great on this history and what I know about MKULTRA and the Nazis and the development of the program in historical context to which it was built and why what were the kind of underlying motivations at that time and what was some of the really very disturbing parts that has been sanitized from our history in many ways and so I've been doing a series of interviews.

I did my fourth today I believe on this history and as I've stated before in my videos I was a someone who enforced the law at for a pretty long time in some very dark places and I also had my degree in psychology a clinical psychology so I was involved in that as well so I came into this knowledge by combining a lot of that work also a lot of research but then I had a very interesting transition that led me to connect all these dots and that was I met a person in 2009 who was 79 years old she was the child of Hitler's top commandant (Gestapo General Franz Kutschera uncle and her father Arthur Kutschera owned all the theaters in Munich and Berlin around Germany and back in those days the big screen movie theaters were very rare she was one of the kind of the elite German children on the Nazi and she was literally at the feet of Hitler during a lot of this history from age you know early on but from age 8 through 17 when World War two really the bombs came raining in on Munich and she attempted to escape and was saved by American GI soldiers which is just a remarkable story of survival and she made it to the United States of America and became a very famous person in her own right Maria Kutshcera married to Austrian Caption VonTrapp).

and I'm not gonna name her at this point but for reasons that I can only guess would be a miracle from God that he would bless me with the chance to know this person and many of you may not believe and and all that and that's fine but it was my honor to truly meet her and hear her story and listen for about a year and a half from 2009 into 2010 as she turned 80 years of age and she passed away at that time but in that process of a year and a half I learned about trauma from of which most if not any that I could think of and I've experienced and what seen a lot of trauma could possibly imagine just horror upon horror and she told me the gritty DETAILS of what she saw from on the opposite side of the Holocaust victims and then what she saw was she was escaping through Germany into Switzerland as a 17 year old witnessing really the the gravity and depravity of what had occurred that she was not fully aware of her position in life and then the coming to terms with that.

I'm in the year and a half that we spent time together she also new called young as a friend or a associate I guess you could say at some point in her life and I can get into that at some other point but she shared this information with me in an attempt to relieve her soul with what she would describe it of the burden of pain and shame and guilt that she felt even though she was just a little child while all this was happening so we went through that process and I've shared some of that on the interviews with farmer Jones so my goal is to keep sharing these interviews because it's a rich history it's American history and it obviously it's not fold and complete because it's one part of it or many different parts from many different angles that for reasons it's hard for me to understand I came into contact with these various kind of extremes or these different worlds and was able to put some pieces together so for that reason I have wanted to share this stuff for a long time didn't know when the right reason was and also there's a lot of pressure to not talk about these things.

I hope to do that this is video number 11 (Secret Identities which are already in the European version of the Sound of Music which used real names) I'm going to post in video number 12 the first interview and then subsequently after that so you can listen and comment and please give your feedback and we will take it from there all right good night Hidden behind this envelope are the identities of those who wish to keep this secret.

It belongs to the American People and in due time I will reveal them.

okay it is Sunday night and I'm looking out at beautiful Washington DC and as you can tell I have a great view this evening it's a Sunday night tonight before the Monday morning testimony I believe before the Judiciary Committee on the OIG report so that's gonna be tomorrow morning and I will be there live it in person to see the fireworks if there are any I hope there are a little bit courage mr. Jim Jordan and mr. good luck and mr. gates to it mr. Gowdy to all go full wards get these documents so I'm posting this video just because I'm going to attach the interview number three and four that I had done now

Regarding um you know start the first two interviews were kind of starting in World War one and moving into World War two OSS to the CIA different players that were involved dealt the Dulles brothers Hitler obviously Aleister Crowley in my six in my five how the OSS became the CIA the Vatican's involvement the indoctrination that occurred the different experiments that were done how MKULTRA was brought together under several different kind of philosophies or mythology's I guess you could say some of it is really hard to listen to but it's the truth and it needs to be told because it's still happening so though as these interviews go long I move it into the United States and Canada in particular I mean it's a very lot of other places but United States in Canada really was infiltrated through black budgets by the CIA and went from OSS into CIA the Vatican was involved in that and Operation Paperclip in how these Nazi scientists including Hitler and Mengele and Himmler and all these kind of the worst characters of all were secretly moved in to Argentina and South America and then some of them were even brought up into the United States and they were given new identities

it gets into some pretty gnarly DETAILS but there's truth there and I've got court cases and documents to back it up personal eyewitnesses you name it this is the story of a whistle-blower our whistle-blowers in general yes it is dangerous I accept that at the same time I refuse to be silent anymore and so I'm going to carry on releasing this information OSS to CIA, black budgets, Operation Paperclip, ' Hidden Identities of Glorian, could have been Marilyn Monroe or Julie Andrews, before next meeting Glorian and falling in love. Glorian was from North Carolina where I think she was born to pregnant arrival Maria Agusta Kutschera Von Trapp. In his attempts to out some secret plot (according to Jim Garrison) Lee Harvey Oswald had some idea of Nazis (Kutscheras?) inside the USA.

  Jen Moore was likely part of the CIA gangstalk of me but resented the duty. She considered it a CIA attempt to hide Nazi infiltration of the USA and that this was tied to the JFK murder and many others. The Gangstalk is a theater team which skits out things that are not true but appear to be true and may match (in public) what a dopple has done in public.

  In the Gangstalk of me Gangs of people walk around near me, use apartments near me, dress like me, and say we together are buying the sight of models with my DNA, them as porn, and during that we are together getting punished for having photographed women to you and paying restitution an protection fees.

  The are doing this, often away from me, sometimes near me, but they not me are doing that and they not me are doing that with the rights to my DNA which pays for it all.

W. Averell Harriman, Jim Garrison, David William Ferrie , Gen. Edward Geary Lansdale, Earle Cabell was a Texas politician who served as mayor of Dallas, Texas. Cabell was mayor at the time of the assassination of United States President John F. Kennedy and was later a member of the U.S. House of Representatives.

Leroy Fletcher Prouty served as Chief of Special Operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff under President John F. Kennedy. A colonel in the United States Air Force, he retired from military service to become a bank executive. Wikipedia. Lawford,

To: Whom It may concern and for immediate release Press Kit

Subject: The most important Kennedy assassination witness since the very early first ones such as Lee Bowers Junior, Jean Hill, Mary Moorman and for the first time now speaking out.

I was not at Dealey Plaza at least as far as I know (then two years and five days old while at McMartin preschool in that timeframe) and would really doubt it if anyone ever indicated that. My story is not about those events that unfolded at Dealey Plaza and elsewhere but rather the series of still little known and poorly understood and poorly reported history that motivated the events the events at Dealey Plaza and motivated those where there to act as they did assassinating JFK. Like others (some of whom hold hold PhD's and are respected historians and academics) I believe the CIA plans for Indonesia, Kenya, Cuba, Iran, Guatemala were at issue as DARPA and the DIA and Missle Command feared communist smaller nation satellites too close to the mainland of the key allies of WWII.

If you are waiting for the declassification process to reveal who killed JFK and why then don't. The file was never there and if it was it in now long gone. What we do know is the the widely available data diverges (quite often) from the dubious work-product of the Warren Commission.

The real motives for and real participants in the assassination are spread across Earth. They are in public and private organizations and or of public and private individuals whose own interests led to the assassination. The most center-most family per the USA element is the Donegan family. James and Glorian the parents, Tom and Ned (Ed) the children.

For many reason often linked through the Kennedy family my family (from both parents Glorian Dean Rusk connections, James Donegan from WWII history connections those WWII roles tied back to Dorchester Massachusetts and the Roman Catholic Irish Immigrant family living there. But this reached to the Windsor family line and Robber barons in CIA actions around the world. This is important because even when the CIA was operation (as OSS or OPC or other) usually they avoided direct government links and hid behind non government front groups. These front groups could deny working for the USA and they had little responsibility other than tax records to give the US Government records. When they did the records disappeared.

> "Robber baron" is a term used frequently in the 19th century during America's Gilded Age to describe successful industrialists whose business practices were often considered ruthless or unethical. Included in the list of so-called robber barons are Andrew Carnegie, Cornelius Vanderbilt, and John D. Rockefeller. - Investopedia.

J.P Morgan, the Hearst family that backed Nixon and the CIA, DuPonts, and other were close to the overall globalism RFK and RFK was hoping to contain and control CIA allegiance with. The use of mafia was organized through J. Egar Hoover and the FBI, himself an elite Mason and as FBI director with global responsibilities. Also these are called the Boston Brahmins or Eastern Elites or WASP power base.

The Kennedy and Donegan families and anti mafia RFK allowing a country to be bled dry and left in poverty (such as during the Great Potato Famine) was unacceptable foreign policy and JFK was going to end it and end the CIA.

This group of Regime Change killed JFK and then began the Watergate Break-ins and other crimes as the old money systems of backing dictators was continued despite JFK and RFK trying to put the criminals to a stop.

There is extensive corroboration for my story from some now deceased but whose recorded statements are online, in presidential libraries, and in gigabytes of data from others that fits around me story as I was a hand in glove, the glove being the extension of my story as it unfolded into the context I live in. Many of the Super-Conspiracy Theories as as bitterly rejected as they were when Garrison tried to prosecute Clay Shaw and was badly mocked in the press.

The 1962 McMartin "Rosetta Child" or day-care child zero

"There had been efforts to read hieroglyphs before Champollion addressed the task, such as those undertaken by the ninth-century Arab alchemist Abu Bakr Ahmad Ibn Wahshiyah, who successfully deciphered several signs. Yet the finding of the Rosetta Stone and the subsequent wide circulation of reproductions of it and its text led to renewed efforts. With three languages in use and all next to each other and possess in full a complete reading was possible."

Why my story in that CIA research center was important will show why other children were researched by the CIA as well and why these are the events that led into the 1963 assassination of JFK.

When I was born in 1961 in Inglewood St. Joseph's Hospital my father was TWA pilot. In my growing up I remember him as 707 captain and later L1011. But his wartime plane was the P-51 by North American Aviation Inglewood and Packard Motors Detroit and Paul Schrade UAW fitting the Detroit engines into it. In 1962 Glorian could not be days alone with two children under 3 years old. I had a rare brain condition make me a behavior problem as well. From 1961 when JFK was in Los Angles with Peter Lawford and Patricia Kennedy when I was born November 18, 1961 then upon turning two years old in November 18, 1963 is tied to JFK decisions on MKULTRA research and the resultant shooting death November 22, 1963 died Parkland Hospital Dallas Texas. Paul Schrade and RFK shootings followed closely after in history and the same untold backstory. My 4 gig press kit telling the story is at https://drive.google.com/file/d/1-F9czBKWkt2G1LMfKgcuKaK7jdRwrYrI

The Richard Nixon and Hearst Family anti-communist J.P Morgan Globalism continues to be the ongoing orbit of war criminals and deep state terror downing commercial airliners, bring civil wars, assassinations, and international lawless terror including against the USA.

Indirect Rule is a Nobility system Aristocracies of Nation-States use to co-rule the world. One Crown perhaps Great Britain may be the superior crown to Australia and demand Australian satellite actions or Crowns (and Sovereigns of Nation States) may work by treaty.

In the years following WWII many key parts of Great Britain were lost to independence. Guatemala and Indonesia the GI of ATSUGI were the Nixon Hearst Bush family Allen Dulles, James Jesus Angleton, and LBJ families working on the a different program.

Indirect Gruel takes a nation with natural resources like gold and spices in Indonesia and promises the riches to a Banana Republic dictator who will subdue the nation and kill journalists, etc., but under the repressive regime the satellite nation will remain in the column of the world power who covertly installed the repressive dictator.

The proximity of teetering Post WWII Indonesia was as great a concern for Australia is Cuba and Castro were for the USA.

What many do not realize is Peter Lawford led the USAID and Peace Corp effort in the Los Angeles County area out of his mansion. As RFK is shot in that area later the woman in the Polka Dot dress is eager to get to Australia and the police of LAPD are part of the USAID Peace Corp CIA effort and confess to that later.

In WWI the War Industry Board was started to fund business to sell weapons the military. In the Cold War the CIA started businesses like Zapata Oil to be among these cover action companies. Col Prouty when he was providing the CIA assets to attack Cuba with notes Operation Zapata fits Zapata Oil and some of the ships that were requested from Prouty at the Pentagon were to be named the Houston where Zapata Petroleum funded by the CIA was hardhearted and the Barbara the name of George H.W. Bush's wife.

It was of these orbit of people, Nixon, Twombly of Coca Cola Nixon was on the board of, and others that were the CIA presence assassinating JFK with their E. Howard Hunt and Murder Inc., allies from the train-yard.

The Indonesia piece is part of the CIA Obama family story. There are several fake certificates (people flock to the Hawaii one although the USA Document is a fraud) and run from the equally fake Mombasa Kenya one. I assert the real truth is in Los Angeles county and make the case in this book.

Jen Moore Truther and her correct view of the Donegan family hidden history at the center of world history and disputed history.

- The start of the story surrounds WWI, Joseph Kennedy Sr., the Vatican, and others (Admiral Halsey) getting a pregnant Maria Kutchera (the showgirl) into the USA to deliver a prince’s (Edward or Albert probably Albert) babies in the USA. Marilyn Monroe was one and hit by the CIA and Glorian Gainey (later Glorian Donegan) was another both born in the USA 1926.

- The CIA had been at that time using Freud and others studying the gene that ran in Albert but not Edward. Mary of Romania may have been the source of the London Forkhead p2 FOXP2 gene.

- James Paul Donegan was born an Irish Catholic in Dorchester the Kennedy family area. The Kennedy's likely got him a key spot flying the p-51. He went on to battle over Europe in WWII and finaly was part of the two atomic bombing wings attacking Japan with strafing to soften the island for the bombing run.

- Following WWII there were reenactments for Duke Edward and others. Joseph Kennedy Sr was part of Lend Lease, using UAW labor to build the Rolls Royce Merlin two stage supercharged engines for the p-51 made in Inglewood Los Angeles County where I Edward Donnean was born.

- I Edward Paul Donegan have the gene as my mother did. I was placed in McMartin Preschool 1962 the CIA was known to secretly research children at. Franklin Nebraska was another CIA testing of children site.

- This was tied to Allen Dulles and the Kennedy Assassination. No one dares utter it but during atomic testing Glorian had given up eggs and they were used in a CIA test child who might be placed in Indonesia. The real parents of Barrack Obama Jr are not as listed, JFK at 1963 was trying to call off that plan but the CIA assassinated JFK to keep the plan underway. The CIA USAID plans for Barrack Obama Jr. were created for Los Angeles County where many of the families lived like Peter Lawford and Patricia Kennedy, the Donegan's, and some friends of the Donegan's (Chafins). Ed Donegan asserts a probable but unused SSN of 022-46-3234 for Obama Jr. but that was hidden because of JFK in the area publicly.

- Donald Barr of the CIA Dirty BCCI crime networks in November 1961 was seen in a Whitehouse photo holding an experimental birth flown from Los Angeles to the Whitehouse. Comically potrayed as a newborn monkey the artwork in the Donald Barr photo showed an Indonesian context for the newborn. At this time a Rockefeller family member exploring Papue New Guinea went missing never to be found.

- Predatory stalking is now being used against me Edward Donegan to stop my story about these CIA plans in orphanages, etc, from coming out.

- In videos like Good Versus Evil we must fight on, Turning the Tables on the Stalkers, and others Jen Moore was getting the views from me being sabotaged in my housing in Capitola and Monetery Stay and Play. The 20th Century Presidencies myst be seen as orbits of the CIA and its activities

In a step to the left the Rockefeller Republicans with the Eastern Establishment "old money" newly acquired fro colonial natural resources riches created moderate globalist left of center future leaders for the 21st Century who would while in power back the US liberalized democracy movements stepping to the right, towards capitalism and away from socialism, inviting the former colonial powers back into independent nations who has gained freedom following the the near total defeat of Great Britain's colonies in WWII. After the V-2 Rockets and the A Bomb and the H-Bomb and super sonic flight and sea born nuclear missiles very critical of the shore of Australia and the USA.

As the Cold War loomed atomic blasts mushroomed. Like the Guns of August new weapons and thinking were on the horizon.

" The United States tested its first hydrogen bomb, codenamed "Bravo", on March 1, 1954 on Bikini Atoll: Yield The explosion released 15 megatons of energy, which was more than two and a half times what scientists had expected. This made it the largest nuclear weapon ever detonated by the United States at the time. Effects The explosion created a fireball that was almost 4.5 miles across, and a crater that was 6,500 feet in diameter and 250 feet deep. The mushroom cloud reached a height of 130,000 feet and a diameter of 62 miles in less than 10 minutes. - Google AI overview

And in 1954 under Eisenhower and V.P. Nixon the secret agreements were formed with covert allies. A whole new ere began in rockets, supersonic aircraft, Sputnik, and a new class of atomic bombs.

Guam and the Bikini Atoll that figure into the woman in the pink polka dot dress and the assassination of RFK may figure into this. "Oppenheimer".

Briefly: Democrat FDR led into and through most all of WWII. Joseph Kennedy Sr also a Democrat was at his side since the closing of WWI and when FDR was undersecretary of the navy needs ships built in Boston for the Atlantic fleets.

Democrat Truman replaces FDR in the closing days of WWII following the death of FDR and some maneuverings. During this time Richard Nixon is an anti-communist US Representative from Los Angeles. Upon the 1952 election General Eisenhower the Republican with V.P. Nixon take office until in 1960 JFK defeats VP Nixon for the presidency. Nixon in the Congress had created the CIA and CIA plans for the world that were carried out under the National Security Council he had headed as VP that oversaw regime change, assassination, and covert intervention in foreign affairs. In his resignation General (ret) Eisenhower warns the public of the post WWII mil industrial complex. Following the assassination of JFK FDR states he regrets a CIA with cloak and dagger. During the time JFK was president and before under VP Nixon Ed Donegan asserts George H.W. Bush, Prescott Bush, LBJ, and others were in robber Barron corporate and CIA actions around the world oil included. Ed Donegan asserts Barrack Obama Jr was a planned CIA deep state projec and many others were too. Hillary gets blamed for most of this but oil and the Rockefeller's work out of Little ROck and they are GOP.

I am one of those types Ralph Thomas of Austin Texas or Richard Richard Belzer of acting and Skyhorse Publishing and Joan Mellon fame write about though I am not known yet that have information about the Kennedy Assassination but the destruction of my life by sham allegations and investigations and defrauding and harassing me has limited the generation and reach of my speech. I have a story to tell though.

From: Edward Paul Donegan

Subject: Emerging history of the Kennedy assassination and I believe a Donegan family tie to them.

I have experienced stimulus-respose type bullying desgined to lead me into fights and my agressors to claims against me. The covert aggression system is not only common to FBI COINTELPRO practices it also matches the rare form of programming (Complex PTSD by reptitive stimuli) that Sirhan Sirhan was exposed to, the Tsarnev's were, and perhaps Timothy McVieigh had been. Patsies are easily manufactured as they are led into loosing fights. Ted Gunderson, Jen Moore, John DeCamp, and William Colby and I assert these are part of the family jewels program of the CIA, are tied to the Kennedy assassination and much more.

Most of this is detailed in a rhetorical interogative found elsewhere in this presss release itself drawn from my books.

Marshfield is a town in Plymouth County, Massachusetts.

The and Nixon Rockefeller ties to the Kennnedy assination and the Donegans. Inglewood, Los Angeles County, home of the P-51 is central and the missing piece to this story. So is the history of Robert F. Kennedy a former DOJ employee then a Counsel to the Senator Committee on Labor Rackets and Organized Crime or said another way which was the usual the Get Hoffa Squad. Republican supported corrupted management backed unions and those same unions used muscle against strike lines and that included Ford Motors employee a relative of Chauncey Marvin Holt and this plan of the Red Scare about labor movements overlapped internationally to as the USA suppressed independence movements and socialists governments at the very time Great Britain had lost its colonies as WWII was being fought.

The "Get Hoffa" squad was a group of investigators and prosecutors led by Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy in the 1960s. The squad was part of Kennedy's efforts to combat organized crime. -Google AI Overview.

The Nixon and big business ties into Organized Crime, Labor Rackets, Drug Dealing, Casinos, and Tiger Team assasinations covert operations is the the larger umbrella story of which that is a part. Prescottt Bush, George H.W. Bush, Richard Nixon, the Rockefeller's, George Hearst and William Randolph Hearst were big business world venture's whose interest in finding oil the Rockefeller's had developed a technique to refine, gold or diamonds that could be dug or transported by industrial means missing in the 2nd and 3rd world, and tourism and world tavel on the Great White Fleet tourist boats leaving form Louisiana into the Banana Republics were the plantation-like super-rich of globalism.

A smaller piece of this story is that Richard Nixon got caught (partially and increasingly after his death) using the Watergate Break-in to conceal a group of CIA mobsters and operatives having killed JFK and the unions and independent-nations backing Kennedy family and the Kennedy family also backed real unions of mobsters in the union business. THe larger piece too big for today's press corps or too true for today's press corps is the Richard Nixon may have been a middle man at most, towards the top but not at the top. The real power behind the scenes were W. Averell Harriman, the Marshall Plan and the OSS as a post-WWII CIA, and FBI espionage aroun the world. The highest ranking of all may have been George H.W. Bush clearly implicated in the assassination of JFK and later (in my own telling) assassination of RFK because of the union labor that built the Packard Moter Merlin P-51 engine for North America Aviation. Why can not such a story make it into the press? First of all the Donegan family piece of this (and I am the last Donegan) has been missing and second of all is that the Bush plan had according to plan backed a series of highly likable democrat party agents of influence today that along with moderate republicans control elected and appointed offices and would be executed for treason IF the truth came out. Today these officials use ongoing mob violence in illegal racketeering and harrassment operations against a large number of US Citizens and I an one of them. Attempts to stop my story have been obvious to me and numerous but excuse have be fabricated and spread about me making the illegal covert assaults on me seem a public good of getting the bad-guy out of town for the public good. These are called Gang Stalks or smear campaigns of faked public appearances and rumors about a person circulated at times even use in grand juries in faked testimony or the testimony of a dupe.

Journalist John Pilger spoke of Barrack Obama Jr. as the Mancurian Candidate whose role he was groomed for was to be a CIA controlled and back influencer for CIA plans around the world destroying, undermining, or eroding independent nation's attempt to self govern in their own rather than imperialism interests.

The events surrounding Senator Robert F. Kennedy's death I have a missing piece to explain but also an analysis of sufficient applicability even without my part of the story not provided still explains the situation well and perhaps even better since events unfamiliar to the listener are not present. Who is familiar to the listener of this story is Don Nixon who while RFK was staying with John Frankenheimer tried to get RFK to the Palm Springs and Nevada test grounds area. Don Nixon the brother of Richard Nixon knew of the Manchurian Candidate plot line my family is a part of and part of the reason JFK was assassinated in the dispute of Nixon's policies. Ties to Mahue and Hughes and the CIA?

https://www.saturdayeveningpost.com/sep-keyword/sam-houston-johnson/ Numver 5. Donald Nixon, Richard’s brother, had dreams of becoming a fast-food king. In 1957, with his hamburger stand in trouble, Donald borrowed $200,000 to shore up his business. The lender was Howard Hughes, a major defense contractor. Richard Nixon had trouble convincing anyone that he, then vice-president, had not traded favors with Hughes for the loan. During the Watergate investigation, investigators learned that Donald had been a conduit for illegal campaign contributions to Richard. Yet Richard didn't trust his brother and ordered the Secret Service to monitor Donald's phone calls. https://www.saturdayeveningpost.com/sep-keyword/sam-houston-johnson/ Donald Anthony Nixon (born December 12, 1945) is an American businessman. Nixon and "philanthropic" robber baron families included experts like Thorkil Kristenseon. Thorkil Kristensen. 1st Secretary-General of the OECD. In office 30 September 1961 30 September 1969. who felt and struggling third world need better leaders and as the labor leaders of these nations were being suppressed Agents of Influence placed by the OSS and CIA into families around the globe were CIA aspirations to have aristocratic or politically based family members who would receive covert aid in the political or military quest for the power in the nations they were placed in, and when in power, ally with Western nations.

It was this battle between Nixonian dirty tricks of illegal actions of subversion and overthrows funded by robber-barons world planning versus more openly democratic and independence from Great Britain Kennedy family that was where the USA fell to Treason. The globalists in the Special Relationship and CIA connections around the world built by James Jesus Angleton and careful grooming of the media supported cover treason against a large number of governments including Cuba, Indonesia, Iran, and in Latin America. This machine overlapping with Nixon's effort in the USA against organized labor is the Great Treason in the USA, one of the many nations that fell to covert warfare.

My family (and I am the last living on and my life at great risk now) was close to Col Fletcher Prouty and that history. Here is a Prouty book. This book includes the battle to control Indonesia and Barrack Obama Sr. and Jr. (and other family) as CIA covert planning and other conspiracy theories too such as this was the Manchurian Candidate story line RFK was discussing with the movie producer in his Los Angeles home at the time of his campaign trail death.

The Secret Team, L. Fletcher Prouty's expose´ of the CIA's brutal methods of maintaining national security during the Cold War, was first published in the 1970s. However, virtually all copies of the book disappeared upon distribution, having been purchased en-mass by shady "private buyers." Prouty's topics include:

- President Kennedy tried to control the CIA.
- The nature of clandestine operations.
- The Dulles-Jackson-Correa Report in action
- Defense, containment, and anti-communism
- Khrushchev's Challenge: the U-2 dilemma

- From the Bay of Pigs to Dallas.

- And much more!

This is the Donegan family story and the continuing cover-up of the JFK assassination. Mailer.html is the start file. The entire version 1 press kit that is 4 gigabytes in size might be available for download at https://drive.google.com/file/d/1-F9czBKWkt2G1LMfKgcuKaK7jdRwrYrI. The download contains two important and full length archived movies. One is the Battle of Britain made in 1969. The air defense of England is represented and in history from their the Royal Air-force with the US Army 8th Air Force continues over Europe to defeat the Nazi war machine. Another movie is Jet Pilot 1957 in which John Wayne plays a Cold War pilot and shows a Russian defector the secrets of Fighter Control Radio and RADAR and how it allowed strategic ground-command of fights changing WWII.

This all ties to Paul Schrade and JFK and RFK and Joseph Kennedy Sr. Kennedy Sr upon return to the USA enlisted Packard Motors to build the Rolls Royce Merlin engine used in the Spitfire and other planes turning the history of WWII with that mass production capability.

The 1950's (even 1949) as Micheal Swanson of The War State notes was Vice President Nixon of the World Wide Meddling Program (WWMP) and the 1960's resistance to it inside the USA, and the 1970's was the cover-ups including Watergate, the downing of UAL 553, and TWA 800. You might note that TWA 800 went down in 1996 but it was carrying Jed Johnson. With Patty Hears and Brigid Berlin at Interviews Magazine the truth of MK-UTTRA was being revealed by those from the family members tied to it. Flight UAL 553 was likely destroyed as an act of treason as well. Doroth Hunt and others were killed on that flight.

Much of this history I and Jen Moore and others write about goes back to the Kings Speech in 1925 and FDR and others in the time of the events surrounding WWI. During that time and leading into WWII a favor was done for Edward and Albert. Bastard children were moved into the USA. Later these bastard children wanted to study a quirk gene would have offspring born under real names or under covert hidden identity names. Some of those latter births have grown into positions of power around the world, covertly as planned and now this is covered up successfully after JFK was stopped from revealing key parts of the plan. Hearst, the Windsors, Nixon, and many others did know. Others who knew were Robert Mahue and Howard Hughes and the activities surround the Desert Inn near where surplus planes were modified for covert roles around the world by the CIA and US DDO.

We are the Right Hand of the history of the United States of America and global operations with Great Britain or Children of the Right Hand. St John Hunt the child of E. Howard Hunt. Dorothy Kilgallen. Dorothy Mae Kilgallen (July 3, 1913 - November 8, 1965) was an American columnist, journalist, and television game show panelist. After spending two semesters at the College of New Rochelle, she started her career shortly before her 18th birthday as a reporter for the Hearst Corporation's New York Evening Journal. In 1938, she began her newspaper column "The Voice of Broadway", which was eventually syndicated to more than 140 papers. In 1950, she became a regular panelist on the television game show What's My Line?, continuing in the role until her death.

Kilgallen's columns featured mostly show-business news and gossip, but also ventured into other topics, such as politics and organized crime. She wrote front-page articles for multiple newspapers on the Sam Sheppard trial and, years later, events related to the John F. Kennedy assassination, such as testimony by Jack Ruby.

James L. Kilgallen, one of the nation's best-known newspaper reporters in a career that spanned three-quarters of a century, died Tuesday night at the Mary Manning Walsh Home in Manhattan, which he had entered earlier this month. He was 94 years old. Mr. Kilgallen, who was at International News Service for 38 years, was once described by Damon Runyon as "an editor's dream of a reporter." Mr. Kilgallen joined International News Service in 1920, and went on to cover major stories of the period, including the Lindbergh baby kidnapping case and the German surrender at Rheims, France, in World War II. - New York Times

US Senator George Hearst is important and mabye central to this entire story. He moved to California to confirm the existance of gold in California mountians and in the 1860's and 1870's era was part of J.P Morgan's conquest of the world by hegemonic business frequently under control of or similar to the law firms Allen Dulles would serve on also a CIA Director.

Bridid Berlin daughter of Heart CEO and manager Richard Berlin and Patty Hearst daughter of Wiliam Randolph Hearst Jr. are part of the story as is Richard Nixon who as a Congressmen in California close to the William Randolph Hearst San Simeon Castle and post WWII 1949 Marshall plan to regain control of nation-states who gained independence following the withdrawal of Japanese or German forces are part of the story and Hearst may have been the rich friend who gave no money to Nixon (the Checkers the dog speech) but gave influential help to Congressman Nixon aspirations to the Vice Presidency and if Hearst Communications had its way President Richard Nixonn up the defeat or John F. Kennedy (much less Great Britain minded than Hearst or JP Morgan or Dulles) would have come to power.

The programs Nixon as US Congressman and post WWII planning and creation of the CIA out of the OSS and Marshal Plan and passage of the Mutual Defense act recommitting the allies of WWII to a common defense turned into Vice President Nixon as the head of the National Security Council planning out CIA activities around the world that come under scrutiny in the 1970's as the New York Times and Congress revisit CIA activities and attempt political oversight.

I Ed Donegan come from a family tied to these events and though not a child of Col Fletcher Prouty or families (the Donegan's and Prouty's) ere very close even though I was a small child.

Both TWA flight 800 with Jed Johnson and UAL flight 553 appear to be sabotaged flights as the CIA history under Nixon and MK-ULTRA backed by industrialists like Hearst began to come out.

One thing to know about Edward VIII who will figure into this story is the world is easily deceived. Portrayed officially as a hasbeen with no loyalty to or from the Windsor family he was in fact what the US has used in creating Flag Officers. Nobles may serve as King, as Lord Governors of parts of Great Britain or its holdings like India, or in battle may carry their coats of arms as military commanders as US Flag Officers do for instance and Admiral and his or her flag displayed on the carrier of the carrier strike group the carrier is heading.

Duke Edward led the Battle of France for Great Britain until France fell. After the war he was reassigned to Bermuda seeming isolated and holding golf matches for the rich and famous but secretly working with the CIA, Bermuda Dunes airport, and efforts in the Caribbean with Nixon and Chauncey Marvin Holt, Col Prouty, and others.

Dorothy Kilgallen will have key pieces of this story that tie into he Donegan family and bastard Windsor children used in colonies under faked names, and that too is part of the story.

If you know who Col Fletcher Prouty was the USAAF liaison between the Joint Chiefs an the CIA assassinations team (and I knew him as a fried of our Donegan family as a child) you might have read JFK: The CIA, Vietnam, and the Plot to Assassinate John F. Kennedy. Colonel L. Fletcher Prouty, the former CIA operative known as “X,” offers a history-shaking perspective on the assassination of president John F. Kennedy. His theories were the basis for Oliver Stone’s controversial movie JFK.

In 1949 China fell to Mao. The USSR was according to The Long Telegram not God fearing nor did the believe in free markets. The Iron Curtain in Europe and the Americas was a foot as was the Bamboo Curtain in the Indochina area. Australia and the USA were a threat from the V2 and even worse.

Dorthy Wetzle was wokring in China for the Treasury Department and barely made it out by train with a last hope of a small gun she had with her just in case but was not stopped by anyone. After that she met E. Howard Hunt who was working for the CIA as sh was reassigned to work under E. Averall Harriman on post WWII Office of Policy Coordination OSS CIA operations as the agency names and progression went Dorothy Wetzel was born in Ohio on 1st April, 1920. She became an employee for the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) after the Second World War and was stationed in Shanghai, China, where she met her future husband, E. Howard Hunt. - Spartacus Educational.

In 1949 Col. Prouty will arrive in Japan and James Paul Donegan who was part of the P-51 detail for the first and second bomb drops also flew from Japan during the Korean War and against the Soviets airspace as an interceptor jet pilot later.

As Jen Moore will explain this is not a Cold War or WWII story. WWII and the Cold War are part of the James and Glorian Donegan story concealed until now. The British Empire wanted the Pacific and Americas back though they had lost most all of the globe during WWWII. Rising labor unions and workers parties were threat to getting the Pacific Islands or other nations back. Nixon and the Republicans planned dirty tricks. JFK planned economic aid packages and peacekeeping. Those all met together in USAID, the Peace Corp, and other programs but the balance between an open had helping feed and a knife in the back of WETDIVISION into an independence leaning president or press corp member would tilt the tide. The Boston Elite chose the British way, not the Kennedy and Constitutional way. That is where the treason against the USA emerges as we in what turned out be a Eugenics scheme backed secretive out of wedlock bastard children of the Windsors around the world to lead CIA backed governments around the world.

Below is a large map picture of China and Russia (formerly USSR. E. Howard Hunt was quick into post WWII anti-communism of the USSR. At the same time his new wife who was a US Treasury Agent in China was fleeing the 1949 Chairman Mao takover of China. They would meet through Averell Harriman and the CIA.

China and Russia are both located in Asia, but Russia spans two continents:. China is entirely located in Asia. Lower Eastern Russia is a transcontinental country, with the majority of its landmass in Asia and a smaller portion in Eastern Europe. The Ural Mountains generally mark the division between the European and Asian parts of Russia.

Visually it is one continent with the former USSR stacked on top China under it. To the West of the USSR was Western Europe and to the East and South of China was Indochina with the peninsula like reach of India under China. These were to the CIA according to Prouty the Iron Curtain of Europe an the Bamboo Curtain of Asia to contain China especially via India the Crown resource in the area and Australia,

Pacific War retrieved from Wikipedia and copied or modified to here

The Pacific War, sometimes called the Asia-Pacific War or the Pacific Theater, was the theater of World War II that was fought in eastern Asia, the Pacific Ocean, the Indian Ocean, and Oceania. It was geographically the largest theater of the war, including the Pacific Ocean theater, the South West Pacific theater, the Second Sino-Japanese War, and the Soviet-Japanese War in the last few months of the war.

The Second Sino-Japanese War between the Empire of Japan and the Republic of China had been in progress since 7 July 1937, with hostilities dating back to 1931 with the Japanese invasion of Manchuria. However, it is more widely accepted that the Pacific War itself began on 7 December (8 December Japanese time) 1941, when the Japanese simultaneously attacked American military bases in Hawaii, Wake Island, Guam, and the Philippines, the British colonies of Malaya, Singapore, and Hong Kong, and invaded Thailand.

The Pacific War saw the Allies pitted against Japan, the latter aided by Thailand and to a lesser extent by the Axis powers, Germany and Italy. The Japanese achieved great success in the initial phase of the campaign, but were gradually driven back using an island hopping strategy. The Allies adopted a Europe first stance, giving first priority to defeating Nazi Germany. The Japanese had great difficulty replacing their losses in ships and aircraft, while American factories and shipyards produced ever increasing numbers of both. Fighting included some of the largest naval battles in history and massive Allied air raids over Japan, as well as the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Japan surrendered unconditionally on 15 August 1945 and was occupied by the Allies. Japan lost its former possessions in Asia and the Pacific and had its sovereignty limited to the four main home islands and other minor islands as determined by the Allies.

The "Eastern Establishment"

Old mone of Old Boston, Charles Emmerson Winchester Protestant Conservative. Many still loyal to England. The Irish of the Republic of Ireland and the French fought at the Alamo in in the American Revolution aginst England. The British loyalists had been concerned over the non Great Brittain influences and passed the Alien and Sedition Act to lower French immigre interests. J.P Moran, George and William Randolpy Hearts, Nixon and Bush, Geral Ford and many others. Sullivan and Cromwell and Allen Dulles.

The OSS and CIA

Post WWII the CIA was created under the National Security Council and the National Security Council was created to be under the Vice President. US Representative and anti-Communist Richard Nixon in 1949 in international planning created the CIA architecture and inherited it in 1953 when Eisenhower- Nixon were inaugrauted folling the Truman as President.

The Mafia and Front Groups

The National Security Council legislation and oversight was very wide open and unlimited "Cloak and Dagger" were created. Companies like Zapata were fundedd by the CIA and operated by CIA connected people like George H.W. Bush. Executives like Phillip Twombly of Cocoa-Cola consulted ans supported CIA operation in the Carribeean. Murder Inc, the Segal Lanksy Mob provided hit men and smuggling and cover piloting of CIA aircraft. Much was interconnected with gambling, drugs, Cuba, and the Mafia. The US DOD Black Opps places like Pentagon Office of Special Operations later the Defense Intelligence Agency supported these CIA actions.

The National Security Act of 1947 established the Department of Defense (DoD) and the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA):

The DoD

Combined the Department of War and the Navy Department into the DoD, which also included the Departments of the Army and Air Force. The act also created the office of Secretary of Defense to oversee the military.

The CIA

The CIA was the primary civilian intelligence-gathering organization in the government. The act also established the National Security Council (NSC) to coordinate national security matters.

The National Security Act was signed into law by President Harry S. Truman in July 1947. The act's goal was to provide a comprehensive program for the future security of the United States. The act has been amended and added to over the past 60 years. - Google AI

US Representative from Southern California Richard Nixon was working on the Herter Committee to carry out overt and covert post WWII global influence policies and the National Security Act and other treaties among the allies were designed to help carry out the Marshall Plan. Use of Mafia and other non-criminal NGO's were the "policy coordinated" closing of ranks of multiple groups against a common enemy to those groups. Just as the Italian immigrants brought La Cosa Nostra crime boss families to the USA Italian communities Jewish refugees from Nazi Europe brought influential publishing (Maxwell) and crime groups (Yiddish Mafia as La Kosher Nostra) of which Jack Rubestein was one.

The Bugs (Bugsy) and Meyer Mob was a Jewish-American street gang in Manhattan, New York City's Lower East Side. It was formed and headed by mobsters Bugsy Siegel and Meyer Lansky during their teenage years shortly after the start of Prohibition. The Bugs and Meyer mob acted as a predecessor to Murder, Inc.

Chauncey Marvin Holt (October 23, 1921 – June 28, 1997) was an American known for claiming to be one of the "three tramps" photographed in Dealey Plaza shortly after the assassination of President

John F. Kennedy.

In a 1991 Newsweek article about Oliver Stone's JFK, Holt received national attention for various claims he made regarding the assassination of President Kennedy. According to Holt, he was a CIA operative sent to Dallas to deliver phony Secret Service credentials. He also claimed to have worked as an accountant for Meyer Lansky. His account is further explored in his autobiography Self-Portrait of a Scoundrel, which was posthumously released by TrineDay Publishing in August 2013. [1][self-published source?]

Charles Voyde Harrelson like Chauncey Holt were contract CIA foreign intelligence officers. Like Holt, Harrelson came from Murder Inc., Holt was a pilot and picked out, modified, repainted and flew CIA aircraft from Ray Ryan's Grace Ranch after the horses were disperesed and the gambling business closed. Charles Harrelson was a contract killer. Because Holt did the plane buying through front companies and he had good artistic skills he was trained and used as the accountant for Meyers Lansky and provides all the documents he retained for the CIA including those from Wililam King Harvey and others tied to Sam Gold, etc.,

The First American Volunteer Group (AVG) of the Republic of China Air Force, nicknamed the Flying Tigers, was formed to help oppose the Japanese invasion of China. Operating in 1941–1942, it was composed of pilots from the United States Army Air Corps (USAAC), Navy (USN), and Marine Corps (USMC), and was commanded by Claire Lee Chennault. Their Curtiss P-40B Warhawk aircraft, marked with Chinese colors, flew under American control. Recruited under President Franklin Roosevelt's authority before Pearl Harbor, their mission was to bomb Japan and defend the Republic of China, but many delays meant the AVG first flew in combat after the US and Japan declared war.

Chauncey Holt flew in a group much like the Flying Tigers while working to overthrow Guatemala. The US Military used similar pilots and groups to invade Cuba as a covert operation while disguised as local Cuban groups.

The Kennedy Administration

JFK and RFK did not like what they inherited from Eisenhower-Nixon. JM/WAVE Augmented in Florida was placed Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy as Oversight Augmented from the previous lack of control of what the Military Industrial Complex CIA companies were really doing in the dark.

The JFK and RFK assault on the CIA that led to the death of these Dorchester Roman Catholic Irish immigrants families was inevitable and a just fight against the CIA who came at them (and the USA) from below, above, and in a two party system from the side.

In Chicago the Irish immigrants were a political power base and often became police officers or priests. But following that the Italians imigrated in large numbers bring Black Hand Italian mafia organized crime. Sam Giacana and the 42 Gang were just that, derived from black Hand. These criminals fought and exploited many especially the poor who often were the Irish.

Those who used Sam Giacana and other mafia were the Eastern Establishment in Boston who in turn were tied to British Secret Service and illegal techniques Great Britain used against nations they wish to force into being colonies. A long term enemy of the Kennedy family (and the USA) in Plymouth area and the Boston Tea Party Massachusetes led rebellion for indepence from England and its oppression.

From the side it was the Nixon CIA a CIA created by Congressman Nixon and run by Vice President Nixon under Eisenhower. The illegal CIA actions were what JFK and RFK were fighting.

Early life

Patrick Joseph Kennedy was born on January 14, 1858, in Boston, Massachusetts. He was the youngest of five children born to Patrick Kennedy (1823-1858) and Bridget Kennedy (née Murphy) (1824-1888). His parents were Irish Catholic immigrants who were both from New Ross, County Wexford and emigrated together to America to flee the Great Famine in Ireland. The couple's elder son John had died of cholera in infancy two years before Kennedy was born. Ten months after P.J. Kennedy's birth, his father Patrick also succumbed to the infectious epidemic that infested the family's East Boston neighborhood. As the only surviving male, Kennedy was the first family member to receive a formal education, attending Sacred Heart, a private Catholic school in Boston. His mother Bridget had purchased an East Boston stationery and notions store where she had worked. The business took off and expanded into a grocery and liquor store.

A dockworker (also called a longshoreman, stevedore, docker, wharfman, lumper or wharfie) is a waterfront manual laborer who loads and unloads ships.

The word stevedore (/ˈstiːvɪˌdɔːr/) originated in Portugal or Spain, and entered the English language through its use by sailors.[3] It started as a phonetic spelling of estivador (Portuguese) or estibador (Spanish), meaning a man who loads ships and stows cargo, which was the original meaning of stevedore (though there is a secondary meaning of "a man > who stuffs" in Spanish); compare Latin stīpāre meaning to stuff, as in to fill with stuffing. In Ancient and Modern Greek, the verb στοιβάζω (stivazo) means pile up.

At the age of fourteen, young Kennedy left school to help support his mother and three older sisters, Mary, Joanna, and Margaret, as a stevedore on the Boston docks. In the 1880s, with money he had saved from his modest earnings and help from his mother Bridget, he launched a business career by buying a saloon in the Haymarket Square neighborhood near downtown Boston. In time, he bought a second establishment by the East Boston docks. Next, to capitalize on the social drinking of upper-class Bostonians, Kennedy purchased a third bar in an upscale East Boston hotel, the Maverick House. Before he was 30, his growing prosperity allowed him to buy a whiskey-importing business.

Marriage and children

On November 23, 1887, Kennedy married Mary Augusta Hickey. The couple had four children and remained married until Hickey's death on May 6, 1923. His wealth afforded them a home on Jeffries Point in East Boston.

Political career

Kennedy was "always ready to help less fortunate fellow Irishmen with a little cash and some sensible advice." A sociable man able to mix comfortably with both the Roman Catholic and the Protestant elite, Kennedy moved successfully into politics. Beginning in 1884, he converted his popularity into service as a Democrat, a minority in the then Republican dominant power in the Massachusetts General Court. He served five consecutive one-year terms in the Massachusetts House of Representatives, followed by three two-year terms in the upper chamber in the Massachusetts Senate. Establishing himself as one of Boston's principal Democratic leaders, he gave one of the seconding speeches for incumbent President Grover Cleveland at the party's 1888 national convention of the party in St. Louis. However, he found campaigning, speech making, and legislative maneuvering, to be less appealing than the behind-the-scenes machinations that characterized so much of Boston politics in the late-nineteenth and early-twentieth centuries. After leaving the Senate and the General Court after many terms in 1895, Kennedy spent the rest of his political career as an appointed elections commissioner, an appointed city fire commissioner, as the backroom boss of Boston's Ward Two, and as a member of his party's unofficial Board of Strategy.

Death

By the time of his death in 1929, Kennedy held an interest in a coal company and a substantial amount of stock in a bank, the Columbia Trust Company.

The Los Angeles Times bombing

James & John McNAMARA Classification: Mass murderer Characteristics: Irish-American trade unionists - https://murderpedia.org/male.M/m/mcnamara-brothers.htm

In 1903, officials of U.S. Steel and the American Bridge founded the National Erectors' Association (NEA), a coalition of steel and iron industry employers. The primary goal of the NEA was to promote the open shop and assist employers in busting the unions in their industries. Employers used *labor spies, agents provocateur, private detective agencies, and strike breakers*to engage in a campaign against the unions. Local, state, and federal law enforcement agencies generally cooperated in this campaign, which often used violence against union members. - Wikipedia

When they were subjected to attack some Irish union officials became self-styled Freedom Fighters in a dynamite campaign against those law enforcement and coporated entities subverting union efforts. The dynamite campaign included bombing the Los Angeles Times.

Chauncey Marvin Holt had family already in union-busting and strik line breaking muscle Ford Motors used (compare contrast Paul Schrade UAW) and had forgery, high-wire, and gambling and smuggling and pilot skills as an obvious CIA recruit working under Myers Lansky in Florida tied to Sam Giancana of The Outfit and Robert Mahue.

Chauncey Marvin Holt's family or origin was a broken home marked by criminal convictions and murders as well as circus performances and skills. He and his relatives were tied to smugling and other activities. During his youth Holt broke away from his family and lived as a Hobo. He easily created the Hobo cover-identities when he and other Kennedy assasination team members met at the Trainyard. He recognized Lansdale (photographed with him being led from the train Lee Bowers Jr. asked to be stopped) by description and giving the orders but did not know Lansdale's name. Holt had driven the souped up green station wagon with Arizona plates Lee Bowers Jr. spotted to the trainyard from Arizona Grace Ranch of Peter Licaoli the CIA was working out of.

Post WWII Anti-Labor and Anti-Communism used "muscle" and covert interventions against unions and solidarity movements infiltrating them and subverting and controlling them with the Outfit

Guatemala in 1954 With Chauncey Marvin Holt, Jack Youngblood, the CIA and Sam Giancana all part of the CIA Operation Diablo.

Iran in 1953. The Shah himself initially opposed the coup plans and supported the oil nationalization, but he joined in after being informed by the CIA that he too would be "deposed" if he didn't play along. The experience left him with a lifelong awe of American power and would contribute to his pro-US policies while generating a hatred of the British. Mosaddegh's decision to dissolve Parliament also contributed to his decision. After the Bay of Pigs Allen Dulles on US national tv complained it was so easy to overthrow Iran why not do it in all the other nations such as Castro's Cuba too? Was this studied by students at Tehran University while the Shah was still in power?

Execution of Operation Ajax. The official pretext for the start of the coup was Mosaddegh's decree to dissolve Parliament, giving himself and his cabinet complete power to rule, while effectively stripping the Shah of his powers. It resulted in him being accused of giving himself "total and dictatorial powers." The Shah, who had been resisting the CIA's demands for the coup, finally agreed to support it. Having obtained the Shah's concurrence, the CIA executed the coup.

Cuba. At the time ATSUGI was setup as a list of nations Batista still controlled Cuba. When he fell to the Castro governmenet the CIA operation at Japan was moved to DC and the Defense Intelligence Agency for the longer and more global list of nations of interest to the CIA and Great Britain.

Indonesia. Indonesia 1958: Nixon, the CIA, and the Secret War By L. Fletcher Prouty.

It is not well known in the United States that the 1958 rebellion led to a major Indonesian civil war. The CIA-inspired uprising in Indonesia, unlike the Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba, was a full-scale military operation. The Bay of Pigs invasion in 1961 was made by a thin brigade of about 1,500 Cuban exiles trained by the CIA in Guatemala. But the 1958 Indonesian action involved no less than 42,000 CIA-armed rebels supported by a fleet of bombers and vast numbers of four-engine transport aircraft as well as submarine assistance from the U.S. Navy. It also involved a major training and logistical supporting effort on the part of the Philippines, Okinawa, Taiwan, and Singapore. But despite this massive armed force, the 1958 rebellion, like the Bay of Pigs invasion, was a total failure. Sukarno's army drove the rebels on Sumatra and Celebes into the sea.

Jen Moore and I Edward Paul Donegan fit the Wayne Madsen Obama CIA conspiracy into this plan under Nixon and the CIA that would groom Obama Jr. as a player in Indonesia. This is connected to the hidden identity of the Donegan family and USAID plans laid in Los Angeles County that JFK was assassinated over.

Ukraine. Both Wayne Madsen and Jen

Moore alleging CIA documents in their hands show the CIA intended from the 1950's to overthrow the Ukraine and Indonesia.

CIA: Undermining and Nazifying Ukraine Since 1953 by Wayne Madsen. The recent declassification of over 3800 documents by the Central Intelligence Agency provides detailed proof that since 1953 the CIA operated two major programs intent on not only destabilizing Ukraine but Nazifying it with followers of the World War II Ukrainian Nazi leader Stepan Bandera.

The CIA programs spanned some four decades. Starting as a paramilitary operation that provided funding and equipment for such anti-Soviet Ukrainian resistance groups as the Ukrainian Supreme Liberation Council (UHVR); its affiliates, the Organization of Ukrainian Nationalists (OUN) and Ukrainian Insurgent Army (UPA), all Nazi Banderists. The CIA also provided support to a relatively anti-Bandera faction of the UHVR, the ZP-UHVR, a foreign-based virtual branch of the CIA and British MI-6 intelligence services. The early CIA operation to destabilize Ukraine, using exile Ukrainian agents in the West who were infiltrated into Soviet Ukraine, was codenamed Project AERODYNAMIC.

Jen Moore asserted before her death commercial racketeering transactions of baby factories and third party parenting genome frauds were present by the CIA in modern day Ukraine. She asserted something to do with stem cells as well and I do not understand what she was referring to.

Other Countries including Taiwan where the US backed strongman Nationalist Kuomintang (KMT) party and commander-in-chief and Generalissimo of the National Revolutionary Army (NRA) from 1926, and leader of the Republic of China (ROC) in mainland China from 1928. After Chiang was defeated in the Chinese Civil War by the Chinese Communist Party (CCP) in 1949, he continued to lead the Republic of China on the island of Taiwan until his death in 1975. Cambodia, Laos, North and South Korea, Vietnam.

It is among the most basic Espionage Treason story-lines. To continue a Treason against the USA the treasonous faction is using a smear campaign based in honeypots that lure a dopple of Ed Donegan into the web. Rather than preempting the real Ed Donegan by blackmailing a dopple of him the continuation of Treason is resultant in the blacklist ing of Ed Donegan ad his works and reach of his voice. Whether the honey pots recruited security services or vice versa the combination of the two work together in covert ongoing treason related mafia activity.

This story is more than just a few people and a few rifles. It is about covert military activities often with desguised personell and disguised "flags" that is to say aircraft or other military equipment covertly supplied or operated for CIA needs or the needs of other civil war factions around the world. Both Prouty and Chauncey Holt tell that story well.

Prouty believed that Kennedy's death was a coup d'état, and he backs this belief up with his knowledge of the security arrangements at Dallas and other tidbits that only a CIA insider would know (for example, that every member of Kennedy's cabinet was abroad at the time of Kennedy's assassination). His discussion of the elite power base he believes controlled the U.S. government will scare and enlighten anyone who wants to know who was really behind the assassination of John F. Kennedy. -source: publisher

The history of world changing covert opps remain few places and not usually in the family members except for these extraordinary events that are too important to be lost to history

I am one of those family members of a world history connected family (in fact both my mothers side and my fathers side and the last living member of that family. I join Katherin Holt (now married and) the daughter of Chauncey Marvin Holt in telling the story of Dealy Plaza. Chauncey Holt was an operations person in both field work and office accounting and documents forgeries. I join St. John Hunt son of E. Howard Hunt a more well placed political operative of the CIA whose also confessed to his descended on tape on now (also) on YouTube in his confession Cord Myer, LBJ, and others conspired to kill JKF and the conspiracy was among the Eastern elites establishment, the Brahim closely connected to old English wealth and banking.

Others like Roger Stone (The Case Against LBJ) and Col Prouty were directly involved in the events that inter-relate including Watergate and in total we are Truthers who know have the facts on our side in our refutation of the official version of events.

We are not only ignored in some cases our lives are in danger as we name and blame famous CIA connected families and figures in the deaths of JFK, RFK, news-reporters and authors, actors and agents, law enforcement and forensic experts, all of whom had known too much.

The difficulty with cold cases is interest has often time been lost. When RFK was assassinate the attempts to control politically operated organized crime like BCCI Bank also ended. The current quest for justice is not only the past but the ongoing threats to the safety of those like myself trying to exposit the tainted history of the Donald Barr, Robert Mueller, Mike Pence, Bush family, Burns family, and many others forever linked to treason by the assassination of America's most beloved.

The term curriculum vitae and its abbreviation, CV, are also used especially in academia to refer to extensive or even complete summaries of a person's career, qualifications, and education, including publications and other information. - Wikipedia

I will dedicate explicit content areas of how qualified these Truthers are to tell their inter-related and corroborating stories and when space permints include their on-camera discussions of history.

Knowledge in the mind of a reasonable person will lead to insights. Moving from Socrates and the rulers cave or Descartes for a moment, in the light find your insights and thrive. But the path is not simple. Some information leads to mistakes. More information especially after mistakes has more probability of being a path to success. The island of knowledge is compose of both paths, the mistaken and the true. Each need to be explored as the mistaken belief Oswald was a Russian (not US) connected gunman and the new belief a George H.W. Bush and Nixon and LBJ based CIA did lead the assassination as the new path to follow.

Even if you read his books you would not know what he and my family concealed. That Indonesia was important to the CIA too, and the Donegan family connection to that was most likely the central factor in the plot to assassinate JFK.

Since the wars in Vietnam and Indonesia are long gone from nightly headlines and daily protests some geography. Of Indochina India and China reach down into land masses that extend into what is called the Indian Ocean. Asia including Vietnam is the land mass area. the -esia suffix of archipelagos Malaysia Polynesia and Indonesia were in the Indian Ocean Indonesia the close to the coast of Australia and partly in the Pacific Ocean.

Col Prouty is correct in this area was the Bamboo Curtain and the real plot to assassinate JFK, not what had already transpired in Cuba. Much of the details he leaves out (even going to great lengths to do so) but the CIA plans for this region were not negotiable, and for reasons personal to JFK and his life and his origins as an anti-colonialist he would support Indonesian independence.

Genetic testing and advances in DNA especially in 1983 have made possible a series of hidden identities and CIA plots regarding public figures that now can and will be exposed of the phony paperwork is thrown out and reliable DNA trails show the history of secret sleeper agents and CIA activities of forged backgrounds.

Jen Moore was told she would be assassinated herself if she (who did have the CIA files) released and and named names, the names of the family she pointed her camera at (the video is still on line and available here) the home of Glorian Donegan

(my mother) and myself Ed Donegan to tell the OSS CIA Vatican story of our family, the connection to Allen Dulles, and the assassinations the CIA has conducted before and since of politicians, journalists, witnesses, and many more. There have been attempts on my life as well and sabotage, robber, and frauds against me by illegal acts the have left me homeless often covered in blood or otherwise injured as I sleep on sidewalks trying to keep my PC notebook safe so I can keep writing.

She asserted money-laundering and criminal mafia activities tied to a US DOD program that was shocking many who were aware of its details. I can tell you some of that. An impostor of mine who calls himself Mr. Rumph or names like that as a supposed nickname of me will create a Tree House in an apartment unit near mine. He hopes a hot adult entertainer might visit him in Corpus Christi Texas but she that entertainer is too smart for that. Working with the former District Attorney Mark Gonzalzes and skid row homeless shelters have laid a trap for him. Mr Rumph will be caught as a pedophile and have to pay into a protection racket who will keep watch on that person though in public I am treated as that person. The program does operate with high level support but it is an illegal program that links me to activities that keep my black-listed from housing and isolated. People will make-up any excuse to keep me from future apartments.

Most of the facts are not understood, wrong, or missing, but the story is becoming clearer as the nebula of facts and theory of events from into ever more solid a common denominators base. Those in power today are aware of the truth, are hiding it.

Incomplete and obfuscated truths are difficult to believe and because the CIA has hidden so much information and hidden in so many unlikely cover-identity groups the truths underlying the Kennedy assassination and even wider swath of history the assassination occurred in has met with rejection and even contempt. I hope be completing the story with my two family's history (my mother;s and my father's side) U hope to complete the story and strip away the often unlikely front groups that masked CIA activities.

E. Howard Hunt of the CIA on his death bed said Cord Meyer of the CIA and LBJ were in a plot to assassinate jFK. St. John Hunt his son has written of that and the death of his mother. My father in 1952 likely served with the Hunts at ATSUGI airbase Japan both then with Col Fletcher Prouty and earlier as well in WII. The Donegan family on my father's side comes from the Roman Catholic church in Boston the Kennedy family is from.

The fight to control Indonesia is what my book series is about. If we take (and we should) Mr. George H.W. Bush of the CIA part of the JFK assassination as tied to Cuba that was near the USA then we should also take LBJ his ally in the fight for Indonesia that was very close to Australia. This later case I think is more a factor in the assassination than the remnants of the Cuba operation.

You will see that the war time alliances with Joseph Kennedy Sr starting in the WWI era lasted into WWI. While the ties were strong they were strained. The Donegan's and Kennedy's as BOSTON (and I emphasis Boston) Roman Catholics did not like the ways of Great Britain and colonialism. This is the strain the led to the Kennedy assassinations by a J. Edgar Hoover led effort that included partially informed puppets like Richard Nixon and fully informed operatives like Prescott Bush, LBJ, George H.W. Bush, Allen Dulles, General Edward Lansdale, Charles and Earl Cabell, William King Harvey, Murder Inc., and others.

The Mutual Defense Assistance Act was a United States Act of Congress signed by President Harry S. Truman on 6 October 1949. For U.S. foreign policy, it was the first U.S. military foreign aid legislation of the Cold War era, and initially to Europe.

Utilizing Japan as a base against China and the Soviet Union and Indochina Col Prouty had remained since arriving following the atomic bombing of Japan and its unconditional surrender before China who forced that surrender through the Manchurian push towards Japan fell to Communism and Dorothy Hunt escaped to meet her future husband E. Howard Hunt during CIA planning held in 1949. By 1951 as Queen Elizabeth II was coming to power upon the predictable death of her father the CIA began covert work and included a secret CIA airbase in Peter Licavoli's former horse ranch. Teaming with Murder Inc., Sam Giancana, and Myers Lansky and others this secret facility was used for covert wars and was were the green souped up station wagon was drive from by Chauncey Marvin Holts' William King Harvey team to assassinate JFK. My father was part of this history and what is not in question is the public history of Maria Kutschera step children when she married Barron Von Trapp in 1926 but her biological children give hidden identities when she left the convent in 1926. That is my mother's side, under that hidden identity.

Like St John Hunt I have been trying to separate fact from fiction as I weave this into the fabric of the MK-ULTRA programs our parents were in and how that fit into many events in US and world history.

This press-kit essay that is a conjoined patchwork of book excerpts is chuck full of conspiracy theories that have been a nearly full time focus of the public and government of the United States of America and for the first time DOES tie together (and I think credibly and in a way that satisfies the questions still open on these matters) the assassination of Kennedy family member, the CIA activities in Latin America and elsewhere, the assassinations of Marilyn Monroe, Dorothy Kilgallen, 9/11 ties to Saudi Arabia, and the downing of TWA Flight 800, UAL flight 533, and other major national and international disasters.

Many if not most of the people I quote on this and use as source material are people I knew or grew up with as child and nearly all are connected by one to two degrees of publicly verifiable connection to those who have written first hand confessions as to Cold War CAI activities and worldwide CIA activities.

I am facing (and have for decades) harassment including the FBI's most abusive forms vigilantism and smear activities and I believe it is tied to my family's connection to JFK thread of history cover-up attempts as I write about history. My books about the FBI and CIA roles are a dark and dim view of the USA. It's officials uses gangs and thugs to undermine truth seekers in history and illegal acts have left me homeless and subject to police backed attacks the police neither stop nor prosecute. Others have had that same problem with police sanctioned illegal conduct. Writers even amateur writers should not fear for their lives or face break-ins to their offices or death threats and I have experience all those.

Sincerely, Edward Paul Donegan

Books series on The Deep State and the CIA Special Relationship With Great Britain

What follows here in this collection of chapters excerpted from my self-published books I am going to call The JFK Discovery Papers. Glued together by Donegan family history, my own comments, and the selections I have made of the works of others in matters of public concern and public importance.

The gap between what is, what has happened, and what is understood is filled by the process of discovery. The assassination of John F. Kennedy remains shrouded in mysteries, ever more questions, and ever more focus on a plot internal to the United States and overlapping into global business and global forces that JFK felt threatened the sovereignty of the USA and its presidency.

My own connections to this include my family being friends with the Prouty's, Col Fletcher Prouty who wrote about the CIA and its activities. He left the Donegan piece of that story out as others did in kindness to my family and to me but now those who fear what that part of the story reveals have used a campaign of harassment of me and my attempts to publish. I have read the existing works in great detail and delved into the facts and sources and surrounding information that is related in those works to enrich that history that is moving further behind us and needs to be reclaimed.

My father had a historic role in WWII and the Cold War. So much so he might have been famous before he left the USAAF had he not been in classified work and had he not met his future wife (also historic) Glorian. Her identity and this (again) his had to be kept secret he was told for several reasons. He married her against pressure not to do so but conceded (as Stanely Armour Dunham did) to the CIA he owed a favor to them for their silence. That favor was to remain anonymous even longer so that the hidden identity of Glorian Donegan could be use in a way to help Great Britain and those interests in the USA. Doing so chose a foreign nations and NWO over his own life and demands made on him. I believe elite demanded usage and testing of his Atomic tests sample DNA already in military possession. It was the involuntary science of that era under Sidney Gotlieb and others.

At this particular time in my many drafts of many versions and edits I am reading Roger Stone and his book The Man Who Killed Kennedy: The Case Against LBJ. It supports my theory Vice President LBJ was connected to post WWII plot that was too cozy with England and imperialism and unfair trading companies that had corrupt paramilitary or CIA activities included in their illegal and oppressive operations as they operated in independent nations.

Roger Stone, St. John Hunt, and others adding their names into the roster of new revelations begin with crediting and learning from what is already out there and I Edward Donegan do the same hoping my piece of history I can add in will help this journey towards the truth. Now from Mr. Stone.

> Stone- The US Government's planning for a covert action program intended to undermine Castro had been approved by President Eisenhower in March 1960 and was in progress throughout the period of the presidential campaign. Indeed, Nixon was spearheading the Cuban Initiative. Kennedy would use his CIA briefing to outflank Nixon on the right and falsely signal the generals and spooks at the CIA that he would be okay. This head-fake would help cost him his life and give Lyndon Johnson willing co-conspirators.
> I know that there are those who may try to ascribe political motives to my authoring of this book. I am a veteran of eight Republican presidential campaigns and have been a shrill partisan and political operative. Those who read ahead will see that Republicans Gerald Ford, George H. W. Bush, and Arlen Specter are not spared in this narrative. Nor do I pull my punches when it comes to right-wing Dallas oilmen like H. L. Hunt, Clint Murchison, Jr., Sid Richardson, or Senator Harry F. Byrd's cousin, D. H. Byrd. I am not the first person to assert, based on his research, that Lyndon Johnson arranged the murder of John F. Kennedy.

> I have built on the work of Phillip F. Nelson's LBJ: The Mastermind of the JFK Assassination, Barr McClellan's Blood, Money, & Power, Glen Sample's and Mark Collom's The Men on the Sixth Floor, and Craig Zirbel's The Texas Connection. I have interpreted certain events differently from these authors and, in some cases, provided new information to bolster their original claims of Johnson's complicity in Kennedy's death.

As with most lists of creditation the risk is to the so many worthy that just aren't there because the list would be too long there has been so much good work in the area.

One of the things we will learn from Mr. Stone as excerpted or from you being his book is Jospeh Kennedy Sr. was a king maker and a matchmaker. He wanted to influence fuure leaders and develop them, do so in conjunction with Great Britain and the WWII allies, and he wanted LBJ and JFK to have a future together. All might have worked well had not the Irish Troubles and the memories of the Colony of Boston not become a forefront issue in 1961.

This story is part of the plot that the CIA and MK-ULTRA and a Warren Commission cover-up of the actual assassination details that if known then would have exonerated Lee Harvey Oswald and his family. Pen Jones Jr., Gary Shaw, and others were part of decades long efforts along with Col Fletcher Prouty (played as Mr. X in the Oliver Stone film JFK) and who I knew in real life and was a friend of the Donegan's in the south Boston area to get the truth out about the CIA operatives including "Mr. George Bush of the CIA." Note that Col Prouty was a far-right winger who ghost wrote news and magazine articles for William Buckley Jr. among others, was integral in the CIA overthrow plans and did not accuse the GOP Party elites of being art of that plan out of any political spite.

- Understanding Col Fletcher Prouty and Special Activities world-wide. He worked in the Pentagon's Office of Special Operations. (OSO) An office within the US Department of Defense in the mid 1950s and both earlier and later the key years were really from 1951 to 1963 for this part of the story. As a Pentagon official he and General Edward Lansdale (who worked with CD Douglas on OSS CIA Propaganda and Overthrows) Prouty would receive requests for Pentagon resources from the CIA and act as liaison often meeting in the home of Allen Dulles whom he knew well and worked with regularly as he did many other assassinations figures though Prouty despised Lansdale. The OSO was much like the Discount [lending] Window of the Federal Reserve. Selected entities backed by the US Government could come for loans at preferential rates. In the OSO case it was surplus military hardware beings sold to CIA slected companies for CIA covert operations.

The money that purchased from this office was laundered. CIA officials like Thomas J. Devine left the CIA to start Zapata Petroleum whose financial records were described as having been lost. These companies like many military industrial complex enterprises created by the War Industry Board near the end of WWII became what Robert Swanson writes of as free investment money to for robber barons to build empires on. Operation 40 and other collections of these companies and officials used contracts with Murder Inc., surplus military gear, ship and radio and personnel from CIA "proprietary interests" aka CIA owned and operated proprietorship to while in business around the world offfer clandestine assistance to CIA operations and cover-stories for CIA activities.

Run by the National Security Council with little or no oversight they had un-monitored private warfare making in regions around the world and later in the USA being able to assassinate with ease using untracked money and intermediaries denying they were backed by the CIA and denying they were doing CIA requested work. Prouty didi not want a security clearance from the CIA and did not request one but the names of the ships that his OSO were supplying sounded to him like clear George H.W. Bush and Zapata Oil company based CIA activities used for the Cuba Bay of Pigs. He remained suspicious of this all his life. Prouty was a Donegan family friend and I knew his when I was a young child. As the Donegan family was interlinked with the CIA during WWII and the Cold War my mother was tied into WWI history. That lost part of my mother's story will be part of the WWII and Cold War story when her hidden identity is used by the CIA to secretly become a pawn for a test birth, at least one, that will be a part of Cold War planning and a child who could not be linked back to the USA.

The Bay of Pigs Invasion (Spanish: Invasión de Bahía de Cochinos, sometimes called Invasión de Playa Girón or Batalla de Playa Girón after the Playa Girón and originaly by Che The Bay of Capitalistic Pigs) was a failed military landing operation on the southwestern coast of Cuba in 1961 by Cuban Democratic Revolutionary Front (DRF), consisting of Cuban exiles who opposed Fidel Castro's Cuban Revolution, covertly financed and directed by the U.S. government. The operation took place at the height of the Cold War, and its failure influenced relations between Cuba, the United States, and the Soviet Union.

In 1952, the American-allied dictator General Fulgencio Batista led a coup against President Carlos Prío and forced Prío into exile in Miami, Florida. Prío's exile inspired Castro's 26th of July Movement against Batista. The movement succeeded in overthrowing Batista during the Cuban Revolution in January 1959. Castro nationalized American businesses, including banks, oil refineries, and sugar and coffee plantations.

The Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) began planning the overthrow of Castro, which U.S. President Dwight D. Eisenhower approved in March 1960, and the U.S. began its embargo of the island. This led Castro to reach out to its Cold War rival, the Soviet Union, after which the US severed diplomatic relations. Cuban exiles who had moved to the U.S. following Castro's takeover had formed the counter-revolutionary military unit, Brigade 2506, which was the armed wing of the DRF. The CIA funded the brigade, which also included approximately 60 members of the Alabama Air National Guard,[6] and trained the unit in Guatemala.

Over 1,400 paramilitaries, divided into five infantry battalions and one paratrooper battalion, assembled and launched from Guatemala and Nicaragua by boat on 17 April 1961. Two days earlier, eight CIA-supplied B-26 bombers had attacked Cuban airfields and then returned to the U.S. On the night of 17 April, the main invasion force landed on the beach at Playa Girón in the Bay of Pigs, where it overwhelmed a local revolutionary militia. Initially, José Ramón Fernández led the Cuban Revolutionary Army counter-offensive; later, Castro took personal control.

As the invasion force lost the strategic initiative, the international community found out about the invasion, and U.S. President John F. Kennedy decided to withhold further air support.[7] The plan, devised during Eisenhower's presidency, had required the involvement of U.S. air and naval forces. Without further air support, the invasion was being conducted with fewer forces than the CIA had deemed necessary. The American force, Brigade 2506 invading force were defeated within three days by the Cuban Revolutionary Armed Forces (Spanish: Fuerzas Armadas Revolucionarias - FAR) and surrendered on 20 April. Most of the surrendered counter-revolutionary troops were publicly interrogated and put into Cuban prisons.

The invasion was a U.S. foreign policy failure. The Cuban government's victory solidified Castro's role as a national hero and widened the political division between the two formerly allied countries. It also pushed Cuba closer to the Soviet Union, setting the stage for the Cuban Missile Crisis in 1962.

One can imagine that as the Cuban Air Force gained air superiority over Playa (beach) Girón (French figure probably tied to slave trafficking) JFK calling off the machine gun modified B-26 planes that Prouty, Holt, and others were using in Guatemala and Indonesia as well as for Playa Girón then the boats had little chance of returning back to the USA with only small fighters defending them.

Those on the George H. W. Bush and other CIA boats full of David Morales Brigade 2506 recruits were now going to be captured and tortured or killed or all of the above.

And George H.W. Bush made it to Dealey Plaza to see the JFK visit.

THIS week President Bush is motorboating in the waters off Kennebunkport, Maine. But 30 years ago. a former Pentagon official suggests. Bush may have secretly helped skipper a riskier amphibious mission - the Bay of Pigs invasion.

Officially. Bush has denied that he had any contact with the CIA until 1976. when Gerald Ford named him the agency's director. Then, five years ago, there came to light a memo, dated Nov. 29, 1969. in which J. Edgar Hoover reported that the FBI had briefed "Mr. George Bush of the Central Intelligence Agency."

Now (Ret.) Col. L. Fletcher Prouty, who served as Chief of Special Operations (OSO) for the Joint Chiefs of Staff until 1964, has shared some curious recollections about the failed Bay of Pigs operation. in which Cuban exiles tried to over throw Fidel Castro.

Prouty, who coordinated supplies for the 1961 fiasco, tells PAGE SIX that the invasion was code-named "Zapata." and that the two boats used by the invaders were named "Barbara" and "Houston."

It happens that, at the time of the invasion, Bush ran an offshore oil company called Zapata. The company, which did much of its business in the Caribbean. was based in Houston, where Bush lived with his wife Barbara.

Prouty says: "At the time I had no idea why they picked those names Later I realized -'Zapata,' 'Barbara.' 'Houston' a triple co- incidence is pretty rare."

Prouty, who in 1975 charged that Richard Nixon aide Alexander Butterfied served as CIA contact in the White House, added: "The Bay of Pigs program was approved in March. 1960. during the Eisenhower Administration.

The chances are that it might have been pulled together by bright young Republicans. I can't prove it, but it wouldn't surprise me that Bush was another one of the fellas recruited by the CIA out of Yale. Much of the support - the guns. shoes, vehicles - came from Texas."

Some Dirt About the CIA now Moved Into The Story

CIA Helped Bush Senior In Oil Venture

Bush has long denied allegations that he had connections to the intelligence community prior to 1976, when he became Central Intelligence Agency director under President Gerald Ford. At the time, he described his appointment as a ‘real shocker.’

But the freshly uncovered memos contend that Bush maintained a close personal and business relationship for decades with a CIA staff employee who, according to those CIA documents, was instrumental in the establishment of Bush’s oil venture, Zapata, in the early 1950's, and who would later accompany Bush to Vietnam as a “cleared and witting commercial asset” of the agency.

According to a CIA internal memo dated November 29, 1975, Bush’s original oil company, Zapata Petroleum, began in 1953 through joint efforts with Thomas J. Devine, a CIA staffer who had resigned his agency position that same year to go into private business. The ’75 memo describes Devine as an “oil wild-catting associate of Mr. Bush.” The memo is attached to an earlier memo written in 1968, which lays out how Devine resumed work for the secret agency under commercial cover beginning in 1963.

“Their joint activities culminated in the establishment of Zapata Oil,” the memo reads. In fact, early Zapata corporate filings do not seem to reflect Devine’s role in the company, suggesting that it may have been covert. Yet other documents do show Thomas Devine on the board of an affiliated Bush company, Zapata Offshore, in January, 1965, more than a year after he had resumed work for the spy agency.

PUBLICLY AVAILABLE MATERIAL SHOWS MORE AND MORE IT WAS THE CIA THAT RAN THE CUBA OPERATION FIRST AGAINST CASTRO THEN AGAINST JFK

Even newer information recovering and adding to nearly totally lost Prouty information is the plans for Indonesia were just beginning and protected by the CIA assassinations team as the Guatemala operation in 1954 had already succeeded and in 1962 the Cuba operation had already failed and but put to rest by all concerned nations. It was this Indonesia plan for the offshore area of Australia that the the Deep State would not let JFK cancel or reveal. The document forgers and cover operations teams were in full force again using Los Angeles Stationary and Stamp and other CIA contractors help to create the foundations for later Indonesia overthrow by inserted falsified and hidden identities and hidden CIA connections.

Today break-ins, fabricated evidence, and covert provocateurs have left me homeless and often without access to computer equipment or internet access and the struggle for those continues. I am the last living member of my family as I struggle to tell this story told by others also but others were not believed until I hope now as I corroborate them in my own accounts.

It seems unlikely Government activities would include (while under-cover or using assets) break-ins to the private home of anyone writing about the RFK and JFK assassinations but after the black bag jobs and use of gang-fights to drive me from my home the Texas public library system I used next and reported the situation to have used the same harassment scheme.

I come from a family of two historically connected (all lives are historical, the events they are trapped in may or may not be noticed and they may or may not be noticed) and the history is with Joseph Kennedy Sr., his and Rose Fitzpatrick's children, their deaths including JFK and RFK, other deaths including

Sonny Bono, and the McMartin preschools scandal some (Ted Gunderson) and others say were CIA connected, and George H.W. Bush connected like the Conspiracy of Silence case Ted Gunderson and CIA operatives William Colby and John DeCamp wrote about.

Before his death Lee Harvey Oswald discovered in 1963 Nazis in North Carolina. I can tell you some of that. As Ted Gunderson reported McMartin School had CIA testing and I think I was a part of that in 1962. My mother Glorian Gainey until she was 9 that is in 1936 lived with her brother Harold in North Carolina and was then orphaned. I belie they were tied to the Kutscheras. I spent my summers as child in South Carolina in a family area she was adopted into. Staying at Harold's farm house on Route 1 Bishopville, South Carolina we were near his Camden SC DuPont employers, and while there she my mother had help with me. I was a crazy child and in SC they were trying to find out why I was so abnormally volatile a child. Bad enough and then for days at a time a single mother as my father was away on trips thus the need to be relocated in the non-school months to the South Carolina relatives.

James Paul Donegan was born in Dorchester Massachusetts a Roman Catholic. He met Glorian Donegan and married her in 1952. He joined the US Army Air Force and may have been a test pilot for the P-51 at Inglewood and certainly flew it in WWII over Europe as a RECON Pilot and later took part in the first and second atomic bombing of Japan. As part of that he watched the Los Alamos New Mexico test blast from a nearby tower. Following WWII he flew in the Korean war from ATUSGI and later for TWA where he seemed to know Barry Seal and "Florence" from accounting.

He might have been famous if not for the needs of his wife Glorian he divorced for other reasons (volatile emotions she had) in 1980 or so. She herself might have been famous had she not had the Bastard Parents Combo - One famous perhaps aristocratic parent and one parent the person the aristocrat had an affair with and is trying to hide. A child of the Famous (Windsors) and Infamous (Kutscheras). In Glorian's case it appears a philandering Windsor (Albert or Edward) and Maria Kutchera the ex-noviate Nun who became pregnant and was the niece of Nazi SS General Franz Kutchera. These children (more than one) were move into North Carolina withe Dean Rusk area likely as a favor to the Von Trapps and Winsdor's and Glorian was given a fake name and birth records of falsified parents.

Like St John Hunt son of E. Howard Hunt I am telling the story of the Bush Family Treason and CIA downing of airplanes (such as UAL 533) that cover up the Ford Nixon Bush Rockefeller ties into the assassination of JFK and RFK and others by the CIA.

"Did they do that, shoot down the plane Dorothy Hunt was on?" "Could they" "Would they" and "Who are they?" all are questions. Chauncey Marvin Holt in one book and an appendix full of scanned and preserved documents answers as those questions that the conspiracy theory raise by telling of the secret CIA airbase in Grace Ranch once for gambling horses of Peter Licavoli) and other CIA secret air force operations and secret navy operation the CIA began in the Cold War to intercede in (while using disguises for both CIA personnel and CIA military equipment and crafts) wars around the world. That equipment ranging from pistols to howitzers and bombs and surface-to-air and air-to-air missiles were in a covert CIA command and the CIA had all to hide from the world about the assassination of JFK, Watergate, and more.

What I can tell you and Chauncey Marvin Holt and Col. Fletcher Prouty have already told you from their information and my own is that a slightly-used Air Force was used by the CIA to covertly to wage war around the world. Disguised as indigenous fighting forces US combatants entered into civil wars around the world or started them to get the victor-scenarios the US thought advantageous for satellite nations.

In WWII massive new battle machines were created. At the end of WWII they were auctioned of as surplus to or given to academic institutions (who may need to transport machinery or other materials from field research) or to other possible re-purposing. As Jesse Ventura and Col Prouty write it was Col Prouty's job to provide to the CIA used Pentagon resources bought through these repurpose programs and Chauncey Holt picks up the story of them being rebuilt and designed with Robert Mahue and others turned into souped up modern weaponry flying in obsolete air frames seemingly owned by Latin American air forces. This covert military capability gave the CIA the personnel it developed and war-making equipment for extensive military grade capabilities and become one of the larges though cover military forces in the world.

Jim Donegan in the 1950's was part of Mutagenic studies, his DNA part of atomic test blast and being airborne over Nagasaki and Hiroshima. Glorian was a bastard child of some Windsor family member or another (Edward or Albert) in a line like that the FOXP2 gene runs in that is very similar to ADHD and Dyslexia that responds to amphetamine treatments. Her secret connections to public figures who wanted to hide they had defects made her a good choice as an egg donor IF they wished (and they did) to study their offspring from generation to generation as Eugenics studies. So Mr Mutagenic meets Mrs Eugenics. And Dr Sidney Gottlieb and the CIA and Donald Barr were interested.

The events of this conspiracy theory span Watergate, UAL flight 553, TWA Flight 800, the Bush and LBJ families oil connections and Murder Inc. used in the assassination of JFK, and the P-51 Inglewood Manhattan beach Los Angeles country assassination of Robert F. Kennedy. Los Angeles became the epicenter of this in the 1920's when Joseph Kennedy Sr and (later Admiral) Halsey got some Windsor family bastard children out of wedlock, into orphanages and preschools in the USA where under hidden identities these children were examined at early ages for signs of the London FOXP2 gene that runs in some well connected elite families including the Kennedy Family (including Rosemary) Rockefeller family, and my own the Donegan family through Glorian and I Edward Paul Donegan express the gene.

When Jim (my father) met Glorian (my mother) did it have anything to do with DNA? Yes and I was born in 1961 the year the Nobel Prize was given to DNA researchers basing their work on Slide 51.

Chapters excerpted in full from across my books tell the story of my book series.

The Total Timeline of connected history

These are directories of data and HTML files on the disc.

1. Richard Nixon With Labor and Crime and Australia Focuses. Cuba and the public Bay of Pigs fiasco remain the visible topics of failures of the CIA. But the actions surrounding Guatemala and Indonesia and the use of organized crime by the CIA better tell how Nixon and his schemes landed in trouble and turned to terror against the Kennedy family and the USA.

2. Who was in preschools and adoption systems

   in Franklin Nebraska Boystown and California including Mc Martin Preschool and Marilyn Monroe will explain the scheme JFK and RFK were assassinated over and later UAL 553 and TWA 800 were sabotaged over and possibly the Lockerbie Scotland crash as well. It will also show US Presidential history mired in this covert cold war scheme now being covered up by the same family lines who ran the programs in some cases going back to the 1920's.

"Thirty-five students studying abroad with Syracuse University were struck down from the sky on Pan Am Flight 103 on December 21, 1988, along with 224 other passengers and eleven Lockerbie residents, victims of a terrorist bombing. But in the long process of grief, there is the comfort that comes from other memories." https://remembrance.syr.edu/about/

Pierre Emil George Salinger (June 14, 1925 – October 16, 2004) was an American journalist, author and politician. He served as the ninth press secretary for United States Presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson. Salinger served as a United States Senator in 1964 and as campaign manager for the 1968 Robert F. Kennedy presidential campaign.

After leaving politics, Salinger became known for his work as an ABC News correspondent, particularly for his coverage of the Iran Hostage Crisis; the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland; and his claims of a missile being the cause of the explosion of TWA Flight 800.

His talent and love of music carried over into his career as press secretary when, at the behest of First Lady Jacqueline Kennedy,[5][a] he would invite musicians such as Pablo Casals and Igor Stravinsky to the White House.[3] President Lyndon B. Johnson once had Salinger perform on the piano to 600 of his guests.[1]: 161 "If Jackie Kennedy was the one who thought maybe America was ready for a higher culture, her ally in it or her agent was Pierre," said Richard Reeves, author of President Kennedy: Profile of Power (1993).

After Salinger researched and wrote a number of articles in 1956 about labor union leader Jimmy Hoffa, Robert F. Kennedy hired him to be legal counsel for the Senate Select Committee investigating organized crime. Later, Kennedy wanted him to be press secretary to his brother, John F. Kennedy, who was then a member of the Senate.

Salinger worked on John Kennedy's presidential campaign in 1960 and became one of its leading figures. He was at times described as being part of Kennedy's Kitchen Cabinet of unofficial advisers.[9] After Kennedy was elected in 1961, he hired Salinger as his press secretary. When Kennedy became the first president to allow live television broadcasts of his news conferences, Salinger was said to have managed the press corps with "wit, enthusiasm and considerable disdain for detail,"[3] which made him a "celebrity in his own right."

Ed Donegan (myself) in this story-line show how the Family Jewels program was run in these institutions and William Colby, John Decamp, and Ted Gunderson worked to expose. According to Ted Gunderson and with John DeCamp believing it plausible William Colby was assassinated over his role investigating and exposing the CIA Family Jewels program run by George H.W. Bush and the allies of that family including FOrd, etc.,

McMartin preschoolThe McMartin preschool trial was a day care sexual abuse case in the 1980s, prosecuted by the Los Angeles District Attorney, Ira Reiner. Members of the McMartin family, who operated a preschool in Manhattan Beach, California, were charged with hundreds of acts of sexual abuse of children in their care. Wikipedia. I Edward Paul Donegan am from the McMartin preschool 1962 entering one year after JFK has visited the area on the day of my birth 11/18/1961. Children were NOT used as prostitutes as the investigations found but there WAS CIA activity including abusive stress testing of children in those facilities. This was the Family Jewels Program of the CIA working closely with Great Brittain and brain researhers.

In 1988, state and federal authorities began looking into allegations that prominent citizens of Nebraska, as well as high-level U.S. politicians including George H.W. Bush then President of the USA, were involved in a child prostitution ring. Alleged abuse (ABUSE DID OCCUR PROSTITUTION DID NOT) victims were interviewed, who claimed that children in foster care were flown to the East Coast of the United States to be sexually abused.

The accusations primarily centered on Lawrence E. King Jr., who ran the now defunct Franklin Community Federal Credit Union in Omaha, Nebraska, and alleged that King hosted “lavish parties at which minors were sexually abused”. King was a rising figure in the Republican Party before the investigation, and owned multiple houses in Nebraska along with a house in Washington D.C. which he rented. The Franklin Credit Union was raided by authorities investigating the embezzlement of tens of millions in November 1988.

The Nebraska Legislature organized a state committee in December 1988 to look into both the credit union embezzlement and the child prostitution allegations named the Franklin Committee, led by state Senator Loran Schmit and Ernie Chambers acting as vice chair. Numerous conspiracy theories spread after the committee was announced, claiming that the alleged abuse was part of a widespread series of crimes including devil worship, cannibalism, drug trafficking, and CIA arms dealing.

In July 1990, private investigator Gary Caradori, hired by the Franklin Committee to investigate the allegations, died along with his 8-year-old son when his plane disintegrated in mid-air near Chicago. Foul play was suspected by Caradori's brother and state Senator Loran Schmit, but was not proven by investigators. No definitive cause for the crash has been established.

Ted Gunderson led proffensional excavators and researchers to the McMartin preschool campus and located a network of secret tunnels, etc., the CIA had used.

3. .\Prouty\Prouty.html In the 1950's there are two assassins working for the US Government. Prouty and George H.W. Bush. Like St. John Hunt who I may have crossed paths with in Concord California I knew some of my family history but only parts of it the rest of it. Edmund Burke is an interesting figure in history my father frequently spoke of on the subject of historians and Anglo-American relations and Burke has written "Reading without reflecting is like eating without digesting. In this chapter on Col Fletcher Prouty who I knew as a child I discuss piecing history together as more information becomes available to us. This is true of St John Hunt's treasures he has written and I hope it not only true of what I read and reflect on but the world itself digests from all sources of our history."

Richard Nixon is the Lens. From behind him are large financial interests (think the Checkers the Dog speech) and through him the plans of those (Paris Island types) are focused onto Prouty who from the Pentagon will be the focal point both the CIA and Pentagon will get the missions picture and instructions to follow from. Mike Pence will take over Richard Nixon's National Security Council role much later after a Prescott Bush relative (Billy Bush) creates a blackmail scenario and with the British subvert Donald Trump and load the Deep State operatives into his cabinet.

4. The CIA Conspiracy to assassinate JFK and its regime change MK-ULTRA motives. It comes from William Randolph Hearst and Prescott Bush and newcomers to the Business Plot Richard Nixon, George H.W. Bush, and William Randolph Hearst Jr.

   A. .\curriculum vitae\CVs.htmlThese are the CVs of those who have confessed to (and that is asking a lot) the Deep State role in the assassination of JFK and by extension witnesses and relative since then and other cover-up activities.

      Their credible and common stories is that the "Eastern Establishment" mostly composed of oil interest and robber barrons had intended to covertly (using disguised and denied CIA support) facilitate favorable (to the USA and Great Britain) civil conflicts in independent nations using both oil money to finance the operations and entice corporate front companies into the CIA operations and use those companies (and Murder Inc., religious, and other various parties) into a wide and diverse fabric of opposition to independent governments.

      The intended order flows through tracing the activities of the trigger-men at the scene in Dealy Plaza, Texas to those holding office today and current writers and historians and their works.

B. Diplomatic and Military connections between the USA and Great Britain before, during, and after WWII, The George Bush Unauthorized Biography explains the background for what those authors (an others) call the Bush Treason. The Walker family (think George Herbert Walker Bush) was part of English banking funding projects around the world. Whether the Panama Canal or United Fruit Company in Latim America or the Caribbean, or Allen Dulles and Sullivan and Cromwell the cast of characters of finance, family, and diplomacy includes both FDR and the Kennedy's and the Bush family. The Rockefeller Republicans make-up the Brahim side of the house, the Democrat Party side had similar world views about foreign threat but preferred more democratic measures. The was overlap and the differs were as to the degree of secret programs. Averell Harriman plotted most of the Cold War and nations building while WWII was still being fought and much of the plan was agreed to in Paris among the allies in 1949. The inter-relationship with the oil business, agricultural and other programs, and the CIA were very strong. The Nation-State level dislodges were between Undersecretary of the Navy and his shipbuilder Joseph Kennedy Sr. and late President FDR and his Ambassador to England Joseph Kennedy Sr. The CIA connections were Wild Bill Donovan, Allen Dulles, and notably James Jesus Angleton. Angleton escaped the first round of CIA firings JKF did but was later fired by William Colby. It was in the Rockefeller Republicans including Tricky Dick Nixon the covert programs in the Cold War were run under and I assert a schism broke out with the Kennedy family in 1961 during the Troubles.

Donegan Family Bio and Hunt Family Bio are the answers the United States House of Representatives Select Committee on Assassinations and overthrows (HSCA) 1976 Sought. Merging these two family bios doubles and synergizes (finaly) the whole story. In this file directoryI show that both my father and mother were connected to the history of WWI and WWII in famous but still partially concealed story-lines that led to the Kennedy deaths at the hands of US and British secret warfare teams.

The United States House of Representatives Select Committee on Assassinations (HSCA) was established on September 15, 1976 by U.S. House Resolution 1540 to investigate the assassinations of John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King Jr. in 1963 and 1968, respectively. The select committee was first formed by the 94th United States Congress, and expired at the end of the 95th Congress.

The Donegan bio also explianas the death of Malcom X and Robert F. Kennedy by these same Nixon led mafia groups.

The HSCA completed its investigation in 1978 and issued its final report in 1979, which concluded that Kennedy “was probably assassinated as a result of a conspiracy.” In addition to acoustic analysis of a police channel dictabelt recording, the HSCA also commissioned numerous other scientific studies of assassination-related evidence that corroborate the Warren Commission's findings. However, the HSCA challenged the Warren Commission's conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald was the only shooter, while stating that it was “unable to identify the other gunman or the extent of the conspiracy.” The HSCA likewise concluded, based on circumstantial evidence, that there was a "likelihood” King was also assassinated “as a result of a conspiracy." The two-year inquiry cost $5.8 million. In December 1978, the HSCA recommended that the Department of Justice review its findings to decide if further investigation was merited.

The HSCA found that although the Commission and the different agencies and departments examining Kennedy's assassination performed in good faith and were thorough in their investigation of Lee Harvey Oswald, they performed with "varying degrees of competency" and the search for possible conspiracy was inadequate. The HSCA determined, based on available evidence, that the probable conspiracy did not involve the governments of Cuba or the Soviet Union. The committee also stated that the conspiracy did not involve any organized crime group, anti-Castro group, nor the FBI, CIA, or Secret Service. The committee found that it could not exclude the possibility that individual members of the national syndicate of organized crime or anti-Castro Cubans were involved in a probable conspiracy to assassinate President Kennedy. However, some members of the committee would later state their personal belief that one of those groups was involved in the assassination, with Representative Floyd Fithian believing that the Kennedy assassination was orchestrated by members of organized crime.

In a memorandum written to the House Judiciary Committee in 1988 by Criminal Division Assistant Attorney General William F. Weld, the recommendations of the HSCA report were formally reviewed and a conclusion of active investigations was reported. In light of investigative reports from the FBI's Technical Services Division and the National Academy of Sciences Committee determining that "reliable acoustic data do not support a conclusion that there was a second gunman" in the Kennedy assassination, and that all investigative leads known to the Justice Department for both assassinations had been "exhaustively pursued", the Department concluded "that no persuasive evidence can be identified to support the theory of a conspiracy in either the assassination of President Kennedy or the assassination of Dr. King."

Salvatore "Mooney" Giancana (/dʒiɑːnˈkɑːnə/; born Gilormo Giangana; Italian: [dʒiˈlɔrmo dʒaŋˈɡaːna]; May 24, 1908 – June 19, 1975) was an American mobster who was boss of the Chicago Outfit from 1957 to 1966.

After Giancana's return to the United States, police detailed officers to guard his house in Oak Park, Illinois, but on the night of June 19, 1975, shortly before he was scheduled to appear before the Church Committee, which was investigating CIA and Cosa Nostra collusion, a gunman entered the home through the basement and shot Giancana in the head and neck seven times with a .22 caliber pistol. At around 11 p.m., Joseph DiPersio, Giancana's caretaker, found his body on the floor of the basement kitchen where he was said to be frying sausage and peppers. A week before his death, Giancana had gall bladder surgery in Houston.

It is widely reputed and was partially corroborated by the Church Committee hearings that during the Kennedy administration, the CIA recruited Giancana and other mobsters to assassinate Fidel Castro. Giancana reportedly said that CIA and the Cosa Nostra were "different sides of the same coin".

Chauncey Holt reports (and provides documents that include handwriting) that Sam Giacanca aka Sam Gold, William King Harvey, and others met at Ray Ryan's El Mirador resort to work on what would become the Dallas, Texas assassination of JFK. Much of it was organized by Phillip Twombly using Los Angeles resources such as Los Angeles Stationary and Stamp CO (LASSCO) and gun smiths and banking.

Judith Exner claimed to be the mistress of both Giancana and JFK, and that she delivered communications between them about Castro. Giancana's daughter Antoinette has stated that her father was performing a scam to pocket millions of CIA dollars.

Documents released in 1997 revealed that some Mafiosi worked with CIA on assassination attempts against Castro. CIA documents released in 2007 confirmed that in September 1960, the CIA recruited ex-FBI agent Robert Maheu to meet with the West Coast representative of the Chicago mob, Johnny Roselli. When Maheu contacted Roselli, Maheu hid that he was sent by the CIA, instead portraying himself as an advocate for international corporations. He offered $150,000 to have Castro killed, but Roselli refused any pay. Roselli introduced Maheu to two men he called Sam Gold and Joe. "Sam Gold" was Giancana; "Joe" was Santo Trafficante Jr., the Tampa syndicate boss and one of the most powerful mobsters in prerevolution Cuba. Glenn Kessler of The Washington Post explained: "After Fidel Castro led a revolution that toppled the government of Fulgencio Batista in 1959, CIA was desperate to eliminate Castro. So, the agency sought out a partner equally worried about Castro-the Mafia, which had lucrative investments in Cuban casinos."

According to the declassified CIA "Family Jewels" documents, Giancana and Trafficante were contacted in September 1960 about the possibility of an assassination attempt by Maheu after Maheu had contacted Roselli, a Mafia member in Las Vegas and Giancana's number-two man. Maheu had presented himself as a representative of numerous international businesses in Cuba that Castro was expropriating. He offered $150,000 for the "removal" of Castro through this operation, though the documents suggest that neither Roselli, Giancana, nor Trafficante accepted any payment for the job. Giancana suggested using poison pills to dose Castro's food and drink. CIA gave these pills to Giancana's nominee, Juan Orta, whom Giancana presented as a corrupt official in the new Cuban government and who had access to Castro. After six attempts to introduce the poison into Castro's food, Orta abruptly demanded to be relieved of his role in the mission, giving the job to another, unnamed participant. Later, Giancana and Trafficante made a second attempt using Anthony Verona, the commander of the Cuban Exile Junta, who had, according to Trafficante, become "disaffected with the apparent ineffectual progress of the Junta." Verona requested $10,000 in expenses and $1,000 worth of communications equipment. How much work was performed for the second attempt is unknown, as the program was canceled soon after due to the Bay of Pigs invasion in April 1961.

According to the "Family Jewels", Giancana asked Robert Maheu to wire the room of his then mistress Phyllis McGuire, singer of the McGuire Sisters, whom he suspected of having an affair with comedian Dan Rowan. Although documents suggest Maheu acquiesced, the device was not planted because the agent who had been given the task of planting it was arrested. According to the documents, Robert F. Kennedy prohibited the prosecution of the agent and Maheu, who was soon linked to the wire attempt, at the CIA's request. Giancana and McGuire, who had a long-lasting affair, were originally introduced by Frank Sinatra. According to Antoinette Giancana, during part of the affair, McGuire had a concurrent affair with President Kennedy.

By Edward Curtin Review of Greg Poulgrain's book "The Incubus of Intervention: Conflicting Indonesian Strategies of John F. Kennedy and Allen Dulles"

This is the central question addressed by Greg Poulgrain in his extraordinarily important book, The Incubus of Intervention: Conflicting Indonesian Strategies of John F. Kennedy and Allen Dulles.

Two days before President John Kennedy's assassination on November 22, 1963, he had accepted an invitation from Indonesian President Sukarno to visit that country the following spring. The aim of the visit was to end the conflict (Konfrontasi) between Indonesia and Malaysia and to continue Kennedy's efforts to support post-colonial Indonesia with economic and developmental aid, not military. It was part of his larger strategy of ending conflict throughout Southeast Asia and assisting the growth of democracy in newly liberated post-colonial countries worldwide.

He had forecast his position in a dramatic speech in 1957 when, as a Massachusetts Senator, he told the Senate that he supported the Algerian liberation movement and opposed colonial imperialism worldwide. The speech caused an international uproar and Kennedy was harshly attacked by Eisenhower, Nixon, John Foster Dulles, and even liberals such as Adlai Stevenson. But he was praised throughout the third world.

Of course JFK never went to Indonesia in 1964, and his peaceful strategy to bring Indonesia to America's side and to ease tensions in the Cold War was never realized, thanks to Allen Dulles. And Kennedy's proposed withdrawal from Vietnam, which was premised on success in Indonesia, was quickly reversed by Lyndon Johnson after JFK's murder. Soon both countries would experience mass slaughter engineered by Kennedy's opponents in the CIA and Pentagon. Millions would die. Subsequently, starting in December 1975, American installed Indonesian dictator, Suharto, would slaughter hundreds of thousands East-Timorese with American weapons after meeting with Henry Kissinger and President Ford and receiving their approval.

Dulles's Secret

What JFK didn't know was that his plans were threatening a covert long-standing conspiracy engineered by Allen Dulles to effect regime change in Indonesia through bloody means. The primary goal behind this plan was to gain unimpeded access to the vast load of natural resources that Dulles had kept secret from Kennedy, who thought Indonesia was lacking in natural resources. But Dulles knew that if Kennedy, who was very popular in Indonesia, visited Sukarno, it would deal a death blow to his plan to oust Sukarno, install a CIA replacement (Suharto), exterminate alleged communists, and secure the archipelago for Rockefeller controlled oil and mining interests, for whom he had fronted since the 1920s.

Dr. Poulgrain, who teaches Indonesian History, Politics and Society at the University of Sunshine Coast in Australia, explores in very great detail historical issues that have critical significance for today. Based on almost three decades of interviews and research around the world, he has produced a very densely argued book that reads like a detective novel with fascinating sub- plots.

The Importance of Indonesia

Most Americans have little awareness of the strategic and economic importance of Indonesia. It is the world's 4th most populous country, is situated in a vital shipping lane adjacent to the South

China Sea, has the world's largest Muslim population, has vast mineral and oil deposits, and is home to Grasberg, the world's largest copper and gold mine, owned by Freeport McMoRan of Phoenix, Arizona. Long a battleground in the Cold War, it remains vitally important in the New Cold War launched by the Obama administration against Russia and China, the same antagonists Allen Dulles strove to defeat through guile and violence. Just recently the Indonesian government, under pressure from the army that has stymied democratic reforms for 18 years, signed a defense agreement with Russia for the sharing of intelligence, the sale of Russian military equipment, including fighter jets, and the manufacturing of weapons in Indonesia. While not front page news in the U.S., these facts make Indonesia of great importance today and add to the gravity of Poulgrain's history.

      Extortion and Blackmail in Black And White. My presence in places like libraries, grocery stores, apartment complexes, is being extorted (by fraudulent embellishments of what my activities in those locations are be they H-E-B, my apartment complex occupancy I have had, library usage, coffee shops, etc., into staged allegations I am their to commit harm to children, I am retarded myself and should have retardation services speak and act for me, and my claims I am neither a criminal nor incompetent to act for myself as self serving frauds concocted to defraud my assets and allow frauds to succeed including the needy and helpless intentionally used to seem empathetic victims of who I am being maligned as. The affects of this smear campaign has been evictions after resulting fights, violent attacks on me by either the criminals or dupes of the smear campaign, and other complications in my life. I have asserted all along I refute the allegations staged and suspected ties to the Kennedy assassination were the REAL reason I was being sabotaged as were my computers and writing environments.

Faking consent is breaking consent. Using frauds to force consent to an agreement is fraud and faking that real consent exists when it does not is also fraud. Both of these pretenses that I agree to any of this sluch fund activity of con artists.

Extortion takes a White activity (a good like shopping for groceries or using a library or restaurant) and forces a black activity, in this case exposure to children being disgustingly sexualized and a price named as to how much will be charged for the lewd imagery. Blackmail is different. Blackmail takes a person of wrongful intent who c omitted a wrong (a black action, or a bad one) and offers to turn it white (erase the bad) for a fee. What Jen Moore knew is that I would not (and have not) done what I am extorted as doing. In fact at times in my life I have rejected it when an emancipated minor about to turn 18 talked about with me and without touching in contemplation of it we both rejected it. In all other times except for that one friend of a friend I had rejected anything like that. But if i COULD be linked to such a thing it sets up blackmail. Jen Moore was a former police officer and had training in law as well as her husband who worked with the Marshalls and FBI in banks fighting money laundering and racketeering. These were the skill she used in her whistle-blowing of the covert operation shaking down a dopple of Ed Donegan.

Jen Moore talks about being terrorized, threatened, beaten, and driven to emotional distress by thugs recruited from inmate and mental health populations to harass, bird dog, and attack whistle-blowers like herself (and Veronica Hoffman and others like Ed DOnegan myself.

B. .\The Corrupt Western Power \TheCorruptWesternPowerLeversAreTodaysNKVD.html The Corrupt Leadership Stole Power And Abuse Power Against Truthers. The "Zersetzung" is not my first choice for a term. Roadblocking, Disruption, and Preemption are more I think the USA terms. Ted Gunderson and others describe techniques used by the state to silence journalists and whistle-blowers.

The Ultimate OBJECTIVE Of HARASSMENT (Disagreeable and insufferable environments):To Induce and sustain [in the Target] long-term extremes of stress, and to force the individual to commit an act of violence, whether suicide or murder, that can be plausibly denied (hence the ultimate "success" of the operation). Julianne McKinney Former Army Intelligence Officer that can lead to police shooting or arresting a Target who is described as a trouble maker for conflicts with police and conflicts with others. Police sent hooligans allows the police to step into a fight covertly started when they had no reason for an arrest or shoot a whistle-blower before the fight. Some of the harassment is so disgusting deep trauma surely results even if a Target turns the other cheek ignoring the religious, sexual, or inter-personal assualts and threats.

Police Abuse in low grade does abusive things to a person. Insulting, demeaning, combative or abusive and insufferable. Disagreeableness by the sound of it, sight of if, presence of it, whatever disagreeable thing being done might result in a conflict though harassment often is considered suggestive rather than tangible. In my case disgusting images and actions of very young girls in effect force me into a sleep-over with them in their loose clothing as nearby people laugh at me as to why I am around the girls and there I am doing it again. Moderate police abuse goes beyond the insufferable to the obstructive. Dangerous and violent schizophrenic homeless people will step into your path and hope to fight you. By being in the way as a physical block to where you need to go like the front door into your apartment they hope to present a fight you have to survive before you can reach the door to your home. Imminent police abuse such as when I write about certain police or public figures or content they wish to suppress include violent strikes at me or my office equipment, sudden evictions base on long term shill fake neighbors who have been starting fights and planting evidence or vandalizing or gas lighting at the landlord instruction, the landlords themselves assets of the State who moved those thugs in in as neighbors. Use of poisons and radioactivity are possible at any stage of police abuse. Both reputations and the physical bodies of police targets are poisoned.

Here is some information now and there remains still enormous confusion as to the facts and the parties involved and it needs clarification these works are intended to help with.

A veteran journalist who was investigating possible [politically connected and politically] sex crimes from former President Bill Clinton is said to have been found dead in Washington D.C.

Prince George's County Police Department released a statement to One American News (AONN) regarding Jenny Moore's death investigation saying officers found a woman unresponsive at a Washington DC hotel after a welfare check.

The department claims the woman was pronounced dead at the scene. One America's Neil W McCabe breaks down the case.

FBI whistle blower Robyn grits told one American News her friend Jen Moore told her that if the wrong people found out about the documents, she had just obtained they would kill her.

Gritz did not know what those documents (the were the story of Edward Donegan and Glorian Donegan) were but she does know that the FBI called her August 13th to tell her that her friend was dead this is the Capitol Heights Maryland hotel where Moore was found unresponsive by housekeeping.

Grit said that she never knew Moore's last name but that the police called her because she had listed the veteran FBI agent as the next of kin.

"On Monday I was sitting towards the end of the day no sitting at my desk at work and I looked down and a lot of messages were coming in myself up and so I looked at on Twitter someone had messaged me you do know task force is that task force was the nickname for Moore and grits said that she used it instead of her name to protect her craite said that she thought it was all a sick joke but after calling around she confirmed that task force had passed and then the phone rang it was a detective from Prince George's County Police Department and really really nice guy and he said I got your name and number to get her next-of-kin and he he just said you know this poor woman he goes suicide is it's pretty much ruled out nothing to indicate suicide nothing to indicate a forced entry nothing to indicate of any kind of physical confrontation.

the initial call was that Moore had suffered a seizure she said Robin Gretz was not just any FBI veteran for 16 years she was a top agent assigned to high-profile cases such as the Boston Marathon bombing and posted as the FBI's liaison officer to the Defense Intelligence Agency six years ago. She filed a gender discrimination complaint but instead of addressing her concerns the FBI put her on unpaid leave and has slow walked her case.

Using her skills she used Moore's phone number to find three of the reporters relatives and passed on their details to the detective it was this personal history that formed the bond between the two women as more herself was a former California police officer who was targeted by her leadership.

Truepundit.com reported that Moore had come to them about the child molestation ring she was investigating with the help of a 26 year-old who said he was passed around the ring in the 1990s .

I said you know you need to kind of focus on what you have here that is the most needed and and I thought you talked to someone ..

Brett McCabe said she never knew what Moore was working on [It was the Edward Paul Donegan Glorian Donegan story of how my family ties to the Kennedy assassination) but she did know it was getting serious in the middle of doing all this research she realized she was possibly getting into some pretty dark places so she and she had documentation (about the Donegan family) for everything so she texted me and said I got to find out who I can give this paperwork to and if it gets into the wrong hands someone will kill me and that was just I could say.

that was only about to speak before her her death was when she said if it gets in the wrong hands at one point she offered to take in more at her place in the Midwest but more never followed up on it she said now she is mourning a friend and fellow traveler I would describe and I actually just picked it up a little thing for her kind heart fierce minded brave spirit that's exactly how I would describe Jenny.

End of OANN interview. I Edward Donegan have received death threats and disruptions as well for my ongoing attempts to tell my family history.

In the fictional version RFK escapes assassination and we will learn of the underlying connection between Marilyn Monroe and Dysgraphic Albert Einstein.

Ted L. Gunderson An Edited and Approving Biographical Anthology of his Life and Works

Ted Gunderson was the right-hand man to RFK fighting the mafia that was run by Vice President Richard Nixon in the 1946 to 1960 years. As the Kennedy's gained power in the USA and world global dirty business operations subverted the USA and other nations. JFK and RFK attempted to shut down the CIA but it was too globally located to respond to the US Presidency and and held too much allegiance from British trained and supported Espionage in the USA operating as the US Government but through NGOs that again were difficult to control from inside the US Government. It would be comparable to NASA trying to control a long gone satellite past its available connections back to Earth.

A former senior official of the Federal Bureau of Investigation says “rogue” military intelligence and law enforcement units of the federal government oversee a nationwide network of community-based “gang stalking” (harassment, intimidation and domestic terrorism) directed at thousands of U.S. citizens who have been extra judicially targeted as "dissidents" or undesirables.

"Based on my thirty years' experience and research, I have determined there are thousands of victims who have been targeted by an illegal U.S. government rogue criminal enterprise - military intelligence, probably, tied into CIA and FBI and so forth - that is active 24 hours a day throughout the United States," Gunderson stated in an October 2008 speech posted last fall on YouTube.

Santos Trafficante - It Should Have Been Bobby - "Mob lawyer" Frank Ragano wrote in his book that Santo Trafficante told him that he and Carlos Marcello "should have killed Bobby" instead of JFK.

James Files - Grassy Knoll Shooter? - James Files claims to have fired the fatal head shot from behind the grassy knoll fence.

Chauncey Holt - One of the Tramps? - Chauncey Holt says that he forged Oswald's "Hidell" ID card, among other activities, and is the oldest of the "three tramps" depicted in photos of Dallas on November 22, 1963. Holt names convicted murderer Charles Harrelson as one of his companions.

The list above is certainly not a complete list of confessions. Also, many other people have alleged involvement with Lee Oswald or some aspect of the JFK assassination story, but not with the murder plot itself.

That many of those figures did kill JFK and others is well documented. What Jen Moore and Ted Gundderson and William Cooper were silenced over is the Deep State CIA that gained and retained power or more likely always held power except from 1961 to 1963. Jen Moore and Ed Donegan continue the work of Ted Gunderson, William Cooper, Phillip Marhsall and others telling the Bush Rockefeller DuPont Rothschild CIA truths to the world and the assasinations that protect the elites.

Cuba Mafia Pamphlet

Cuba and the Mafia drug dealers and gamblers and smugglers hoping to get Castro out is the best understood and most examined story of the Mafia. Yet these figures overthrew Gautama much earlier and had planned to and did overthrow Indonesia much later than Cuba. The story of these Mobsters is introduced as occurring under Truman as early as 1951 though he said he intended the cloak of information gathering of a CIA more than dagger of wet division, and FDR who regretted it and Eisenhower-Nixon who engaged in world crimes under the espionage capability created by the FDR legislation. Eisenhower also came to warn of the military industrial complex and entities controlled by the CIA and US DOD but Nixon was its biggest advocate.

"Marilyn Monroe was killed by drugs administered by thugs. Failure to solve that crime put JFK next in line". That is text taken from a longer poem written by Bill Truels concluded the most extensive research into the death of Marilyn Monroe available and who had massive insights into the Deep State.

As Greek in Chicago he knew the story of Eugenia “Becca” Pappas Birth: 1944. Illinois, USA. Death: 1962 (aged 17-18). Chicago, Cook County, Illinois, USA. She had heard and repeated mobsters working for Sam Giancana left Chicago to fly to California to kill Marilyn Monroe. Becca was killed inher car by mobsters shortly thereafter and was found floating in the Chicago river.

Here is the Modus Operandi the mob used on Monroe. Chloral Hydrate and Nembutal were using in combination and delivered rectally. I Edward Paul Donegan suspect this barbiturate death was used as a toxic weapon on Dorothy Kilgallen too. The combination of these drugs act like the three drug protocol of lethal injections that paralyze the muscles of the body and including the heart and lung functions. In the case of Nembutal and Chloral Hydrate seizures and perhaps vomiting would be cause by an overdose except for the seizure suppressant affects of drug combination.

Richard Nixon With Labor and Crime and Australia Focuses

Late 19th Century and Early 20th Century world affairs sets the stage. Steam Power and Rail and Shipping and excavating and mining and farm work gained under steam. The existing industrialized countries had the technology and manufacturing advantages of less developed regions where the natural resources exist. Feudal powers were at it again.

Bolshevik Revolution. In October 1917, the Bolsheviks, led by Vladimir Lenin, seized power. The Bolsheviks' policies of "peace, bread, and land" and "all power to the Soviets" gained support from workers, peasants, and soldiers. - Google AI Overview

The hemophilia of Tsar Nicholas II and Alexandra's son, Alexei, significantly impacted their reign, causing them to become increasingly isolated, secretive, and reliant on the mystic Grigori Rasputin, ultimately contributing to the downfall of the Romanov dynasty due to public distrust and perception of their poor decision-making fueled by their desperation to protect their ailing heir; keeping Alexei's condition a state secret further eroded their public support. - Google AI

In England and the USA the Windsors, FDR, and others watched as Prince Albert of York was already (years before the 1925 speech) showing a brain defect they needed to research less publicly.

After World War I (from which Russia withdrew in 1917) and the Russian Civil War, the hammer and sickle became more widely used as a symbol for labor within the Soviet Union (USSR) and for international proletarian unity. It was taken up by many communist movements around the world, some with local variations. The hammer and sickle remains commonplace in self-declared socialist states, such as China, Cuba, North Korea, Laos, and Vietnam, but also some former Soviet republics following the dissolution of the Soviet Union, such as Belarus and Russia. Some countries have imposed bans on communist symbols, where the display of the hammer and sickle is prohibited. - Wikipedia

In the USA Whitney v. California, 274 U.S. 357 (1927), was a United States Supreme Court decision upholding the conviction of an individual who had engaged in speech that raised a clear and present danger to society.[1] While the majority of the Supreme Court Justices voted to uphold the conviction, the ruling has become an important free speech precedent due a concurring opinion by Justice Louis Brandeis recommending new perspectives on criticism of the government by citizens.[2] The ruling was explicitly overruled by Brandenburg v. Ohio in 1969. The "Great Dissenters" Brandies and Holmes dissented favoring law abiding free speech and the dissent matched later rulings and law. But the Red Scare was on and Organized Labor was scene as the mechanism to insuate Communism into the USA.

Thomas v. Collins, 323 U.S. 516 (1945) is a similar Post WWII case about industrial policy (unions) being debated among workers freely. In fact after 1949 when Chairman Mao completed the revolution in China labor movements were yet another Red Scare, the second of the 20th Century and 1946 with his globalist friend William Randolph Hearst will being fighting the red on "The Devil's Chessboard" along with James Jesus Angleton, Wild Bill Donovan, and others under the Marshall Plan and accords with the WWII allies forming new security alliances.

This will be Congressman Nixon of the Los Angeles County area in Congress who will setup the CIA mechanisms for this as legislation and then as Vice President will run the NSC that runs the CIA under Eisenhower will create or recruit for global forces for global regime change and overthrow.

Earlier 20th Century history comes into play again.

Prohibition in the early 20th Century created Great Lakes (New York and Detriot bordering Canada by water) smuggling operations and large criminal networks. Union busters found these thugs usefull for breaking strike lines and other works. These Same gangs had formed into Casinos and gambling on the East and West coasts of the USA in the 1950's. In Florida Meyers Lansky and his assistant Chauncey Holt worked gambling and casinos with Jack Ruby tied to Batista in Cuba. In Nevada Bugsy Segal used the laws of Nevada for similar gaming.

These Murder Inc., forces will be drawn into Soldiers of Fortune contract agents for the CIA and eventually even be used against both JFK and RFK largely tied around plans for Indonesia and that will be one of the focuses of this chapter.

General Edward Lansdale USAF to CD Douglas Jackson

7 March 1953
MEMORANDUM FOR C.D. JACKSON
Subject: Latin America

1. You requested some thoughts on Latin America, based upon lessons learned in the Philippines, In order to be of most help to you, in the possibly brief time before my departure overseas, I am dividing my suggestions in two parts. The first part is attached.

The second part requires deep study of an area unfamiliar to me. If there is insufficient time to write the second part, there are competent folks in C.I.A. who can do it.

2, The first part is an outline of my personal opinion of the basic mechanism needed to win the struggle we face. It is a start, not exhaustive.

It is the first time I have tried to describe it concisely, so perhaps there are some rough spots. Latin America is rich in assets for its most efficient working,

3. The basic mechanism must be locked at as only the covert or semi-covert part of the United States team in each country. The rest of the team should be playing in the same game, towards the same goal. If it isn't, the United States loses. Thus the critical task falls upon the Executive, for clear statement of our Policy towards each country and compliance of officials to both spirit and letter of that policy.

4. The second part of my suggestions concerns the application of the basic mechanism to each country. The start should be a penetrating review of what we know of each country. From this review, by individual country, we list the real targets to be destroyed, the assets (including names of persons) in that country which will destroy the targets, and a sketch of how an agent or agents make those assets viable. The description of the basic mechanism contains thoughts on this.

5. If this way of doing is acceptable, then the means are next. You know where help awaits you in doing it successfully,

Summarized Description

In each country, there forces and leaders (actual or potential) believing In the freedom of the in forms as varied as our interpretation of that principle. We must put the United States (represented by its Agents of Influence who work in and upon the politics of foreign nations), quietly, into contact with those forces and leaders, strengthening them until they become the authority of that country. Then we insure that such authority does not become perverted Into fascism or communism. we insure by aiding internal balance of power, vigilantism, and similar means. In all of this, we are the friendly helpers, not the doers. We help others help themselves.

Although the French Revolution succeeded displacing the king Robespierre took over in the vacuum becoming a tyrant.]

The principal Agent [Of Influence] must either have achieved stature In the target country or be capable of achieving stature. The two best places to look for him are In the target country or the United States. Long-time residents In a foreign country tend to paternalistic colonialism or to thinking of natives as divided between social equal and not-quite-bright ("children" in the milder form, "n*ggers in the worst) Perhaps he can be picked from a Iist of Most Loved Yankees" supplied by native opinion makers in the country (our existing U.S. apparatus has the means to obtain a list, even though it might be contaminated) or supplied by US. citizens who know the country well (this might not be as accurate as that supplied by the natives). Such a list might name former ambassadors, military personnel, businessmen, or professionals who had spent several years In target country and would find a ready welcome again.

Union Breaking Bud Holt and Chauncy Holt meet Licavoli and Murder Inc,

Of course, I was well aware of who Licavoli was, since one of my cousins, Bud Holt, had worked for Harry Bennett, a most unusual gangster, who was chief of security for Ford in Detroit. Bennett worked hand in glove with Licavoli and other Detroit gangsters, using them as strike breakers. On the other side of the fence, Licavoli also worked for the Teamsters. It was all the same to the gangsters; they worked both sides of the street.

In 1938, Bennett hired my cousin, Bud, and one of Licavoli's associates, a bootlegger named Eddie Percelli to kill Walter Reuther of the United Auto Workers, who were involved in a bitter struggle with Ford.

Bud and Eddie bungled the job and were later tried for assault on Reuther but were able to beat the rap. Licavoli, in later years, confided in me how cozy all the auto makers were with the Detroit Mafia, as well as with the Purple Gang, who originally imported the Licavoli clan from St. Louis. He recounted for me the details of his attempt to kill Harry Bennett after a dispute over wages that were to be paid to Licavoli's men hired as strike breakers by Ford.

Organized crime had, for a long time, ignored the numbers racket and regarded it as "chicken feed." They, in fact, referred to it, very contemptuously, as "nigger pool."

However, when Sam Giancana was in prison, he got to know a man by the name of Clark, who controlled most of the numbers rackets in Chicago and Clark really opened Giancana's, and the syndicate's, eyes as to the amount of money that could be earned through the nickels and dimes bet on the numbers.

Today's lotteries are just a variation of the numbers racket as conducted by criminals, black, brown, yellow and white, and the odds are even worse. From Self Potrait of Chauncey Marvin Holt a rail-yard assassin team member.

The switch from working for Batista and Cuban gambling into being recruited to overthrow Castro was where Holt and others went from casinos work and bootlegging crimes and union busting muscle into full fledged CIA resources.

Chauncey Holt has by punching his US Amry Air Corps instructor as WWII broke out was thrown out of the program and into the brig. But the Mafia bosses found it he was able to fly and legal to do so. He went from mobster private escort of mob bosses into flying reconditioned B-26's (retrofitted at Peter Licavoli's redone Grace Ranch) in Guatemala.

Focus Indonesia

Indonesia and Papa New Guinea are close-in islands running from about 11 o'clock to 1 o'clock north of Australia. Mostly Pacific Islander the population more resembled the internal native population of Australia rather than the dominant political and economic sector Europeans. The term "pygmy" was used to describe some Aboriginal people of the North Queensland rainforests. However, there is no evidence of a separate genetic lineage for these people, and the term is considered a myth used to justify colonization. Indigenous Australians have a wide range of physical characteristics, and the term "pygmy morphotypes" is a more accurate way to describe these variations.

The Netherlands (The Dutch, Holland by other names) on the far side of Germany to Austraalia as the crow flies had before WWII controlled Indonesia including the use of natural resources by Dutch Shell.

After WWII under President Sukarno the area was politically up for grabs in a balanced political system. The USA and CIA and British conspired to insert President Suharto who was massacre the Chines population of the islands and commit other atrocities but keep the island under US Government-favoring control.

Increasingly experts and myself Edward Paul Donegan connected to this story believe this battleground was what JFK was assassinated over as his brother RFK was as well. It is history tied to CIA and the CIA hopes for Barrack Obama Jr. too in that region and this book calls into questions what the real and still untold truths of Barrack Obama Jr. CIA family jewels systems truth is his birth and development in CIA cover identities like Business International Corporation and early and later questions of CIA activity.

All of the facts of this involved a string of deaths in the 1961 to 1968 time period called by some "the Assassinations (Lisa Pease and James DiEugenio.)

In 1968 RFK is assasinatated in Los Angeles possibly by Nixon operatives tied to USAID and Anne Chenault. Nixon wins the US Presidency and during his first term CIA revelations become public and Nixon is again in cover-up mode about "that whole JFK thing."

The New York Times

In April 1972, Hersh was hired by The New York Times as an investigative journalist at the paper's Washington bureau. After the June 17 break-in at the Democratic National Committee headquarters in Washington and the emergence of the Watergate scandal, the Times sought to catch up with the reporting of Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein at The Washington Post, who broke several stories in 1972 linking the break-in to the Nixon campaign. Together with Walter Rugaber, Hersh produced extensive reporting for the Times on the unfolding scandal; a key article by him published on January 14, 1973, revealed that hush money payments were still being made to the burglars, which shifted the press's focus from the break-in itself to its cover-up. During 1973, Hersh wrote more than 40 articles on Watergate, most printed on page one; his reveals included the FBI's failure to investigate political operative Donald Segretti, despite knowing of his activities, and leaks from the grand jury testimonies of former Attorney General John Mitchell and burglar James McCord, the latter of which revealed that the Committee to Re-Elect the President had made the payments. John Dean, Nixon's counsel, later said that while it had been the Post's articles in 1972 that had encouraged prosecutors, "the most devastating pieces that strike awfully close to home" were Hersh's in 1973 and 1974.

On December 22, 1974, Hersh exposed Operation CHAOS, a massive James Angleton CIA program of domestic wiretapping and infiltration of anti-war groups during the Nixon administration, which was conducted in direct violation of the agency's charter. Hersh reported that dossiers had been compiled on at least 10,000 American citizens, including congressmen; the government eventually conceded the figure was closer to 300,000. He wrote 34 more articles on the story over the next months; they prompted the formation of the Rockefeller Commission and Church Committee, which investigated covert CIA operations and led to reforms of the agency. Hersh's exposure of CHAOS was the earliest reporting to reveal contents of the CIA's "Family Jewels" list of its own illegal activities. Hersh soon felt "double-crossed" after learning of a January 16, 1975, meeting between the paper's top editors (including executive editor A. M. Rosenthal) and President Gerald Ford, in which the president mentioned CIA political assassinations-a comment which he subsequently asked to be struck from the record; the editors later agreed not to tell Hersh about the disclosure. Hersh thereafter decided to move away from reporting on the CIA.

On May 25, 1975, Hersh revealed that the U.S. Navy was using submarines to collect intelligence inside the three-mile protected coastal zone of the Soviet Union in a spy program codenamed "Holystone", which had continued for at least 15 years. It was later revealed that Dick Cheney, one of Ford's top aides and later George W. Bush's vice president, proposed that the FBI search the home of Hersh and his sources in order to halt his reporting on the subject. -Wikipedia

During this time of MK-Ultra, assassinations, heart attack guns using shell fish poison, and other CIA activites the wife of E. Howard Hunt died on United Airline Flight UAL 553. The CIA reforms the reporting was bringing meant CIA contract agents were left with no money. Per St. John Hunt Dorothy his mother was working with E. Howard Hunt, Nixon operatives, and others to create a hush-money and retirement fund for the former assasins teams.

Later TWA Flight 800 had Patty Hearst on it. She and Brigid Berlin, daughter of a Heast Publications manager, had been part of the crew at Interviews Magazine. Jed Johnson through these figures at his magazine had the Latin America an Caribbean overthrows information of what Nixon and Twombly had been doing, and he was preemptively "silenced" when that plane was sabotaged on the tarmac to become a flying fuel disaster removed from computerized tank control devices then a flair-like device flow towards the plane while it was in flight triggering the explosion.

Like with Watergate carefully placed Nixon appointees as part of the investigation team steered away from Conspiracy Theories but AFTER the confession of E. Howard Hunt to the assassination of JFK the hush-value of these deaths on those airplanes is a plausible cause the CIA had to sabotouge those flights.

Polka Dot File on the Robert F. Kennedy Killing: The Paris Peace Talks Connection

The Richard Nixon group of operatives and their connection to Anna Chan Chennault and the CIA's Flying Tigers American Volunteer Group.

Fernando Faura The spirit of this book is captured with a quote from the Chief of Detectives of the LAPD regarding the girl in the polka dot dress: "That woman will haunt me for the rest of my life". This quote applies to the author as well who has bravely come forward with his journey to unravel a mystery that lay at the heart of a conspiracy....Who is the girl in the polka dot dress seen leaving the Ambassador Hotel loudly proclaiming "We shot him" around the time Robert F. Kennedy would be assassinated. The murder of Presidential Hopeful/ Senator Kennedy would be quickly sloughed off as another lone nut hit in the person of Sirhan Sirhan. Eyewitnesses to the shooting, the surroundings would relay details to authorities that would debunk the official line. Witnesses such as Sandra Serrano and John Fahey were inconvenient and troubling to law enforcement looking to close the case quickly. The work done by the LAPD could only be described as slipshod. Questions regarding the girl in the polka dot dress would not be the only anomaly....bullets fired, proximity of the gunmen, other characters surrounding Sirhan highlight a troubled scene. Fernando Faura would put himself at risk investigating the oddities. His story is short, but hardhitting...A crisp thriller that is unfortunately true...A motive for the murder offered other than the usual pabulum spouted about lone assassins.

Japanese occupation

Japanese military authorities in Java, having interned Dutch administrative personnel, found it necessary to use Indonesians in many administrative positions, which thus gave them opportunities that had been denied them under the Dutch. In order to secure popular acceptance of their rule, the Japanese sought also to enlist the support of both nationalist and Islamic leaders. Under this policy Sukarno and Hatta both accepted positions in the military administration.

Though initially welcomed as liberators, the Japanese gradually established themselves as overlords. Their policies fluctuated according to the exigencies of the war, but in general their primary object was to make the East Indies serve Japanese war needs. Nationalist leaders, however, felt able to trade support for political concessions. Sukarno was able to convince the administration that Indonesian support could be mobilized only through an organization that would represent genuine Indonesian aspirations. In March 1943 such an organization, Putera (Pusat Tenaga Rakjat; “Centre of the People’s Power”), was inaugurated under his chairmanship. While the new organization enabled Sukarno to establish himself more clearly as the leader of the emergent country [cont}

In March 1944 the Japanese, feeling that Putera served Indonesian rather than Japanese interests, replaced it with a “people’s loyalty organization” called Djawa Hokokai, which was kept under much closer control. Six months later the Japanese premier announced the Japanese intention to prepare the East Indies for self-government. In August 1945, on the eve of the Japanese surrender, Sukarno and Hatta were summoned to Saigon (now Ho Chi Minh City) in Vietnam, where Terauchi Hisaichi, commander of the Japanese expeditionary forces in Southeast Asia, promised an immediate transfer of independence.

On their return to Batavia (now Jakarta), Sukarno and Hatta were under pressure to declare independence unilaterally. This pressure reached its climax in the kidnapping of the two men, for a day, by some of Jakarta’s youth leaders. On the morning of Aug. 17, 1945, after the news of the Japanese surrender had been confirmed, Sukarno and Hatta proclaimed Indonesia an independent republic.

The initial federal constitution of 1949 was replaced in 1950 by a unitary but still provisional constitution. It was parliamentary in character and assigned an essentially figurehead role to the president. From the revolutionary period, Indonesia had inherited a multiparty system. The main parties after independence were the major Muslim party, Masyumi (Masjumi); the Muslim theologians’ party, Nahdlatul Ulama (NU), which seceded from Masyumi in 1952; the Nationalist Party (PNI); the Communist Party (PKI); the “national communist” party, Murba; the lesser Muslim parties, Perti and Partai Sarekat Islam Indonesia (PSII); and the Socialist Party (PSI). Until the first elections were held, in 1955, the parliament was filled by appointment under an informal agreement between parties as to their probable electoral strengths. The elections of 1955, a remarkable and technically successful experiment in the exercise of political choice by a largely nonliterate population, confirmed the position of Masyumi, NU, the PNI, and the PKI as the country’s four leading political parties.

In the early and mid-1950s, there was a rapid succession of governments under a series of prime ministers: Hatta (December 1949-August 1950), Mohammad Natsir (September 1950-March 1951), Sukiman Wirjosandjojo (April 1951-February 1952), Wilopo (April 1952-June 1953), Ali Sastroamidjojo (July 1953-July 1955), Burhanuddin Harahap (August 1955-March 1956), and Ali once again (March 1956-March 1957). This instability created a growing disillusionment with the fruits of independence and a sense of contrast between the heroism of the revolution and the self-seeking party rivalry that followed it. In particular, conflict between the export-producing outer islands and the heavily populated island of Java was becoming more marked. In December 1956 these factors of discontent led to movements of regional dissidence, supported by local military commanders, in western Sumatra, the Minahasa Peninsula of northern Celebes, and elsewhere.

Against a background of geographically scattered yet salient dissent, Sukarno, resentful of his circumscribed position as figurehead president, began to interfere more frequently in the constitutional processes. In 1956 Vice President Hatta, who had been considered Sukarno’s partner in leadership, announced his resignation, and in February 1957 Sukarno announced his own concept for Indonesia's government. Criticizing Western liberal democracy as unsuited to Indonesian circumstances, he called for a political system of "democracy with guidance" based on indigenous procedures. The Indonesian way of deciding important questions, he argued, was by way of prolonged deliberation (musyawarah) designed to achieve a consensus (mufakat); this was the procedure at the village level, and it should be the model for the country. He proposed a government based on the four main parties plus a national council representing not merely political parties but functional groups-urban workers, rural farmers, intelligentsia, national entrepreneurs, religious organizations, armed services, youth organizations, women's organizations, etc.-through which, under presidential guidance, a national consensus could express itself.

The next two years were a period of almost continuous crisis. The resignation of the second Ali government was followed by a proclamation of a "state of war and siege" and the formation of a nonpartisan government under Djuanda Kartawidjaja. At the end of 1957, in a series of direct actions across the country, Dutch property was seized as part of a campaign for the recovery of western New Guinea, which the Dutch had retained even after formally granting Indonesia independence; the Indonesian government in due course took over the operation of the confiscated Dutch enterprises. The army itself was drawn into the management of estates, and military entrepreneurs came, in time, to play a continuing economic role.

nder the 1945 constitution, Sukarno possessed executive responsibility as well as ceremonial functions as head of state. He quickly created a new government with Djuanda Kartawidjaja, now prime minister, at its head. Pending elections under a new electoral law, he appointed (in accordance with the functional representation principle) members of the legislative bodies required by the constitution: the People's Consultative Assembly (Majelis Permusyawaratan Rakyat; MPR) and the Supreme Advisory Council (Dewan Pertimbangan Agung; DPA). In 1960, when the MPR rejected the government's budget, he replaced it with a provisional nominated parliament.

Sukarno's central purpose was the preservation of the country's unity and the restoration of a sense of national identity, goals he pursued through an increasingly flamboyant style. Sukarno's concern with symbols of greatness-expressed in grandiose buildings, national monuments, evocative slogans, and prestigious acts such as the hosting of the Fourth Asian Games (1962)-was not accompanied by an attempt to come to grips with the country's economic problems. The damage done to the economy by the seizure of Dutch enterprises in 1957 and by the extravagances of his later search for grandeur was justified in his eyes as integral to the task of making Indonesians proud of themselves and of their independence. Nevertheless, he was evidently oblivious to the economic consequences of his policies, showing no recognition of foreign indebtedness, declining exports, or accelerating inflation in the early 1960s.

In 1962 Indonesia's campaign to recover western New Guinea achieved final success. An agreement was reached with The Netherlands for the transfer of the territory to Indonesia after a period of UN administration-but with the provision that the inhabitants of the territory make an Act of Free Choice before the end of 1969 regarding their inclusion in the republic. This choice was eventually made by representative councils, which confirmed the continuance of western New Guinea (Papua)-renamed Irian Barat (West Irian)-as part of Indonesia.

The resolution of this issue was followed by the development of Indonesia's opposition to the formation of Malaysia and its commitment, after an erratic series of changes of mood, to a policy of “confrontation” toward the new Malaysian federation in September 1963. The confrontation policy was followed by Indonesia’s sudden withdrawal from the UN in January 1965 in reaction to the seating of Malaysia on the UN Security Council.

The Truman Letter Oped

“There is something about the way the CIA has been functioning that is casting a shadow over our historic position and I feel that we need to correct it.” President Harry S. Truman wrote those words in an op-ed for the Washington Post on Dec.22, 1963, entitled “Limit CIA Role to Intelligence.”

This was exactly one month after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and a bit more than 10 years before the formation of the Church Committee, chaired by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, to study abuses in the intelligence committee (which was a precursor to today's permanent Senate Select Committee on Intelligence). Now, more than 50 years after Truman's op-ed, the intelligence committee has released a report investigating the CIA's use of torture in the years after 9/11. https://www.usnews.com/opinion/blogs/peter-fenn/2015/01/28/truman-was-right-to-warn-against-cia-power

> For some time I have been disturbed by the way CIA has been diverted from its original assignment. It has become an operational and at times a policy-making arm of the Government. This has led to trouble and may have compounded our difficulties in several explosive areas.
> I never had any thought that when I set up the CIA that it would be injected into peacetime cloak and dagger operations. Some of the complications and embarrassment I think we have experienced are in part attributable to the fact that this quiet intelligence arm of the President has been so removed from its intended role that it is being interpreted as a symbol of sinister and mysterious foreign intrigue-and a subject for cold war enemy propaganda.

With all the nonsense put out by Communist propaganda about “Yankee imperialism,” “exploitive capitalism,” “war-mongering,” “monopolists,” in their name-calling assault on the West, the last thing we needed was for the CIA to be seized upon as something akin to a subverting influence in the affairs of other people.

I well knew the first temporary director of the CIA, Adm. Souers, and the later permanent directors of the CIA, Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg and Allen Dulles. These were men of the highest character, patriotism and integrity-and I assume this is true of all those who continue in charge.

But there are now some searching questions that need to be answered. I, therefore, would like to see the CIA be restored to its original assignment as the intelligence arm of the President, and that whatever else it can properly perform in that special field-and that its operational duties be perminated or properly used elsewhere.

We have grown up as a nation, respected for our free institutions and for our ability to maintain a free and open society. There is something about the way the CIA has been functioning that is casting a shadow over our historic position and I feel that we need to correct it.

Eisenhower's farewell address (sometimes referred to as "Eisenhower's farewell address to the nation"[1]) was the final public speech of Dwight D. Eisenhower as the 34th president of the United States, delivered in a television broadcast on January 17, 1961. (GOP) and upon Nixon losing to JFK.

"Now this conjunction of an immense military establishment and a large arms industry is new in the American experience. The total influence-economic, political, even spiritual-is felt in every city, every Statehouse, every office of the Federal government. We recognize the imperative need for this development. Yet, we must not fail to comprehend its grave implications. Our toil, resources, and livelihood are all involved. So is the very structure of our society.

"In the councils of government, we must guard against the acquisition of unwarranted influence, whether sought or unsought, by the military-industrial complex. The potential for the disastrous rise of misplaced power exists and will persist. We must never let the weight of this combination endanger our liberties or democratic processes. We should take nothing for granted. Only an alert and knowledgeable citizenry can compel the proper meshing of the huge industrial and military machinery of defense with our peaceful methods and goals, so that security and liberty may prosper together. These officials were part of a long running plan started under Jospeh Kennedy Sr. JFK seems to have been fighting at least from one weak after November 18, 1961, that next week is when many of the CIA were fired and of course Bush lingered on and was at the Dealey Plaza.

On April 17, 1961, 1,400 Cuban exiles launched what became a botched invasion at the Bay of Pigs on the south coast of

From President to Ambassador, Cabinet Officer to Commanding General, and from Senator to executive assistant-all these men have their sources of information and guidance. Most of this information and guidance is the result of carefully laid schemes and ploys of pressure groups. In this influential coterie one of the most interesting and effective roles is that played by the behind the scenes, faceless, nameless, ubiquitous briefing officer.

He is the man who sees the President, the Secretary, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff almost daily, and who carries with him the most skillfully detailed information. He is trained by years of experience in the precise way to present that information to assure its effectiveness. He comes away day after day knowing more and more about the man he has been briefing and about what it is that the truly influential pressure groups at the center of power and authority are really trying to tell these key decision makers. In Washington, where such decisions shape and shake the world, the role of the regular briefing officer is critical.

The briefing officer reads all of the messages, regardless of classification. He talks to a number of other highly qualified men. He may even have staff specialists spread out all over the world upon whom he may call at any time for information. Working in support of the “Focal Point” office, which I headed, there were hundreds of experts and agents concealed in military commands throughout the world who were part of a network I had been directed to establish in 1955-1956 as a stipulation of National Security Council directive 5412, March 1954. In government official writing, the man who really writes the paper-or more properly, the men whose original work and words are put together to become the final paper-are rarely, if ever, the men whose names appear on that paper. A paper attributed to Maxwell Taylor, Robert McNamara or Dean Rusk, of the Kennedy era, would not, in almost all instances, have been written by them; but more than likely would have been assembled from information gathered from the Departments of Defense and State and from CIA sources and put into final language by such a man as General Victor H. Krulak, who was among the best of that breed of official writers. From 1955 through 1963, if some official wanted a briefing on a highly classified subject involving the CIA, I would be one of those called upon to prepare the material and to make the briefing. At the same time, if the CIA wanted support from the Air Force for some covert operation, I was the officer who had been officially designated to provide this special operational support to the CIA.

Leaders of government and of the great power centers regularly leak information of all kinds to columnists, television and radio commentators, and to other media masters with the hope that the material will surface and thus influence the President, the Secretary, the Congress, and the public. Those other inside pressure groups with their own briefing officers have direct access to the top men; they do not have to rely upon the media, although they make great use of it. They are safe and assured in the knowledge that they can get to the decision maker directly. They need no middleman other than the briefing officer. Such departments as Defense, State, and the CIA use this technique most effectively.

For nine consecutive, long years during those crucial days from 1955 through January 1, 1964, I was one of those briefing officers. I had the unique assignment of being the “Focal Point” officer for contacts between the CIA and the Department of Defense on matters pertaining to the military support of the Special Operations2 of that Agency. In that capacity I worked with Allen Dulles and John Foster Dulles, several Secretaries of Defense, and Chairmen of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, as well as many others in key governmental places. My work took me to more than sixty countries and to CIA offices and covert activities all over the world-from such hot spots as Saigon and to such remote places as the South Pole. Yes, there have been secret operations in Antarctica.

It was my job not only to brief these men, but to brief them from the point of view of the CIA so that I might win approval of the projects presented and of the accompanying requests for support from the military in terms of money, manpower, facilities, and materials. I was, during this time, perhaps the best informed “Focal Point” officer among the few who operated in this very special area. The role of the briefing officer is quiet, effective, and most influential; and, in the CIA, specialized in the high art of top level indoctrination.

It cannot be expected that a John Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, a Richard Nixon, or a following President will have experienced and learned all the things that may arise to confront him during his busy official life in the White House. It cannot be expected that a Robert McNamara or a Melvin Laird, a Dean Rusk or a William Rogers, etc. comes fully equipped to high office, aware of all matters pertaining to what they will encounter in their relationship with the Congo or Cuba, Vietnam or Pakistan, and China or Russia and the emerging new nations. These men learn about these places and the many things that face them from day to day from an endless and unceasing procession of briefing officers. Henry Kissinger was a briefing officer. General John Vogt was one of the best. Desmond Fitzgerald, Tracy Barnes, Ed Lansdale, and “Brute” Krulak, in their own specialties, were top-flight briefing officers on subjects that until the publication of the “Pentagon Papers,” few people had ever seen in print or had ever even contemplated.

Yet many did come from the Cabal, and the Family Jewels Briefings given to the President (or also or instead to the NSC head Vice President such as 1950's Richard Nixon) were aware of Nation-State plans made by high power elites and wanted updates as to how plans for Indonesia, Cuba, or Guatemala were coming along in the field.

And it was the overthrow and subversion scheme that Nixon was the public official face of that assassinated JFK to keep the plan running. In the Caribbean.

I believe in All the CIA's men were Prescott Bush, LBJ, Nixon, Ted Cruz Senior, Mr George H.W. Bush and Thomas Devine of Zapata Petroleum and others. All were in the subversion plan using assets like Lee Harvey Oswald, Chauncey Marvin Holt, and others including (by blackmail) the Donegan family and Glorian Gainey.

Most of the activities of Nixon as he entered politics were forming policy on open and covert aid to nations following the end of WWII. In 1958 he was working on retaking Indonesia. I Ed Donegan think JFK was going to get in the way of that and other Nixon planning.

After dischard from WWII Nixon ran for and won a Los Angeles California area US House of Representatives seat. As an anti-communist he helped form (with Allen Dulles and others) the Post WWII Marshall Plan. In 1953 he is added as Vice President to the Eisenhower ticket and the two win the general election. As Eisenhower retires in 1960 Nixon is defeated for President by JFK and shortly after loses the Governor of California race in 1962 to Pat Brown

Which president of the united states was employed by pepsi-cola?

Richard Nixon, the 37th President of the United States, was employed by Pepsi-Cola.

Before his presidency, Richard Nixon worked as a legal counsel for Pepsi-Cola in the late 1950s. He played a significant role in the company's international expansion during that time. There has never been a president of the United States who worked for Pepsi-Cola. However, there have been several politicians who have had ties to the company, such as former Vice President Al Gore, who served on the board of directors for PepsiCo from 2007 to 2013. Additionally, former PepsiCo CEO Donald Kendall was a close friend and supporter of President Ronald Reagan. Haileystdd2298 https://brainly.com/question/32546522

The 1962 California gubernatorial election was held on November 6, 1962. The Democratic incumbent, Pat Brown, ran for re-election against former U.S. vice president and 1960 Republican presidential nominee Richard Nixon. In his concession speech the following morning, Nixon accused the media of favoring his opponent Brown, stating that it was his "last press conference" and "You won't have Nixon to kick around any more." Six years later, Nixon was elected President of the United States, and exactly ten years after this press conference he was re-elected in a landslide.

Richard Nixon was added onto the GOP Grand Old Party or Republican Party) of the US political system in a backroom deal. With Richard Nixon a Vice President to General Eisenhower (who was a respected military figure with far less political industrialist freinds) came backing in the General Election for President and Vice President of the United States.

Richard Nixon I think was born into a Rosecurian type family like I think Geral Ford was but that can be hard to prove. I know little of Lieutenant Commander Richard Nixon in the US Navy during WWII but I do know upon discharge at the end of the war he was part of the CIA and propaganda operations that operated out of Hollywood and in the US Congress where the former Navy officer was elected to (then District 12 of the US House of Representatives in the Los Angeles area) and that area was full of military industrial complex.

IN Congress he had a role with the Marshall Plan and Averell Harriman in shaping US Post War policy to gel the war torn world back into a form it had existed before the war and in the Establishment Mind that meant British influences around the world and regaining control of satelite nations as Great Britain was waning as a worl power dispite having been the last stand against the Nazis who rallied the rest of the world into that fight.

The laws creating the CIA and US national security structure were influenced by Congressman Nixon and Nixon travelled with Allen Dulles and others to survey the post war European continent and make plans with the British.

When he was added onto the Eisenhower ticket as V.P. his new job came with the position the legislation he worked on created, head of the National Security Council that was a near Unitary Executive secret war making power base with its own funding, military and declarations of cover-war from the findings it made about national security threats that needed to be pre-empted James Bond style.

The British had one additional complication. Great Britain uses its public figures as what other countries use the flags for, a source of identity and patriotic ideal. The British had a genetic flaw puttnig that at risk and using secretly observed out of wedlock genetic base of the Windsors in sleep-agent positions gave them via their bastard children (like Marilyn Monroe) a study into themselves from generation to generation, and also a source of Free Mason like Houses that could have secretive ties among them as a covert networked power base that the general public would resent if they knew about.

The Central Intelligence Agency (per Jim Garrison in On The Trail of the Assassins) were enamored with the royality and and the riches of elites and their world power and worked closely with them. JFK tried to interrupt this but was assainsate by the Cabal. As LBJ had (like Nixon) been in on the oil businesses dirty deeds world-wide, and resented the Vatican, The Murder Inc., plans had been part of LBJs National Security work as well when he served under JFK and before when LBJ was in the Senate working with Dulles and many others planning the overthrow of Indonesia and other nations.

After the assassination of JFK Nixon had much to worry about. The assassination was in part by Nixon and Twombly who was also connected to Coca-Cola (who nothing suggests had a criminal role) though with Clay Shaw Trade Mart the picture is similar. Nixon suspected his far-right backers had killed JFK and Nixon was among them in Dallas then as was George H. W. Bush and many others like E. Howard Hunt. These CIA Dallas operatives later under Nixon became a risk to Nixon as they started to talk or were at risk to do so. William Colby had fired James Angleton, the main remaining CIA operative of the Shadow Government, J. Edgar Hoover had died, and the New York Times and others were running exposes. Trying to preempt the role of the CIA in JFK's death became the next Richard Nixon task and he was impeached during his efforts. During that time Paymaster Dorothy Hunt was on a plane shot down or sabotaged by the CIA per Prouty and many others.

The immediate cover-up attempts cost Nixon is next election, but more continues to leak out. Mike Pence I believe is the new Richard Nixon Globalist who as weaponized a strange mix of assailants smear me. I think this is the ongoing coverup run by globalists.

Prouty who could (following the assassination of JFK) could only get his articles publish on the assassination of JFK i Gallery (an adult magazine some read for the articles) believed the CIA and even George H.W. Bush were involve in the assassination of JFK. While the Bush family won the war Prouty won the facts and more is now being learned about those two regime changers of MK-ULTRA in the Cold War.

Col Fletcher Prouty was an Army Air Corp pilot (thus Colonel) before the US Army Air Force became the US Air Force but after it was the Army Air Corp or something like that.

The far right conservative ghost wrote opinion pieces for allies like William F. Buckley and like most all of his time he was anti-communist. His anti-communist allies included John F. Kennedy also of Roman Catholic Boston area and others.

Like Roger Stone (another life long Grand Old Party member) Prouty suspected George H.W. Bush and Zapata Oil in the assassination of JFK. He also suspected General Edward Lansdale as being a part of it, he was sure he saw a picture he and others could place Lansdale in along with the Hobos in the Train-yard at Dealy Plaza on the other side of the Grassy Knoll from where JFK was hit with gunfire.

The background of Prouty to believe the CIA killed JFK is multi-point. Prouty as an Air Force Officer had been assigned to get Pentagon (Office of Special Operations of the Pentagon) military hardware assets to the CIA. According to Prouty the destination these were being sent to included the Barbara and Houston, where the Bush family had Zapata Oil located (and founded by Thomas J. Devine of the CIA) and the Operation Name the CIA gave the anti-Castro operation for the Bay of Pigs was Operation Zapata. Who could have run such an operation?

Prouty was well trained in assassinations. He suspected a team of assassins had stabilized JFK with a paralyzing fetch from an umbrella and Prouty said such devices were shown to him in his office in the Pentagon that the CIA had in use. Prouty was in insider to the plans of the CIA without being a principle of them. Prouty would be called to the house of Allen Dulles of the CIA and meet with him in his home at times, per his CV that we should likely believe.

Prouty as USAAF shared his Office of of Special Operations with Lansdale and like with Dulles knew Lansdale well and lived in the same area of D.C., used the same bank they would encounter each other in, etc., In addition to the two being partners in that role in the same small office they had related personnel in common such as General Charles Cabell brother of Earl Cabell (the mayor of Dallas) who had arranged a letter of commendation for Prouty.

In this tight community of people some level of awareness even at the most vague levels is inevitable and Prouty likely had a real feel for the assassination and its bizarre and strange factors the led Prouty to do extremely detailed forensic analysis (The Guns of Dallas) and reporting on Dealy Plaza and the available information he had to him having not been there.

Prouty and many were ATSUGI Japan together in 1951 and on as the Berlin Wall went up and the Cold War truly began. My father James Paul Donegan was still in the Air Force after the atomic bombing of Japan he was in the first and second air wing of (one for each bomb drop) and then in the Korean War and as a front line interceptor from Russia airspace flew through the mid 1950's and I think was tied to Howard Hughes, Robert Mahue, and others in the secret airbase work and the Inglewood North American Aviation story of the P-51 and Packard Motors production of the Merlin Rollsy Royce engine also tied to RFK and Robert Schrade. I have suspected my father and Prouty worked together (and maybe Chauncey Marvin Holt) on getting the story documented but still parts hidden.

The fact that my father was flying RECON missions from this location also tie him to Robert Lover and Richard Bissle Jr., the later fired by JFK and I think both tied to the JFK and RFK assassinations.

CHAPTER VIII-b - THE BAY OF PIGS AND THE KENNEDY ASSASSINATION George Bush: The Unauthorized Biography by Webster G. Tarpley and Anton Chaitkin

"...JM/WAVE ...proliferated across [Florida] in preparation for the Bay of Pigs invasion. A subculture of fronts, proprietaries, suppliers, transfer agents, conduits, dummy corporations, blind drops, detective agencies, law firms, electronic firms, shopping centers, airlines, radio stations, the mob and the church and the banks: a false and secret nervous system twitching to stimuli supplied by the cortex in Clandestine Services in Langley. After defeat on the beach in Cuba, JM/WAVE became a continuing and extended Miami Station, CIA's largest in the continental United States. A large sign in front of the [...] building complex reads: US GOVERNMENT REGULATIONS PROHIBIT DISCUSSION OF THIS ORGANIZATION OR FACILITY.

Donald Freed, Death in Washington (Westport, Connecticut, 1980), p. 141.

The review offered so far of George Bush's activities during the late 1950's and early 1960's is almost certainly incomplete in very important respects. There is good reason to believe that Bush was engaged in something more than just the oil business during those years. Starting about the time of the Bay of Pigs invasion in the spring of 1961, we have the first hints that Bush, in addition to working for Zapata Offshore, may also have been a participant in certain covert operations of the US intelligence community.

Such participation would certainly be coherent with George's role in the Prescott Bush, Skull and Bones, and Brown Brothers, Harriman networks. During the twentieth century, the Skull and Bones/Harriman circles have always maintained a sizable and often decisive presence inside the intelligence organizations of the State Department, the Treasury Department, the Office of Naval Intelligence, the Office of Strategic Services, and the Central Intelligence Agency. Indeed, the Harriman and related Anglophile financier factions of Wall Street have generally regarded those parts of the state apparatus dealing with intelligence and covert operations as their own very special property, property which had to be kept seeded with control networks in order to be effectively steered from above. For George Bush to interface with the intelligence community while ostensibly engaged in his business career would be coherent with that well-established pattern.

A body of leads has been assembled which suggests that George Bush may have been associated with the CIA at some time before the autumn of 1963. According to Joseph McBride of The Nation, "a source with close connections to the intelligence community confirms that Bush started working for the agency in 1960 or 1961, using his oil business as a cover for clandestine activities." 1 By the time of the Kennedy assassination, we have an official FBI document which refers to "Mr. George Bush of the Central Intelligence Agency," and despite official disclaimers there is every reason to think that this is indeed the man in the White House today. The mystery of George Bush as a possible covert operator hinges on four points, each one of which represents one of the great political and espionage scandals of postwar American history. These four cardinal points are:

1. The abortive Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba, launched on April 16-17, 1961, prepared with the assistance of the CIA's "Miami Station" (also known under the code name JM/WAVE). After the failure of the amphibious landings of Brigade 2506, Miami station, under the leadership of Theodore Shackley, became the focus for Operation Mongoose, a series of covert operations directed against Castro, Cuba, and possibly other targets.

2. The assassination of President John F. Kennedy in Dallas on November 22, 1963, and the coverup of those responsible for this crime.

3. The Watergate scandal, beginning with an April, 1971 visit to Miami, Florida by E. Howard Hunt on the tenth anniversary of the Bay of Pigs invasion to recruit operatives for the White House Special Investigations Unit (the "Plumbers" and later Watergate burglars) from among Cuban-American Bay of Pigs veterans.

4. The Iran-contra affair, which became a public scandal during October-November 1986, several of whose central figures, such as Felix Rodriguez, were also veterans of the Bay of Pigs.

George Bush's role in both Watergate and the October surprise/Iran-contra complex will be treated in detail at later points in this book. Right now it is important to see that thirty years of covert operations, in many respects, form a single continuous whole. This is especially true in regard to the dramatis personae. Georgie Anne Geyer points to the obvious in a recent book: "...an entire new Cuban cadre now emerged from the Bay of Pigs. The names Howard Hunt, Bernard Barker, Rolando Martinez, Felix Rodriguez and Eugenio Martinez would, in the next quarter century, pop up, often decisively, over and over again in the most dangerous American foreign policy crises. There were Cubans flying missions for the CIA in the Congo and even for the Portuguese in Africa; Cubans were the burglars of Watergate; Cubans played key roles in Nicaragua, in Irangate, in the American move into the Persian Gulf." 2 Felix Rodriguez tells us that he was infiltrated into Cuba with the other members of the "Grey Team" in conjunction with the Bay of Pigs landings; this is the same man we will find directing the contra supply effort in central American during the 1980's, working under the direct supervision of Don Gregg and George Bush. 3 Theodore Shackley, the JM/WAVE station chief, will later show up in Bush's 1979-80 presidential campaign.

To a very large degree, such covert operations (and the great political scandals attendant upon them) have drawn upon the same pool of personnel. They are a significant extent the handiwork of the same crowd. It is therefore revealing to extrapolate forward and backward in time the individuals and groups of individuals who appear as the cast of characters in one scandal and compare them with the cast of characters for the other scandals, including the secondary ones that have not been enumerated here. Howard Hunt, for example, shows up as a confirmed part of the overthrow of the Guatemalan government of Jacopo Arbenz in 1954, as an important part of the chain of command in the Bay of Pigs, as a person repeatedly accused of having been in Dallas on the day Kennedy was shot, and as one of the central figures of Watergate. (One wonders what secrets, after all, were contained in Howard Hunt's safe, the contents of which were so conventiently "deep sixed" by FBI Director Patrick Gray.)

George Bush is demonstrably one of the most important protagonists of the Watergate scandal, and was the overall director of Iran-contra. Since he appears especially in Iran-contra in close proximity to Bay of Pigs holdovers, it is surely legitimate to wonder when his association with those Bay of Pigs Cubans might have started.

1959 was the year that Bush started operating out of his Zapata Offshore headquarters in Houston; it was also the year that Fidel Castro seized power in Cuba. Officially, as we have seen, George was now a businessman whose work took him at times to Louisiana, where Zapata had offshore drilling operations. George must have been a frequent visitor to New Orleans. Because of his family's estate on Jupiter Island, he would also have been a frequent visitor to the Hobe Sound area. And then, there were Zapata Offshore drilling operations in the Florida Strait. On all of these activities, the official "red Studebaker" biographical material and the Zapata Offshore annual reports are extremely cryptic.

The Jupiter Island connection and father Prescott's Brown Brothers, Harriman/Skull and Bones networks are doubtless the key. Jupiter Island meant Averell Harriman, Robert Lovett, C. Douglas Dillon and other Anglophile financiers who had directed the US intelligence community long before there had been a CIA at all. And, in the back yard of the Jupiter Island Olympians, and under their direction, a powerful covert operations base was now being assembled, in which George Bush would have been present at the creation as a matter of birthright.

During 1959-60, Allen Dulles and the Eisenhower Administration began to assemble in south Florida the infrastructure for covert action against Cuba. This was the JM/WAVE capability, later formally constituted as the CIA Miami station. JM/WAVE was an operational center for the Eisenhower regime's project of staging an invasion of Cuba using a secret army of anti-Castro Cuban exiles organized, armed, trained, transported, and directed by the CIA. The Cubans, called Brigade 2506, were trained in secret camps in Guatemala, and they had air support from B-26 bombers based in Nicaragua. This invasion was crushed by Castro's defending forces in less than three days.

Before going along with the plan so eagerly touted by Allen Dulles, Kennedy had established the pre-condition that under no circumstances whatsoever would there be direct intervention by US military forces against Cuba. On the one hand, Dulles had assured Kennedy that the news of the invasion would trigger an insurrection which would sweep Castro and his regime away. On the other, Kennedy had to be concerned about provoking a global thermonuclear confrontation with the USSR, in the eventuality that N.S. Khrushchev decided to respond to a US Cuban gambit by, for example, cutting off US access to Berlin.

Hints of the covert presence of George Bush are scattered here and there around the Bay of Pigs invasion. According to some accounts, the code name for the Bay of Pigs was Operation Pluto. 4 But Bay of Pigs veteran Howard Hunt scornfully denies that this was the code name used by JM/WAVE personnel; Hunt writes: "So perhaps the Pentagon referred to the Brigade invasion as PLUTO. CIA did not." 5 But Hunt does not tell us what the CIA code name was, and the contents of Hunt's Watergate era White House safe, which might have told us the answer, were of course "deep-sixed" by FBI Director Patrick Gray. One code name frequently used by CIA Miami Station personnel appears to have been "Don Eduardo," roughly the Spanish equivalent of "Mr. Edward" or perhaps "Mr. Ed." 6

According to reliable sources and published accounts, the CIA code name for the Bay of Pigs invasion was Operation Zapata, and the plan was so referred to by Richard Bissell of the CIA, one of the plan's promoters, in a briefing to President Kennedy in the Cabinet Room on March 29, 1961. 7 Does Operation Zapata have anything to do with Zapata Offshore? The run-of-the-mill Bushman might respond that Emiliano Zapata, after all, had been a public figure in his own right, and the subject of a recent Hollywood movies starring Marlon Brando. As J. Hugh Liedtke had observed, he was the classic figure for the revolutionary-cum-bandit. A more knowledgeable Bushman might argue that the main landing beach, the Playa Giron, is located south of the city of Cienfuegos on the Zapata Peninula, on the south coast of Cuba.

Then there is the question of the Brigade 2506 landing fleet, which was composed of five older freighters bought or chartered from the Garcia Steamship Lines, bearing the names of Houston, Rio Esondido, Caribe, Atlantic, and Lake Charles. In addition to these vessels, which were outfitted as transport ships, there were two somewhat better armed fire support ships, the Blagar and the Barbara. (In some sources Barbara J.) 8 The Barbara was originally an LCI (Landing Craft Infantry) of earlier vintage. Our attention is attracted at once to the Barbara and the Houston, in the first case because we have seen George Bush's habit of naming his combat aircraft after his wife, and, in the second case, because Bush was at this time a resident, booster, and Republican activist of Houston, Texas. But of course, the appearance of names like "Zapata," Barbara, and Houston can by itself only arouse suspicion, and proves nothing.

After the ignominious defeat of the Bay of Pigs invasion, there was great animosity against Kennedy among the survivors of Brigade 2506, some of whom eventually made their way back to Miami after being released from Castro's prisoner of war camps. There was also great animosity against Kennedy on the part of the JM/WAVE personnel.

During the early 1950's, E. Howard Hunt had been the CIA station chief in Mexico City. As David Atlee Phillips (another embittered JM/WAVE veteran) tells us in his autobiographical account, The Night Watch, Howard Hunt had been the immediate superior of a young CIA recruit named William F. Buckley, the Yale graduate and Skull and Bones member who later founded the National Review. In his autobiographical account written during the days of the Watergate scandal, Hunt includes the following tirade about the Bay of Pigs:

No event since the communization of China in 1949 has had such a profound effect on the United States and its allies as the defeat of the US-trained Cuban invasion brigade at the Bay of Pigs in April 1961.

Out of that humiliation grew the Berlin Wall, the missile crisis, guerrilla warfare throughout Latin American and Africa, and our Dominican Republic intervention. Castros' beachhead triumph opened a bottomless Pandora's box of difficulties that affected not only the United States, but most of its allies in the Free World. These bloody and subversive events would not have taken place had Castro been toppled.

Instead of standing firm, our government pyramided crucially wrong decisions and allowed Brigade 2506 to be destroyed. The Kennedy administration yielded Castro all the excuse he needed to gain a tighter grip on the island of Jose Marti, then moved shamefacedly into the shadows and hoped the Cuban issue would simply melt away.9

Hunt was typical of the opinion that the debacle had been Kennedy's fault, and not the responsibility of men like Allen Dulles and Richard Bissell, who had designed it and recommended it. After the embarrassing failure of the invasion, which never evoked the hoped-for spontaneous anti-Castro insurrection, Kennedy fired Allen Dulles, his Harrimanite deputy Bissell, and CIA deputy Director Charles Cabell (whose brother was the mayor of Dallas at the time Kennedy was shot).

During the days after the Bay of Pigs debacle, Kennedy was deeply suspicious of the intelligence community and of proposals for military escalation in general, including in places like South Vietnam. Kennedy sought to procure an outside, expert opinion on military matters. For this he turned to the former commander in chief of the Southwest Pacific Theatre during World War II, General Douglas MacArthur. Almost ten years ago, a reliable source shared with one of the authors an account of a meeting between Kennedy and MacArthur in which the veteran general warned the young president that there were elements inside the US government who emphatically did not share his patriotic motives, and who were seeking to destroy his administration from within. MacArthur's warned that the forces bent on destroying Kennedy were centered in the Wall Street financial community and its various tentacles in the intelligence community.

It is a matter of public record that Kennedy met with MacArthur in the latter part of April, 1961, after the Bay of Pigs. According to Kennedy aide Theodore Sorenson, MacArthur told Kennedy, "The chickens are coming home to roost, and you happen to have just moved into the chicken house." 10 At the same meeting, according to Sorenson, MacArthur "warned [Kennedy] against the committment of American foot soldiers on the Asian mainland, and the President never forgot this advice." 11 This point is grudgingly confirmed by Arthur M. Schlesinger, a Kennedy aide who had a vested interest in vilifying MacArthur, who wrote that "MacArthur expressed his old view that anyone wanting to commit American ground forces to the mainland [of Asia] should have his head examined." 12 MacArthur restated this advice during a second meeting with Kennedy when the General returned from his last trip to the Far East in July, 1961.

Kennedy valued MacArthur's professional military opinion highly, and used it to keep at arms length those advisers who were arguing for escalation in Laos, Vietnam, and elsewhere. He repeatedly invited those who proposed to send land forces to Asia to convince MacArthur that this would as good idea. If they could convince MacArthur, then he, Kennedy, might also go along. At this time, the group proposing escalation in Vietnam (as well as preparing the assassination of President Diem) had a heavy Brown Brothers, Harriman/Skull and Bones overtone: the hawks of 1961-63 were Harriman, McGeorge Bundy, William Bundy, Henry Cabot Lodge, and some key London oligarchs and theoreticians of counterinsurgency wars. And of course, George Bush during these years was calling for escalation in Vietnam and challenging Kennedy to "muster the courage" to try a second invasion of Cuba. In the meantime, the JM/WAVE-Miami station complex was growing rapidly to become the largest of Langley's many satellites. Its center was at the former Richmond Naval Air Station south of Miami, which had been a base for antisubmarine blimps during World War II. During the years after the failure of the Bay of Pigs, this complex had as many as 3,000 Cuban agents and subagents, with a small army of case officers to direct and look after each one. According to one account, there were at least 55 dummy corporations to provide employment, cover, and commercial disguise for all these operatives. There were detective bureaus, gun stores, real estate brokerages, boat repair shops, and party boats for fishing and other entertainments. There was the clandestine Radio Swan, later renamed Radio Americas. There were fleets of specially modified boats based at Homestead Marina, and at other marinas throughout the Florida Keys. Agents were assigned to the University of Miami and other educational institutions.

The raison d'être of the massive capability commanded by Theodore Shackley was now Operation Mongoose, a program for sabotage raids and assassinations to be conducted on Cuban territory, with a special effort to eliminate Fidel Castro personally. In order to run these operations from US territory, flagrant and extensive violation of federal and state laws was the order of the day. Documents regarding the incorporation of businesses were falsified. Income tax returns were faked. FAA regulations were violated by planes taking off for Cuba or for forward bases in the Bahamas and elsewhere. Explosives moved across highways that were full of civilian traffic. The Munitions Act, the Neutrality Act, the customs and immigrations laws were routinely flaunted. 13 Above all, the drug laws were massively violated as the gallant anti-communist fighters filled their planes and boats with illegal narcotics to be smuggled back into the US when they returned from their missions. By 1963, the drug-running activities of the covert operatives were beginning to attract attention. JM/WAVE, in sum, accelerated the slide of south Florida towards the status of drug and murder capital of the United States it achieved during the 1980's, when it became as notorious as Chicago during Prohibition.

It cannot be the task of this study to even begin to treat the reasons for which certain leading elements of the Anglo-American financial oligarchy, perhaps acting with certain kinds of support from continental European aristocratic and neofascist networks, ordered the murder of John F. Kennedy. The British and the Harrimanites wanted escalation in Vietnam; by the time of his assassination Kennedy was committed to a pullout of US forces. Kennedy, as shown by his American University speech of 1963, was also interested in seeking a more stable path of war avoidance with the Soviets, using the US military superiority demonstrated during the Cuban missile crisis to convince Moscow to accept a policy of world peace through economic development. Kennedy was interested in the possibilities of anti-missile strategic defense to put an end to that nightmare of mutually assured destruction which appealed to Henry Kissinger, a disgruntled former employee of the Kennedy administration whom the president had denounced as a madman. Kennedy was considering moves to limit or perhaps abolish the usurpation of authority over the national currency by the Wall Street and London interests controlling the Federal Reserve System. If re-elected to a second term, Kennedy was likely to have re-asserted presidential control, as distinct from Wall Street control, over the intelligence community. There is good reason to believe that Kennedy would have ousted J. Edgar Hoover from his self-appointed life tenure at the FBI, subjecting that agency to presidential control for the first time in many years. Kennedy was committed to a vigorous expansion of the space program, the cultural impact of which was beginning to alarm the finance oligarchs. Above all, Kennedy was acting like a man who thought he was president of the United States, violating the collegiality of oligarchical trusteeship of that office that had been in force since the final days of Roosevelt. Kennedy furthermore had two younger brothers who might succeed him, putting a strong presidency beyond the control of the Eastern Anglophile Liberal Establishment for decades. George Bush joined in the Harrimanite opposition to Kennedy on all of these points.

After Kennedy was killed in Dallas on November 22, 1963, it was alleged that E. Howard Hunt and Frank Sturgis had both been present, possibly together, in Dallas on the day of the shooting, although the truth of these allegations has never been finally established. Both Hunt and Sturgis were of course Bay of Pigs veterans who would later appear center stage in Watergate. There were also allegations that Hunt and Sturgis were among a group of six to eight derelicts who were found in boxcars sitting on the railroad tracks behind the grassy knoll near Dealey Plaza, and who were rounded up and taken in for questioning by the Dallas police on the day of the assassination. Some suspected that Hunt and Sturgis had participated in the assassination. Some of these allegations were at the center of the celebrated 1985 defamation case of Hunt v. Liberty Lobby, in which a Florida federal jury found against Hunt. But, since the Dallas Police Department and County Sheriff never photographed or fingerprinted the "derelicts" in question, it has so far proven impossible definitively to resolve this question. But these allegations and theories about the possible presence and activities of Hunt and Sturgis in Dallas were sufficiently widespread so as to compel the Commission on CIA Activities Within the United States (the Rockefeller Commission) to attempt to refute them in its 1975

According to George Bush's official biography, he was during 1963 a well-to-do businessman residing in Houston, the busy president of Zapata Offshore and the chairman of the Harris County Republican Organization, supporting Barry Goldwater as the GOP's likely 1964 presidential candidate, while at the same time actively preparing his own 1964 bid for the US Senate. But during that same period of time, Bush may have shared some common acquaintances with Lee Harvey Oswald.

Between October, 1962 and April, 1963, Lee Harvey Oswald and his Russian wife Marina were in frequent contact with a Russian emigré couple living in Dallas: these were George de Mohrenschildt and his wife Jeanne. During the Warren Commission investigation of the Kennedy assassination, de Mohrenschildt was interviewed at length about his contacts with Oswald. When, in the spring of 1977, the discrediting of the Warren Commission report as a blatant coverup had made public pressure for a new investigation of the Kennedy assassination irresistible, the House Assassinations Committee planned to interview de Mohrenschildt once again. But in March, 1977, just before de Mohrenschildt was scheduled to be interviewed by Gaeton Fonzi of the House committee's staff, he was found dead in Palm Beach, Florida. His death was quickly ruled a suicide. One of the last people to see him alive was Edward Jay Epstein, who was also interviewing de Mohrenschildt about the Kennedy assassination for an upcoming book. Epstein is one of the writers on the Kennedy assassination who enjoyed excellent relations with the late James Angleton of the CIA. If de Mohrenschildt were alive today, he might be able to enlighten us about his relations with George Bush, and perhaps afford us some insight into Bush's activities during this epoch.

Jeanne de Mohrenschildt rejected the finding of suicide in her husband's death. "He was eliminated before he got to that committee," the widow told a journalist in 1978, "because someone did not want him to get to it." She also maintained that George de Mohrenschildt had been surreptitiously injected with mind-altering drugs. 15 After de Mohrenschildt's death, his personal address book was located, and it contained this entry: "Bush, George H.W. (Poppy) 1412 W. Ohio also Zapata Petroleum Midland." There is of course the problem of dating this reference. George Bush had moved his office and home from Midland to Houston in 1959, when Zapata Offshore was constituted, so perhaps this reference goes back to some time before 1959. There is also the number: "4-6355." There are, of course, numerous other entries, including one W.F. Buckley of the Buckley brothers of New York City, William S. Paley of CBS, plus many oil men, stock brokers, and the like. 16

George de Mohrenschildt recounted a number of different versions of his life, so it is very difficult to establish the facts about him. According to one version he was the Russian Count Sergei de Mohrenschildt, but when he arrived in the United States in 1938 he carried a Polish passport identifying him as Jerzy Sergius von Mohrenschildt, born in Mozyr, Russia in 1911. He may in fact have been a Polish officer, or a correspondent for the Polish News Service, or none of these. He worked for a time for the Polish embassy in Washington DC. Some say that de Mohrenschildt met the Chairman of Humble Oil, Blaffer, and that Blaffer procured him a job. Other sources say that during this time de Mohrenschildt was affiliated with the War Department. According to some accounts, he later went to work for the French Deuxième Bureau, which wanted to know about petroleum exports from the United States to Europe.

De Mohrenschildt in 1941 became associated with a certain Baron Konstantin von Maydell in a public affairs venture called "Facts and Film." Maydell was considered a Nazi agent by the FBI, and in September 1942 he was sent to North Dakota for an internment that would last four years. De Mohrenschildt was also reportedly in contact with Japanese networks at this time. In June, 1941, de Mohrenschildt was questioned by police at Port Arthur, Texas, on the suspicion of espionage after he was found making sketches of port facilities. During 1941 de Mohrenschildt applied for a post in the US Office of Strategic Services (OSS). According to the official account, he was not hired. Soon after he made the application, he went to Mexico where he stayed until 1944. In the latter year he established his name as de Mohrenschildt, jettisoning the German version of von Mohrenschildt, and began study for a master's degree in petroleum engineering at the University of Texas. According to some accounts, during this period de Mohrenschildt was investigated by the Office of Naval Intelligence because of alleged communist sympathies. After the war, de Mohrenschildt worked as a petroleum engineer in Cuba and Venezuela, and in Caracas he had several meetings with the Soviet ambassador. During the postwar years he also worked in the Rangely oil field in Colorado. During the 1950's, after having married Winifred Sharpless, the daughter of an oil millionaire, de Mohrenschildt was active as an independent oil entrepreneur.

In 1957, de Mohrenschildt was approved by the CIA Office of Security to be hired as a US government geologist for a mission to Yugoslavia. Upon his return he was interviewed by one J. Walter Moore of the CIA's Domestic Contact Service, with whom he remained in contact. During 1958, de Morhenschildt visited Ghana, Togo, Dahomey; during 1959 he visited Africa again and returned by way of Poland. In 1959 he married Jeanne, his fourth wife, a former ballet dancer and dress designer who had been born in Manchuria, where her father had been one of the directors of the Chinese Eastern Railroad. During the summer of 1960, George and Jeanne de Mohrenschildt told their friends that they were going to embark on a walking tour of 11,000 miles along Indian trails from Mexico to Central America. One of their principal destinations was Guatemala City, where they were staying at the time of the Bay of Pigs invasion in April, 1961, after which they made their way home by way of Panama and Haiti. After two months in Haiti, the Mohrenschildts returned to Dallas, where they came into contact with Lee Harvey Oswald, who had come back to the United States from his sojourn in the Soviet Union in June, 1962. By this time de Mohrenschildt was also frequenting Admiral Henry C. Bruton and his wife, to whom he introduced the Oswalds. Admiral Bruton was the former director of naval communications, and had superintended a comprehensive modernization and reorganization of the navy's means of keeping in touch with ships, planes, missiles, submarines, and the like.

It is established that between October, 1962 and late April, 1963, de Mohrenschildt was a very important figure in the life of Oswald and his Russian wife. Despite Oswald's lack of social graces, de Mohrenschildt introduced him into Dallas society, took him to parties, assisted him in finding employment, and much more. It was through de Mohrenschildt that Oswald met a certain Volkmar Schmidt, a young German geologist who had studied with Professor Wilhelm Kuetemeyer, an expert in psychosomatic medicine and religious philosophy at the University of Heidelberg, who compiled a detailed psychological profile of Oswald. Jeanne and George helped Marina move her belongings during one of her many estrangements from Oswald. According to some accounts, de Mohrenschildt's influence on Oswald was so great during this period that he could virtually dictate important decisions to the young ex-marine simply by making suggestions. Oswald was in awe of de Mohrenschildt, according to some.

According to some versions, de Mohrenschildt was aware of Oswald's alleged April 10, 1963 attempt to assassinate the well-known right-wing General Edwin Walker. According to Marina, de Mohrenschildt once asked Oswald, "Lee, how did you miss General Walker?" On April 19, George and Jeanne de Mohrenschildt went to New York City, and on April 29 the CIA Office of Security found that it had no objection to de Mohrenschildt's acceptance of a contract with the Duvalier regime of Haiti in the field of natural resource development. De Mohrenschildt appears to have departed for Haiti on May 1, 1963. In the meantime Oswald had left Dallas and traveled to New Orleans.

According to Mark Lane, "there is evidence that de Mohrenschildt served as a CIA control officer who directed Oswald's actions." Much of the extensive published literature on de Mohrenschildt converges on the idea that he was a baby sitter, handler, case officer, or control agent for Oswald on behalf of some intelligence agency. 17 De Mohrenschildt's pedigree evokes haunting parallels to the typical figures of the PERMINDEX networks of Georges Mandel, Ferenc Nagy, Max Hagerman, Max Seligman, Carlo d'Amelio, Lewis Mortimer Bloomfield, and Clay Shaw, to which public attention was called during the investigations of New Orleans district attorney James Garrison.

It is therefore highly interesting that George Bush's name turned up in the personal address book of George de Mohrenschildt. The Warren Commission went to absurd lengths to cover up the fact that George de Mohrenschildt was a denizen of the world of the intelligence agencies. This included ignoring the well-developed paper trial on de Mohrenschildt as Nazi and communist sympathizer, and later as a US asset abroad. The Warren Commission concluded:

The Commission's investigation has developed no signs of subversive or disloyal conduct on the part of either of the de Mohrenschildts. Neither the FBI, CIA, nor any witnesses contacted by the Commission has provided any information linking the de Mohrenschildts to subversive or extremist organizations. Nor has there been any evidence linking them in any way with the assassination of President Kennedy. 18

On the day of the Kennedy assassination, FBI records show George Bush as reporting a right-wing member of the Houston Young Republicans for making threatening comments about President Kennedy. According to FBI documents released under the Freedom of Information Act,

On November 22, 1963 Mr. GEORGE H.W. BUSH, 5525 Briar, Houston, Texas, telephonically advised that he wanted to relate some hear say that he had heard in recent weeks, date and source unknown. He advised that one JAMES PARROTT had been talking of killing the President when he comes to Houston.

PARROTT is possibly a student at the University of Houston and is active in politics in the Houston area.

According to related FBI documentation, "a check with Secret Service at Houston, Texas revealed that agency had a report that PARROTT stated in 1961 he would kill President Kennedy if he got near him." Here Bush is described as "a reputable businessman." FBI agents were sent to interrogate Parrott's mother, and later James Milton Parrott himself. Parrott had been discharged from the US Air Force for psychiatric reasons in 1959. Parrott had an alibi for the time of the Dallas shootings; he had been in the company of another Republican activist. According to press accounts, Parrott was a member of the right-wing faction of the Houston GOP which was oriented towards the John Birch Society and which opposed Bush's chairmanship. 19 According to the San Francisco Examiner, Bush's press office in August, 1988 first said that Bush had not made any such call, and challenged the authenticity of the FBI documents. Several days later Bush's spokesman said that the candidate "does not recall" placing the call.

One day later after he reported Parrott to the FBI, Bush received a highly sensitive, high-level briefing from the Bureau:

Date: November 29, 1963
To: Director

Bureau of Intelligence and Research
Department of State

From: John Edgar Hoover, Director
Subject: ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY NOVEMBER 22, 1963

Our Miami, Florida, Office on November 23, 1963 advised that the Office of Coordinator of Cuban Affairs in Miami advised that the Department of State feels some misguided anti-Castro group might capitalize on the present situation and undertake an unauthorized raid against Cuba, believing that the assassination of President John F. Kennedy might herald a change in US policy, which is not true.

Our sources and informants familiar with Cuban matters in the Miami area advise that the general feeling in the anti-Castro Cuban community is one of stunned disbelief and, even among those who did not entirely agree with the President's policy concerning Cuba, the feeling is that the President's death represents a great loss not only to the US but to all Latin America. These sources know of no plans for unauthorized action against Cuba.

An informant who has furnished reliable information in the past and who is close to a small pro-Castro group in Miami has advised that those individuals are afraid that the assassination of the President may result in strong repressive measures being taken against them and, although pro-Castro in their feelings, regret the assassination.

The substance of the foregoing information was orally furnished to Mr. George Bush of the Central Intelligence Agency and Captain William Edwards of the Defense Intelligence Agency on November 23, 1963, by Mr. W.T. Forsyth of this Bureau.

William T. Forsyth, since deceased, was an official of the FBI's Washington headquarters; during the time he was attached to the Bureau's subversive control section, he ran the investigation of Rev. Martin Luther King. Was he also a part of the FBI's harassment of Dr. King? The efforts of journalists to locate Captain Edwards have not been successful.

This FBI document identifying George Bush as a CIA agent in November, 1963 was first published by Joseph McBride in The Nation in July, 1988, just before Bush received the Republican nomination for president. McBride's source observed: "I know [Bush] was involved in the Caribbean. I know he was involved in the suppression of things after the Kennedy assassination. There was a very definite worry that some Cuban groups were going to move against Castro and attempt to blame it on the CIA." 20 When pressed for confirmation or denial, Bush's spokesman Stephen Hart commented: "Must be another George Bush." Within a short time the CIA itself would peddle the same damage control line. On July 19, 1988 in the wake of wide public attention to the report published in The Nation, CIA spokeswoman Sharron Basso departed from the normal CIA policy of refusing to confirm or deny reports that any person is or was a CIA employee. CIA spokeswoman Basso told the Associated press that the CIA believed that "the record should be clarified." She said that the FBI document "apparently" referred to a George William Bush who had worked in 1963 on the night shift at CIA headquarters, and that "would have been the appropriate place to have received such an FBI report." According to her account, the George William Bush in question had left the CIA to join the Defense Intelligence Agency in 1964.

For the CIA to volunteer the name of one of its former employees to the press was a shocking violation of traditional methods, which are supposedly designed to keep such names a closely guarded secret. This revelation may have constituted a violation of federal law. But no exertions were too great when it came to damage control for George Bush.

George William Bush had indeed worked for the CIA, the DIA, and the Alexandria, Virginia Department of Public Welfare before joining the Social Security Administration, in whose Arlington, Virginia office he was employed as a claims representative in 1988. George William Bush told The Nation that while at the CIA he was "just a lowly researcher and analyst" who worked with documents and photos and never received interagency briefings.

He had never met Forsyth of the FBI or Captain Edwards of the DIA. "So it wasn't me," said George William Bush. 21

Later, George William Bush formalized his denial in a sworn statement to a federal court in Washington, DC. The affidavit acknowledges that while working at CIA headquarters between September 1963 and February 1964, George William Bush was the junior person on a three to four man watch shift which was on duty when Kennedy was shot. But, as George William Bush goes on to say,

I have carefully reviewed the FBI memorandum to the Director, Bureau of Intelligence and Research, Department of State dated November 29, 1963 which mentions a Mr. George Bush of the Central Intelligence Agency....I do not recognize the contents of the memorandum as information furnished to me orally or otherwise during the time I was at the CIA. In fact, during my time at the CIA. I did not receive any oral communications from any government agency of any nature whatsoever. I did not receive any information relating to the Kennedy assassination during my time at the CIA from the FBI.

Based on the above, it is my conclusion that I am not the Mr. George Bush of the Central Intelligence Agency referred to in the memorandum. 22

So we are left with the strong suspicion that the "Mr. George Bush of the CIA" referred to by the FBI is our own George Herbert Walker Bush, who, in addition to his possible contact with Lee Harvey Oswald's controller, may thus also join the ranks of the Kennedy assassination cover-up. It makes perfect sense for George Bush to be called in on a matter involving the Cuban community in Miami, since that is a place where George has traditionally had a constituency. George inherited it from his father, Prescott Bush of Jupiter Island, and later passed it on to his own son, Jeb.

Prescott Sheldon Bush Sr. (May 15, 1895 - October 8, 1972) was an American banker and Republican Party politician.[1] After working as a Wall Street executive investment banker, he represented Connecticut in the United States Senate from 1952 to 1963. A member of the Bush family, he was the father of President George H. W. Bush, and the paternal grandfather of President George W. Bush and Florida Governor Jeb Bush.[2]

Born in Columbus, Ohio, Bush graduated from Yale College and served as an artillery officer during World War I. After the war, he worked for several companies, becoming a minor partner of the A. Harriman & Co. investment bank in 1931. He served in several high-ranking United States Golf Association offices, including president of that organization. Bush settled in Connecticut in 1925.

Prewscott Bush won election to the Senate in a 1952 special election, narrowly defeating Democratic nominee Abraham Ribicoff. In the Senate, Bush staunchly supported President Dwight D. Eisenhower and helped enact legislation to create the Interstate Highway System. Bush won re-election in 1956 but declined to seek re-election in 1962, retiring from the Senate the following year. [And was part of a loyal political and financial cadre the Windsor family and London banks had in the USA]

Bert Walker (father of Dorothy Walker) formally organized the W.A. Harriman & Co. private bank in November 1919. Walker became the bank's president and chief executive; Averell Harriman was chairman and controlling co-owner with his brother Roland ("Bunny"), Prescott Bush's close friend from Yale; and Percy Rockefeller was a director and a founding financial sponsor.

Perhaps it was as a birthday gift for George H.W. Bush, that "Bunny" Harriman stepped in to rescue his father (later Senator) Prescott Bush from oblivion, bringing him into the Harriman-controlled U.S. Rubber Co. in New York City. In 1925 the young family moved to the town where George was to grow up: Greenwich, Connecticut, a suburb both of New York and of New Haven/Yale.

Then on May 1, 1926, Prescott Bush joined W.A. Harriman & Co. as its vice president, under the bank's president, Bert Walker, his father-in-law and George's maternal grandfather--the head of the family.

Chapter -III- Race Hygiene: Three Bush Family Alliances

Let us now further inquire into the family background of our President, so as to help illustrate how the second quoted author, George Bush@s1 came to share the outlook of the first, Adolf Hitler.@s2

We shall examine here the alliance of the Bush family with three other families: Farish, Draper and Gray.

The private associations among these families have led to the President's relationship to his closest, most confidential advisers. These alliances were forged in the earlier Hitler project and its immediate aftermath. Understanding them will help us to explain George Bush's obsession with the supposed overpopulation of the world's non-Anglo-Saxons, and the dangerous means he has adopted to deal with this `` problem. "

Bush and Farish

When George Bush was elected Vice President in 1980, Texas mystery man William (`` Will ") Stamps Farish III took over management of all of George Bush's personal wealth in a `` blind trust. " Known as one of the richest men in Texas, Will Farish keeps his business affairs under the most intense secrecy. Only the source of his immense wealth is known, not its employment.@s3

Will Farish has long been Bush's closest friend and confidante. He is also the unique private host to Britain's Queen Elizabeth II: Farish owns and boards the studs which mate with the Queen's mares. That is her public rationale when she comes to America and stays in Farish's house. It is a vital link in the mind of our Anglophile President.

President Bush can count on Will Farish not to betray the violent secrets surrounding the Bush family money. For Farish's own family fortune was made in the same Hitler project, in a nightmarish partnership with George Bush's father.

On March 25, 1942, U.S. Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold announced that William Stamps Farish (grandfather of the President's money manager) had pled `` no contest " to charges of criminal conspiracy with the Nazis. Farish was the principal manager of a worldwide cartel between Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey and the I.G. Farben concern. The merged enterprise had opened the Auschwitz slave labor camp on June 14, 1940, to produce artificial rubber and gasoline from coal. The Hitler government supplied political opponents and Jews as the slaves, who were worked to near death and then murdered.

Arnold disclosed that Standard Oil of N.J. (later known as Exxon), of which Farish was president and chief executive, had agreed to stop hiding from the United States patents for artificial rubber which the company had provided to the Nazis.@s4

A Senate investigating committee under Senator (later U.S. President) Harry Truman of Missouri had called Arnold to testify at hearings on U.S. corporations' collaboration with the Nazis. The Senators expressed outrage at the cynical way Farish was continuing an alliance with the Hitler regime that had begun back in 1933, when Farish became chief of Jersey Standard. Didn't he know there was a war on?

The Justice Department laid before the committee a letter, written to Standard president Farish by his vice president, shortly after the beginning of World War II (Sept. 1, 1939) in Europe. The letter concerned a renewal of their earlier agreements with the Nazis:

Report on European Trip
Oct. 12, 1939
Mr. W.S. Farish
30 Rockefeller Plaza

Dear Mr. Farish: ... I stayed in France until Sept. 17th.... In England I met by appointment the Royal Dutch [Shell Oil Co.] gentlemen from Holland, and ... a general agreement was reached on the necessary changes in our relations with the I.G. [Farben], in view of the state of war.... [T]he Royal Dutch Shell group is essentially British.... I also had several meetings with ... the [British] Air Ministry....

I required help to obtain the necessary permission to go to Holland.... After discussions with the [American] Ambassador [Joseph Kennedy] ... the situation was cleared completely.... The gentlemen in the Air Ministry ... very kindly offered to assist me [later] in reentering England....

Pursuant to these arrangements, I was able to keep my appointments in Holland [having flown there on a British Royal Air Force bomber], where I had three days of discussion with the representatives of I.G. They delivered to me assignments of some 2,000 foreign patents and we did our best to work out complete plans for a modus vivendi which could operate through the term of the war, whether or not the U.S. came in.... [emphasis added]

Very truly yours, F[rank] A. Howard@s5

Here are some cold realities behind the tragedy of World War II, which help explain the Bush-Farish family alliance--and their peculiar closeness to the Queen of England:

- Shell Oil is principally owned by the British royal family. Shell's chairman, Sir Henri Deterding, helped sponsor Hitler's rise to power,@s6 by arrangement with the royal family's Bank of England Governor, Montagu Norman. Their ally Standard Oil would take part in the Hitler project right up to the bloody, gruesome end.

- When grandfather Farish signed the Justice Department's consent decree in March 1942, the government had already started picking its way through the tangled web of world-monopoly oil and chemical agreements between Standard Oil and the Nazis. Many patents and other Nazi-owned aspects of the partnership had been seized by the U.S. Alien Property Custodian.

Uncle Sam would not seize Prescott Bush's Union Banking Corporation for another seven months.

The Bush-Farish axis had begun back in 1929. In that year the Harriman bank bought Dresser Industries, supplier of oil-pipeline couplers to Standard and other companies. Prescott Bush became a director and financial czar of Dresser, installing his Yale classmate Neil Mahlon as chairman.@s7 George Bush would later name one of his sons after the Dresser executive.

William S. Farish was the main organizer of the Humble Oil Co. of Texas, which Farish merged into the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. Farish built up the Humble-Standard empire of pipelines and refineries in Texas.@s8

The stock market crashed just after the Bush family got into the oil business. The world financial crisis led to the merger of the Walker-Harriman bank with Brown Brothers in 1931. Former Brown partner Montagu Norman and his prote@aage@aa Hjalmar Schacht paid frantic visits to New York that year and the next, preparing the new Hitler regime for Germany.

William Stamps Farish III (born March 17, 1939) is an American businessman and a former US ambassador to the UK from 2001 until 2004.

Family and early life

Farish was an only child. His father, Army Lt. William Stamps Farish Jr., died in a training flight near Waxahachie, Texas, when he was 4 years old. His grandfather is William Stamps Farish II, the founder of Humble Oil and Refining Company, which struck oil in the Houston suburb Humble, part of what was later to become the Exxon behemoth. William Stamps Farish II was appointed chairman of Standard Oil by John D. Rockefeller and went on to become president of Standard Oil from 1937 to 1942. His other grandfather was Robert E. Wood, who was the chief executive officer of the Sears, Roebuck & Co. Wood was the leader in the Old Right movement from the 1920s through the 1960s as well as a key financial backer of the America First Committee. Farish grew up in Houston, where he attended St. John's School and, after graduating from South Kent School (CT) during 1958, graduated from the University of Virginia.

His mother, who before her marriage was Mary Wood, a daughter of Gen. Robert E. Wood of Chicago, was said to be close to George H. W. Bush (later 41st President of the United States) and Barbara Bush were very close friends. When Bush moved to Texas in 1948, it was the Farish connection that gave him his start in his career in the oil industry. Farish was taken in "almost like family," said Barbara Bush, while campaigning for George H. W. Bush's entrée into Washington Senatorial politics in 1964. During that unsuccessful campaign, Farish claimed to have been the first man to whom Bush confided his ultimate aim was to be president one day.

The Bush-Farish alliance dated back to 1929. In that year the Wall Street investment bank of W. Averell Harriman bought Dresser Industries (later Halliburton), a supplier of oil-pipeline to Standard Oil and other oil companies. Prescott Bush, George H. W. Bush's father was a Harriman and Company executive who became a director and financier of Dresser and he served on the board of directors for 22 years.

Career

He later served as President of Navarro Exploration Company. Farish was also a founding Director of Eurus, Inc., a bank holding company in New York as well as of Capital National Bank in Houston. Farish owns W.S. Farish & Co., a trust company based in Houston. In 2003, he was awarded an honorary Doctor of Laws from the University of Kentucky. He has served on the board of directors of Vaalco Energy Inc.

In 1966, he entered the Board of directors of Zapata Petroleum Company founded in 1953 by George H. W. Bush. Farish said to have been the first man to whom Bush confided his ambition to be president one day. Farish was George H. W. Bush's very first personal aide when he went into politics, and 28 years later, before the Bushes left the White House, his son, William Stamps Farish IV, also served in that position.

Farish was in the investment business. He owned the W.S. Farish & Co. investment firm, he managed the blind trust that Bush had to set up when he became vice-president in the Eighties. He had dealings in oil and gas exploration, mining, cattle ranching and local television stations.

Lane's End Farm

A breeder of thoroughbred racehorses, in 1979 Farish bought the 240 acres that had been Bosque Bonita Farm in Versailles, Kentucky. Over the years it would be expanded to 1,800-acre (7.3 km^2) and renamed Lane's End Farm.

He also owns a home in the horse community of Wellington, Florida.

Lane's End has a secondary 400-acre (1.6 km^2) operation near Hempstead, Texas. Farish's operations have bred and/or raced over 225 horses that became stakes winners, both individually and with partners. In 1972, his horse Bee Bee Bee won the Preakness Stakes and his filly Casual Look won a British Classic, the 2003 Epsom Oaks. In 1992, and again in 1999, he received the Eclipse Award for Outstanding Breeder. Farish has served as chairman of Churchill Downs, home to the Kentucky Derby.

Horse racing honors

In 1987 the Keeneland Association honored William S. Farish III with its Mark of Distinction for his contribution to Keeneland and the Thoroughbred industry.

In 2019, Farish was voted into the National Museum of Racing and Hall of Fame as one of its esteemed Pillars of the Turf.

With his wife, he was invited to ride in the King's procession at Royal Ascot 2023.

Ambassador to the U.K.

Farish was nominated by President George W. Bush as U.S. Ambassador to the United Kingdom on March 5, 2001, appointed on July 11, 2001, and served until he resigned in early summer 2004.[excessive citations]

The United Kingdom newspaper The Guardian commented on his low profile during the period leading up to the Iraq War. Christopher Meyer, who was British Ambassador to Washington during Farish's service, said that "as ambassador [Farish] proved as agreeable as he was invisible."

George Bush: The Unauthorized Biography --- by Webster G. Tarpley & Anton Chaitkin

Charpter - I - The House of Bush: Born in a Bank

Who is George Bush? How did he become the 41st U.S. President?

He is said to be a man of the "old establishment," who "chose to seek his fortune as an independent oilman...." @s1

In fact, Bush was never "independent." Every career step in his upward climb relied on his family's powerful associations. The Bush family joined the Eastern Establishment comparatively recently, and only as servitors. Their wealth and influence resulted from their loyalty to another, more powerful family, and their willingness to do anything to get ahead.

For what they did, Bush's forebears should have become very famous, or infamous. They remained obscure figures, managers from behind the scenes. But their actions--including his father's role as banker for Adolf Hitler--had tragic effects for the whole planet.

It was these services to his family's benefactors, which propelled George Bush to the top.

The Congress proceedings were dedicated to Averell Harriman's mother; she had paid for the founding of the race-science movement in America back in 1910, building the Eugenics Record Office as a branch of the Galton National Laboratory in London. She and other Harrimans were usually escorted to the horse races by old George Herbert Walker--they shared with the Bushes and the Farishes a fascination with `` breeding thoroughbreds " among horses and humans.@s1@s0

Prescott Goes to War

President George Herbert Walker Bush was born in 1924, the son of Prescott S. Bush and Dorothy Walker Bush. We will begin the George Bush story about a decade before his birth, on the eve of World War I. We will follow the career of his father, Prescott Bush, through his marriage with Dorothy Walker, on the path to fortune, elegance and power.

Prescott Bush entered Yale University in 1913. A native of Columbus, Ohio, Prescott had spent the last five years before college in St. George's Episcopal preparatory school in Newport, Rhode Island.

Prescott Bush's first college year, 1913, was also the freshman year at Yale for E. Roland ("Bunny") Harriman, whose older brother (Wm.) Averell Harriman had just graduated from Yale. This is the Averell Harriman who went on to fame as the U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union during World War II, as a governor of New York State, and as a presidential advisor who was greatly responsible for starting the Vietnam War.

The Harrimans would become the sponsors of the Bushes, to lift them onto the stage of world history.

In the spring of 1916, Prescott Bush and "Bunny" Harriman were chosen for membership in an elite Yale senior-year secret society known as Skull and Bones. This unusually morbid, death-celebrating group helped Wall Street financiers find active young men of "good birth" to form a kind of imitation British aristocracy in America.

World War I was then raging in Europe. With the prospect that the U.S.A. would soon join the war, two Skull and Bones "Patriarchs" , Averell Harriman (class of 1913) and Percy A. Rockefeller (class of 1900), paid special attention to Prescott's class of 1917. They wanted reliable cadres to help them play the Great Game, in the lucrative new imperial era that the war was opening up for London and New York moneycrats. Prescott Bush, by then a close friend of "Bunny" Harriman, and several other Bonesmen from their class of 1917 would later comprise the core partners in Brown Brothers Harriman, the world's largest private investment bank.

World War I did make an immense amount of money for the clan of stock speculators and British bankers who had just taken over U.S. industry. The Harrimans were stars of this new Anglo-American elite.

Averell's father, stock broker E.H. Harriman, had gained control of the Union Pacific Railroad in 1898 with credit arranged by William Rockefeller, Percy's father, and by Kuhn Loeb & Co.'s British-affiliated private bankers, Otto Kahn, Jacob Schiff and Felix Warburg.

William Rockefeller, treasurer of Standard Oil and brother of Standard founder John D. Rockefeller, owned National City Bank (later "Citibank") together with Texas-based James Stillman. In return for their backing, E.H. Harriman deposited in City Bank the vast receipts from his railroad lines. When he issued tens of millions of dollars of "watered" (fraudulent) railroad stock, Harriman sold most of the shares through the Kuhn Loeb company.

The First World War elevated Prescott Bush and his father, Samuel P. Bush, into the lower ranks of the Eastern Establishment.

As war loomed in 1914, National City Bank began reorganizing the U.S. arms industry. Percy A. Rockefeller took direct control of the Remington Arms company, appointing his own man, Samuel F. Pryor, as the new chief executive of Remington.

The U.S entered World War I in 1917. In the spring of 1918, Prescott's father, Samuel P. Bush, became chief of the Ordnance, Small Arms and Ammunition Section of the War Industries Board.@s2 The senior Bush took national responsibility for government assistance to and relations with Remington and other weapons companies.

This was an unusual appointment, as Prescott's father seemed to have no background in munitions. Samuel Bush had been president of the Buckeye Steel Castings Co. in Columbus, Ohio, makers of railcar parts. His entire career had been in the railroad business-- supplying equipment to the Wall Street-owned railroad systems.

The War Industries Board was run by Bernard Baruch, a Wall Street speculator with close personal and business ties to old E.H. Harriman. Baruch's brokerage firm had handled Harriman speculations of all kinds.@s3

In 1918, Samuel Bush became director of the Facilities Division of the War Industries Board. Prescott's father reported to the Board's Chairman, Bernard Baruch, and to Baruch's assistant, Wall Street private banker Clarence Dillon.

Robert S. Lovett, President of Union Pacific Railroad, chief counsel to E.H. Harriman and executor of his will, was in charge of national production and purchase "priorities" for Baruch's board.

With the war mobilization conducted under the supervision of the War Industries Board, U.S. consumers and taxpayers showered unprecedented fortunes on war producers and certain holders of raw materials and patents. Hearings in 1934 by the committee of U.S. Senator Gerald Nye attacked the "Merchants of Death" -- war profiteers such as Remington Arms and the British Vickers company -- whose salesmen had manipulated many nations into wars, and then supplied all sides with the weapons to fight them.

Percy Rockefeller and Samuel Pryor's Remington Arms supplied machine guns and Colt automatic pistols; millions of rifles to Czarist Russia; over half of the small-arms ammunition used by the Anglo-American allies in World War I; and 69 percent of the rifles used by the United States in that conflict.@s4

Samuel Bush's wartime relationship to these businessmen would continue after the war, and would especially aid his son Prescott's career of service to the Harrimans.

Most of the records and correspondence of Samuel Bush's arms- related section of the government have been burned, "to save space" in the National Archives. This matter of destroyed or misplaced records should be of concern to citizens of a constitutional republic. Unfortunately, it is a rather constant impediment with regard to researching George Bush's background: He is certainly the most "covert" American chief executive.

Now, arms production in wartime is by necessity carried on with great security precautions. The public need not know details of the private lives of the government or industry executives involved, and a broad interrelationship between government and private-sector personnel is normal and useful.

But during the period preceding World War I, and in the war years 1914-1917 when the U.S. was still neutral, interlocking Wall Street financiers subservient to British strategy lobbied heavily, and twisted U.S. government and domestic police functions. Led by the J.P. Morgan concern, Britain's overall purchasing agent in America, these financiers wanted a world war and they wanted the United States in it as Britain's ally. The U.S. and British arms companies, owned by these international financiers, poured out weapons abroad in deals not subject to the scrutiny of any electorate back home. The same gentlemen, as we shall see, later supplied weapons and money to Hitler's Nazis.

That this problem persists today, is in some respect due to the "control" over the documentation and the history of the arms traffickers.

World War I was a disaster for civilized humanity. It had terrible, unprecedented casualties, and shattering effects on the moral philosophy of Europeans and Americans.

But for a brief period, the war treated Prescott Bush rather well.

In June, 1918, just as his father took over responsibility for relations of the government with the private arms producers, Prescott went to Europe with the U.S. Army. His unit did not come near any fire until September. But on August 8, 1918, the following item appeared on the front page of Bush's home-town newspaper:

By 1919 Bert Walker had strong ties to the Guaranty Trust Company in New York and to the British-American banking house J.P. Morgan and Co. These Wall Street concerns represented all the important owners of American railroads: the Morgan partners and their associates or cousins in the intermarried Rockefeller, Whitney, Harriman and Vanderbilt families.

Bert Walker was known as the midwest's premier deal-arranger, awarding the investment capital of his international-banker contacts to the many railroads, utilities and other midwestern industries of which he and his St. Louis friends were executives or board members.

A Thoroughbred Marriage

Prescott Bush went to St. Louis to repair his troubled life. Sometime that same year, Averell Harriman made a trip there on a project which would have great consequences for Prescott. The 28- year-old Harriman, until then something of a playboy, wanted to bring his inherited money and contacts into action in the arena of world affairs.

President Theodore Roosevelt had denounced Harriman's father for "cynicism and deep-seated corruption" and called him an "undesirable citizen." @s9 For the still- smarting Averell to take his place among the makers and breakers of nations, he needed a financial and intelligence-gathering organization of his own. The man Harriman sought to create such an institution for him was Bert Walker, a Missouri stock broker and corporate wheeler- dealer.

George Herbert ("Bert") Walker, for whom President George H.W. Bush was named, did not immediately accept Harriman's proposal. Would Walker leave his little St. Louis empire, to try his influence in New York and Europe?

Bert was the son of a dry goods wholesaler who had thrived on imports from England.@s1@s0 The British connection had paid for Walker summer houses in Santa Barbara, California, and in Maine-- "Walker's Point" at Kennebunkport. Bert Walker had been sent to England for his prep school and college education.

By 1919 Bert Walker had strong ties to the Guaranty Trust Company in New York and to the British-American banking house J.P. Morgan and Co. These Wall Street concerns represented all the important owners of American railroads: the Morgan partners and their associates or cousins in the intermarried Rockefeller, Whitney, Harriman and Vanderbilt families.

Bert Walker was known as the midwest's premier deal-arranger, awarding the investment capital of his international-banker contacts to the many railroads, utilities and other midwestern industries of which he and his St. Louis friends were executives or board members.

Walker's operations were always quiet, or mysterious, whether in local or global affairs. He had long been the "power behind the throne" in the St. Louis Democratic Party, along with his crony, former Missouri Governor David R. Francis. Walker and Francis together had sufficient influence to select the party's candidates.@s1@s1

Back in 1904, Bert Walker, David Francis, Washington University President Robert Brookings and their banker/broker circle had organized a world's fair in St. Louis, the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. In line with the old Southern Confederacy family backgrounds of many of these sponsors, the fair featured a "Human Zoo" : live natives from backward jungle regions were exhibited in special cages under the supervision of anthropologist William J. McGee.

So Averell Harriman was a natural patron for Bert Walker. Bert shared Averell's passion for horse breeding and horse racing, and easily accommodated the Harriman family's related social philosophy. They believed that the horses and racing stables they owned showed the way toward a sharp upgrading of the human stock--just select and mate thoroughbreds, and spurn or eliminate inferior animals.

The First World War had brought the little St. Louis oligarchy into the Confederate-slaveowner-oriented administration of President Woodrow Wilson and his advisors, Col. Edward House and Bernard Baruch.

Walker's friend Robert Brookings got into Bernard Baruch's War Industries Board as director of national Price Fixing (sic). David R. Francis became U.S. ambassador to Russia in 1916. As the Bolshevik Revolution broke out, we find Bert Walker busy appointing people to Francis's staff in Petrograd.@s1@s2

Walker's earliest activities in relation to the Soviet state are of significant interest to historians, given the activist role he was to play there together with Harriman. But Walker's life is as covert as the rest of the Bush clan's, and the surviving public record is extremely thin.

The 1919 Versailles peace conference brought together British imperial strategists and their American friends to make postwar global arrangements. For his own intended international adventures, Harriman needed Bert Walker the seasoned intriguer, who quietly represented many of the British-designated rulers of American politics and finance.

After two persuasion trips west by Harriman,@s1@s3 Walker at length agreed to move to New York. But he kept his father's summer house in Kennebunkport, Maine.

Bert Walker formally organized the W.A. Harriman & Co. private bank in November 1919. Walker became the bank's president and chief executive; Averell Harriman was chairman and controlling co-owner with his brother Roland ("Bunny"), Prescott Bush's close friend from Yale; and Percy Rockefeller was a director and a founding financial sponsor.

In the autumn of 1919, Prescott Bush made the acquaintance of Bert Walker's daughter Dorothy. They were engaged the following year, and were married in August, 1921.@s1@s4 Among the ushers and grooms at the elaborate wedding were Ellery S. James, Knight Woolley and four other fellow Skull and Bonesmen from the Yale Class of 1917.@s1@s5 The Bush-Walker extended family has gathered each summer at the "Walker country home" in Kennebunkport, from this marriage of President Bush's parents down to the present day.

When Prescott married Dorothy, he was only a minor executive of the Simmons Co., railroad equipment suppliers, while his wife's father was building one of the most gigantic businesses in the world. The following year the couple tried to move back to Columbus, Ohio; there Prescott worked for a short time in a rubber products company owned by his father. But they soon moved again to Milton, Mass., after outsiders bought the little family business and moved it near there.

Thus Prescott Bush was going nowhere fast, when his son George Herbert Walker Bush--the future U.S. President--was born in Milton, Mass., on June 12, 1924.

Perhaps it was as a birthday gift for George, that "Bunny" Harriman stepped in to rescue his father Prescott from oblivion, bringing him into the Harriman-controlled U.S. Rubber Co. in New York City. In 1925 the young family moved to the town where George was to grow up: Greenwich, Connecticut, a suburb both of New York and of New Haven/Yale.

Then on May 1, 1926, Prescott Bush joined W.A. Harriman & Co. as its vice president, under the bank's president, Bert Walker, his father-in-law and George's maternal grandfather--the head of the family.@s1@s6

The Great Game

Prescott Bush would demonstrate strong loyalty to the firm he joined in 1926. And the bank, with the scope and power of many ordinary nations, could amply reward its agents. George Bush's Grandfather Walker had put the enterprise together, quietly, secretly, using all the international connections at his disposal. Let us briefly look back at the beginning of the Harriman firm--the Bush family enterprise--and follow its course into one of history's darkest projects.

Walker's operations were always quiet, or mysterious, whether in local or global affairs. He had long been the "power behind the throne" in the St. Louis Democratic Party, along with his crony, former Missouri Governor David R. Francis. Walker and Francis together had sufficient influence to select the party's candidates.@s1@s1

Montagu Norman and his prote@aage@aa Hjalmar Schacht paid frantic visits to New York that year and the next, preparing the new Hitler regime for Germany.

The most important American political event in those preparations for Hitler was the infamous `` Third International Congress on Eugenics, " held at New York's American Museum of Natural History August 21-23, 1932, supervised by the International Federation of Eugenics Societies.@s9 This meeting took up the stubborn persistence of African-Americans and other allegedly `` inferior " and `` socially inadequate " groups in reproducing, expanding their numbers, and amalgamating with others. It was recommended that these `` dangers " to the `` better " ethnic groups and to the `` well-born, " could be dealt with by sterilization or `` cutting off the bad stock " of the `` unfit. "

Italy's fascist government sent an official representative. Averell Harriman's sister Mary, director of `` Entertainment " for the Congress, lived down in Virginia fox-hunting country; her state supplied the speaker on `` racial purity, " W.A. Plecker, Virginia commissioner of vital statistics. Plecker reportedly held the delegates spellbound with his account of the struggle to stop race-mixing and inter-racial sex in Virginia.

The Congress proceedings were dedicated to Averell Harriman's mother; she had paid for the founding of the race-science movement in America back in 1910, building the Eugenics Record Office as a branch of the Galton National Laboratory in London. She and other Harrimans were usually escorted to the horse races by old George Herbert Walker--they shared with the Bushes and the Farishes a fascination with `` breeding thoroughbreds " among horses and humans.@s1@s0

> Investigative journalist Wayne Madsen has discovered CIA files that document the agency's connections to institutions and individuals figuring prominently in the lives of Barack Obama and his mother, father, grandmother, and stepfather. The first part of his report highlights the connections between Barack Obama, Sr. and the CIA-sponsored operations in Kenya to counter rising Soviet and Chinese influence among student circles and, beyond, to create conditions obstructing the emergence of independent African leaders.
> This confirms the article by Col Prouty on Indonesia and Vice President Nixon 1958.]
> In Part I of this WMR special report, we revealed the connections between Barack Obama, Sr. and the CIA-affiliated Airlift Africa project to provide college degrees to and gain influence over a group of 280 eastern and southern African students from soon-to-be independent African nations to counter similar programs established by the Soviet Union and China. Barack Obama Sr.

was the first African student to attend the University of Hawaii. Obama Sr. and Obama's mother Stanley Ann Dunham met in a Russian language class in 1959 and they married in 1961.

The African airlift program was administered by Kenyan nationalist leader Tom Mboya, a fellow Luo tribe mentor and friend of the senior Obama. According to CIA documents described in Part I, Mboya also served the CIA in ensuring that pro-Soviet and pro-Chinese African nationalists were stymied in their attempt to dominate pan-African nationalist political, student, and labor movements.

One of Mboya's chief opponents was Ghana's first president, Kwame Nkrumah, who was ousted in a CIA-inspired coup in 1966, one year before to Obama Sr's son, Barack Obama, Jr. and his mother joined Lolo Soetoro, an Indonesian who Obama's mother met at the University of Hawaii in 1965, when President Obama was four years old.

In 1967, Obama and his mother joined her husband in Jakarta. In 1965, Lolo Soetoro had been called back from Hawaii by General Suharto to serve as an officer in the Indonesian military to help launch a bloody CIA-backed genocide of Indonesian Communists and Indonesian Chinese throughout the expansive country. Suharto consolidated his power in 1966, the same year that Barack Obama, Sr.'s friend, Mboya, had helped to rally pro-U.S. pan-African support for the CIA's overthrow of Nkrumah in Ghana in 1966.

CIA links East-West Center, University of Hawaii, and CIA coup against Sukarno and Peace Corps and USAID are listed in the two part articles

Ann Dunham met Soetoro at the East-West Center at the University of Hawaii. The center had long been affiliated with CIA activities in the Asia-Pacific region. In 1965, the year that Dunham met and married Soetoro, the center saw a new chancellor take over. He was Howard P. Jones who served a record seven years, from 1958 to 1965, as U.S. ambassador to Indonesia. Jones was present in Jakarta as Suharto and his CIA-backed military officers planned the 1965 overthrow of Sukarno, who was seen, along with the Indonesian Communist Party (PKI), as allies of China.

When Jones was chancellor of the East-West Center, he wrote an article for the Washington Post, dated October 10, 1965, in which he defended Suharto's overthrow of Sukarno. Jones was "invited" by the Post to comment on the Suharto coup, described as a "counter-coup" against the Communists. Jones charged that Suharto was merely responding to an earlier attempted Communist-led coup against Sukarno launched by Lt. Col. Untung, "a relatively unknown battalion commander in the palace guard."

Jones's article, which mirrored CIA situation reports from the U.S. embassy in Jakarta, continued by stating that the alleged leftist coup on September 30 "came within an inch of succeeding through the > assassination of six of the top military command. It might well have succeeded had not Defense Minister Nasution and a number of other senior generals also marked for assassination acted fast in a dramatic counter-coup." Of course, what Jones did not inform the Post's readers was that the Suharto "counter-coup" had been assisted with the strong help of the CIA.

The Manufacturing of a President: The CIA's Insertion of Barack H. Obama, Jr. into the White House by Wayne Madsen. For an agency (CIA) that disavowed any connection to BBRDW, the CIA curiously maintains detailed files on the failed corporation that was involved, according to the editor's book, The Manufacturing of a President, in making pay-offs to Asian dictators who were allies of the United States. These payments were made via the escrow accounts overseen at the Bank of Hawaii by Obama's grandmother.

Among the CIA files is an obscure article on BBRDW written by John Kelly for the June-August 1984 issue of CounterSpy, a now-defunct magazine. BBRDW was an investment advisory firm on the surface but underneath its charade, it was a facilitator for various CIA clandestine operations.

Although the CIA vehemently denied that BBRDW belonged to them, One of the company's consultants and investors was John "Jack" Kindschi, the former CIA station chief in Hawaii who previously served in clandestine positions in Stockholm and Mexico City. More interesting, Kindschi's cover in Mexico City was the Robert Mullin Company, a public relations firm that employed one E. Howard Hunt, who would later emerge as one of conspirators in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. *

If it it true these historians are correct about the manufacture of presidents and regime changes around the world JFK wished to stop it will be both necceassay and possible the regime changes occured with Great Britain and other NWO organizations in a coordinated global way that JFK objected to.

Secret plans in the Nixon Library with the Rockefellers involving Standard Oil

Richard Nixon unsuccessfully ran for president in 1960, narrowly losing to John F. Kennedy. Nixon then lost a race for governor of California to Pat Brown in 1962. In 1968, he ran for the presidency again and was elected, defeating Hubert Humphrey and George Wallace in a close election.

Richard Nixon 36th Vice President of the United States In office January 20, 1953 - January 20, 1961

January 20, 1969 - August 9, 1974

From Steamshovel Press #4: *

A newly discovered FBI document reveals that George H.W. Bush was directly involved in the 1963 murder of President John Kennedy.

The document places Bush working with the now famous CIA agent, Felix Rodriguez, recruiting right-wing Cuban exiles for the invasion of Cuba.

It was Bush's CIA job to organize the Cuban community in Miami for the invasion. The Cubans were trained as marksmen by the CIA. Bush at that time lived in Texas. Hopping from Houston to Miami weekly, Bush spent 1960 and '61 recruiting Cubans in Miami for the invasion. That is how he met Felix Rodriguez.

You may remember Rodriguez as the Iran-contra CIA agent who received the first phone call telling the world the CIA plane flown by Gene Hasenfus had crashed in Nicaragua.

As soon as Rodriguez heard that the plane crashed, he called his long-time CIA supervisor, who was now Vice President, George Bush. Bush denied being in the contra loop, but investigators recently obtained copies of Oliver North's diary, which documents Bush's role as a CIA supervisor of the contra supply network.

George Bush wants key aspects of his life to remain covert

At the same time, he (Bush) senses that his need for coverup is a vulnerability. The need to protect this weak flank accounts for the steady stream of fake biographical and historical material concerning George, as well as the spin given to many studies of recent history that may never mention George directly. Over the past several months, we have seen a new book about Watergate that pretends to tell the public something new by fingering Al Haig as Deep Throat, but ignoring the central role of George Bush and his business partners in the Watergate affair. We have a new book by Lt. Col. Oliver North which alleges that Reagan knew everything about the Iran-contra affair, but that George Bush was not part of North's chain of command. The latter point merely paraphrases Bush's own lame excuse that he was "out of the loop" during all those illegal transactions. During the hearings on the nomination of Robert Gates to become Director of Central Intelligence, nobody had anything new to add about the role of George Bush, the boss of the National Security Council's Special Situation Group crisis staff that was a command center for the whole affair. These charades are peddled to a very credulous public by operatives whose task goes beyond mere damage control to mind control-- the MK in the government's MK Ultra operation.

Some things worthy of note: more knowledgeable Bushman might argue that the main landing beach, the Playa Giron, is located south of the city of Cienfuegos on the Zapata Peninula, on the south coast of Cuba." Well, also when Gautamala was being overthrown the Bermuda Dunes Airport was beign built by the CIA to operate in the Carribean with the British from the Islands of Bermuda and the Snd Dunes, and El Mirador that was the focul meating point for oversight was the name-sake of El Mirador of Guatamala. The ATSUGI Airbase fits Asia, Tokyo, Soviet Union, Guatamala, and Indonesia. Cuba did not come untill much later.

Wim Dankbaar introducing Holt's autobiography and the names that will come up in his story: Some of those readers ask me why they have not heard of the book before. I believe I have answered part of that question now. The naysayers are usually the more ignorant among us, not wanting to absorb the evidence, rather believing the media and authorities, like I did myself in a distant past. Some of these people argue that if the JFK assassination was such a huge conspiracy, lots of people would have talked and the conspiracy would have been exposed. Well, that is exactly what happened. We are just not being told about it. Lee Harvey Oswald exclaimed at once he was "just a patsy." Numerous other witnesses and participants spilled the beans on the conspiracy, some of them paying with an untimely death. The list is endless but includes Jack Ruby, Rose Cheramie, David Morales, David Atlee Phillips, Charles Nicoletti, Sam Giancana, Charles Harrelson, Johnny Roselli, Carlos Marcello, Tosh Plumlee, E. Howard Hunt, Santos Traffcante, Luis Posada Carriles, David Ferrie, Dorothy Kilgallen, Lyndon Johnson to his mistress Madeleine Brown, Oswald's girl friend Judyth Vary Baker, and on and on. Last but not least, the grassy knoll gunman himself talked.

Others say that the JFK assassination happened too long ago to be of interest today. I disagree wholeheartedly and blame it on ignorance. I maintain that the political landscape of today is a direct result of the assassination. A sitting, elected President was removed through a secret, illegal coup d'etat and the ones who committed the crime, seized power. At least 4 succeeding Presidents were in some capacity involved in the planning and/ or cover-up of the murder. Lyndon Baines Johnson, Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford and George Herbert Walker Bush. It is therefore safe to say that George W. Bush, the most recent ex-President, also knows that JFK's death was a coup d'etat, a crime against the American system and thus its people.. The assassination may be some time ago, but the power structure built on it, is still at the helm today. Not so long ago at all. Besides, game changing events are never too long ago. As the late comedian Bill Hicks said: "If the Kennedy assassination is too long ago, then quit talking to me about Jesus."

It is a long story how I acquired the autobiography of Chauncey Holt. The short version is that his daughter offered it to settle a debt she had with me. In 2007 1 had already purchased the video documentary, made a week before Chauncey's death, which he named Spooks, Hoods & The Hidden Elite.That is still the title of the DVD available on my website JFKmurdersolved.com, but my distributor Bruder Releasing decided to rename it to Spooks, Hoods & JFK, under which title it is now available on Amazon com and other places. The manuscripts and documents I received was muchmore than I can present in this book. Thus I made a selection that I believe gives the best overview. Chauncey will take you on the journey of his fascinating life.

You will be given an inside look on the preparations and cover-up of de coup d 'etat on 11/22/1963. -- Wim Dankbaar, April 2013

In Holt's book and the complete overlap with Col. Fletcher Prouty, E. Howard Hunt, the photographic and documentary evidence David Phillips name along with Phllip Twombly regularly appear in the history of the JFK assasination as does Richard Nixon who was backed my moneyed interests but never fully knew all of the CIA's darkest plans.

Holt: Guatemala is a beautiful land of vivid contrast; lofty mountains and fertile valleys with abundant crops of bananas and coffee and has a very moderate climate. It is a depressing country as well when one considers the poor and homeless descendants of the ancient Mayas. When Arbenz announced in February 1953 that he intended to appropriate 225 ,OOO acres of United Fruit's land, the CIA was galvanized into action, even though United Fruit was not using the land. The cable traffc back and forth between Guatemala City and Washington was furious. In one cable Eisenhower stated, "Expropriation in itself does not, of course, prove communism." Ambassador John E. Peurifoy retorted, "He will do until a communist comes along." So IRC started recruiting for the plan to oust Arbenz.

A handful of civilian pilots were hired to fly the Thunderbolts, vintage airplanes from World War II, used to assist Armas in his 'tinvasion" of Guatemala. A few Gooney Birds - C47s - were to be flown by contract pilots to distribute pamphlets or to push ordinance from, over Guatemala City. A training site on Momotombito, a volcanic island in Lake Managua, Nicaragua was set up and as colorful a group as one can find, right out of central casting in Hollywood, was assembled; Jerry Fred DeLarm, "Rip" Robertson, Tony Po, Jack Younger, Howard Hunt, David Atlee Phillips and others whose names escape me at the moment. No need to recount the details of this ('campaign." Suffce it to say, it was a CIA operation from start to finish, carried out with the blessing of John Peurifoy, the American ambassador, recently arrived from Greece, John Foster Dulles

David Atlee Phillips retrieved from Wikipedia and copied or modified to here

David Atlee Phillips (October 31, 1922 - July 7, 1988) was an American Central Intelligence Agency officer of 25 years and a recipient of the Career Intelligence Medal. Phillips rose to become the CIA's chief of operations for the Western hemisphere. In 1975, he founded the Association of Former Intelligence Officers (AFIO), an alumni association comprising intelligence officers from all services.

Phillips was repeatedly accused of involvement in the JFK assassination, named by both investigators and Agency family members. The House Select Committee on Assassinations investigated accusations from Cuban exile Antonio Veciana that Phillips had met Lee Harvey Oswald. In 1980, a book by Donald Freed and Fred Landis was released accusing him of involvement. Phillips sued them for libel. In 1986, they settled for an undisclosed amount and retracted the allegations.

Early life and education

Phillips was born in Fort Worth, Texas and attended the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Virginia and Texas Christian University in Fort Worth.

Career

Phillips was an actor prior to World War II. During the war, he served as a nose gunner in the United States Army Air Forces. He was shot down over Austria and captured by the Germans, but was able to escape and make it back to Allied lines.

CIA career

Phillips joined the CIA as a part-time agent in 1950 in Chile, where he owned and edited The South Pacific Mail, an English-language newspaper that circulated throughout South America and several islands in the Pacific. He became a full-time operative in 1954, and operated a major psychological warfare campaign in Guatemala during the US coup and its aftermath. He rose through the ranks to intelligence officer, chief of station and eventually chief of Western hemisphere operations, serving primarily in Latin America, including Cuba, Mexico, and the Dominican Republic.[better source needed] Phillips retired from the agency in 1975 and founded the Association of Former Intelligence Officers in the same year.

House Select Committee on Assassinations

While investigating Lee Harvey Oswald's possible ties to certain pro- and anti-Castro radical groups around the time of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, an HSCA staff investigator, Gaeton Fonzi, reported being told by anti-Castro paramilitary organization Alpha 66 founder Antonio Veciana that Veciana arrived for a meeting in Dallas, TX with Phillips and Lee Harvey Oswald was there finishing his own conversation in the hallway with Phillips. The HSCA investigator claimed Veciana knew Phillips as "Maurice Bishop".

After one former CIA case officer, who was assigned to the JMWAVE station in Miami, stated to investigators that Phillips had been known to use the alias, the commission subpoenaed Veciana to testify on Phillips as "Bishop". Veciana stated twice under-oath that Phillips was not Bishop.

In 2014, at a conference named The Warren Report and the JFK Assassination: Five Decades of Significant Disclosures, Veciana reversed his previous statements, asserting unequivocally, albeit not under oath, that he believed that the agent he knew as Bishop had in fact been David Atlee Phillips.

Conspiracy allegations and lawsuit

In their 1980 book Death in Washington, authors Donald Freed and Fred Landis charged that the CIA was involved in the 1973 Chilean coup d'état and the 1976 assassination of Orlando Letelier. The authors specifically named Phillips as being involved in a cover-up of the assassination and reiterated Fonzi's claim that Phillips served as Oswald's case officer while using the alias "Maurice Bishop". In 1982, Freed, Landis, and their publisher were named in a $230 million libel suit by Phillips and the AFIO. A settlement was reached in 1986 with Phillips receiving a retraction and an unspecified amount of money. Phillips donated these proceeds to AFIO for the purpose of creating a legal defense fund for American intelligence officers who felt they were the victims of libel.[citation needed]

After the death of former CIA agent and Watergate figure E. Howard Hunt in 2007, Saint John Hunt and David Hunt revealed that their father had recorded several claims about himself and others being involved in a conspiracy to assassinate John F. Kennedy. In the April 5, 2007 issue of Rolling Stone, Saint John Hunt detailed a number of individuals implicated by his father including Phillips, as well as Lyndon B. Johnson, Cord Meyer, David Sánchez Morales, Frank Sturgis, William Harvey and an assassin he termed "French gunman grassy knoll" who many presume was Lucien Sarti. The two sons alleged that their father cut the information from his memoirs, "American Spy: My Secret History in the CIA, Watergate and Beyond", to avoid possible perjury charges. Hunt's widow and other children told the Los Angeles Times that the two sons took advantage of Hunt's loss of lucidity by coaching and exploiting him for financial gain. The newspaper said it examined the materials offered by the sons to support the story and found them to be "inconclusive."

These are the CVs of those who have confessed to (and that is asking a lot) the Deep State role in the assassination of JFK and by extension witnesses and relative since then and other cover-up activities. David Atlee Phillips and Phillip Twombly will come up quite often. So will Sam Giacanca, Wiliam King Harvey, Allen Dulles, and others.

Their credible and common stories is that the "Eastern Establishment" mostly composed of oil interest and robber barrons had intended to covertly (using disguised and denied CIA support) facilitate favorable (to the USA and Great Britain) civil conflicts in independent nations using both oil money to finance the operations and entice corporate front companies into the CIA operations and use those companies (and Murder Inc., religious, and other various parties) into a wide and diverse fabric of opposition to independent governments.

The intended order flows through tracing the activities of the trigger-men at the scene in Dealy Plaza, Texas to those holding office today and current writers and historians and their works.

These operations picked up the strike-breakers and CIA backed union organizers (part of Chauncey Holt's story and Jimmy Hoffa's story Hoffa going back to Nixon in 1949 and anti-communism) and J. Edgar Hoover anti-communist activities in the USA and around the world featuring James Jesus Angleton of the CIA and in what was a common system of "Gladio" using mafia relationships for some of the dirty work the Mafia and the Vatican or the Mafia and the FBI had a mutual need for. [See Paul Williams and his book the Unholy Alliance on Gladio and the CIA, mafia, and Vatican.

Meyer Lansky met Benjamin "Bugsy" Siegel when they were children. They became lifelong friends, as well as partners in the bootlegging trade, and together managed the Bugs and Meyer Mob, with its reputation as one of the most violent Prohibition gangs. The mob accountant and in several ways connected to union breaking and other work for the FBI after bootlegging was Chauncey Holt. All through the CIA work these assets of the CIA used are in Holt's book as he became a CIA pilot flying surplus planes disguised as Latin American air force planes and intervening in Guatemala and elsewhere at the behest of E. Howard Hunt using CIA backed front companies plausibly denied as direct US State Actors.

Some background (provided by Joan Mellon an associate of Richard Belzer and Skyhorse publicity press conference for his book) is needed here.

Within a month of Kennedy's inauguration, the CIA had also defied him, meeting on February 16, 1961, without his knowledge, with assassins planning the murder of President Trujillo in the Dominican Republic. Kennedy's policy was that the United States should not initiate the overthrow of Trujillo, at least not before we knew what government would succeed him. Concealing its actions from the president and defying his expressed wishes, the CIA went ahead anyway. It had attempted the assassination of Patrice Lumumba in the Congo without clearing the idea with Eisenhower, and saw no reason to relinquish its power to the new young president. A CIA cable on the Trujillo assassination reads: "This matter is not to be discussed with State Department."

In violation of its charter, CIA had long been operating domestically, creating a Domestic Operations Division to "handle all of this domestic activity." Led by C. Tracy Barnes, CIA opened offices from New York to Los Angeles. In 1975 James Angleton admitted, "Going back to OSS days, we've had operations that were domestic." The FBI's intelligence service was increasingly nervous. As D. J. Brennan put it, echoing Eisenhower's President's Board of Consultants on Foreign Intelligence Activities, "CIA is too prone to freewheeling."

The CIA put John Kennedy on notice from the moment he took office. Allen Dulles, the Director of Central Intelligence, and Richard Bissell invited a dozen White House aides to the all-male Alibi Club. Already Bissell was superintending the CIA's attempts to murder Fidel Castro using biological contamination. "Liquid bacteria might be best," Bissell advised, "in his coffee, tea or [Gold? Indonesia?]bouillon."

After dinner, Bissell addressed his guests. "I'm your man-eating shark," he declared. Listening, CIA man Robert Amory approved. Bissell was getting "a head start on State," warning the Kennedy team that "the CIA was a secret state of its own."

Nor had this CIA shadow government bothered to inform President-elect Kennedy that the CIA had enlisted the Mafia in its attempts to murder Castro. Running this government within the government was a group at the highest level of the CIA: Dulles, Bissell, Helms, Frank Wisner and Kim Roosevelt, as well as the ubiquitous Lawrence Houston. James Angleton, chief of Counter Intelligence, was on board. On the agenda were assassinations that "did not appear on paper." "Never will," Helms later told the Church Committee defiantly, as he would take his secrets to the grave.

Four months into his presidency, John Kennedy, whom onetime CIA asset Gerald Patrick Hemming calls "the last President to believe he could take power," refused to submit to CIA blackmail and commit land troops to Brigade 2506 about to land at the Bay of Pigs. He cut short the expected air cover.

Dear Jack:

Ray Lafferty and I checked out the Gulfstream that Frank Long is selling for J. A. Belcher Oil. In fact, we flew it up to Santa Barbara and back.

Considering the small number of hours on the engines and the airframe and the fact that the interior is being completely re-furbished by Pacific Automotive it looks like a good buy. The instrument panel has been completely replaced and the navigational aids upgraded. I am enclosing a picture of the new instrument panel (the black & white photo) and some additional pictures that point out the different interior configurations that are possible.

The only drawback to the plane, as I see it, is the fact that de-icing equipment consists of pneumatic boots rather than the "hot wing". However, this does not mean that the pneumatic boot system is deficient.

In my opinion, the plane is still an excellent investment. Talk the matter over with Phil and get together with Frank to move ahead, if you are really intent on buying this type of airplane.

Raymond John Ryan was an American professional gambler, oilman, promoter, and developer. Described as having a larger-than-life personality, he mingled with prominent businesspeople and movie stars, as well as with cardsharps and mobsters on his path to fame and fortune. His sensational murder case was never solved.

Peter Joseph Licavoli (owner of the later CIA operations are Grace[Horse] Ranch], was an American organized crime figure in St. Louis, Missouri before moving to Detroit, Michigan. He controlled criminal operations in Detroit and Toledo, Ohio, throughout the Prohibition era. Wikipedia

Joseph Stacher (c. 1902 - 1977) (alias Doc Stacher, Joseph Rosen, Doc Harris el al) was a Jewish syndicate leader who helped bring together the Jewish and Italian Mafia into a national organized crime syndicate.

Early life

Joseph Stacher was born Gdale Oistaczer (commonly pronounced Gedalia) in Letychiv, Ukraine around 1902. He emigrated with his family to the United States in 1912. As a teenager living in Newark, New Jersey, he became friends with Meyer Lansky and Abner Zwillman. He attained United States citizenship in May 1930, but his naturalization was later revoked.

Career

By the 1920s Stacher was running much of Zwillman's gambling operations. In 1931, Stacher helped Meyer Lansky organize a conference of Jewish organized crime leaders at the Franconia Hotel, which later would see the alleged merging of the Jewish and Italian Mafia into a national crime syndicate. Running West Coast and Caribbean gambling operations for Lansky during the 1930s, as well as becoming a silent partner of movie studio Columbia Pictures in the late 1930s, Stacher would later supervise gambling in Las Vegas, Nevada, particularly the Sands and Fremont Casinos.

Stacher continued running Mafia gambling operations until 1964, when Federal authorities arrested him for tax evasion. While the US government was in favor of deporting him to his native Ukraine, federal law prohibited deporting anyone to a communist-controlled country. However, because of the "Law of Return", Stacher was allowed citizenship in Israel and successfully immigrated there in 1965.

While living in Israel he served as the primary source of Israeli journalists Dennis Eisenberg, Uri Dan, and Eli Landau for a biography of Meyer Lansky. Stacher continued living in Israel until his death.

Death

Stacher died, according to some reports in a Munich, West Germany, hotel room on February 28, 1977. His death was reported as a heart attack and his body shipped back to Israel. He was buried secretly and the nameplate of his grave was altered to hide his burial site. Only eight men were at the funeral, so the family had to ask a reporter and photographer to join the ceremony in order to attain a minyan.

In his death bed confession to St. John Hunt E. Howard Hunt who Holt says helped the team at Dealy Plaza Train yard were part of the assassination. Cord Meyers, LBJ, and others were in on it as were assets used in the Guatemala Project (1954) [and one such person was Chauncey Holt who worked with Jack Youngblood. Holt flew reconditioned bombers. The CIA airbase Holt describes was the CIA Mafia version of Area 51. At Licavoli Ranch planes from sur plus were modified and re-painted. In a rare part of the story that has been told Marilyn Monroe knew of this and it was hinted at in her films written at times by one her husbands (Miller) and she in writing referred to the CIA activity at the airbase as Aliens. Not uncommon cutout (spooks, etc.,) and she knew that these operations were for overthrows.

Chauncey Marvin Holt (October 23, 1921 - June 28, 1997) was an American known for claiming to be one of the "three tramps" photographed in Dealey Plaza shortly after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Background

Holt was born in Kentucky. He moved to San Diego County in the 1970s and lived in La Mesa, California during the last decade of his life. Holt died of cancer at the age of 75, and was survived by a daughter and granddaughter.

Claims of involvement in JFK assassination

In a 1991 Newsweek article about Oliver Stone's JFK, Holt received national attention for various claims he made regarding the assassination of President Kennedy. According to Holt, he was a CIA operative sent to Dallas to deliver phony Secret Service credentials. He also claimed to have worked as an accountant for Meyer Lansky. His account is further explored in his autobiography Self-Portrait of a Scoundrel, which was posthumously released by TrineDay Publishing in August 2013.[1][self-published source?]

Everette Howard Hunt Jr. (October 9, 1918 - January

23, 2007) was an American intelligence officer and author. From 1949 to 1970, Hunt served as an officer in the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), where he was a central figure in U.S. regime change in Latin America including the 1954 Guatemalan coup d'état and the 1961 Bay of Pigs Invasion in Cuba. Along with G. Gordon Liddy, Frank Sturgis, and others, Hunt was one of the Nixon administration's so-called White House Plumbers, a team of operatives charged with identifying government leaks to outside parties.

Hunt and Liddy plotted the Watergate burglaries and other clandestine operations for the Nixon administration. In the Watergate scandal, Hunt was convicted of burglary, conspiracy, and wiretapping, and was sentenced to 33 months in prison. After his release, Hunt lived in Mexico and then Miami until his death in January 2007.

Early life and education

Hunt was born in Hamburg, New York, the son of Ethel Jean (Totterdale) and Everette Howard Hunt Sr., an attorney and Republican Party official.

He attended Hamburg High School in Hamburg, where he graduated in 1936. He then attended Brown University, an Ivy League university in Providence, Rhode Island, where he graduated in 1940.

Career

U.S. military and OSS

During World War II, Hunt served in the U.S. Navy on the destroyer USS Mayo and the U.S. Army Air Corps. He also served in China with the Office of Strategic Services (OSS), the precursor to the Central Intelligence Agency.

Author

Hunt was a prolific author, publishing 73 books during his lifetime. During and after World War II, he wrote several novels under his own name, including East of Farewell (1942), Limit of Darkness (1944), Stranger in Town (1947), Maelstrom (1949) Bimini Run (1949), and The Violent Ones (1950). He also wrote spy and hardboiled novels under an array of pseudonyms, including Robert Dietrich, Gordon Davis, David St. John, and P. S. Donoghue.

Some parallels exist between Hunt's writings and his experiences during the Watergate scandal and espionage. He continued his writing career after he was released from prison, publishing nearly twenty spy thrillers between 1980 and 2000.

In 1946, Hunt was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship for his writing.

Economic Cooperation Administration

Prior to 1949, Hunt served as an officer in the Information Division of the Economic Cooperation Administration, a predecessor of the Mutual Security Agency.

Central Intelligence Agency

Shortly following the end of World War II, the OSS was disbanded. In 1947, with the Cold War emerging and intensifying, the absence of a central intelligence organization was seen as a national security deficiency, and the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) was formed. In October 1949, just as Warner Bros. acquired the rights to Hunt's novel Bimini Run, Hunt joined the CIA's Office of Policy Coordination (OPC). He was assigned as a covert action officer specializing in political action and influence in what later came to be the CIA's Special Activities Center.

Mexico City

Further information: Operation PBFortune

In 1950, Hunt was appointed OPC Station Chief in Mexico City, where he recruited and supervised William F. Buckley Jr., who worked under Hunt in his OPC Station in Mexico from 1951 to 1952. Buckley and Hunt remained lifelong friends, and Buckley became godfather to Hunt's first three children.

In Mexico, Hunt helped lay the framework for Operation PBFortune, later renamed Operation PBSuccess, the successful covert operation to overthrow Jacobo Árbenz, the democratically elected president of Guatemala.

Hunt was then assigned as Chief of Covert Action in Japan, and later as Chief of Station in Uruguay, where he was noted by American diplomatic contemporary Samuel F. Hart for controversial working methods. Hunt would later said, "What we wanted to do was to have a terror campaign, to terrify Arbenz particularly, to terrify his troops, much as the German Stuka bombers terrified the population of Holland, Belgium and Poland."

Bay of Pigs invasion

Further information: Bay of Pigs Invasion

Hunt was subsequently assigned responsibility for organizing Cuban exile leaders in the United States into a suitably representative government-in-exile that would, after the Bay of Pigs Invasion, form a pro-American government that could replace Fidel Castro.

Planning for the Bay of Pigs invasion began during the Eisenhower administration, but Hunt was later bitter about what he perceived as President John F. Kennedy's lack of commitment to the operation, which was designed to attack and overthrow the Castro government. In his semi-fictional autobiography, Give Us This Day, Hunt wrote, "The Kennedy administration yielded Castro all the excuse he needed to gain a tighter grip on the island of José Martí, then moved shamefacedly into the shadows and hoped the Cuban issue would simply melt away."

In 1959, Hunt helped CIA Director Allen W. Dulles write The Craft of Intelligence. The following year, in 1960, Hunt established Brigade 2506, a CIA-sponsored group of Cuban exiles formed to attempt the military overthrow of the Castro's government in Cuba. The Bay of Pigs invasion commenced on April 17, 1961, but was quickly aborted and viewed as a fiasco. Hunt was then reassigned as executive assistant to Dulles. In 1961, President Kennedy fired Dulles for the failed Bay of Pigs invasion.

Hunt then served from 1962 to 1964 as the first Chief of Covert Action for the CIA's Domestic Operations Division (DODS).

In 1974, Hunt told The New York Times that he worked for DODS for approximately four years, beginning in 1962, shortly after the agency's establishment by the Kennedy administration over the objection of Richard Helms and Thomas H. Karamessines. Hunt said that the division was assembled shortly after the Bay of Pigs operation, and that "many men connected with that failure were shunted into the new domestic unit." He said that some of his projects from 1962 to 1966 dealt largely with subsidizing and manipulating news and publishing organizations in the United States, which he said "did seem to violate the intent of the agency's charter."

In 1964, John A. McCone, then deputy chief of intelligence at the CIA, directed Hunt to take a special assignment as a Non-official cover officer in Madrid, Spain, tasked with creating an American answer to Ian Fleming's British MI-6 James Bond novel series. While in Spain, Hunt was covered as a recently retired U.S. State Department Foreign Service Officer who moved his family to Spain in order to write the first installment of the nine-novel Peter Ward series, On Hazardous Duty, published in 1965.

After a year and a half in Spain, Hunt returned to his assignment at DODS. Following a brief tenure on the Special Activities Staff of the Western European Division, he became Chief of Covert Action for the region in July 1968, and was based in the Washington metropolitan area. Hunt was lauded for his "sagacity, balance and imagination", and received the second-highest rating of Strong signifying "performance ... characterized by exceptional proficiency" in a performance review from the Division's Chief of Operations in April 1969. However, this was downgraded to the third-highest rating of "Adequate" in an amended review from the Division's Deputy Chief, who recognized Hunt's "broad experience" but opined that "a series of personal and taxing problems" had "tended to dull his cutting edge."

Hunt later said that he "had been stigmatized by the Bay of Pigs", and had come to terms with the fact that he "would not get promoted too much higher."

In his final years with the CIA, Hunt began to cultivate new contacts in society and the business world. While serving as vice president of Brown University's club in Washington, D.C., he befriended and commenced a strong association with the organization's president, former congressional aide Charles Colson, who was working on Richard Nixon's presidential campaign.

CIA retirement

Hunt retired from the CIA at the pay grade of GS-15, Step 8 on April 30, 1970.

After retiring from the CIA, Hunt neglected to elect survivorship benefits for his wife. In April 1971, he requested to retroactively amend his election but was rebuffed by the agency. In a May 5, 1972, letter to CIA General Counsel Lawrence Houston, Hunt raised the possibility of returning to active duty for a short period of time in exchange for activating the benefits upon his proposed second retirement. Houston advised Hunt in his May 16, 1972, response that this "would be in violation of the spirit of the CIA Retirement Act".

As already shown Chauncey Marvin Holt one of the train-yard hobos revealed before his death a meeting at Bermuda Dunes area El Mirador that was called by Mr H William King Harvey, Sam Gold aka Sam Giancana, Johnny Roselli, and himself. Days before Holt died Voice Over the off screen TV interviewer of Holt gave this interview

VO: Chauncey Holt continued his association with the CIA during the 1960's and 1970's. He played a role in covert operations in Brazil, Laos and Chile. At the same time Holt maintained his close friendship and business interests with mafia boss Peter Licavoli until the mobster's death in 1984. Holt also continued to be deeply involved through the years with attorney Frank Belcher with whom he maintained a joint banking account at the Bank of America in Burbank, CA. Many of Holt's CIA contract agent "projects" were funded and funneled through this special account.

In 1975 the CIA began to purge rogue contract agents, aka "cowboys" from its employ. Some were forced into retirement, while others like Chauncey Holt ended up in prison. On January 2, 1976, Holt had written a letter to his old CIA ally William King Harvey apprising him of his recent indictment by a federal grand jury. Harvey responded by saying he could only offer “token assistance.” Harvey did offer to send Chauncey some CIA documents that were about to be declassified. These records proved that Holt worked for the Clandestine Operations of the Central Intelligence Agency.

As recounted elsewhere, Operation Mongoose was revived and a number of contract agents, as well as the Cubans and gangsters like Giancana, Licavoli, Roselli, Trafficante and Rothman, who answered to Lansky, were involved in these attempts on Castro, many of which were not only ludicrous but bordered on lunacy.

On December 14, 1961, I [Chauncey Holt one of the trainyard hobos working for William King Harvey known as Mr H) attended a meeting at Bermuda Dunes Airport, a proprietary interest of the CIA, operated by Ray Ryan and an old time pilot by the name of Ernie Dunlevie. This was the only meeting I attended where most of the principals involved in the plot to assassinate Fidel Castro were present. Those present included William King Harvey, Peter Licavoli, Sam Giancana, Johnny Roselli, Ray Ryan and Frank Hayden. Ernie Dunlevie was not present. I acted as the secretary and I still have the handwritten notes of that meeting.

It was decided that the ZR/RIFLE program would be applied to Cuba. There would be maximum security and non- attributability in regard to this project. The term "Kubark" and "Kutube/D Search" were assigned to the plan. We were advised not to us "AM" but rather "Mongoose" when referring to this project. Operations would be implemented through word of mouth, person to person, singleton ops and nothing on paper. We were assured that phony 201 files would be inserted in the central registry and backdated. I was assigned Q J/ lose and was instructed to prepare the necessary forged documents. All this would be implemented through Special Group (augmented), coded Task 33.

9 Months later for this meeting these same crowd will kill Marilyn Monroe. Monroe was going to reveal the ongoing CIA overthrows operation and thus she was silenced. A member of the Greek Community in Chicago learned of the operation from their own mouths and also was silenced. Johnny Roselli is a very central figured named by others and in declassified CIA and FBI documents in the national archives.

Roselli agree to introduce Maheu to "Sam Gold." At this point the Report refers to a memorandum prepared by Edwards, dated 14 May 1962, re money not paid to ... https://www.archives.gov/files/research/jfk/releases/180-10141-10406.pdf

This CIA task force was to assassinate Castro (and I believe other operations) and did assassinate "leakers" RFK, JFK, and Marilyn Monroe and others.

Jeanne Laverne Carmen (August 4, 1930 – December 20, 2007) was an American model, actress and trick-shot golfer. In 1998, Carmen was the subject of a TV episode titled "Jeanne Carmen: Queen of the B-Movies" on the series E! True Hollywood Story. The show stated that Carmen maintained a "dangerously close friendship with Marilyn Monroe and The Kennedys" and that after the death of Monroe, Carmen was told to leave town by Johnny Rosselli who was working for Chicago Mob Boss Sam Giancana. Believing her life was in danger, she fled to Scottsdale, Arizona, where she lived incognito for more than a decade. Carmen abandoned her platinum-blonde locks, had three children, and lived a quiet life, never mentioning her prior life in Hollywood.

[2 mins 14 s] The second personal anecdote that I have is is uh related to my Greek family extended Greek family in Chicago.

Story Goes that a 18-year-old girl named Eugenia Pappas was an attractive Greek girl who was a hair stylist in distant relative in the Greek family and she befriended a man named Frank Schweihs. Frank Schweihs it turns out was in the mafia but Eugenia dated him and relates to the story of travelingh from puke airport uh a group of uh Hitmen that flew to Los Angeles on the morning uh of uh August the 4th (1962) the day that Marilyn Monroe died.

The hit men went to a party and then they left the party and then they came back after a while and then they next day they flew back to uh Chicago.

Eugenia relates later after she broke up with Frank Schweihs that that this was a hit on Marilyn Monroe on orders from Sam Giancana. Now subsequently Eugenia Pappas was killed uh and was found in the Chicago River. Several months later and many of the people that had been involved with the Marilyn Monroe murder were sworn to see secrecy including a jean Carman uh who was one of Marilyn's girlfriends she later wrote a book called uh my Wild Wild Life and Jean Carman went into hiding for uh 16 years uh until Sam Giancana died was killed and then came out of hiding and tells her story of the mafia involvement in the murder of Marilyn Monroe.

5 mins 10 seconds. Sam and Chuck Giancana involving the Marilyn Monroe murder. was bugged as well one other piece of information that 5:12 I think is interesting is in a book uh by Sam and Chuck Giancana uh 5:18 involving the Maryland Monroe murder they mentioned that a suppository was concocted by University chemist that had 5:25 Nembutal (Nembutal is a prescription sedative that has medical value but is dangerous when misused. Chloral hydrate is a geminal diol with the formula Cl 3C−CH(OH) 2. It was first used as a sedative and hypnotic in Germany in the 1870s.) and chlorohydrate uh and that this suppository was a part of the CIA Mafia 5:31 plan to kill Fidel Castro uh and that the mafia had this supposed to available 5:38 and had used it on some of their own uh victims uh and verified that indeed it did work in fact they found that with 5:45 Marilyn Monroe she had 15 times the Fatal level of chlorohydrate and Nembutal 5:52 uh in her bloodstream that time she died and this had in my opinion been most likely from a suppository you couldn't 5:59 get that many pills down somebody's stomach uh and uh get that high of a drug 6:06 level also Jean Carmen relates that Marilyn had called her uh the night that 6:12 she died and asked for sleeping pills because she was out of sleeping pills Jee Carman declined and said I don't 6:19 have any either but it's interesting that here Maryland was out of sleeping pills and yet she's been accused of 6:25 taking an overdose of sleeping pills uh less than an hour after she had called Jee Carman so it's 6:32 unlikely that Marilyn died from ingestion of Nembutal chlorohydrate pills.

Eunice Murray (housekeeper staying with Monroe that night) "The Maid Did It, In The Bedroom, With An Enema " https://marilynadayinthelife.com/eunice-murray/

14:13 greenson has Unice Murray the housekeeper stay at the house that night she doesn't normally stay at the house 14:19 but Unice Murray uh stays at the house and she's going to stay there all night this is kind of a little mixup in the 14:26 original plan the original plan would be that Marilyn would be discovered dead that following morning the police would 14:31 be called and there'd be an investigation and Robert Kennedy's name would get dragged into it and so on and 14:37 so forth but with Unice Murray there as Jean Carman relates the story The Hitman 14:43 also abused Unice Murray that night in other words Marilyn wasn't the only 14:48 victim that night that Unice Murray was intimidate she was told you will tell the 14:55 police that Bobby Kennedy had been here earlier and you will not talk about our 15:00 presence here tonight if you do we'll come back and finish you off and finish 15:06 off your family that's my opinion that there are probably death threats against Unice Murray if she didn't call the 15:11 police so now Unice Murray had a dilemma after the Hitman left uh should she go 15:17 ahead and call the police and wait until that next morning or should she call Peter Lawford and and let him know what just transpired.

DOUBLE CROSS: THE EXPLOSIVE INSIDE STORY OF THE MOBSTER WHO CONTROLLED AMERICA

Although most Americans have known little up until now about Sam Giancana's impact on the nation, it's precisely this lack of knowledge that has made writing Double Cross so necessary. Tired of the blatant misinformation and inaccuracies that have continued to be reported on topics ranging from the St. Valentine's Day Massacre to the death of Marilyn Monroe and the assassination of John F. Kennedy, we decided it was time, once and for all, to tell the story of these events as Sam Giancana related it. The resulting revelations contained in Double Cross, although shocking, speak for themselves.

Thus, we now present what was confided to Chuck Giancana by his brother Sam Giancana as the truth of the times. It should be added that we do so with much sadness and no small measure of fear. This is a sordid and diffcult legacy-and one we did not choose. It's therefore our desire that, after completing the book, the reader will not find those bearing the Giancana name guilty, by association, with a man who so destructively changed the course of history.

From what Chuck could learn from his brother, in the late fifties and early sixties, Marilyn's desire to achieve stardom, coupled with her childlike desire to please, was exploited by the Outfit and the CIA, as well: Her sexual charms were employed by the CIA to frame world leaders-among them President Sukarno of Indonesia. Mooney insisted that using Monroe as bait, the CIA had successfully compromised leaders from Asia to the Middle East.

And Marilyn, perhaps more because she enjoyed the attentions of the world's most powerful men than for reasons of patriotism, had been a willing participant in the intrigue.

By June of 1962, Marilyn's film career was losing momentum; she'd become unreliable and deeply troubled. Early that summer, Mooney told Chuck he'd had a former FBI agent and a detective working on Marilyn's surveillance and in so doing had received a wealth of information about the starlet's habits, her emotional state, and stormy love life.

From what he'd learned, Mooney believed Marilyn's use to Chicago and the CIA was dwindling.

Later, Chuck would surmise that Marilyn Monroe's knowledge of CIA-Outfit collaborative efforts coupled with her increasingly severe emotional instability had become a dangerous combination. And that by July, thanks to a failing relationship with Bobby Kennedy, she had become not only expendable but -when Mooney received reports of her threats to Bobby Kennedy to "blow the lid off the whole damn thing"-a frightening liability, as well.

According to guys in the Outfit, it was at this time that the CIA, fearful of exposure by the vengeful, drug-addicted Monroe, requested that Mooney have her eliminated. And Mooney, smelling blood, seized on the CIA contract as a way to achieve another objective, as well. By murdering Monroe, it might be possible to depose the rulers of Camelot.

One week before her death, a distraught Marilyn Monroe flew in to Lake Tahoe's Cal-Neva Lodge. Unbeknownst to her, Mooney had orchestrated the invitation. Among the guests that weekend was a man Mooney jokingly referred to as "Peter the Rabbit" Lawford.

The killers waited for the cover of darkness and, sometime before midnight, entered Marilyn's home. She struggled at first, it was said, but already drugged by the injected sedative, thanks to Bobby's doctor friend, their rubber-gloved hands easily forced her nude body to the bed. Calmly, and with all the efficiency of a team of surgeons, they taped her mouth shut and proceeded to insert a specially "doctored" Nembutal suppository into her anus. Then they waited.

Suicide

This is the official cause of death and probably the most widely believed. She had tried it four times previously and she clearly had significant mood swings.

The problem with this theory is that too many forensic facts are at odds with it, unless one can imagine Marilyn making up a barbiturate enema and administering it to herself. Quite a number of forensic experts have discarded the suicide theory as inconsistent with the facts.

Another problem with the suicide theory is that she was in good spirits at the time of her death and had been making plans for future events and movies, and if Spoto is correct, her remarriage to Joe DiMaggio.

Accident

If, in fact, Marilyn died from a rectally-administered barbiturate enema, the question is who prepared and administered it. It is not out of the realm of possibility that the overdose was accidental.

Spoto makes a very persuasive case for accidental death. Dr. Greenson had been working with Dr. Hyman Engelberg to wean Marilyn off Nembutal, substituting instead chloral hydrate to help her sleep. Milton Rudin claimed that Greenson said something very important the night of Marilyn's death: " God damn it! Hy gave her a prescription I didn't know about!"

Dr. Engelberg was having serious marital problems and obviously didn't communicate well with Greenson on Marilyn's prescriptions. Spoto suggests that Greenson would not have given Marilyn a heavy dose of chloral hydrate the evening of her death if he had realized that Marilyn had been taking Nembutal capsules throughout the day. Spoto further suggests that after an exhausting full day with Marilyn that he arranged for Marilyn to have a chloral hydrate enema so that she would sleep through the night.

Chloral hydrate significantly slows down the metabolism of Nembutal, but Greenson did not know that she had been taking Nembutal and Marilyn did not realize that Nembutal and chloral hydrate interacted adversely or she probably would have admitted to Greenson that she had taken Nembutals.

If Spoto's theory is correct, then who administered the enema? Spoto believes that it had to be Eunice Murray, who, like Greenson, had no inkling that the sedative enema would be fatal.

Any doctor might be loath to admit to himself or others that he had made such a significant mistake in such a high-profile patient, especially since Marilyn appeared drugged during the afternoon. Also, if Eunice was the person who administered the enema, it would be natural for her to try to protect herself and Dr. Greenson by pretending that no such procedure was given to Marilyn.

Murder

Everyone loves a conspiracy. It is so much more exciting than accidental death or suicide. The celebrity status of the main characters in this drama lends itself heavily towards the romance of conspiracy. Look at the cottage industry that John F. Kennedy's assassination has generated.

It's important to distinguish the cover-up of embarrassing information by powerful people from the commitment of a crime to eliminate people who can potentially create embarrassment.

There are a number of credible people who claim that Marilyn Monroe had affairs with one or both Kennedy brothers. John Kennedy, at least, was known to indulge himself in extramarital adventures. So, it is not at all implausible that President Kennedy availed himself of the charms of one of the sexiest and most attractive women of that era. That Robert Kennedy was so inclined is not nearly as clear.

According to Peter Lawford, Marilyn's unrealistic notions about becoming First Lady caused her to embarrass herself with both Kennedy brothers. Her letters and telephone calls to them had become both tiresome and very risky. It was one thing to cavort with anonymous girls, but quite another to be involved with a celebrity sex symbol like Marilyn Monroe. There was every good reason for JFK and RFK to break off the relationship with Marilyn permanently.

What allegedly became so troublesome was Marilyn's supposed rage at JFK's rejection of her and the fear that she was able to strike in both brothers. Donald Wolfe sums it up: "Marilyn Monroe was in a position to bring down the presidency. She was cognizant of Jack Kennedy's marital infidelities and other private matters. She had his notes and letters and was privy to Kennedy's involvement with Sam Giancana. That the Kennedy brothers had discussed national security matters with the film star added to an astonishing array of indiscretions."

It is not out of the realm of possibility that Robert Kennedy was the man appointed by his brother to deliver the rejection to Marilyn personally. It's not the kind of thing that one writes in a letter and it's unlikely that JFK was anxious to deliver the message himself.

Three Vectors of MK-ULTRA that if Marilyn Monroe lived she might have leaked to the public

- The story of Prince Edward and Prince Albert of House of Windsor and the showgirl Maria Kutchera who left the Salzburg convent and gave birth to "hidden identities" in the USA and Marilyn Monroe (like Glorian Donegan) was one of them, helped into defacto orphan condition and parents were sought or faked. A movie story-line The Prince and the Showgirl was filmed with Marilyn Monroe as a possible hint.

- The secret airbase at the horse ranch Hughes, Robert Mahue, and the CIA were conditioning planes for surplus to be effective CIA combat aircraft for use in Guatamala, Cuba, Indonesia, and elsewhere. This is shown by Chauncey Holt released documents and hinted at in the move that Monreo was in The Misfits of plane research at a horse ranch. The aerospace references are built into out of place dialogue.

- Flowing from the first vector of Hidden Identities being bastard Windsor children in the USA, Francis Galton type Eugenics predictions were the children even without the Windsor name might perform well in politics around the world so the next generation of bastard children were being groomed for Indonesia, maybe Cuba, and elsewhere, and Monroe may have been forced into helping for that though she became unwilling and about to talk. Joseph Kennedy Sr wanted to president or a king-maker and seems to have allowed the plan though indications are the Democrat Party side became revulsed by it all.

Marilyn Monroe Signed Department of Defense ID Card with Two Fingerprint Marks (1954) Fingerprinted ID card issued to "Norma Jean DiMaggio" to entertain troops in Korea. Interesting in that is a DOD ID for entertainment but did it include PsyOps media work. Probably not suspicious and not tied to a secruity clearance.

The Deepest Family Secret

The Deepest Family Secret By ABC7 Thursday, May 8, 2008

The I-Team looked into one of Chicago's most feared mob hit men, Frank "The German" Schweihs and whether he was behind the mysterious death of the Hollywood legend in 1962.

Frank Schweihs' cancer kept him from being tried with the rest of the family secrets clan last summer. But on Thursday morning in federal court, prosecutors will proceed with their plans to try Schweihs this fall on charges of mob crimes and murder.

There won't be paparazzi nor any mention of Marilyn Monroe, even though her death and the death of a Chicago manicurist have been pinned on Schweihs. In Chicago in 1962, the Dan Ryan Expressway opened. Mayor Richard J. Daley was in his second term. Integration started in the Chicago schools. The Cubs lost 101 games.

And Frank Schweihs was a rising star in the Outfit, living in the west suburban home of his Outfit boss. By '62, Schweihs had been arrested as often as his age - he was 32 years old - for crimes from burglary to homicide. But he seemed to carry a get-out-of-jail-free card.

Even though he was German, Schweihs hung out in Greektown and it may have been during a night out there that he met a tall, slender 18-year-old manicurist, Eugenia Pappas. They called her Becca. They began to date to the dismay of her family.

"My sister came to see me eight days before she was murdered and I said, 'Please don't be involved with anyone like that because when you die, they just step over your body,'" said sister Diane Pappas.

It was advice not taken. Becca's body was found floating in the Chicago River. She had been shot through the heart, according to police, while sitting in the passenger seat of a car. Chicago detective Richard Cain, who led that investigation, was himself secretly on the mob's payroll. Schweihs was questioned but never charged.

Diane Pappas said she doesn't know what Schweihs' motive would've been. "I wouldn't know. She was a naive 18-year old girl and that's all I know. She was smitten with him," Diane Pappas said.

The Pappas family cringed at reporting that Outfit bosses had ordered Schweihs to silence Becca because he had told her about his role in another murder.

A 1993 book about Marilyn Monroe, written by an L.A. private eye, concludes that "Eugenia Pappas found out about Marilyn Monroe," from Schweihs, who was then ordered to kill her. Whether that is true, Monroe's death was never officially ruled a suicide due to lack of evidence. Many investigators believe Monroe was murdered by the Chicago Outfit because of her connections to the Kennedy family and Chicago mob boss Sam "Momo" Giancana.

A police informant reportedly stated that Giancana deployed Schweihs and Anthony "Ant" Spilotro to kill Marilyn Monroe and make it look like a drug overdose.

John Flood spent 41 years in metro-Chicago law enforcement, most with the Cook County sheriff's police. He is now retired in Las Vegas and is considered an Outfit expert. Flood says there's a possibility they were involved because of the close relationship of Giancana, the Chicago boss, and Frank Sinatra. They would meet in Reno.

Flood says Schweihs, or Schways as he knew him, was the prime suspect in dozens of gangland hits.

"A cold-blooded, tough killer who would murder anyone if ordered to," Flood said of Schweihs.

In 1989, Schweihs was convicted of shaking down porno store owners and was recorded on an FBI tape boasting that he was the boss and no one else. When the Family Secrets indictments were handed up in 2005, Schweihs went into hiding and was finally arrested in a Kentucky apartment house at age 76, living with a girlfriend, while his long-ago girlfriend can never rest in peace.

"How is that justice? Walking around for 45 years doing horrible deeds like he's always done? That's very unfortunate," said Diane Pappas. "I hope he goes to jail for the rest of his life and suffers pain with the cancer."

And after 45 years, Diane Pappas heeded the suggestion of her late husband, a career Chicago cop, not to be too public in accusing Frank Schweihs. A crotchety, bad tempered hoodlum, Schweihs has never buckled under the weight of authority and will likely take to his grave, whatever he may know about a Hollywood death that stunned the world and a Chicago murder that has divested a family.

Mob fixer Johnny Rosselli is back in the spotlight

‘Handsome Johnny,’ best known for extorting Hollywood studios and making Las Vegas deals, also played key role in producing two classic noir movies

Johnny Rosselli is the subject of a new biography by Lee Server, and Hollywood, his old stomping grounds, may be showing interest in finally telling his story.

“Strategist.”

That word on Johnny Rosselli’s business card summed up his role as a Mob fixer whose colorful adult life, after knock-around teenage criminal years that took him from Boston to Los Angeles, included the gangster’s well-known participation with other Mafia heavyweights in a failed CIA plot to assassinate Cuban leader Fidel Castro during the JFK years.

In addition to this secretive high drama, Rosselli, a silky-smooth playboy thought by the FBI to be responsible for 13 murders, had his hand in various legal and illegal enterprises, including money-making ventures in Hollywood and Las Vegas. Rosselli even helped pave the way for reclusive billionaire Howard Hughes to purchase casino properties in Southern Nevada.

In Los Angeles and Las Vegas, Rosselli dined at fine restaurants, often with different women, played golf, lounged by the pool. He threw money around. His brief marriages included one to film star June Lang and another to Marajen Stevick, the daughter of an Illinois newspaper owner. After Stevick’s marriage to Rosselli in Mexico was quickly annulled, the young woman's father committed her to a psychiatric facility, where she underwent therapeutic electroshock treatment, according to Server.

Described by one informant as "sex crazy," Rosselli was close to Judith Campbell Exner, a socially active California freelance artist who became involved with President John F. Kennedy and Chicago mobster Sam Giancana.

Over time, when all this became public, these romances shined an accusatory spotlight on the troubling link between politics and organized crime.

During the course of his life, Rosselli spent a lot of time in Los Angeles, but he also lived in Las Vegas while orchestrating Mob deals, and was present in South Florida during clandestine CIA planning to topple Castro, but, according to Server, he always wanted to stay connected to moviemaking, despite not reaping huge gains in those endeavors.

Along with constant FBI surveillance, though, there were more than a few difficulties in Rosselli's life. He became caught up in a Hollywood extortion scandal, and later in a cheating scheme involving card players at the Friars Club of Beverly Hills.

All this came to an end in 1976, when the 71-year-old mobster was killed and stuffed into a 55-gallon oil drum later found floating in a bay near Miami.

Now, almost 45 years after this unsolved killing, there is renewed interest in Rosselli. (His given name at birth in Italy was Filippo Sacco, but he assumed the Rosselli alias after seeing that signature on Italian paintings he liked, according to historian and former Las Vegas casino executive Bill Friedman. The mobster's forged birth name, Rosselli, is sometimes spelled with one "s." Rosselli used the double "s" spelling on his business cards.)

One recent account of his life is Lee Server's 2018 biography, Handsome Johnny: The Life and Death of Johnny Rosselli: Gentleman Gangster, Hollywood Producer, CIA Assassin.

State Dept. and USAID

Faura had written a story on the retirement of Manny ena, a well-know detective (known to some in the D.A.'s ffce as the "house killer" for waiting for armed robbers to ome out of the establishment they had robbed and shooting em down before asking them to surrender). Pena left the police and went to work for the State Department's Agency for International Development, a CIA front.

Pena had quietly returned to the LAPD a few weeks before the assassination and was literally in charge of the Senator's death investigation.

Faura's complimentary piece on Pena on his retirement to go work for the "State Department" had saved the day for him.

Pena was in charge of the "day watch" of the investigation. He determined which leads to follow and which would be discarded. Why an AID/CIA agent was in that position was never explained. His "clearance" of Faura was a complete surprise to Faura, who did not know that Pena was back from training foreign police forces, mainly in Latin America, for the AID/CIA. - The Polka Dot File on the Robert F. Chapter SIXTEEN Who Killed Bobby? and Polka Dot File

Intelligence Connections

It's tempting to write off the LAPD's bullying, incompetence, omission, and destruction and manipulation of evidence as simply the cover-up of a botched investigation-the avoidance of another Dallas, by any means necessary-until you see the connections fanning out from the department to other government agencies, specifically the CIA.

The two men who had effective day-to-day control of the RFK investigation also had CIA connections. As day watch supervisor, Lieutenant Manuel Pena had to sign off and approve every report and decide who to reinterview and who to dismiss as the case was prepared for trial. This was the same Manny Pena who scrawled across several blank interview summaries relating to Sandra Serrano, "Polka-dot story of Serrano phony," "Polka dot story Serrano N.G."

Sergeant Enrique "Hank" Hernandez was Pena's chief interrogator, called on to administer polygraph tests to troublesome witnesses to determine if they were telling the truth. Without fail, whenever claims of conspiracy were sent to Hernandez, he bullied witnesses into retractions. Luckily, many of these tapes survive, so we can still hear the mockery Hernandez's bullying tactics make of this supposedly objective discipline. Hernandez also led the investigation probing possible conspiracy and oversaw the background checks on Sirhan and his family.

Manuel Pena joined the LAPD in 1941 and served in the Pacific with the Naval Air Corps during World War II. He spent two years in Verdun, France, as a criminal investigator for the U.S. Army during the Korean War, and spoke fluent French and Spanish. He went on to spend sixteen years of his police career working in Robbery-Homicide, reaching the rank of lieutenant. Robert Kaiser recalls his nickname at LAPD was "Shoot 'em up Manny Pena"-"he killed several people in the line of duty, which wasn't very normal."

In November 1967, Pena retired from the department with a surprise testimonial dinner at the Sportsman's Club attended by Chief Reddin and top department brass. He was to accept a position with the Agency for International Development (AID), a State Department aid agency that among other roles served as a regular cover identity for CIA operatives abroad. He would serve as a "public safety adviser" and train the police forces of friendly dictatorships in sophisticated interrogation techniques to use on leftist insurgents and political dissidents.

FBI agent Roger LaJeunesse had known Pena for years and was the FBI liaison to the LAPD during the RFK case. LaJeunesse said Pena left the LAPD for a "special training unit" at CIA's Camp Peary base in Virginia. After nine weeks' training, he would be posted to Latin America, where he could use his Spanish. Pena had been doing special assignments for the CIA for a decade, mostly under AID cover. On some of these, he worked with CIA operative Dan Mitrione, a "US police adviser" who taught interrogation and torture techniques to the ruling junta in Uruguay and was killed by the Tupamaro guerrillas in 1970 as a result.

Pena's new career didn't last long. Robert Kennedy announced that he would run for president on March 16, 1968 and Pena was back in Los Angeles by April. Investigative reporter Fernando Faura was walking along a corridor in Parker Center one day when he noticed a familiar figure behind heavy horn-rim glasses and a black handlebar mustache.

"Hey, Manny, I damn near didn't recognize you with that disguise!" Pena stopped and explained the [US] AID job wasn't what he expected, so he quit and came back to Los Angeles.

When the LAPD subsequently unveiled Special Unit Senator (SUS), a special task force to investigate the assassination, the man put in charge of preparing the case for trial and supervising the day watch investigators was Manny Pena.

Pena's brother, a school principal, was interviewed for a local television show by host Stan Bohrman. During the commercial break, he mentioned how proud he was of his brother's service with the CIA. "Nobody's supposed to know about that. It's supposed to be secret."

In 1977, researcher Betsy Langman interviewed Pena-then retired from the LAPD, presumably for good-and asked about his intelligence ties. "I worked with the AID program out of the Offce of Public Safety," said Pena. (The AID program had been unmasked in the mid- 1970s as one of the CIA's main covers for clandestine activity abroad.)

"Is AID not CIA?" asked Langman. "Ah, not to my knowledge," said Pena. "Was your work away from LAPD in 1967 going to be for AID?" "Yeah." "What type of work was it?" "Ah, that I can't ah ... I don't think that's anybody's business."

"Do you think AID is a front for the CIA?" asked Barrett. "It's been rumored very highly." Pena laughed.

Like Pena, Enrique Hernandez had served with the army in Korea and spoke fluent Spanish. He was thirty-seven years old and had been with the LAPD for fifteen years at the time of Bobby Kennedy's assassination. He was the sole polygraph examiner for SUS, and he talked up his credentials to Sandra Serrano before her test began: "I have been called to South America, to Vietnam and Europe and I have administered tests. The last test that I administered was to the dictator in Caracas, Venezuela. He was a big man, a dictator. Pérez Jiménez was the last name. And this is when there was a transition in the government of Venezuela and President Betancourt came in ... there was a great thing involved over there and I tested the gentleman." So what had an LAPD polygraph offcer been doing in South America?

Bearing this in mind, we examine Sergeant Enrique "Hank" Hernandez, the "Terminator" of all conspiracy allegations in this case. Hernandez was the sole polygraph operator for SUS, assigned to "background investigation and conspiracy aspects of the case." He was thirty-seven years old at the time, with fifteen years of police work behind him and, like Pena, had served in the Korean War.

Hernandez would conduct examinations alone with the subject and discuss his findings with Pena. The tapes of his sessions with Serrano could be listened to only with Pena's approval, so a jury of two would decide her fate.

Campaign worker Sandra Serrano was still sitting on the fire escape below the southwest corner of the Embassy Ballroom. She heard what she thought was a car backfire six times; then the girl in the polka-dot dress and the Mexican American man in the gold sweater burst out onto the hotel fire escape and ran down the stairs, almost stepping on her.

"We've shot him! We've shot him!" the girl exclaimed. "Who did you shoot?" asked Sandra. "We've shot Senator Kennedy!"

It is my assertion a US AID program run by the CIA including Allen Dulles involved the Donegan family in plot tied to the Eisenhower Nixon program with roots in FDR and Joseph Kennedy Sr. activities in the WWI era led to a cold war plan building on that history of Marilyn Monroe and others. THe plan was secret early placement of children by the CIA into families around the world who would be Agents-In-Place, Agents-Of-Influence because these children were placed with already influential parents. In fact the children were often drawn from bastard children in orphanages awaiting homes to grow up in around the world.

Plane crashes and the CIA program of children in orphanages connected to the CIA and planting sleeper agents as part of regime change are inseparable topics.

The CIA Covert forces in league with similar forces in the world became a Gendarmerie of subversion and overthrow led by Nixon. Nixon was defeated by JFK but JFK was assassinated. Afterward RFK would challenge Nixon and be assassinated too.

Gendarmerie: A Gendarmerie is a military force with law enforcement duties among the civilian population. The term gendarme is derived from the medieval French expression gens d'armes, which translates to "men-at-arms". Wikipedia

Threats to internal security- Threats to the general peace may range from minor civil unrest, large scale violence, or even an armed insurgency. Threats to internal security may be directed at either the state's citizens, or the organs and infrastructure of the state itself, and may range from petty crime, serious organized crime, political or industrial unrest, or even domestic terrorism. Foreign powers may also act as a threat to internal security, by either committing or sponsoring terrorism or rebellion, without actually Declaration of war declaring war.

Governmental responsibility for internal security will generally rest with an interior ministry, as opposed to a Defence minister / defence ministry. Depending on the state, a state's internal security will be maintained by either the ordinary police or more militarised security forces (known as Gendarmerie or, literally, the Internal Troops.). Other specialized internal security agencies may exist to augment these main forces, such as border guards, special police units, or aspects of the state's intelligence agencies. In some states, internal security may be the primary responsibility of a secret police force.

The Nixon versus RFK and the Gendarmerie Richard Nixon as the new head of the CIA infrastructure commanded in Coup d'état's around the world financed by global elitist who in fact were working their own bloodlines from Romania that in media may tie to fictionalized accounts of Transylvania is a region in central Romania. It's known for medieval towns, mountainous borders and castles like Bran Castle, a Gothic fortress associated with the legend of Dracula.Nosferatu: A Symphony of Horror (German: Nosferatu Eine Symphonie des Grauens) is a 1922 silent German Expressionist vampire film directed by F. W. Murnau and starring Max Schreck as Count Orlok, a vampire who preys on the wife (Greta Schröder) of his estate agent (Gustav von Wangenheim) and brings the plague to their town and was filmed about the time of the 1925 Prince Albert of York speech who had a gene tied to that area of the world. Passionate to point of being touching but also volatile in emotions that sap away the patience and trust of those close to them. FOXP2 and Borderline Personality Disorder are diagnosis sometimes and is also Minimal Brain Dyscfuction depending on what year it was diagnosed or it may be called comorbid ADHD and Dyslexia.

Nixon and long before Aristocrary was using children and bastard children to run the world. Many of today's family lines conatianed genetics tied to Rosecurian or Vatican testing that left children in orphanages tested at an early with fake names used. This is part of the McMartin School I want to in 1962 CIA scandal was was the Vatican Boys Town in Franklin Nebraska.

Why would they the CIA want to groom sleeper agents? What would the sleeper agents act like? Like Jimmy Hoffa and it is called Controlled Opposition. The real unions posed a threat at their strength levels they were reaching so Nixon divied them in half backing Jimmy Hoffa the Republican Party union boss whose union Teamsters would not strike where as United Auto Works and AFL would strike, and in rail and elsewhere this was critical during the JKF administration days.

Controlled Opposition was used in politics to creating globalist "liberalism" leaders who would with CIA backing rise to power in independent nations and make favorable agreements with Western powers. Often thse sleepers for other countries received covert backing from CIA assets and mercemaris during civil wars between the CIA backed party and an independence party.

JFK was assassinated was was RFK and these two backed Paul Schrade, UAW, and stopping Labour Rackets, Organized Crime, mafia muscle and all the other rackets of the Nixon CIA. Prosecutors Management Information System (PROMISE to crime victims) would catch criminals by immunity tracking, Monoclonal Antibodies. But without a back door the elites from these genetics days would be found out to, and most US Presidents since JFK and Richard Nixon are knowingly or unknowingly tied to it.

My own family comes from one of these bloodlines through Maria Kutchera in North Carolina my mother was secretly the child of. Dean Rusk was part of the State Department backed system of moving select leaders around the world better leadership could become the turning point for nations in the equatorial regions trapping in chaos and wars. Marilyn Monroe and Malcom X also had connections to these plans and were asked to keep them quiet but were about to speak about the CIA in Latina America and Saudi Arabia.

When Robert F. Kennedy and Paul Schrade of Packard Moters UAW (Merlin engines) did if affect Thomas Crane Wales and or was it connected to that plot? Yes.

Walter Philip Reuther who Paul Schrade reported to in United Auto Workers September 1, 1907 May 9, 1970) was an American leader of organized labor and civil rights activist who built the United Automobile Workers (UAW) into one of the most progressive labor unions in American history.

As the leader of five million autoworkers, including retirees and their families,[7] Reuther was influential inside the Democratic Party.[8] Following the Bay of Pigs in 1961, President John F. Kennedy sent Reuther to Cuba to negotiate a prisoner exchange with Fidel Castro.[9] He was instrumental in spearheading the creation of the Peace Corps[10][11][12] and in marshaling support for the Civil Rights Act of 1964,[13][14] the Voting Rights Act of 1965,[15] Medicare and Medicaid,[16] and the Fair Housing Act.[14] He met weekly in 1964 and 1965 with President Lyndon B. Johnson at the White House to discuss policies and legislation for the Great Society and War on Poverty.[17] The Republican Party was wary of Reuther, leading presidential candidate Richard Nixon to say about John F. Kennedy during the 1960 election, "I can think of nothing so detrimental to this nation than for any President to owe his election to, and therefore be a captive of, a political boss like Walter Reuther

The Peace Corps and USAID are said to have been part of CIA planning for Indonesia and in fact CIA planning for Indonesia and experts believe the clash over Indonesia between Kennedy, Nixon, LBJ, and others led to the JFK ultimaately RFK deaths.

Paul Schrade himself was a Conspiracy Theorist. He had helped build for North American Aviation (as an US union Autoworker, just RFK's "get-Hoffa" real union leadership not Richard Nixon flunkies like Hoffa his own boss (the boss of Paul Schrade) also died in what is considered a suspicious airplane crash. And also at the RFK assasination at the Los Angeles County hotel was Eugene Thane Ceaser tied to Robert Mahue the CIA TWA operative who did custo CIA aircraft designs.

I believe this story was part of the Kennedy Story and the Donegan Story of the P-51s with Merlin engines designed by Rolls Royce and Spitfires with Marlin (I am off-line now Marlin or Merlin whatever the bird is) made by Rolls-Royce or Packard motors the US stepping in as the US did in WWI shipyards under Undersectraty of the Navy FDR and smooth hand at management and labor agreements in wartime under FOre Shipyards in Boston dockyards.

It was my birthplace these planes were built with these Packard Motors engines my father flew and my father also flew the F-86 an amazing jet plan similary fitted for recon.

eugenics and the 21st Century leaders) what I have called Mashups, cities of convergence of central characters in meeting locations around the USA. With the Kennedy's and Donegan much of real home is Boston. DOrchester my father was born in along with the also Roman Catholic Kennedy's and in my life (Edward Paul Donegan) much of my youth and perhaps much of 1968 in Marshfield Massachusetes very close in that same area that Josep Kennedy Jr the son of Robert F. Kennedy will represent in the US House of Representatives. He is the son of Robert F. Kennedy where I say the JKF RFK murders are tied to Inglewood my birth location all in a ten mile radias of where we the Donegans, The Lawaford family (Patrica Kennedy) Marilyn Monroe lived and JFK visited at the time of my birth. I assert after that birth that included a half brother Barrack Obama Jr the story moved to 1962 Seatle, the 21st Century Expo, the Kennedy Family,, the Obama Family and the Windsors.

I assert the PsyOps overthrow team wanted Obama for Indonesia and this was the same team George H. W. Bush was recruiting Brigade 2506 members for and arming them with Eastern Bloc weapons as a "native to Cuba" rebellion against Castro. A gun of this type and perhaps teams of this type killed Thomas Crane Wales who knew of this history or parts of it, and if the whole truth were found it treason would have been exposed.

REWARD

The United States Department of Justice is offering a reward of up to $2,000,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the murder of AUSA Thomas Crane Wales.

REMARKS

Born in 1952, Thomas Wales grew up in Southborough, Massachusetts. Tom was a graduate of Harvard University ('74) and Hofstra Law School ('79), where he was the Editor-in-Chief of the law review. In 1983, Tom became an Assistant United States Attorney in Seattle, Washington, where he specialized in fraud prosecutions.

In addition to his work as a prosecutor, Tom was very active in civic organizations and public service. Tom served as a member of the Seattle Planning Commission, and was on the Mayor's Citizen Advisory Committee.

Thomas Wales is survived by two adult children.

DETAILS

On the night of October 11, 2001, at approximately 10:40 p.m., Thomas Crane Wales was killed in his home in Seattle, Washington. Wales worked for the Western District of Washington as an Assistant United States Attorney (AUSA) for over 18 years, prosecuting white collar crime cases on behalf of the United States of America. The shooter stood in the backyard of AUSA Wales' home and shot him several times through a basement window as he sat at his desk typing on his computer. It has been reported that a lone male suspect was seen fleeing the scene. Wales died at a hospital the next day.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Seeking Information On the Murder of Thomas C. Wales

A gunman killed Thomas C. Wales at approximately 10:40 p.m. on October 11, 2001. The gunman, standing in the backyard of Wales' Queen Anne home, fired several shots through a glass window, hitting Mr. Wales. He died at the hospital the next day.

Forensic scientists have determined that the murder weapon was a Makarov semi-automatic handgun fitted with an aftermarket barrel. Soviet Bloc countries manufactured the Makarov through approximately 1968. The aftermarket barrels are stainless steel, rifled with six lands and grooves and a left twist. Because there are a limited number of aftermarket barrels that were sold in the United States, investigators have been working to identify and test fire as many as possible.

Some say Wales' determination to control guns started in his days at the prestigious Milton Academy, when his roommate, Joseph Kennedy II, lost his father, Robert F.

Kennedy, to an assassin's bullet.

Robert Francis Kennedy (November 20, 1925 June 6, 1968), also known by his initials RFK, was an American politician and lawyer. He served as the 64th United States attorney general from January 1961 to September 1964, and as a U.S. senator from New York from January 1965 until his assassination in June 1968, when he was running for the Democratic presidential nomination. Like his brothers John F. Kennedy and Ted Kennedy, he was a prominent member of the Democratic Party and is an icon of modern American liberalism. Wikipedia

Wales' son, Thomas Crane Wales VII, now studying for his PhD in history at the University of Edinburgh in Scotland, believes his father also was influenced by a 1995 incident while Tom was a student at Garfield High School in Seattle. A 15-year-old freshman ran through the school firing a stolen handgun, injuring two students. "I think it was the first shooting inside Seattle public schools," he says. "Pop came to speak at the school after that. He came, I think, with a bunch of other law enforcement people. He reassured people that the school would be safe, and not to be paranoid or afraid."

Wales joined CeaseFire in the 1990s. It had begun in 1983 as the first state gun control organization in the country and within two years had lobbied successfully for a state law requiring a criminal and mental health history background check on all handgun purchases made through licensed dealers and for a five-day waiting period for delivery. That was five years before approval of the Brady Act, which set a federal waiting period for new buyers of handguns.

In the '90s, Wales was among those who pushed for CeaseFire to have a full-time executive director and to create a state political action committee, which became the only one in the nation to rate, endorse and contribute to candidates based on their gun control views.

"Tom really was the driving force behind professionalizing the organization," says Bruce Gryniewski, hired as the first executive director. Wales' forte was fund-raising. He had a large network of lawyer friends, along with contacts in the business and land development communities through his work on the planning commission. About the time of the Garfield High shooting, Wales had raised $40,000 for opinion polling on the issue of gun violence. Not surprisingly, it showed Washington residents had little appetite for handgun registration. Yet it also suggested that even outside of the Seattle political fault line, residents substantially supported firearm safety issues, including trigger locks and safety training for gun owners. https://www.latimes.com/archives/la-xpm-2002-jan-13-tm-22284-story.html

Joseph Patrick Kennedy II (born September 24, 1952) is an American businessman, Democratic politician, and a member of the Kennedy family. He is a son of former United States Senator Robert F. Kennedy and Ethel Kennedy, and he is a nephew of former U.S. President John F. Kennedy and former U.S. Senator Ted Kennedy.

Kennedy served as a member of the United States House of Representatives from the 8th congressional district of Massachusetts from 1987 to 1999. In 1979 he founded and, until he was elected to the U.S. House, led Citizens Energy Corporation, a non-profit energy company which provides heating oil to low-income and elderly families in Massachusetts.

WASHINGTON - Howard Baker's question sliced to the core of Watergate: "What did the president know and when did he know it?"

Repeated over and again in the senator's mild Tennessee drawl, those words guided Americans through the tangle of Watergate characters and charges playing daily on TV to focus squarely on Richard Nixon and his role in the cover-up.

Baker's famous question has been dusted off for potential White House scandals big and small ever since.

Baker, who later became Senate majority leader, chief of staff to President Ronald Reagan and one of the GOP's elder statesmen, died Thursday at his Tennessee home of complications from a stroke suffered days earlier, according to an email distributed at the law firm where Baker was senior counsel. He was 88.

Baker emerged as an unlikely star of the Watergate hearings in the summer of 1973.

When chosen as vice chairman - and therefore leading Republican - of the Senate special committee, he was a Nixon ally who thought the allegations couldn't possibly be true. Democrats feared he would serve as the White House's "mole" in the investigation of the break-in at Democratic headquarters and other crimes perpetrated in service to Nixon's re-election.

"I believed that it was a political ploy of the Democrats, that it would come to nothing," Baker told The Associated Press in 1992. "But a few weeks into that, it began to dawn on me that there was more to it than I thought, and more to it than I liked."

He said Watergate became "the greatest disillusionment" of his political career.

Ed Donegan and Jen Moore assertions

It is not a very common occurrence for three Presidents to be in Washington on the same day, and it is an extremely unusual event for three Presidents - current, former, or future - to be in the same city unless a political convention or a Presidential funeral is underway. But on the morning of November 22, 1963, three Presidents were in the Dallas-Fort Worth metropolitan area, within thirty miles of each other.

In Fort Worth that day, John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson awoke in the Hotel Texas and prepared to board the plane that would take him on the brief flight to Love Field in Dallas, and from there to the motorcade that would enter Dealey Plaza just before 12:30 Central Standard Time.

And in Dallas that morning, Richard Nixon awoke in the Baker Hotel. There was a policeman stationed in the hallway outside his door, but the officer was there not so much to protect the former Vice President as to deter jewel thieves or autograph seekers from bothering movie star Joan Crawford who was a few doors down from RN.

Both the Hollywood legend and the future President were in town for the same reason - to attend the annual convention of the American Bottlers of Carbonated Beverages. [Its members are bottling companies and other beverage industry firms, including Bulldog Americas Corporation, several Coca-Cola and Pepsi-Cola bottlers, Pepsi-Americas Inc, and Royal Crown Bottling Corporation. The organization was founded in 1919, and originally named the American Bottlers of Carbonated Beverages.[1] In 1966, it renamed itself the National Soft Drink Association.] Both were there on behalf of the Pepsi-Cola corporation - Miss Crawford as a member of its board of directors (she was the widow of its chairman), and RN in his capacity as an attorney working on Pepsi's behalf.

After meeting various bottling-plant executives the previous day, RN had spoken to reporters that night, delivering a vigorous critique of the Kennedy White House's policies in his capacity as Republican elder statesman. https://www.nixonfoundation.org/2013/11/richard-nixon-november-22-1963

What Ed Donegan asserts is that his (Nixon's) 1958 Indonesia plan that involved planning Barrack Obama Jr. as an Agent-Of-Influence in Indonesia, or maybe Kenya or the USA or Saudi Arabia IF he were planted with a famous family. That would mean a falsified background and hidden identity. I and others assert we are in an era now of discovering many covert geneological connections of famous people who seem by facial recognition almost exact doubles for others, something that even geneology companies recogbnize (facial structures) as useful too just like immuninological profiles are used.

In the morning, RN proceeded to Love Field, and boarded a plane which departed a little more than an hour before Kennedy and Johnson’s arrival.

It is this theory my Doneganfamily life story supports

Glorian Donegan was a bastard child of perhaps Prince Edward of Wales. She showed FOXP2 symptoms as did Prince Alber of York. The mother was Maria Kutschera in 1926 who also showed Borderline Personality Disorder. It was decided in the 1950's she would be a possible source of "hidden identity" children who would be backed covertly to succeed in politics around the world. I am one of children and as race horses go I tended towards the center of the field and the trough rather than all than running and jumping. I think though many others including Barrack Obama Jr. may have been IVF impregnations with her DNA being tested from generation to generation. I think Kennedy opposed this during his presidency and before that as US Senator. He did not like the British at all nor their methods.

I think it quite possible for Robert F. Kennedy they were planning a campaing of the Unioin Man and how the USA and Packard Motors and Radar won WWII, not Richard Nixon.

Shadow government conspiracy

One conspiracy theory suggests that a secret or shadow government including wealthy industrialists and right-wing politicians ordered the assassination of Kennedy.

Peter Dale Scott has indicated that Kennedy's death allowed for policy reversals desired by the secret government to escalate the United States' military involvement in Vietnam.

In JFK vs Allen Dulles, author Greg Poulgrain describes an attempt by America's Rockefeller family to gain control over West Irian gold mines in Indonesia, in particular the substantially gold-rich Grasberg mine. Poulgrain speculates that President Kennedy's close relationship with Indonesian President Sukarno and a planned 1964 US-Indonesian summit could have led to Indonesia granting independence to West Irian, making it difficult for Rockefeller-owned Freeport Sulphur to gain control of the mines.

Poulgrain contends that Allen Dulles, who had ties to the Rockefellers through his employment at Sullivan & Cromwell, organized the assassination on the Rockefellers' behalf to eliminate Kennedy's interference by easing Lee Harvey Oswald's return to the United States and getting him a job at the Texas School Book Depository, before instigating a coup in Indonesia with the cooperation of military officer Suharto to discredit the Communist Party of Indonesia. The subsequent nationwide massacres and Suharto's assumption of the presidency, Poulgrain purports, led to Freeport securing the mines with the approval of Suharto's pro-Western government.

In the biographical book, The Devil's Chessboard: Allen Dulles, the CIA, and the Rise of America's Secret Government, David Talbot examines Dulles' career. Talbot also posits that Allen Dulles orchestrated the assassination of President Kennedy at the behest of corporate leaders, though on the basis of their perceiving Kennedy as a threat to national security instead of to primarily secure any specific business interests. According to Talbot, Dulles lobbied the new president, Lyndon Johnson, to have himself appointed to the Warren Commission. Talbot says that Allen Dulles also arranged to make Lee Harvey Oswald the person responsible for the assassination. The book asserts that the conspirators behind John Kennedy's death also murdered his brother Robert Kennedy, who the conspirators perceived to be "a wild card, an uncontrollable threat" that would reveal the plot.

Military-industrial complex

In the farewell speech given by U.S. President Dwight D. Eisenhower before he left office on January 17, 1961, warned the nation about the power of the military establishment and the arms industry. "In the councils of government, we must guard against the acquisition of unwarranted influence, whether sought or unsought, by the military-industrial complex. The potential for the disastrous rise of misplaced power exists, and will persist." Some conspiracy theorists have argued that Kennedy planned to end the involvement of the United States in Vietnam, and was therefore targeted by those who had an interest in sustained military conflict, including the Pentagon and defense contractors.

Former United States Senator Ralph Yarborough in 1991 stated: "Had Kennedy lived, I think we would have had no Vietnam War, with all of its traumatic and divisive influences in America. I think we would have escaped that." According to author James W. Douglass, Kennedy was assassinated because he was turning away from the Cold War and seeking a negotiated peace with the Soviet Union. Douglass argued that this "was not the kind of leadership the CIA, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and the military-industrial complex wanted in the White House." Oliver Stone's film, JFK, explored the possibility that Kennedy was killed by a conspiracy involving the military-industrial complex. L. Fletcher Prouty, Chief of Special Operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff under Kennedy, and the person who inspired the character "Mr. X" in Stone's film, wrote that Kennedy's assassination was actually a coup d'état.

The United States House of Representatives Select Committee on Assassinations (HSCA) was established in 1976 to investigate the assassinations of John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King Jr. in 1963 and 1968, respectively. It was in a time of reform as CIA connected Richard Nixon who ran the CIA through the National Security Council as Vice President under President Eisenhower was losing party to Democrat Party reformers and Jimmy Cater won the White House with a reformist approach.

I have called myself a 2nd generation atomic testing victim and sought help from Atomi Veterans groups among others.

I come from a family of two historically connected (all lives are historical, the events they are trapped in may or may not be noticed and they may or may not be noticed) and the history is with Joseph Kennedy Sr., his and Rose Fitzpatrick's children, their deaths including JFK and RFK, other deaths including Sonny Bono, and the McMartin preschools scandal some (Ted Gunderson) and others say were CIA connected, and George H.W. Bush connected like the Conspiracy of Silence case Ted Gunderson and CIA operatives William Colby and John DeCamp wrote about.

I don't know my genealogy exactly because most of it was oral history and often at times hush-hush and certainly oral history hard to find online. Per my father's story his father was an Irish immigrant accountant who could not practice accounting inside the USA and thus worked a a Hershey Chocolate factory. He (my father James Paul Donegan) fits the the identity of a James

Paul Donegan Jr son of James Paul Donegan Sr in some ways though the chronology does not match up well. James Paul Donegan Sr. was an accountant and there is a lot of overlap. Confusing the situation is my father said I was named after my grandfather Edward and at various times based on his and my mothers side family members this might have been a Von Trapp (Maria Kutschera in 1926) dalliance with Edward of Wales or Albert of York and thus following the Kings Speech in 1925 the next year were created bastard children of Windsors who came under study including myself at McMartin Preschool in 1962. My mother showed the London KE family FOXP2 symptoms as I did including swallowing problems due to dry upper GI and like Albert of York an emotional component to the symptoms group for that gene.

John F. Kennedy Born: May 29, 1917, Brookline, MA Assassinated: November 22, 1963, Parkland Health, Dallas, TX. Robert F Kennedy Born: November 20, 1925, Brookline, MA Assassinated: June 6, 1968, PIH Health Good Samaritan Hospital, Los Angeles, CA

United Air Lines Flight 553 was a scheduled flight from Washington National Airport to Omaha, Nebraska, via Chicago Midway International Airport. On December 8, 1972, the Boeing 737-222 serving the flight, City of Lincoln, registration N9031U, crashed while approaching Midway Airport.

The plane crashed into a residential neighborhood, destroying five houses; there was an intense ground fire. Forty-three of the 61 aboard the aircraft and two on the ground were killed. Among the passengers killed were Illinois congressman George W. Collins, CBS News correspondent Michele Clar and Dorothy Hunt, the wife of Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt.

According to posthumously published confessions and newly available CIA family statements and newly released CIA documents the crash killing E. Howard Hunt's wife covered up the Nixon Ford Bush Rockefeller Averell Harriman CIA operations that led to JFK being assassinated and the Watergate break-in attempt by Nixon operatives to suppress at least for a few decades the truth of the JFK, RFK, and Martin Luther King and Malcolm X (and also) Marilyn Monroe and Dorothy Kilgallen assassinations conducted by the oil industry and royalty-obsessed CIA.

The events of this conspiracy theory span Watergate, UAL flight 553, TWA Flight 800, the Bush and LBJ families oil connections and Murder Inc. used in the assassination of JFK, and the P-51 Inglewood Manhattan beach Los Angeles country assassination of Robert F. Kennedy. Los Angeles became the epicenter of this in the 1920's when Joseph Kennedy Sr and (later Admiral) Halsey got some Windsor family bastard children out of wedlock, into orphanages and preschools in the USA where under hidden identities these children were examined at early ages for signs of the London FOXP2 gene that runs in some well connected elite families including the Kennedy Family (including Rosemary) Rockefeller family, and my own the Donegan family through GLorian and I Edward Paul Donegan express the gene.

James Paul Donegan was born in Dorchester Massachusetts a Roman Catholic. He met Glorian Donegan and married her in 1952. He joined the US Army Air Force and may have been a test pilot for the P-51 at Inglewood and certainly flew it in WWII over Europe as a RECON Pilot and later took part in the first and second atomic bombing of Japan. As part of that he watched the Los Alamos New Mexico test blast from a nearby tower. Following WWII he flew in the Korean war from ATUSGI and later for TWA where he seemed to know Barry Seal and "Florence" from accounting.

Like St John Hunt son of E. Howard Hunt I am telling the story of the Bush Family Treason and CIA downing of airplanes (such as UAL 533) that cover up the Ford Nixon Bush Rockefeller ties into the assassination of JFK and RFK and others by the CIA.

When Jim (my father) met Glorian (my mother) did it have anything to do with DNA? Yes and I was born in 1961 the year the Nobel Prize was given to DNA researchers basing their work on Slide 51.

Jim Donegan in the 1950's was part of Mutagenic studies, his DNA part of atomic test blast and being airborne over Nagasaki and Hiroshima. Glorian was a bastard child of some Windsor family member or another (Edward or Albert) in a line like that the FOXP2 gene runs in that is very similar to ADHD and Dyslexia that responds to amphetamine treatments. Her secret connections to public figures who wanted to hide they had defects made her a good choice as an egg donor IF they wished (and they did) to study their offspring from generation to generation as Eugenics studies. So Mr Mutagenic meets Mrs Eugenics. And Dr Sidey Gotlieb and the CIA and Donald Barr were interested.

The formation of the Marshall Plan was to overthrow soverign nations with elite Robber-Barron families and companies and other CIA front companies or organizations as cold war rather than nuclear war fighting. The V2 made the world too small and more "living space" around first world nations was being sought.

DOROTHY, "AN AMORAL AND DANGEROUS WOMAN": THE MURDER OF E. HOWARD HUNT'S WIFE WATERGATE'S DARKEST SECRET

The post WWII Marshall Plan, the National Security Act and the unconditional surrender of Japan made it the forward CIA base of operations as the Cold War broke out. Dorpthy a Treasury Dept employee had escaped China as fell to Communists then worked for W. Averell Harriman. and the CIA where she met E. Howard Hunt.

In 1951 to 1954 and really since 1947 E. Howard Hunt and others were working on CIA overthrows and starting the defense against the USSR. Chauncey Marvin Holt will be part of overthrowing Guatamla with E. Howard Hunt in 1954.

Dorothy Hunt photographed in 1954 the mother of St. John Hunt in Japanese clothing acquired from time in Japan. When we the Donegan family of origin James and Glorian lived in Moraga, California USA my father who had the new construction of the home built to spec included a Japanese Rock Garden that from the study and Tom Donegan's bedroom was part of the view looking at into the Rheem Valley including St. Mary's school. My mother often teased about the Japanese gardern hired for the job who created "the Lock Garden" has he trouble pronouncing the English word.

Born on April Fools Day in 1920 in a small Midwestern town, Dorothy Louise Wetzel would live quite an interesting life. As a child growing up in Dayton Ohio she had no way of knowing that she would one day become a threat to the most powerful man in the world; the President of the United States of America, Richard Milhous Nixon. (By St John Hunt)

In 1952 JFK and Jackie will marry, James and Glorian Donegan will marry, E. Howard Hunt and Dorothy Hunt will marry, I think after living with Prouty and others at the CIA operation in Japan were they were all stationed.

E. Howard Hunt became the OPC Station Chief in Mexico City in 1950, and recruited and supervised William F. Buckley Jr., who worked under Hunt in his OPC Station in Mexico during the period 1951-1952. Buckley and Hunt remained lifelong friends, and Buckley became godfather to Hunt’s first three children. -Wikipedia

The Office of Policy Coordination (OPC) was the covert operation wing of the United States Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). Created as a department of the CIA in 1948, it actually operated independently until October 1950. OPC existed until 1 August 1952, when it was merged with the Office of Special Operations (OSO run by Prouty along with General Edward Lansdale) to form the Directorate of Plans (DDP).

Chapter 9 of book Dorothy: Picture Early 1954: Dorothy and St. John, Washington, D.C. Tokyo, 1954. I (St. John Hunt) was born in March of 1954 and remained nameless for several weeks. My earliest recollections of life are from Japan. I was the first born son and treated as a little god.

I assert the Donegan Oswald RECON story is at Atsugi RECON base my father flew out of during the Korean War 1952 and as pursuit pilot chasing bogies from the polar route of RUSSIA.

Col Prouty was close to Buckley and ghost wrote political articles for him.

L. Fletcher Prouty retrieved from Wikipedia and copied or modified to here

L. Fletcher Prouty's U.S. Army portrait.

Prouty served in the predecessor of the Defense Intelligence Agency sitting in the office with Lansdale, went on to create the Defense Intelligence Agency at Robert McNamara's request. in the 1952 range of time E. Howard Hunt, James Donegan (my father) and Prouty were stationed in Japan as a CIA operation with the USAF formly the US Army Air Force.

Post WII service

After the war, Prouty accepted an assignment from the U.S. Army in September 1945 to inaugurate the ROTC program at Yale University, where he also taught during each scholastic year from 1946 to 1948. This timeline intersects with the years that George Bush and William F. Buckley, Jr. also spent at Yale. Prouty fondly recalled Buckley at that time in his role as editor of the Yale Daily News, and Prouty later told an interviewer in 1989 that he had written for Buckley on several occasions.

In 1950 he transferred to Colorado Springs to build Air Defense Command.

Important: From 1952 to 1954 he was assigned to Korean War duties in Japan, where he served as Military Manager for Tokyo International Airport (Haneda) during the post-war U.S. occupation. Later in Marshfiild Massachustetes the Donegan family and Prouty family would be freidns and I Edward Paul Donegan remember him.

In 1955 he was assigned to the coordination of operations between the fledgling U.S. Air Force and the CIA. As a result of a CIA commendation for this work he was awarded the Legion of Merit by the U.S. Air Force, promoted to colonel, and assigned to the Office of the Secretary of Defense.[citation needed]

Following the creation of the Defense Intelligence Agency and termination of the OSO [predecessor to the DIA Prouty was assigned to create the Defense Intelligence Agency] by Secretary Robert McNamara, Prouty was transferred to the Office of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and charged with the creation a similar organization (that being the Defense Intelligence Agency on a global scale (that would study world regimes and plan overthrows of potentially problematic nations.)

The Kennedy Administration plan was to create a military run operation that not only paralleled but took over formerly CIA operations. Lansdale though was a CIA flunky tied to General CD Jackson and others of the CIA. Coordination with the CIA would always occur but the DIA was huge in comparison to the CIA and JM Wave with Robert Kennedy in charge “augmented” the formerly independent CIA control of cover operations.

The Fouth Force by Prouty

In the War Plans game the CIA is scheduled to play the actual role of the Fourth Force -- the name given to it by the Pentagon. The CIA Fourth Force would serve under the Supreme Allied Command. The Army, Navy, and Air Force would have paramount roles in time of all-out war. Then the CIA, the Fourth Force, would go into action. This Fourth Force was not an intelligence force; the military, even before the days of the Defense Intelligence Agency, which was created in 1961, was extremely jealous of its own intelligence capability and did not want any CIA meddling. But it readily accepted the CIA as the Fourth Force in a paramilitary sense, for duty during wartime.

The CIA, under Allen Dulles, put exceptionally able operatives into each military headquarters. The over-worked planning staffs found these extra hands ready and eager to help with any odd task. Such offices as Subsidiary Plans, Special Operations, Psychological Warfare, and Unconventional Warfare began to spring up and they were all loaded with "helpful" CIA men.

President Eisenhower continued the policy. One of the old Clandestine Operations documents known as NSCID 10/2 was updated to NSC 5412/2 and it set forth limitations concerning the role the CIA could play in clandestine operations. In the margin of one of the master copies of NSC 5412/2 Eisenhower had noted in his own handwriting that nothing was to be given to the CIA that would enable it to create a force that would permit it to operate over any lengthy period of time, or to be able to operate in such a manner that the operation would not remain "covert." In other words, clandestine operations were to be small and "one time" -- so said Eisenhower.

But the CIA was gathering power as the Fourth Force. It began in Europe, where military maneuvers were to be held in Germany. All the armed forces, including the Fourth Force, were to take part. Each service had its own equipment, established by the War Plan.

As the exercise took shape and the military forces began to prepare for their roles, the CIA asked for weapons, trucks, radios, jeeps, and other items it would need to "play" Fourth Force. This was a problem. The military couldn't fund the CIA and the CIA could not go to Congress itself and ask for military equipment on a permanent basis. The military forces came up with a solution. The Army, Navy, and Air Force all created "phony" CIA cover units. Then they let the CIA "equip" these units according to the War Plan and in time the CIA acquired a huge stockpile of military equipment, even aircraft, ostensibly for its formal Fourth Force mission.

How a country treats its dissidents including here in the USA and including those who are witnesses against the "official" accounts of the JFK assassination is what I am writing about and why my life and other lives have been endangered or lost to covert activities.

Jen Moore a mocked Conspiracy Theorist who was telling the Donegan family story (and I am the last living person of that family-of-origin or descendant from it) and how it related to the CIA and the Allen Dulles assassination of JFK is the story I am telling and may just be lost to history if I can not get this message across.

Jen Moore's tale was also told by Ted Gunderson who I believe along with Jen Moore and many others (JFK, RFK, Sonny Bono, Marilyn Monroe, maybe Clark Gable, Malcolm X (of Nebraska,) and Dr Martin Luther King and Andrew Breitbart and Micheal Hastings) were assassinated over and are connected to the cult compound of Julian Assange.

Jen Moore will talk about personality research being conducted across generations of families and how this was a factor in the child abuse scandal of Franklin Nebraska there was Conspiracy of Silence over.

Conspiracy of Silence" is a powerful, disturbing documentary revealing a nationwide child abuse and pedophilia ring that leads to the highest levels of government. Featuring intrepid investigator John DeCamp, a highly decorated Vietnam war veteran and 16-year Nebraska state senator, "Conspiracy of Silence" reveals how rogue elements at all levels of government have been involved in systematic child abuse and pedophilia to feed the base desires of key politicians. -Jimensue

Ted Gunderson wrote the introduction to the published work of the Nebraska Leadership Conference that used William Colby of the CIA to investigate the Whitehouse and CIA involvement. Not only was Colby former CIA so was John DeCamp each of whom might have known my family.

Cardoricrash.jpg is a news clipping image of the invstigator.

Gary Caradori was an independent researcher hired to investigate the Franklin child prostitution ring. As former law enforcement, a trained investigator and interviewer he had sufficient credibility to be employed by the Nebraska legislature.

He interviewed a number of victims and obtained such damning evidence that on 10 July 1990 - foreshadowing a boast made two decades later by Sunny Sheu - Caradori called his boss, Nebraska State Senator Loran Schmit, to inform him that they now had the subjects of their investigation "by the short hairs." The next morning he died in a small plane crash. Although his other personal effects were recovered, the briefcase of evidence was somehow lost. - Wikipedia

William Colby life-long CIA operative asset and expert had warned all parties they might be assassinated if they dug too deep, the CIA had real fears about what would be found at at these sites. Gary Caradori was returning from Vatican officials in Chicago and I Believe the there was a Chicago element to the the Obama story tied into the long running CIA Famiy Jewels program of interconnected assets around the world in a focused CIA plan.

Mystery: By 1990, 41 year old Gary Caradori was known mostly as a private investigator, but also as an excellent pilot in his spare time. Gary was a devoted husband to his wife Sandie and father to their son Andrew nicknamed AJ.

On July 10, 1990, Gary flew with 8 year old AJ on a private plane, he was piloting, to the Chicago area to watch the national All Star Baseball game... and hours later Gary and AJ took flight back towards home to Nebraska. At around 2:30 am on the 11th, reports came in that a plane had crashed in a nearby cornfield … and when investigators came across the scene, they determined the passengers were de*d and later learned they were Gary and AJ Caradori. At first, it seemed like a tragic accident … but further looking in, some investigators believed the plane had possibly been tampered with, and that it may have broken apart mid flight.

This was further believed after investigators learned that Gary had been hired to investigate the local Franklin scandal, which was an investigation that looked into prosti and a s*x ring possibly involving prominent politicians and businessmen.

Gary’s family also told local press that the family had been receiving many de*th threats because of Gary’s involvement … but even after an investigation, the plane crash was ruled an accident … to the disbelief of many … thoughts? 👀 #90scrimetime #90s #truecrimecommunity #mystery #illinois #suspicious https://www.instagram.com/90scrimetime/

Ted Gunderson and others took the statements from Colby of their lives being at risk very seriously. William Colby was found dead under suspicious circumstances and Ted Gunderson who was working with them on Nebraska and McMartin School asserts the FBI and CIA had poisoned him and Gang Stalked him, firing at his windows threatening his daughter's life, and breaking into his home leading Gunderson to write an article about the CIA and FBI "Techniques used to silence journalists" and made the same assertions Ed Donegan and Jen Moore make of covert smear campaigns, fights with thugs, break-ins, etc.,

William Colby is still easily find-able on YouTube videotaped talking about the Franklin matter and the lethal need the CIA had to cover up the CIA program their.

On January 7, 2003 Ted Gunderson wrote in a display personal certainty the following.

> “If anything happens to me, my family, or my close associates-including my attorney former Nebraska state senator John DeCamp) Susan Ford, or other individuals in my informational network, the names of the leaders the cult/drug network and additional information will be released to the public.
> Regarding Mr Colby, he did not drown and he did not commit suicide.-he was murdered shot in the head.”

As for the circumstances of Colby’s death (and I assert CIA Station Chief Welsh was assassinated too) a well informed expert on a very long string of deaths …

Ted Gunderson was meeting with Robert K. Kennedy when RFK learned JFK had been assassinated. The meeting had been regarding fighting the Mafia.

When he wrote the introduction to the Franklin Nebraska story Gunderson had long been on the case of the McMartin Preschool I had gone to probably starting at one year old and that is when the December 1962 permit request was filed for new construction though it had operated since 1955.

Ted Gunderson had retired from the FBI having been a right hand man to Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy as an Anti Rackets Washing DC FBI operative and later assigned to investigate the deaths of Marilyn Monroe and JFK and others as FBI.

The OSS CIA Propaganda Bio of Glorian Donegan

As with E. Howard Hunt and Dorothy Louise Wetzel the parents of St. John Hunt the parents of Edward Paul Donegan were brought together by the OSS CIA. This family history is secret though because there was a "past" to Glorian Gainey. Nothing that she had done wrong herself but her identity led to a secret of the British Royal family and the some of the covert history of WWI and WWII.

Jen Moroe died asserting a Conspiracy Theory that the woman who lived in the 859. North Randolph 2nd floor apartment in Arlington Virginia USA (or actually had lived along with Edward Donegan myself) had a hidden history tied to Nazis coming into the USA and an NWO cabal based in the Kennedy assassination by Allen Dulles and others were covering up elites and human trafficking and underground railroads dating back to the history of WWI. Jen Moore was correct and I can confirm that and I am now tellingthat same story.

In this image labeled 89 how underground railroad of early 20th Century history was part of orphaned life of Glorain Gainey my mother.

Art Mirrors Life

Glorian Gainey my mother who was born in North Carolina near Dean Rusk's school Davidson College was (later the Rockefeller Fund manage 1952-1959 then Secretary of State under JFK) was a rescue of what was an out of wedlock mother shame for that era.

Maria Kutschera had TWO family branches. What I call the Step Family Branch was that in 1927 she married widowed Barron Von Trapp and became Barroness Von Trapp. When she did that she owed Franz Kutschera a favor and sang Nazi songs with the Von Trapp children for the next 9 years or so finaly unwilling to do so and fleeing in about 1936 or so.

The paternal branch of the family was her leaving the Convent pregnant in 1926. That was probably a bad fit for the boisterous and flighty nun novice but she was already an orphan and thus Franz Kutschera her deceased father's uncle (and an SS General assassinated by the Poles in WWII in Operation Kutschera) was her guardian. He had arranged her out of wedlock births moved into the USA through Joseph Kennedy Sr. Undersecretary of the Navy FDR, and Admiral Halsey.

Strangely enough this history is told but anonymize in cinema made by Howard Hughes and others and it goes to aviation, the Battle of Britain and how after the fall of Europe to Nazi panzers it was gained back by air superiority.

It is almost certain they met at the Desert Inn in 1951 or 1952 (Jim and Glorian) and I will show some anonmized media.

Some of that story of air power defeating ground forces in WWII in cinema

German tanks were an important part of the Wehrmacht and played a fundamental role during the whole war, and especially in the blitzkrieg battle strategy. In the subsequent more troubled and prolonged campaigns, German tanks proved to be adaptable and efficient adversaries to the Allies. When the Allied forces technically managed to surpass the earlier German tanks in battle, they still had to face the experience and skills of the German tank crews and most powerful and technologically advanced later tanks, such as the Panther, the Tiger I and Tiger II, which had the reputation of being fearsome opponents.

The Wehrmacht were the unified armed forces of Nazi Germany from 1935 to 1945. It consisted of the Heer (army), the Kriegsmarine (navy) and the Luftwaffe (air force).

Battle of Britain 12 minute documentary on 303 Squadron

Your browser does not support the video tag.

The 303 Squadron. A legendary outfit made up mainly from Polish aces in exile. Initially frowned upon by the British as undisciplined and lacking skill, the Poles took to their Hawker Hurricanes and became heroes during the battle of Britain. Mirosław Ferić kept a diary of the squadron's exploits, victories and losses. While it's difficult to estimate the exact contribution of every unit into such huge battles as the Battle of Britain. Beyond all question, 303 Squadron was one of the most impactful units of the RAF. Initial wartime reports mention 126 victories by 303 Squadron during the Battle. According to the most recent research they are credited with over 58 verified victories, which still makes them the most efficient aerial unit in the Battle.

Battle of Britain 1969 film. At a seminal moment in World War II, British Air Chief Marshal Sir Hugh Dowding (Laurence Olivier) must rally his outnumbered pilots against Hitler's feared Luftwaffe. Besieged by German bombing runs, the Brits counter with an aggressive air campaign of their own. Within months, the Nazis find themselves on the run, thanks to Dowding's tactical genius and the work of talented squadron leaders (Michael Caine, Christopher Plummer) and other brave patriots.

He meets a future wife referred to Olga who defected from communist (Rather than WWII socialist) country. National Socialism is what Nazi stood for.

Begun in 1949 as CIA and Howard Hughes propaganda about Western aviation it was shelved but then release in 1957 when the USSR launched Sputnik. Jet PIlot showcases how on the Western Front the Nazis were turned back and purused into Central Europe in a partial way.

The Von Trapp Family Singers (excerpt)

The German language film that predates The Sound of Music in the USA shows Maria Kutchera leaving the convent pregnant in 1926. Like the Von Trapp children singing propaganda for Hitler, like Jet Pilot 1957 and other OSS CIA backed propoganda these fictionalized or semi-fictionalized or re-enactments were CIA backed.

If we ware to believe Albert of York or Edward of Wales was testing bastard children in 1926 might there be a song about it?

I think that that also explains why Yoko Ono was correct to break up the Beatles as they protested British imperialism with the CIA and using CIA backed agents of influence in Indonesia and elsewhere were planed. Col Prouty acknowledge and publicized the CIA and Nixon who was V.P. planning for Indonesia at least since 1958 and most say before. Indirect rule is if they get a person they back into sovereign authority or media influence in countries they wish to sway. Saudi Arabia was a partner in those plans with Rockefeller oil interests and this led to the assassination of Malcolm X whose interest and cooperation with J. Edgar Hoover was fleeting and am matter of regret to him.

Morrison is also notable for his connections to high-level political and intelligence operations during the Cold War, which is where his son, deLesseps S. Morrison Jr., comes into play. In the early 1960s, President John F. Kennedy appointed deLesseps S. Morrison Jr. to conduct a high-profile investigation into the CIA's Latin American operations, particularly in the wake of tensions during the Cold War. The investigation was tied to concerns over the CIA's covert activities in the region, especially after the Bay of Pigs invasion and rising fears of communist influence in Latin America. The investigation led by Morrison Jr. was part of Kennedy's efforts to reassess U.S. policies and intelligence operations in the region during a very tense period of the Cold War.

Howard Heinz (1877-1941) By Richard Sanders, Editor, Press for Conversion!

Heinz is known to have donated at least $2,500 to American Liberty League and $5,876 to one of its fascist front groups, the Crusaders.

Howard Heinz (1877-1941) was the son of Bavaria immigrant, John Henry Heinz, who founded the Heinz company in 1869. After attending the small, private Shady Side Academy, Howard entered Yale University in 1900. He joined Delta Kappa Epsilon, an exclusive fraternity whose members have included Presidents George Bush, Jr. and Sr., Vice-President Dan Quayle, banker J.P. Morgan, newspaper magnate William R. Hearst, chewing-gum millionaire William Wrigley and motel man, Howard Johnson. When Heinz left Yale, he worked his way up through the family business from advertising and sales to president. He led the company for 22 years (1919-1941).

His directorships included Pennsylvania Railroad, the Mellon Bank, the Carnegie Institute and the National Industrial Conference Board (NICB). Founded in 1916, the NICB is the oldest of the "policy discussion groups" for big business leaders and is similar to the Council on Foreign Relations.

When Howard died in 1941, his son H.J. Heinz II, took over the company and some of his father's political concerns. H.J. Heinz II was on the "all-star board of directors" of the National Committee for a Free Europe (NCFE), which formed in 1948 as Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty. U.S. intelligence funded this propaganda to support "the anti-Communist work of numerous [Eastern European] emigré organizations," using captured Nazi funds left over from the CIA's campaign to stop a communist victory in Italy's 1948 elections. The NCFE board provided a "thinly veiled 'private-sector'… cover to explain where all the money was coming from" (Christopher Simpson, Blowback: America's Recruitment of Nazis, 1988)

Henry John Heinz II (July 10, 1908 February 23, 1987) was an American business executive and CEO of the H. J. Heinz Company based in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, US. His grandfather Henry J. Heinz founded the company in the nineteenth century, and he worked in a variety of positions within the company before becoming CEO.

Heinz II was the father of John Heinz (III), a Republican member of the U.S. House of Representatives and Senate, who died in a 1991 plane crash. Political party Republican

Some people can't put their minds around real history. They can't conceive of a world with that much deception. When you wonder how we could have so much false history, recall what Hitler wrote in Mein

Kampf:

> The size of the lie is a definite factor in causing it to be believed, because the vast masses of a nation are in the depths of their hearts more easily deceived than they are consciously and intentionally bad.
>
> The primitive simplicity of their minds renders them more easy victims of a big lie than a small one, because they themselves often tell little lies but would be ashamed to tell big ones.
> Such a form of lying would never enter their heads. They would never credit others with the possibility of such great impudence as the complete reversal of facts. Even explanations would long leave them in doubt and hesitation, and any trifling reason would dispose them to accept a thing as true. Something therefore always remains and sticks from the most imprudent of lies a fact which all bodies and individuals concerned in the art of lying in this world know only too well, and therefore they stop at nothing to achieve this end.

Panic on the Schoolyard: The Merion midair collision (death of Senator John Heinz) Admiral Cloudberg Author (and collector and archiver of related reports) at https://admiralcloudberg.medium.com/

"The bottom line", in Roufs' judgment, "is that it pretty much looks like a small bomb to the controls. Probably remotely detonated. And, remember, a little over an hour of so, Wellstone and Kennedy were traveling together. That might also become a factor in the timing, should the investigation ever reach a higher level." The only alternative that fits the picture, in Roufs' view, is a suicide job by one of the pilots. "I would doubt that, but stranger things have happened."

Ten years ago, Walter Mondale and Ted Kennedy were at a fundraising event in downtown Minneapolis.

Kennedy was surprised that Sen. Paul Wellstone wasn't at the event.

"Where's Paul?" Kennedy asked Mondale.

"He needed to be at a funeral up north," Mondale said.

Kennedy understood. The two continued to work the crowd until someone approached.

"Could you step into the hallway?" the two Democrats were asked.

They moved outside the room, into the quiet of a hallway.

"A plane has gone down, and we're very worried," they were told. "We don't know what's happened, but we're afraid Paul and Sheila might have been on it."

Kennedy and Mondale sat down, stunned.

Within 10 minutes, they were told that their worst fears had come to pass. The Wellstones, their daughter Marcia Wellstone Markuson, staffers Mary McEvoy, Tom Lapic and Will McLaughlin and pilots Richard Conroy and Michael Guess had been killed in the crash. - https://www.minnpost.com/politics-policy/2012/10/mondale-talks-candidly-about-paul-wellstone-s-death-and-legacy-and-tumultuou/

The wreckage of Heinz's Piper Aerostar lies on the front lawn of Merion Elementary School. (Main Line Today)

On the 4th of April 1991, a hired Piper Aerostar carrying Pennsylvania Senator John Heinz experienced a landing gear problem while on approach to Philadelphia. Unsure whether the landing gear was down and locked, the pilots asked for help, and the pilot of a nearby helicopter offered to fly underneath the plane and look at the landing gear. As the two aircraft flew in formation over the suburb of Lower Merion, something went horribly wrong: without warning, the helicopter struck the airplane from below, sending debris flying in all directions. As pieces of the aircraft rained over an area of several square blocks, the fuselage of the helicopter crashed to earth in the playground of an elementary school where recess was underway, killing two six-year-old schoolgirls along with both pilots. Simultaneously, the Piper Aerostar crashed on the school's front lawn, killing Senator Heinz and the two crewmembers. The bizarre and tragic crash shocked the nation and left a school in mourning. But how could such an outlandish accident occur in the first place? It would be up to the NTSB to reveal the chain of bad decisions that led to the deaths of seven people at Merion Elementary.

For Senator John Heinz of Pennsylvania, April 4th 1991 was to be a day as busy as any other. It was Easter break and the United States Senate was on recess, but the work of a Senator stops for nothing, and today Heinz had a packed schedule. He was to meet with the editorial board of the Philadelphia Inquirer, attend a meeting of the town council in the Philadelphia suburb of Media, and attend a field hearing for the Senate Special Committee on Aging, where he was to speak about Medicare and telephone scams. During the 14 years following his election to the Senate in 1977, the moderate Republican had enjoyed strong popularity, and his presence was constantly in demand. TWA 800

Many readers of this site have asked me to include a section on TWA Flight 800. The more I see and hear the more it is clear that whatever the truth is, it is not being shared with the general public.

On the news on 12/5/97, it was reported that although the NTSB had to move their public hearing on this case to a larger forum to accommodate the huge interest, they were specifically omitting both eyewitness testimony and the results of chemical tests which indicated that traces of solid fuel of the type used in missiles had been found on fabric stolen from the plane during the recovery process.

So instead of dealing with scientific evidence of a missile, matching the accounts of scores of eyewitnesses, what is the FBI going to do? They are going to prosecute the people who stole the evidence. And why did the people still evidence? Because they were concerned the government was going to whitewash evidence of "friendly fire" and lie about the evidence.

When I saw that, I knew I had to put this page up. Each of the links below leads to many, many other places with information. Please check these out.

I think it's very important that the truth must come out on whatever happened in the sky, not just for the victims, but for the airlines, future passengers, and all those around the world who think our government is lying to us about what really happened. Government depends for its power on one of two things - either military suppression, or consent of the governed. I think all of us would rather live in a country governed by the latter rather than the former. But if the government is not telling us the truth, it really hasn't obtained our consent. We need to consider where that leads.

Senator Paul Wellstone was he murdered by the CIA?

Wellstone was born in Washington, D.C., the second son of Ukrainian Jewish immigrants Leon and Minnie Wellstone. His father changed the family name from Wexelstein after encountering antisemitism during the 1930s.[1] Raised in Arlington, Virginia, Wellstone attended Wakefield High School and Yorktown High School, graduating in 1962.

Paul Wellstone, former member of the United States Senate from Minnesota

Paul David Wellstone (July 21, 1944 - October 25, 2002) was an American academic, author, and politician who represented Minnesota in the United States Senate from 1991 until he was killed in a plane crash in Eveleth, Minnesota, in 2002.

In 1999, Wellstone formed an exploratory committee to run for President of the United States in 2000. After campaigning in the early primary states, he announced he would not seek the presidency because of chronic physical limitations from a college wrestling injury. His condition was later diagnosed as multiple sclerosis. As senator, Wellstone authored the Wellstone Amendment for the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 2002. His efforts toward campaign finance reform were overturned in 2010 by the U.S. Supreme Court in Citizens United v. Federal Election Commission.

Eleven days before the 2002 U.S. Senate election, Wellstone died in a plane crash in Eveleth, Minnesota. His wife, Sheila, and daughter, Marcia, also died on board. Wellstone's sons, David and Mark, were not on the flight, and until 2018 co-chaired the Wellstone Action nonprofit organization in honor of their parents.

On October 25, 2002, Wellstone, along with seven others, died in an airplane crash in eastern Minnesota, at 10:22 a.m. He was 58 years old. The other victims were his wife, Sheila; one of his three children, Marcia; the two pilots; and campaign staffers Mary McEvoy, Tom Lapic and Will McLaughlin. The airplane was en route to Eveleth, where Wellstone was to attend the funeral of Martin Rukavina, a steelworker whose son Tom Rukavina served in the Minnesota House of Representatives. Wellstone decided to go to the funeral instead of a Minneapolis rally and fundraiser attended by Mondale and fellow Senator Ted Kennedy

Martin "Benny" Rukavina, 85, of Virginia died Monday, Oct. 21, 2002, at the Virginia Convalescent Center.

Martin "Benny" Rukavina was born Feb. 18, 1917, to Thomas and Lucy (Basic) Rukavina in Virginia. He graduated from Virginia Roosevelt High School and attended Virginia and Mesabi Community College. He married Martha Mordini on Nov. 22, 1941, in Virginia.

Wellstone attended the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill (UNC) on a wrestling scholarship. In college he was an undefeated Atlantic Coast Conference wrestling champion. After his freshman year, he married Sheila Ison Wellstone. He graduated with a Bachelor of Arts in political science in 1965, and was elected Phi Beta Kappa. In May 1969, Wellstone earned a PhD in political science from UNC. His doctoral dissertation on the roots of black militancy was titled Black Militants in the Ghetto: Why They Believe in Violence.

Paul Wellstone was the only progressive in the U.S. Senate. Mother Jones magazine once described him as, "The first 1960s radical elected to the U.S. senate." He was also the last. Since defeating incumbent Republican Rudy Boschowitz 12 years ago in a grassroots upset, Wellstone emerged as the strongest, most persistent, most articulate and most vocal Senate opponent of the Bush administration.

In a senate that is one heartbeat away from Republican control, Wellstone was more than just another Democrat. He was often the lone voice standing firm against the status-quo policies of both the Democrats and the Republicans. As such, he earned the special ire of the Bush administration and the Republican Party, who made Wellstone's defeat that party's number one priority this year.

Various White House figures made numerous recent campaign stops in Minnesota to stump for the ailing campaign of Wellstone's Republican opponent, Norm Coleman. Despite being outspent and outgunned, however, polls show that Wellstone's popularity surged after he voted to oppose the Senate resolution authorizing George Bush to wage war in Iraq. He was pulling ahead of Coleman and moving toward a victory that would both be an embarrassment to the Bush administration and to Democratic Quislings such as Hillary Clinton who voted to support "the president."

Then he died.

Wellstone now joins the ranks of other American politicians who died in small plane crashes. Another recent victim was Missouri's former Democratic governor, Mel Carnahan, who lost his life in 2000, three weeks before Election Day, during his Senatorial race against John Ashcroft. Carnahan went on to become the first dead man to win a Senatorial race, humiliating and defeating the unpopular Ashcroft posthumously. Ashcroft, despite his unpopularity, went on to be appointed Attorney General by George W. Bush. Investigators determined that Carnahan's plane went down due to "poor visibility."

Carnahan was the second Missouri politician to die in a small plane crash. The first was Democratic Representative Jerry Litton, whose plane crashed the night he won the Democratic nomination for senate in 1976. His Republican opponent ultimately captured the seat from his successor in November.

While an article in the New York Times on Saturday pointed out the danger politicians face due to their heavy air travel schedules, the death of a senator or member of Congress is still relatively rare, with only one other sitting U.S. Senator, liberal Republican John Heinz, dying in a plane crash since World War II. Heinz, who entered office as an outspoken opponent of the Vietnam War, later emerged as a strong proponent of health care, social services, public transportation and the environment. He also urged reconciliation with Cuba. He died when the landing gear on his small plane failed to function, and a helicopter dispatched to survey the problem crashed into his plane.

One former senator, John Tower, also died in a small plane crash. Tower was best known as the chair of the Tower Commission, which investigated the Reagan/Bush era Iran/Contra scandal.

Another member of a prominent government commission who died in a small plane crash was former Democratic representative and House Majority Leader Hale Boggs. Boggs was best known as one of the seven members of the Warren Commission, which investigated the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. The commission found that Lee Harvey Oswald was acting alone when he killed the president. Boggs, it turns out, had "strong doubts" that Oswald acted alone, but went along with the commission findings. Later, in 1971 and 1972, he went public with his doubts. He was presumed dead after the small plane carrying him and Democratic Representative Nicholas Begich disappeared in 1972.

Texas Democratic Representative Mickey Leland also died in a plane crash. In his case, the six-term member of Congress and outspoken advocate of sanctions against the apartheid government of South Africa, died while traveling in Ethiopia. Another American politician to die overseas in a plane crash was the Clinton administration's Commerce Secretary, Ronald Brown, whose plane went down in the Balkans.

Anyone familiar with my work knows that I'm certainly not a conspiracy theorist. But to be honest, I know I wasn't alone in my initial reaction at this week's horrible and tragic news: that being my surprise that Wellstone had lived this long. Perhaps it's just my anger and frustration at losing one of the few reputable politicians in Washington, but I also felt shame. Shame for not writing in my column, months ago, that I felt that Paul Wellstone's life, more so than any other politician in Washington, was in danger. I felt that such speculation was unprofessional and would ultimately undermine my credibility. In the end, my own self-interest triumphed, and I never put my concerns into print. Neither did any other mainstream journalist, though I know of many who shared my concern.

When I heard Wellstone's plane went down, I immediately thought of Panamanian General Omar Torrijos, who in 1981 thumbed his nose at the Reagan/ Bush administration and threatened to destroy the Panama Canal in the event of a U.S. invasion. Torrijos died shortly thereafter when the instruments in his plane failed to function upon takeoff. Panamanians speculated that the U.S. was involved in the death of the popular dictator, who was replaced by a U.S. intelligence operative, Manuel Noreiga, who previously worked with George Bush Senior.

There is no indication today that Wellstone's death was the result of foul play. What we do know, however, is that Wellstone emerged as the most visible obstacle standing in the way of a draconian political agenda by an unelected government. And now he is conveniently gone. For our government to maintain its credibility at this time, we need an open and accountable independent investigation involving international participation into the death of Paul Wellstone. Hopefully we will find out, beyond any shadow of a doubt, that this was indeed an untimely accident. For the sake of our country, we need to know this.

Confirmation of her death occurred at approximately 8:00 p.m. local time (1:00 a.m. Eastern time The plane crash occurred about a half-mile off shore of the north shore of Molokai, shortly after taking off from Kalaupapa, Emergency officials responding to the crash site reported seeing eight people floating in the water wearing life vests.)

According to initial news reports, Fuddy was one of eight other people, including the pilot, in the plane and the only person to succumb to her injuries. Based on reports from EMS sources, three survivors were taken to Oahu, three to Molokai General Hospital and two members of the plane's party declined treatment.

James FILES (a/k/a James Earl Sutton) also claims in his account that ROSSELLI was involved in the Kennedy Assassination in Dallas. Tom Wadden, ROSSELLI's attorney, also stated after ROSSELLI died that he had confessed to him that he was deeply involved in

The Assassination Tapes retrieved from https://www.theatlantic.com/magazine/archive/2004/06/the-assassination-tapes/302964/ and copied or modified to here

Lyndon Johnson secretly recorded many of his telephone conversations as President. The tapes provide our only window into his thoughts after hearing what was then a rumor about CIA plots to assassinate Fidel Castro-information that shaped Johnson's views of both JFK's assassination and his own presidency. Herewith excerpts from his 1967 calls
By Max Holland

In July of 1973, six months after the death of Lyndon Baines Johnson, The Atlantic published an article by a journalist and former Johnson speechwriter named Leo Janos. "The Last Days of the President," about LBJ in retirement, was elegiac in tone and fact, save for one dissonant paragraph-in which Johnson volunteered his opinion that President John F. Kennedy's assassination had been the result of a conspiracy organized from Cuba. "I never believed that [Lee Harvey] Oswald acted alone, although I can accept that he pulled the trigger," he explained to Janos. Johnson thought such a conspiracy had formed in retaliation for U.S. plots to assassinate Fidel Castro; he had found after taking office that the government "had been operating a damned Murder Inc. in the Caribbean." [Murder Inc., was the Meyers Lansky Chauncey Holt team also tied to Bugsy Seigel in Vegas while Lansky and Holt worked from Florida on the Cuban gambling mafia operations.]

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1967, 9:40 A.M.
Call to Acting Attorney General Ramsey Clark

> CLARK: I think that what he [Jim Garrison] is workin' on must be the associations that Oswald had in the three or four months that he was down there [in New Orleans] in '62 [and] '63. I doubt … I think it'd just be incredible if he [Garrison] had anything that went beyond that. I think this subject is so volatile and emotional, though, that it could get confused and obscured.

Summary:

The second half of this post includes verbatim copy of a memorandum written by J. Edgar Hoover immediately after he met with LBJ in the Oval Office seven days after President Kennedy had been murdered. The first half analyzes some of the more remarkable details of this memo.

L. Fletcher Prouty, Colonel (retired) USAF, provided a xerox copy of this memo. Colonel Prouty was given a copy of this memo after his return as a VIP escort officer for a group travelling from Washington, D.C. to the South Pole.

In 1963, John Edgar Hoover and Lyndon Baines Johnson knew each other very well. They had lived across the street from each other for the past 19 years. A professional bureaucrat of formidable talents, a 29-year-old Hoover was appointed director of the Bureau of Investigation in 1924 (Hoover added "Federal" to the title in 1935) by then Attorney General Harlan F. Stone to clean up a corrupt organization. During WWII, President Roosevelt expanded the FBI's reach charging Hoover with investigations of Nazi and Communist activities in the U.S. The Cold War gave the Bureau new power and Hoover new glory. Hoover's dossiers continued to grow as well as his command of Congress, his manipulation and intimidation of the press, and his stature in the country. Hoover supplied Joe McCarthy with a great deal of the ammunition which enabled McCarthy to sustain his "crusade" far longer than would have been possible without Hoover's connivance.

When Robert Kennedy became Attorney General in 1961, Hoover's entrenched power-structures suffered a two-year, 10-month setback. Long before 1961, Hoover had created a direct channel of communication with whoever was the current occupant of the Oval Office -- bypassing the actual chain of command which went from the President, through the Attorney General, to Director of the FBI.

When LBJ assumed the Presidency, Hoover's direct link into the White House was re-established.

Not long before m(8 days before) he died, LBJ was interviewed by his friend and writer Leo Janos. In the July, 1973 issue of The Atlantic Monthly, Janos relates that LBJ told him:

1. that the assassination in Dallas had been part of a conspiracy";

2. "I never believed that Oswald acted alone . . .";

3. "we had been operating a damned Murder Inc. in the Carribean."

[Uncomfortably and hesitantly] I had heard that Hale Boggs was sayin' [that] he-Garrison-was sayin' that … or privately around town [was saying] that it [the assassination] could be traced back [to you]

… or that you could be found in it someplace, which … I can't believe he's been sayin' that. The Bureau says they haven't heard any such thing, and they got lots of eyes and ears.

'Course, that was a [credible] fella like Hale Boggs. But Hale gets pretty emotional about people [like Garrison] that he really doesn't like, and people who have fought him and been against him, and I would be more inclined to attribute it to that. Either that, or this guy Garrison [is] just completely off his rocker.

JOHNSON: Who did Hale tell this to?

CLARK [somewhat in disbelief]: Apparently Marvin [Watson].[1]

JOHNSON [aside to Watson, who was in the room]: [Did] Hale tell you that-Hale Boggs-that this fella [Garrison, this] district attorney down there, said that this is traced to me or somethin'?

WATSON: Privately he [Garrison] was using your name as having known about it [the assassination]. I said [to Boggs], Will you give this information to Barefoot Sanders?[2] Ramsey was out of town-this was Saturday night. [Boggs] said, I sure will. So I asked the operator to get Barefoot and Ramsey together, and they did.

JOHNSON [to Clark]: Yeah, I don't know about it. They don't ever let me in on it, Marvin and Jake [Jacobsen] over here, so you have to call me direct.[3]

CLARK: Well-

JOHNSON: They just think this stuff's for them.

CLARK: Such nutty things that … it's awfully explosive but … The press, really, has quite a jaundiced eye about it … and about Garrison, so far.[4] I had several press interviews out in Des Moines [on] Saturday evening and afternoon, and the thrust of their questions is, What kind of nut is this?

JOHNSON: Two things I think. You know [there's] this story going around about the CIA and their tryin' to get … sendin' in the folks to get [Fidel] Castro.

CLARK: To assassinate Castro.

JOHNSON: Have you got that full story laid out in front of you, and [do you] know what it is? Has anybody ever told you all the story?

CLARK: No.

JOHNSON: I think you oughta have that. I don't … it's incredible. I don't believe there's a thing in the world to it, and I don't think we oughta seriously consider it. But I think you oughta know about it.

CLARK: Who would I get it from?

JOHNSON: I've had it from three or four [sources]. I've forgotten who's come in here. I'll have to check it.

CLARK: Does the Bureau have it?

JOHNSON: No, I don't think so. You might ask 'em. Pearson-Drew Pearson-came [in] and gave it to me. [Pearson] said [Edward] Morgan[5] told him … [Morgan is James] Hoffa's lawyer. He [Morgan] says that they have a man that was involved, that was brought in to the CIA, with a number of others, and instructed by the CIA and the Attorney General [Robert Kennedy] to assassinate Castro after the Bay of Pigs [in 1961].[6]

CLARK [uncomfortably]: I've heard that … you know, I've heard that much. I just haven't heard [any] names, and places, and …

JOHNSON: Well, let's see who it is … let's see. I think it would be-[it would] look very bad on us if we'd had it reported to us [a] number of times and we just didn't pay any [attention]-just laughed … if this is true.

He [Morgan] says that his [client's] limitation-let's check it and see if [the statute of] limitation[s] does run out in November … they say that the limitation runs out in November.[7] I don't know about this conspiracy, or how much-how many years [the statute of limitations runs]-

CLARK: [It'd] be six years, all right, which would be November, probably. But it [the statute of limitations would] not [run out] for a concealed situation.

JOHNSON: Well, that's what I'd think. But anyway, he [Pearson] says in November he's [Rosselli's] going to tell it. And that-

CLARK: Mr. Pearson is [going to publish the story]?

JOHNSON: No. This individual [Rosselli].[8]

CLARK: This individual?

JOHNSON: Yeah. And these lawyers [Morgan, for one] have it.

There's just all kinds of things that come to me every day. I don't pay any attention to 'em, but maybe I was a little worried this mornin' because one of my lawyer friends told me I oughta call you and talk to you about it.[9] So [that] you'll have a file that protects you, that you just don't look like they report these things to us and we just throw 'em overboard and say, Well, we don't like 'em and it['s] not what we wanna hear. So we're not gonna do anything about it.

But anyway, [the story is] that following this, Castro said-they [the plotters] had these pills, and they're supposed to take 'em when they caught 'em, and they didn't get to take their pills-so he [Castro] tortured 'em. And they told him all about it, and who was present and why they did it. So he [Castro] said, okay. We'll just take care of that. So then he called Oswald and a group in, and told them to … about this meetin', and go set it up and get the job done.

CLARK: Uh-hmm.

JOHNSON: Now that's their story. And I talked to Abe [Fortas] about it first, and he just said, Well, it's so incredible that … he'd do it.[10]

[Brief discussion of controversy over FBI wiretapping.]

Now here's what I called about. I just think that if you haven't heard that, maybe you oughta put yourself in a position to either hear Pearson or whoever's circulatin' it. There've been two or three here circulatin' it to me, and Pearson was just one of 'em. But I've forgotten who the others are.[11] They were reputable people, or they wouldn't [have] gotten in here.

CLARK: Pearson was in last week.

JOHNSON: Who?

CLARK: I said, Pearson was in to see me last week and sat here for thirty [or] forty minutes [and] never mentioned anything about it.

JOHNSON: Well, he came to see me … came to see me in the [Executive] Mansion, oh, I'd say a month ago.[12] And there was before that, one or two others, but I can't remember who. They were responsible people. But it sounded just so [wild]… just like your tellin' me that Lady Bird was taking dope. I just wouldn't pay much attention to it. If I'm seein' her every day, I just don't believe that that was involved.

Anyway, I'll try to think of the other names and give 'em to you. He's the only one I can remember now, and I don't credit it … I credit it ninety-nine [and] ninety-nine one-hundredths percent untrue. But that's somethin' I think we oughta know has been reported, and y'all oughta do what you think oughta be done to protect yourself.

Leslianne Shedd 23 November 1996

Ethiopian Airlines Flight 961 was a scheduled international flight serving the route Addis Ababa Nairobi Brazzaville Lagos Abidjan. On 23 November 1996, the aircraft serving the flight, a Boeing 767-200ER, was hijacked[1] en route from Addis Ababa to Nairobi[2] by three Ethiopians seeking asylum in Australia.[3] The plane crash-landed in the Indian Ocean near Grande Comore, Comoros Islands, due to fuel exhaustion; 125 of the 175 passengers and crew on board, including the three hijackers, died.[3] This is the first recorded instance of a ditching utilizing a wide-body aircraft. Shedd was on her way to Kenay (where the CIA and Barrack Obama Sr. worked together) when the crash occurred.

Ron Brown's law partner was Tommy Boggs Jr., son Thomas Hale Boggs, the associate of Jim Garrison prosecuting Clay Shaw. An attempt was made on Tommy Boggs Jr. life at the same time of the Ron Brown crash. Thomas Hale Boggs Sr. was on the Warren Commission, doubted its findings and doubted the FBI, and went missing himself.

Ron Brown was a passenger on a United States Air Force (USAF) Boeing CT-43A aircraft (Flight IFO-21) that crashed in Croatia on April 3, 1996:

The crash

The plane was attempting to land at Dubrovnik Airport when it veered off course and crashed into a mountainside. The crash killed Brown and 34 other people, including corporate CEOs. The only passenger to survive the initial impact was Air Force Technical Sergeant Shelly Kelly, but she died on the way to the hospital.

The plane

The aircraft was originally a Boeing 737-200 built as a T-43A navigational trainer, but was later converted into a CT-43A executive transport aircraft. The military CT-43A version did not have a flight data recorder or a cockpit voice recorder.

The cause

The Air Force attributed the crash to pilot error and a poorly designed landing approach. The weather was worse than forecast, with rain clouds near the minimum ceiling.

Speculation

There was speculation about a government cover-up or conspiracy theory, in part because Brown was under investigation for corruption. However, an Armed Forces Institute of Pathology official ruled out anything beyond a blunt-force injury to the head.

The memorial

In March 2011, the United States Mission to the United Nations building in New York City was named in Brown's honor. There is also a memorial placed atop the hill where the plane crashed.

> Velji Do. Croatia. 2:58 P.M.:
> Everyone in this tiny collection of stone huts at the base of Sved Ivan hears a plane go directly overhead in the clouds, then rev its engines mightily for one instant.

Aboard the plane, the klaxon of its ground-proximity warning device suddenly blares, jolting pilot Davis. But the two-to-three seconds of warning are far too little. The plane's left wingtip touches ground, spinning it directly into the rocky hillside, making an earth-shaking explosion.

There is the cackling hiss of a huge fireball as the plane and its large load of fuel burn. Then a dead silence in the mist. The tail section remains quite intact, but the rest of IFOR-21 is all over the hill, making later identification of many of the passengers impossible. The nose of the fuselage is just a blackish smudge in the ground.

All 35 people are dead except for stewardess Shelly Kelly, who is riding in the tail. She sustains only minor cuts and bruises.

Cillipi. 3:18 P.M.:

U.S. authorities are notified that IFOR-21 is down, location unknown. However, they are to suffer 11 In hours of pre-planned confusion before arriving at the scene. One prominent report verifies that pieces of the wreckage have been spotted floating in the Adriatic. A later report says a CIA trawler has retrieved some pieces.

Republic of South Africa, approximately 4:00 P.M.:

News reports say an attempt is made on the life of Ron Brown's law partner, Tommy Boggs, by an unknown assailant in a staged car accident in Capetown. Later, Boggs refuses to talk about the attempt. Allegations have been made that Boggs was culpable in many of Brown's activities.

Cillipi, later that afternoon:

Niko Jerkuic goes home to collect his reward, but the reward is not waiting for him. It comes three days later: a bullet through the chest, administered just shortly before he is scheduled to be grilled by the U.S. Air Force accident investigation team.

The hit squad wraps his hand around the gun and departs. The Americans do not want a live witness who could spill the beans later. Like many of the Whitewater dead, Jerkuic is immediately labeled a suicide, even though there's no evidence - and a chest wound is a rare cause - especially with a large caliber pistol (unusual in Europe).

The quick official reason given for bachelor Jerkuic's death is despondence over romantic troubles with his girlfriend. I have been unable to find any verification for this. Instead, I have found that neighbors and friends all agree Jerkuic was NOT depressed. He bad survived the years of the Bosnian War. He was excited that life was finally getting better.

Crash site. 7:20 P.M.:

> Four hours and 20 minutes after the crash, the first Croation Special Forces search party arrives on the scene. They fund only stewardess Kelly surviving. They call for a helicopter to evacuate her to the hospital. When it arrives, Kelly is able to get on board without assistance from the medics.
> But Kelly never completes the short hop. She dies an route. According to multiple reports given to journalist/editor Joe L. Jordan, an autopsy later reveals a neat three-inch incision over her main femoral artery. It also shows the incision came at least three hours after all her other cuts and bruises.
> This creates in your mind a horrifying scene in the back of the chopper, as one Special Forces operative holds down the struggling woman while another slice her leg.
> Further autopsies of other passengers probably will not be made. Clinton ordered the cremation of all victims - it's hard to perform autopsies on ashes.

Ken Silvertein 2015 for The Intercept: Lobbyists who watched the State of the Union address "dealt with…jabs at their profession," The Hill reports, and they felt President Obama's address reinforced "an unfair and counterproductive stereotype" about how evil they are.

Lobbyists are professional liars (or at least a lot of them are; some of my best friends are lobbyists and they are not) and so the lobbyists cited in the story were surely joking. For example, one jab from Obama was that lobbyists had "rigged" the tax code "at the behest of corporations." Yes, that surely is a BIG LIE. (Note: Like lobbyists, Obama is a liar too; in his address he attacked lobbyists but he loves to take campaign money from them.)

The Hill story said the "influence industry [is] used to getting blamed for Washington's dysfunction." There is a good reason for that: it is in large part to blame for Washington's dysfunction.

And no one is, or was, more symptomatic or responsible for this pathetic state of dysfunction than Thomas Hale Boggs Jr., who died last September. Boggs, who in DC was universally known as "Tommy," was barely known beyond the Beltway so it's likely that most Americans had never heard his name. But here in the capital his passing was treated as a national tragedy and triggered a period of intense public mourning. [Note to readers: I originally wrote this story last fall for Racket, which no longer exists. Boggs has been dead for a while so it would have been better to run back then, but his legacy is alive and well.]

He was "a passionate advocate for American workers and middle-class families," House Democratic Leader Nancy Pelosi said of Boggs. Her counterpart in the upper chamber, Harry Reid, called him an "institution" and then-Senator Mary Landrieu of Louisiana, where Boggs was born, said his death "leaves emptiness in our hearts."

The DC media was no less reverential. Politico said he was part of the "political aristocracy" and a man of "unparalleled reputation." The Washington Post's obituary described him as a man known for his “gregarious charisma” and “deep-rooted connections to American political life,” and a follow-up piece reported that his friends were paying their respects by stopping by The Palm, “the venerable steakhouse” where a table he customarily occupied was “draped in a black tablecloth.”

So who was this champion of the common people and man of such unimpeachable integrity? The head of a charitable organization? A philanthropist? An advocate for the poor?

No, Boggs was a richly-paid lobbyist who ran his firm like a brothel, once saying, “We pick our clients by taking the first one who comes in the door.” With that as his guiding principle, Boggs and his firm compiled a client list that included America’s biggest, most criminally minded corporations and the world’s worst dictators.

For anyone with a moral compass, merely being an associate of Boggs would constitute a dark secret, akin to being related to Charles Manson or not recycling. But he was revered in official Washington and became one of the city’s most powerful people despite having spent virtually no time in government. Boggs briefly served in the LBJ administration, helping organize President Johnson’s antipoverty tour of Appalachia in 1964, but resigned after fifteen months because he didn’t like living on a government salary. Nor did he ever hold elective office. The one time he sought public approval, in a 1970 run for a House seat, Maryland voters overwhelmingly rejected him.

But he thrived at influence peddling and for years his firm, Patton Boggs, took in more money than any lobby shop in town. Boggs’s original source of success was access he gained through bloodlines – his father was a former Democratic majority leader in the House and his mother served nine terms in Congress – and over the years he increased his influence by shoveling a generous slice of his lobbying profits to politicians who could help his clients. Between 1989 and this year he and his firm's staff and PAC made more than $10 million in political donations. The five biggest recipients were, in order, Hillary Clinton, Barack Obama, John Kerry, Mitt Romney and George W. Bush.

All this made Boggs a fixture in DC's top circles and he lived a life surrounded by fellow members of the country's disconnected and unaccountable political elite. In that sense, the Palm, which Boggs co-owned at one time, was a fitting place for his unofficial wake. It caters almost exclusively to corporate executives, lobbyists and politicians because no one else can afford to eat there. (The menu includes a $72 filet mignon topped with crabmeat and Hollandaise Sauce, which may explain Boggs's fatal heart attack.)

Boggs was a Democrat but Patton Boggs, like all big Washington lobbying firms, hired from both sides of the aisle and its past and current staff reads like an Encyclopedia of Contemporary Sociopaths and Miscreants. On the Democratic side there were Lanny Davis (a former special counsel to President Bill Clinton who later went on to represent Teodoro Obiang of Equatorial Guinea, Africa's longest reigning dictator, and coup plotters in Honduras who overthrew an elected president); former Louisiana senator John Breaux ("My vote cannot be bought but it can be rented," he remarked while serving in Congress), and former Commerce Secretary Ron Brown (another uber-sleaze who was sanctified by the national press corps after his death, in a 1996 plane crash, and who while at Patton Boggs headed up the account for Baby Doc Duvalier of Haiti).

On the GOP side Patton Boggs lobbyists have included Ben Ginsberg (who as national counsel to the Bush-Cheney presidential campaign helped engineer the theft of the 2000 election through his central role in the Florida recount); Stephen Sharp (who with backing from the Reverend Jerry Falwell had been appointed by President Reagan to the Federal Communications Commission and who left Patton Boggs after being arrested on charges of oral sodomy and aggravated sexual battery in a case involving three young boys); and Trent Lott (the former Mississippi Senator who like Boggs is beloved in official Washington but possibly best remembered by his African-American constituents for regularly addressing the white-supremacist Council of Conservative Citizens, once telling its members they stood "for the right principles and the right philosophy.")

Boggs's specialty was helping clients exploit the deregulatory fervor that blossomed during the Reagan era and has flourished ever since. In 1996, he won tens of millions of dollars for MCI in a huge telecommunications bill and continued to lobby for the firm after its merger with WorldCom two years later. His contract ended in 2006, after MCI WorldCom CEO Bernie Ebbers was sentenced to 25 years in prison as a result of the company's fraudulent financial reporting, which led to more than $100 million in investor losses.

Boggs also lobbied for the American Bankers Association, on whose behalf he helped repeal the Glass-Steagall Act, the Great Depression era law that separated commercial and investment banking. Killing Glass-Steagall led slowly but surely to the 2008 economic meltdown and helped swell the incredible political power of Wall Street.

Boggs was no more selective on the foreign front. His firm's clients included General Romeo Lucas García, who held power in Guatemala for four years in the early 1980s and killed an average of about 200 people every day. "He obliterated the urban political opposition with a policy of selective assassination" and "sought to wipe out the rural base of the country's leftist guerrilla organizations by slaughtering the mainly indigenous Mayan peasantry," was how the Guardian once summed things up.

Boggs's chief aim as lobbyist was to restore military aid to the Lucas government, which had been cut off by a few squeamish members of congress. A 1992 account in Spy magazine recounted a meeting between the lobbyist and a congressional staffer who wasn't swallowing Boggs's storyline about the Lucas regime's noble intentions. "These guys are murderers and thugs," the staffer told Boggs.

"What would convince you that they're moving in the right direction?" Boggs asked.

"I'd be impressed if they undertook a land reform program," the staffer replied.

"You want a land reform program?" Boggs asked eagerly. "I can have a land reform program on your desk this afternoon."

Boggs' firm's old client Baby Doc died just a few weeks after he did, and his Washington Post obituary was quite a bit more straightforward about his personal shortcomings. He presided over "widespread killing, torture and plunder" and when tens of thousands of desperate Haitian "boat people" fled for the U.S., Duvalier's response "was to demand kickbacks from their unscrupulous human smugglers," the Post wrote.

The obituary noted that Baby Doc courted the United States "with promises of human-rights reforms and a business-friendly economic policy," though it of course didn't mention the role that Patton Boggs and the dictator's other PR hacks played in packaging his message and helping keep him in power. As Ron Brown once wrote in a letter to "Monsieur le President," he was aiming to "substantially increase American aid" to the regime and he blamed the international media for Baby Doc's "unfair image."

Any remotely honest obituary of Boggs would have prominently noted that he was the original Washington bottom-feeder, that he made the rich richer and the poor poorer, and that he did it by lobbying for the worst people in the world.

Patton Boggs recently merged with another lobbying firm and is now called Squire Patton Boggs. It still represents bad clients and is still one of the most powerful lobbying firms in town.

I was just finishing up this story and found this on the firm's website: "Squire Patton Boggs has lost its beloved Chairman Emeritus Thomas Hale Boggs, Jr. This is a very sad time for our firm, for the Boggs family and for all who were privileged to know and to work with him."

I am sure it is sad for his family and for the firm, but no one else should be sad.

And that is the sort of obituary you can count on from me down the road.

Doroth Hunt UAL 553 December 8, 1972

Breaking uo is bard to do. Nixon was facing impeachment, Doroth Hunt was LEAVING Howard, probably knew all the details of Nixon Twombly hit on JKF (more so Twombly than Nixon) James Jesus Angleton was fired by Colby, Watergate hearings were underway, NYT was running anti CIA headlines, it is likely Dorothy liked none of the Rockefeller based Deep State. She was going to talk. Just like Marylin Monroe was. Dorothy Hunt was a spy type in her own right, probably did not like the corrupt figures very much who also did not like her. Worked under Averal Harriman and the "Bunny" Harrmin types (a male relativev of Averall)>

Dorothy Hunt's death led to the accident becoming caught up in rumors and conspiracy theories related to the unfolding Watergate scandal.[15] Hunt was carrying $10,000 in $100 bills when the plane crashed, and some alleged that this money was meant for people connected to Watergate.[8][15] James McCord alleged that Hunt supplied the Watergate defendants with money for legal expenses.[8] The FBI's appearance at the crash scene was also regarded by some as unusually fast.[14][15] Skeptics of the official narrative speculated that the plane was targeted due to Hunt's presence on board, and that sabotage of the flight was covered up by government agencies. As a result, the accident became known as "the Watergate crash.".

One proponent of Watergate-related theories was Sherman Skolnick, a Chicago-based private investigator, who alleged that the aircraft had been sabotaged by the CIA.[c] On June 13, 1973, Skolnick testified at an NTSB hearing in Rosemont, Illinois and claimed the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Columbia Broadcasting System, United Air Lines, traffic controllers at Midway, and the NTSB itself conspired in a plot to sabotage the flight because 12 of its passengers had links to Watergate.

United Airlines officials had asked the NTSB to hear Skolnick's version because he had frequently charged that UAL was among those attempting to suppress his explanation of events.[18] He said that Hunt carried $2 million in traveler's checks and money orders stolen from the Committee for the Re-Election of the President, $50,000 in currency, and documents that may have led to the impeachment of President Richard Nixon.[18] He stated a hitman - whom Nixon had placed aboard the aircraft to make sure that Hunt was killed - also died in the crash.[18] The Chicago Tribune said that Skolnick "[knitted] scores of facts and assumptions together loosely" and "[no] documentation was produced to substantiate the charges"

Heinz is known to have donated at least $2,500 to American Liberty League and $5,876 to one of its fascist front groups, the Crusaders.

Howard Heinz was the son of Bavaria immigrant, John Henry Heinz, who founded the Heinz company in 1869. After attending the small, private Shady Side Academy, Howard entered Yale University in 1900. He joined Delta Kappa Epsilon, an exclusive fraternity whose members have included Presidents George Bush, Jr. and Sr., Vice-President Dan Quayle, banker J.P. Morgan, newspaper magnate William R. Hearst, chewing-gum millionaire William Wrigley and motel man, Howard Johnson. When Heinz left Yale, he worked his way up through the family business from advertising and sales to president. He led the company for 22 years (1919-1941).

His directorships included Pennsylvania Railroad, the Mellon Bank, the Carnegie Institute and the National Industrial Conference Board (NICB). Founded in 1916, the NICB is the oldest of the "policy discussion groups" for big business leaders and is similar to the Council on Foreign Relations.

Howard Heinz left much of his wealth to the Howard Heinz Endowment. The "Chairman" of this $1.6 billion foundation is Teresa Heinz. She inherited $500 million when her first husband, Republican Senator John Heinz III, died in a 1991 plane crash. Her new husband, Senator John Forbes Kerry, is the Democratic candidate for president. (Kerry, a Vietnam War veteran, is a Yale grad who was inducted into its Skull and Bones secret society in 1965, just two years before George W. Bush.) Teresa Heinz and Kerry both belonged to the Council on Foreign Relations.

Dear Mr. Bruce:

I visited breifly with Mr. William Colby and he indicated that he thought you might soon be writing a report on the crash which killed Gary Caradori and his son, Andrew.

I have Visited with Mrs. Caradori and she adamant about the fact that none of the seats were ever removed from the aircraft and she informs me that as of now the two rear seats of the six have never been found.

It seems to me that those tvo seats could not simply have disappeared. Certainly by now they should have show up somewhere unless something unusual would account for their disappearance. I do not know anything about sabotage but I have been told that a phosphorous type bomb would, in fact, vaporize metal and any other material with which it came in contact and that unless someone knew what they were looking for, it would be difficult, if not impossible, to detect.

I am sure there will be those who will scoff at such a suggestion, but have been entirely too many violent deaths associated with this investigation for me to accept that Caradori's aircraft simply came apart in the sky.

If you have found those two seats,I would be most appreciative if you would confirm that for me.

Sincerely;

Roskens 'sleaze factor' at U.S. AID could be bad news for Bush campaign retrieved from Executive Intelligence Review and copied or modified to here by an EIR Investigative Team

Dr. Ronald W. Roskens, head of the U .S. State Department Agency for International Development (AID), is the subject of a scandal in which he is being charged with violating federal laws and ethics codes, according to the Oct. 6 Wash- ington Post. A report prepared by AID Inspector General Herbert Beckington dated April 5 and leaked to the Post, charges Roskens with accepting thousands of dollars in payments from "different organizations in compensation of his and his wife 's travel expenses" while Roskens was on official government travel. He also took money for a private trip from a company 'Trom which Roskens had agreed to divest himself as a condition of his presidential appointment. " The inspector general concluded that the money accepted by Roskens was a clear conflict of interest and violated feder- al law against earning non-government income. But on Sept. 4, after reviewing the charges, the Department of Justice (DOJ) informed Beckington that it had decided not to prosecute-giving no explanation for its decision. The White House is reviewing the case.

Congressional investigators are already looking into the allegations. Should they scratch below the surface, they will find that this is not the first time Roskens has been touched by scandal. Although President Bush promised that he would not tolerate even the appearance of impropriety in his administration, Congress should not be surprised if the White House threatens to start "breaking legs" in Roskens's defense.

Friend of Bush

It is not just that Roskens is a personal friend of the President-although he is. As we shall indicate below, an unimpeded investigation into Roskens could expose the link between Bush 's little-publicized birth control mania much of which is carried out through the State Deparment's AID in the Third World-and the sexual depravity rampant in U .S. political and intelligence elites. Any such scandal could shatter the illusions of Bush's conservative base, many of whom still accept the President's claims to being "pro-life, " "anti-drug," and an American patriot. It should also make anyone who thinks of the propaganda about Bush being the "education President," deeply queasy.

Roskens left his home state of Nebraska for the nation 's capital in early 1990 enmired in controversy. He had been fired suddenly as president of the University of Nebraska, in a secret meeting of the state Board of Regents in July 1989.

No public explanation was been given for his removal. Yet within weeks, the White House offered Roskens the high- profile job in Washington. The administration knew about the controversy in Nebraska, but Rbskens passed an FBI background check, and was confirmed to head AID.

he FBI appears to have overlooked a Feb. 19, 1990 investigative report by the late Gary Caradori, an investigator for the "Franklin Committee" of the Nebraska Senate and an ex-state trooper. He wrote, "I was informed that Roskins [sic] was terminated by the state because of sexual activities reported to the Regents and verified by them. Mr. Roskins [sic] was reported to have had young men at his residence for sexual encounters. As part of the separation from the state, he had to move out of the state-owned house because of the liability to the state if some of this sexual behavior was 'illegal. ' " Caradori died in a suspicious airplane crash last year.

Suit seeks truth on firing

The Omaha office of Associated Press regularly identifies Roskens as follows: "the former president of the University of Nebraska who was fired without •public explanation by the NU Board of Regents." A lawsuit was filed against the University of Nebraska Board of Regents to force a full explanation of why Roskens was fired. The suit was brought by Dan Meyer of Lincoln. His attorney is John DeCamp, a former Republican state senator.

The attorney representing the Board of Regents, Terry Wittler, said, "The regents met in closed session to discuss personnel matters and avoid needless injury to Roskens's reputation," according to the Jan. 24. 1991 Lincoln Journal Star. The "open meetings law" of the state of Nebraska says that a public body, such as the Board of Regents, which is popularly elected, may hold a closed session if it is "clearly necessary for the protection of the public interest or for the prevention of needless injury to the reputation of an individual and if such individual has not requested a public meeting. " Roskens demanded no such public meeting.

Board of Regents chairman Nancy Hoch tried to work out a 'friendly" agreement with Roskens but he turned it down. Regent Robert Allen told the press that Roskens thought the board couldn't fire him because of his strong support in the state legislature. Yet, in a 7-1 vote in a closed session on July 31, 1989, Roskens was fired. According to Regent Allen, the two attorneys for the board had told the regents that Roskens had placed a provision in his buyout contract which prohibited any disclosures. Regent Hoch told the media as late as December 1990 that lawyers were still advising her to keep quiet about the firing. "That is not to say the board wouldn't like to comment, but we had been told we should not comment on it," she told the Lincoln Journal Star.

'No fiscal or moral questions'

In an April 24, 1990 article in the Omaha World Herald entitled "Praise Flows as Roskens Is Sworn in as AID Chief," made up mostly of paeans from President Bush, Vice President Dan Quayle, and Secretary of State James Baker, the firing is mentioned in an odd fashion. The World Herald reported, "Roskens was removed as president of the University of Nebraska last year by the Board of Regents in a closed meeting. After the meeting, the board would say only that its decision did not involve fiscal or moral questions. " Had someone made such an accusation? According to sources in Nebraska politics and at the university, rumors circulated alleging that Roskens engaged in indiscretions with male minors while president of the university. Although his supporters claim he was ousted over his struggle for administrative control of the university against an overly intrusive Board of Regents, the rumor has gained currency and has yet to be put to rest.

There is no independent confirmation of the accusations against Roskens. But similar charges against other prominent Nebraskans have persisted as fallout from a Nebraska State Senate investigation into a sex and money scandal that continues to rock the Midwestern state.

The scandal originated with the collapse of the minority oriented Franklin Community Credit Union in Omaha, directed by Lawrence E. King, Jr., a black former Republican Party influential and Reagan-Bush campaign activist. King became the subject of the Nebraska Senate's investigation conducted by the specially created "Franklin Committee" to probe charges of embezzlement.

Satanism and child abuse

In November 1988, King's offices were raided by the FBI and $40 million was discovered missing. Within weeks, the Nebraska Senate, which initially opened an inquiry to find out where the money had gone, instead found itself questioning young adults who said they had been child prostitutes. Social workers and state child-care administrators accused King of running a child prostitution ring.

King is now serving a 15-year federal prison sentence for defrauding the Omaha-based credit union. But the magazines Avvenimenti of Italy and Pronto of Spain, among others, have charged that King's crimes were more serious: that he ran a national child prostitution ring that serviced the political and business elite of both Republican and Democratic parties. Child victims of King's operations charged him with participating in at least one satanic ritual murder of a child several years ago. The Washington Post, New York Times, and National Law Journal covered the full range of accusations when the story broke in November 1988. King's money machinations were also linked to the Iran-Contra affair, and some say King provided the CIA with information garnered from his alleged activities as a "pimp" for the high and mighty.

Pronto, the Barcelona-based, largest circulation weekly in Spain with 4.5 million readers, reported in its Aug. 3 and Aug. 10 issues that the Lawrence E. King child-prostitution scandal "appears to directly implicate politicos of the state of Nebraska and Washington' D.C. who are very close to the White House and George Bu$h himself. "

The weekly stated that Roy Stephens, a private investigator who has worked on the case and heads the Missing Youth Foundation, "says there is reason to believe that the CIA is directly implicated," and that the "FBI refuses to help in the investigation and has sabotaged any efforts" to get to the bottom of the story. Stephens says that "Paul Bonacci directly accused President Bush of being implicated" in the affair when he testified before the Franklin Committee. Bonacci, who had been one of the child prostitutes, is identified by leading child-abuse experts as a well-informed, credible witness.

Roskens knew Lawrence King

The unsavory Lawrence King was no stranger to Roskens. Both were part of the Republican Party elite in the Cornhusker State. According to the Sept. 7, 1988 Metropoli- tan, a weekly newspaper, "King is an adviser to the UNO Chancellor's advisory committee." Roskens was chancellor of the University of Nebraska-Omaha (UNO) until 1977, when he was promoted to head the entire university system, and moved to the capital of Lincoln.

Sources also allege that Roskens played a role in securing investments during the 1980s into King 's credit union. While president of the university, Roskens sat on the board ofdirec- tors of the Enron Corp. , now a Houston-based oil firm which was originally headquartered in Omaha. In 1986, the Enron Foundation, the oil company's corporate philanthropic arrn, bought $200,000 in certificates of deposit from Lawrence King's credit union.

The company identified in the AID inspector general's report as having paid for Roskens's travel, 'from which Dr. Roskens had agreed to divest himself as a condition of his is none other than the Enron presidential appointment," Corp., according to Cable News Network.

Roskens was also a friend and political associate of Harold Andersen, publisher of the Omaha World Herald, the leading state daily, an early booster of Lawrence King's career. Andersen led fundraising drives on behalf of King's credit union. He was also accused of being a sexual abuser of children during the State Senate investigation. In 1987, Roskens was vice chairman of a special task force on which Harold Andersen also served, which had been set up by Gov. Kay Orr to secure the move of U.S. West Airlines headquarters to Nebraska, according to a June 23, 1987 article in the Lincoln Journal Star. Andersen's Wash- ington connection is his friend and political associate Robert Keith Gray, a long-standing Republican Party public relations consultant- who managed some of the public diplomacy during the Iran-Contra scandal.

The Bush insiders

Given the cloud under which Roskens left Nebraska, it might seem odd that he was quickly boosted into a top foreign-policy post in Washington. The key seems to have been a circle of Bush "insiders." "Prominent Republican Dick Herman, more than anyone else is credited by Ronald Roskens with helping him win a top federal job after he was fired as president of the University of Nebraska," reported the Sunday World Herald on May 6, 1990. The article reported that "Herman said he and his wife, Peg, have known Bush and his wife Barbara, more than 20 years since the time when Bush was chairman of the Republican Party. " It was Herman who introduced Roskens to Bush.

"I ran his [Bush's] ad hoc committee when he ran for vice president under President Ford," Herman told the World Herald. Herman, a Nebraska native who is an influential fundraiser for the Republican National Committee, owns a beer distributing company in Los Angeles. "I saw the President a couple of times, and we talked about Roskens," Herman said.

When Bush was elected President in 1988, Roskens was one of only seven university presidents who were called in by Bush to work on his "education strategy. " Ties to the intelligence community Evidence suggests that Roskens has also maintained a relationship with the U.S. intelligence community. In the early 1970s, he was a consultant to the Office of Emergency Preparedness, the precursor to Federal Emergency Manage- ment Agency (FEMA). He played a central role in quelling public outrage in the aftermath of the killing of anti-war students by the Ohio National Guard at Kent State University, where he was then executive vice president.

Roskens has a reputation as an international affairs spcialist because of his activism in creating ground-breaking academic exchange programs. He set up the largest academic exchange program with Afghanistan in the U. S. in the 1980s. The University of Nebraska and Kabul University had a "sis- ter" relationship. All U. S. -based Afghan operations were, of course, run by intelligence outfits at the time. During the same period, he set up an extensive overseas college program for many U .S. Air Force bases in Europe. In 1972, Roskens was one of the first to establish academic exchange programs with the Soviet Union-in those days carefully coordinated by the State Department and the CIA.

Roskens was on President Bush's short list to be U.S. ambassador to communist China. He has visited China nine times since the mid- 1970s.

Roskens and population control

AID is often accused of being a front for CIA operations in the Third World, and Roskens's background has not helped in dispelling the charge. The full horror of what the CIA's notion of "national security" means concretely came out several months ago, when Brazil's health minister ac- cused AID and several U.S.-based private organizations, such as Planned Parenthood, of "genocide." The minister stated that millions of Brazilian women had been involuntarily sterilized through AID "birth control" programs. Roskens is himself an advocate of population control, according to Joe Seacrest, the chief editor for the Lincoln Journal Star, who offered Roskens his home in Omaha as a temporary residence, after Roskens was kicked out of his university home prior to his move to Washington. Moreover, Roskens has reaped the largesse of the largest private funder of population control advocacy groups in the U.S., Omaha resident Warren Buffett, chairman of Salomon Brothers and the second richest American (see EIR, Oct. 4, 1991). The Buffett Foundation gave $51 ,OOO to the University of Ne- braska in 1988, while Roskens was president.

In January 1990, Roskens pushed the "family planning" line during a whirlwind tour of seven African nations with Secretary of Health and Human Services Louis Sullivan. Roskens reported that by the year 2000, there would be more than 10 million children on the African continent infected with the AIDS virus. Pressed by the nrdia to articulate soltions, Roskens was evasive, but did say, according to a Lin- coln Journal Star article on Feb. 3, 1991, that one of the major problems he saw affecting the continent was population growth. He said that most of the families he saw in Africa had 7-8 children, and at that rate, the population will double within 20 years, he warned. He commented that AID spends more than $200 million a year on "family planning. " Some students of the Freemasonry believe that homosexual deviance and the correlated obsession with irth control go back to the Gnostic belief structures of the Freemasons and their antecedents in the medieval European "Buggers." It is therefore interesting that Roskens is playing a central role in masonic outreach to Russia and eastern Europe.

Roskens lists in his Who's Who entry, "King Ak Sar Ben LXXXVI, 198()." Ak Sar Ben (Nebraska spelled backwards) is the elite masonic organization of Nebraska, which crowns a "king" at an annual ball.

FBI Killed Franklin Scandal Investigator And His Son retrieved from https://rense.com/general96/fbikilled.html and copied or modified to here

By Wayne Madsen SPECIAL REPORT 6-23-14

WMR can exclusively report that it was the Federal Bureau of Investigation that placed a bomb on the private airplane that killed state of Nebraska chief investigator Gary Caradori and his 6-year old son "AJ" on July 11, 1990. Caradori had been hired by the Nebraska unicameral legislature to investigate allegations that a number of Nebraska youth had been sexually abused and transported over state lines in a scandal centered around the Franklin Credit Union, headed by rising GOP African-American star Lawrence King.

A very knowledgeable source involved with what became known as the "Franklin Scandal" told WMR that Caradori flew to Chicago ostensibly to attend the All Star game on July 10 at Wrigley Field. In reality, the trip to the game was a cover for Caradori to meet with a source who handed him photographs that proved that Nebraskan children, some from the famed Boy's Town orphanage, were being used for the sexual gratification of important political leaders in Washington, including Vice President and President George H W Bush.

Caradori phoned his wife and another investigator shortly before the All-Star game and told them the same thing: "I got what I came after. I got 'em by the balls. I've got pictures. I will take them to the game and bring them back to Nebraska."

When Caradori began to follow the money behind the Franklin scandal, he discovered two things: the Franklin Credit Union was being used by the White House and CIA to launder money for the Iran-contra affair and King and his associates were given a free ride to sexually traffic in and molest children, including many procured from Boy's Town.

One of those implicated in the Franklin scandal was Housing and Urban Development Secretary Sam Pierce. At the 1984 Republican National Convention in Dallas, King held a $1 million reception for Pierce. However, King's salary at the time was $14,000 a year and the actual cost of the reception was $300,000. The difference, $700,000, went into a slush fund that was laundered by the Franklin Credit Union for various "activities" sponsored by the CIA and White House.

On July 11, Caradori took off in his private plane from Chicago en route to Nebraska. Witnesses on the ground said they saw a flash in the sky followed by an explosion. Initial news reports stated that Caradori's aircraft exploded in flight and then crashed. However, subsequent news reports were altered and claimed the aircraft exploded upon impact with the ground. Caradori and his son were killed in the crash. The local Sheriff's office reported that scattered in the wreckage were child pornographic photographs. The FBI arrived and began systematically removing the photographs, debris, and Caradori's briefcase. Meanwhile, FBI agents in Lincoln, Nebraska entered Caradori's office and seized his files. Another FBI agent showed up at the office of a Nebraska state official investigating the Franklin case and demanded he turn over his files. The state official told the FBI agent to "get the hell out."

The Bush White House immediately began covering up the Franklin scandal and put pressure on the remaining Nebraska state investigators. The FBI used the Kansas City mob to intimidate high-level witnesses and investigators of the Franklin scandal. One of the lead investigators also told WMR, "the FBI killed Caradori . . . they put the bomb on his airplane."

An attempt to hire former CIA director William Colby to lead a state of Nebraska investigation of the Franklin scandal failed in a legislative committee 4 to 3 vote. Instead, the committee appointed attorney Kirk Naylor as its chief investigator. A major figure involved in investigating Franklin told WMR that Naylor was the most incompetent person the committee could have found to lead the investigation. Colby was a Vietnam War colleague of Nebraska state Senator John De Camp, one of major investigators of the Franklin scandal. Colby reportedly was ready to expose the CIA's own involvement in the use of child prostitutes for the purposes of political and diplomatic blackmail. Colby died in a suspicious canoeing accident on the Chesapeake Bay on April 27, 1996.

Monsignor Robert Hupp, the Vicar-General of the Archdiocese of Omaha, a former Navy chaplain, and, in 1976, the first-ever clergy member of the U.S. delegation to the United Nations, had reported in the early 1970s to his bishop that there was sexual abuse at Boy's Town that even involved a priest murdering a boy. Hupp was later named the head of Boy's Town, ostensibly to keep him quiet. Hupp was in charge of Boy's Town until the late 1980s, when the Franklin scandal first hit the front pages. Eventually, even after stepping down as the head of the orphanage, Hupp was forced to leave Boy's Town altogether. WMR has learned that in 2003 a longtime supporter of Boy's Town allowed Hupp to move into his cabin in Mausten, Wisconsin after being forced to leave the facilities at Boy's Town. A reporter for the Omaha World-Herald, a newspaper owned by Nebraska billionaire Warren Buffett and which always had a skeptical view of the Franklin scandal, volunteered to drive Hupp to Wisconsin. Upon arriving at the cabin, the reporter prepared dinner for Hupp. The retired monsignor who broke the Catholic Church's silence on its role in the Franklin scandal, died in his sleep that same night.

The iconic Washington Times front page that capped off the Franklin scandal's sporadic and spotty news coverage.

Anyone who believes the Franklin Scandal and Cover-up is over and done with would be dead wrong. On January 20, 2012, Carol Stitt, the 29-year director of the Nebraska Foster Care Review Board, an individual who aggressively protected foster care children in Nebraska from sexual perverts and other undesirable foster parents, was dismissed by her own board of directors. The 11-member board had been stacked by loyalists of Republican Governor Dave Heineman whose goal it was to oust Stitt. As with the constant intimidation of witnesses involved in Franklin, Stitt also found herself investigated by the federal government's Office of Special Counsel for allegedly violating the Hatch Act by attending a 2006 political campaign rally for Republican and football coach legend Tom Osborne. Although Stitt, a state employee, would not normally be subject to the rarely-enforced Hatch Act that bans political activity by federal employees, Stitt's Foster Care Review Board received funds from the federal Department of Health and Human Services (HHS).

The HHS's initial complaint against Stitt, which arose from her attendance at the 2006 Osborne rally, began when current GOP U.S. Senate candidate Ben Sasse was serving as assistant secretary for planning and evaluation at HHS. From 1996 to 1998, Sasse was one of four tutors/proctors for the U.S. House of Representatives page program. During this time frame, a number of House pages complained of sexual harassment from GOP House members. Representatives Jim Kolbe (R-AZ) and Mark Foley (R-FL) were later named as principal harassers of underage male pages. WMR has also learned from a member of the Sasse family that physical and psychological abuse have been rampant in the Sasse family. Senate candidate Sasse, who helped the John Ashcroft Justice Department draw up torture policy along with the CIA, is a home-schooler whose religious beliefs are based on neo-Calvinist fundamentalist Christian Dominionism.

Sasse faces two opponents after coming from the political wilderness to defeat better known and financed GOP candidates in the primary. David Domina, a trial lawyer, is Sasse's lackluster Democratic opponent, while Dan Buhrdorf is mounting a spirited independent challenge under the Tax Wall Street Party banner.

Pan American Flight 103 in 1988 in Lockerbee Scottland

Just a few days before Christmas 1988, terrorists blew up Pan American Flight 103 as it passed over Lockerbie, not long after leaving Heathrow. One of the 259 murdered onboard was Matthew Gannon. The eighth child of devout Catholic parents, Gannon had joined the Central Intelligence Agency in 1977, becoming a skilled operations officer and linguist.

Nearly a year later, in October 1989, many victims' belongings still lay unclaimed in trailers in Lockerbie. When Gannon's brother arrived there, he identified his family member's personal items by spotting a missal in a bag with one of Matthew's favourite shirts.

Conspiracy theorists have probably already exploited Gannon's death. It's difficult to investigate anything about the CIA or the Vatican and not encounter narratives that resemble thriller novels.

But we shouldn't ignore the topic. The CIA is the best known of the 17 agencies that comprise the American intelligence community. It has earned itself nicknames like "Catholic Intelligence Agency" and "Catholics In Action". It's worth exploring why. https://catholicherald.co.uk/why-catholics-thrive-in-the-cia/

[Could Gannon have been swayed by the Eastern Elites and Robber Barons or did he need to be eliminated?]

Saturday 23 April 1977

Paisley, in his role as head of the United Unionist Action Council (UUAC), threatened to organise a region-wide strike unless Roy Mason, then Secretary of State, acted against the Irish Republican Army (IRA) and also implemented the Convention Report. Thomas Passmore, then the County Grand Master of the Orange Order in Belfast, launched a verbal attack on the UUAC and its plans for a general strike. In addition he alleged that a member of the UUAC had been involved in discussions with the Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Monday 25 April 1977

The United Unionist Action Council (UUAC), which was led by Ian Paisley, then leader of the Democratic Unionist Party (DUP), and Ernie Baird, then leader of the United Ulster Unionist Movement (UUUM), announced that it would hold a region-wide strike in May 1977. The strike was organised to demand a tougher security response from the government and a return to 'majority-rule' government at Stormont. The strike was supported by the Ulster Workers' Council (UWC), the group that had organised the successful strike of May 1974, and also by the Ulster Defence Association (UDA), the largest of the Loyalist paramilitary groups. The UUAC gave Roy Mason, then Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, seven days to respond to their demands. The threat of strike action by the UUAC was condemned by other groupings within unionism including the Vanguard Unionist Party (VUP), the Ulster Unionist Party (UUP), and the Orange Order.

Wednesday 27 April 1977

A series of personal attacks on one another by leading figures such as Enoch Powell, James Molyneaux, and Ian Paisley, illustrated the growing disagreement within unionism on the issue of the planned United Unionist Action Council (UUAC) strike.
Roy Mason, then Secretary of State, announced that the Harland and Wolff shipyard in Belfast was to receive an order worth some £70 million to construct two liquid gas carriers.

Thursday 28 April 1977

[UUAC Strike.]

Friday 29 April 1977

Ian Paisley, then leader of the Democratic Unionist Party (DUP), warned in a statement that if the British authorities failed to alter its policies then loyalists might have to consider taking over the administration of Northern Ireland. He also called for people to consider a rent, rates and Value Added Tax (VAT) strike. A meeting was held in Harland and Wolff shipyard at which a large majority of workers voted not to support the planned UUAC strike. In addition workers at the Ballylumford power station made it clear that they would only support the stoppage if it obtained clear support across all sectors of Northern Ireland industry. Following a request by Roy Mason, then Secretary of State, it was announced that extra British soldiers would be sent to Northern Ireland to maintain law and order in anticipation of the UUAC strike taking place. [1,200 soldiers arrived on 1 May 1977.] It was reported that approximately 200 Ulster Defence Association (UDA) men from Scotland along with 50 more from Liverpool had arrived in Belfast to support the strike planned by the UUAC.

Saturday 30 April 1977

Ian Paisley, then leader of the Democratic Unionist Party (DUP), said that if the forthcoming United Unionist Action Council (UUAC) strike was not a success then he would quit political life in Northern Ireland. [Most political and media commentators viewed the UUAC strike as a failure however on the 13 May 1977 Paisley declared that the strike had been a success.] It was alleged by sources 'close' to the UUAC that plans had been made to establish a loyalist provisional government in Northern Ireland. There were reports of panic buying of food, bottled gas, and other provisions in the face of the threats to supplies posed by the forthcoming UUAC strike. [Education.]

[NAI Records April 1977.]

Sunday 1 May 1977

An additional 1,200 British soldiers were flown into Northern Ireland, and all Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC) leave was cancelled, in anticipation of the United Unionist Action Council (UUAC) strike. Fresh appeals were made from a range of organisations and political parties, including the Ulster Unionist Party (UUP), the Vanguard Unionist Party (VUP), the Orange Order, the Peace People, and the trade union movement, for the UUAC to call off their planned stoppage.

[UUAC Strike.]

Monday 2 May 1977

In a last minute attempt to avoid the planned United Unionist Action Council (UUAC) strike Roy Mason, then Secretary of State, met leaders of the UUAC including Ian Paisley and Ernest Baird but the talks broke up without any agreement. Ian Paisley rejected allegations that the UUAC was using the strike as cover to secure independence for Ulster but warned that if it did take place he could not guarantee that intimidation would not take place. At Belfast docks workers decided by a small majority not to support the UUAC strike. In areas of Belfast, including the Shankill and Crumlin Road, there were reports of a number of food vans being hijacked and their contents stolen. In an interview Fred Mulley, then British Defence Secretary, warned that it might be impossible for the Army to maintain essential services. Thomas Passmore, then County Grand Master of the Orange Order in Belfast, alleged that he had received death threats in the wake of his public opposition to the strike. An opinion poll carried out by the British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC) highlighted that although some 78 per cent of people interviewed opposed the UUAC stoppage, 93 per cent of Protestants and 43 per cent of Catholics supported a tougher security response against the IRA. The RUC announce that it had set up a special anti-intimidation squad in order to try to counter the use of the tactic during the proposed strike. Just before midnight, in a reverse of an earlier decision, 400 workers walked out of the Belfast shipyard.

[UUAC Strike.]

Tuesday 3 May 1977

United Unionist Action Council (UUAC) Strike Day 1 of the UUAC Strike

The United Unionist Action Council (UUAC) began a Northern Ireland wide strike. [Many factories managed to stay open although the port at Larne, County Antrim, was closed. Intimidation, or 'persuasion' as the Loyalist paramilitaries preferred to call it, was used as in 1974 to try to stop people from going to work. Despite this the majority of the Harland and Wolff shipyard workers voted against the strike. The strike was also criticised by the Ulster Unionist Party (UUP), Ulster Vanguard, and the Orange Order. During the first three days of the strike the Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC) reported that it had removed 300 road blocks, arrested 23 people, and received 1,000 complaints of intimidation. In calling the strike the UUAC were copying the tactics of the Ulster Workers Council strike in May 1974 and were obviously hoping for similar success. However many of the conditions were different from 1974. There was not the same anxiety among the Protest population that Britain was about to withdraw from Northern Ireland and this had the effect of reducing support for the strike. In particular those organising the strike were unable to secure the support of key groups of workers. Chief amongst these were the workers at Ballylumford power station who, although brought under great pressure, refused on a number of occasions to support the strike. The other major factor was that the British government had learnt some lessons from the 1974 strike and were more prepared for the tactics of the strikers. The strike ended on 13 May 1977.]

Wednesday 4 May 1977

Day 2 of the UUAC Strike

The UUUC parliamentary coalition was ended because of the support of Ian Paisley and Ernest Baird for the United Unionist Action Council (UUAC) strike. This decision was taken by James Molyneaux, then leader of the Ulster Unionist Party (UUP) at Westminster, on the grounds that elements of the UUAC were planning to establish a provisional government in Northern Ireland as the next stage of the stoppage. In Belfast loyalist paramilitaries were suspected of being responsible for a bomb explosion outside a police station on the York Road. Roy Mason argued that more people had attended work than on the first day of the strike. On the Newtownards Road in east Belfast the Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC) clashed with members of the Ulster Defence Association (UDA) when police officers attempted to remove a barricade. In spite of attacks on buses bus drivers voted to continue working. Andy Tyrie, then leader of the UDA and a member of the UUAC, appealed for members of the UDA to 'cool it'.
[UUAC Strike.]

Thursday 5 May 1977

Day 3 of the UUAC Strike

After three days of the strike the Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC) released figures showing that it had dismantled some 300 roadblocks, arrested 23 people, and dealt with over 1,000 cases of alleged intimidation. In addition it also claimed that the United Unionist Action Council (UUAC) was deliberately choosing to employ women and children during confrontations with the police in order to draw support to its cause and to alienate people against the RUC. A bomb exploded outside the Lismore factory in Portadown. [It was believed that Loyalist paramilitaries were responsible for the bombing which was thought to be a response to the factory remaining open during the stoppage.]

[UUAC Strike.]

Friday 6 May 1977

Day 4 of the UUAC Strike

The United Unionist Action Council (UUAC) was unable to secure the support of the workers at the Ballylumford power station, near Larne, County Antrim. This meant that power would be maintained and factories and commerce could continue to operate. [The Ballylumford workers had control of a major part of Northern Ireland's power supply, approximately two-thirds, and thus were crucial to the outcome of the strike.] The Coachman's Inn, a hotel situated near Bangor, County Down, was attacked by a mob which set fire to the building. The premises had continued to remain open during the strike. Roy Mason, then Secretary of State, met a delegation led by Harry West, then leader of the Ulster Unionist Party (UUP). Its members including representatives from the Orange Order, industrialists, farmers, and businessmen. The delegation pressed Mason to embark on a series of tougher security measures. Contrasting claims continued to be made about the progress of the UUAC strike. While the Northern Ireland Office (NIO) claimed that the business sector was 'near normal', leaders of the UUAC argued that support for their action was growing. In an attempt to increase the pressure the UUAC called for a complete shutdown of Northern Ireland on Monday 9 May 1977. This call was criticised by Harry West who said he had been guaranteed by Roy Mason that a tougher security policy would be implemented.

Saturday 7 May 1977

Day 5 of the UUAC Strike
The Peace People held a rally, its first public rally for some time, outside Belfast City Hall to protest at the levels of intimidation in the wake of the United Unionist Action Council (UUAC) strike. Attention once again turned to the workers at Ballylumford power station, near Larne, which was increasingly being seen as crucial to the outcome of the UUAC strike. A delegation of four Ulster Unionist Party (UUP) MPs, Robert Bradford, William Craig, James Molyneaux, and Harold McCusker, who were opposed to the UUAC strike, visited the Ballylumford power station and urged workers to remain at their posts. Ian Paisley, then leader of the Democratic Unionist Party (DUP), together with a delegation from the UUAC also held a meeting with workers at Ballylumford. Paisley claimed that he could close the plant at any point but instead had urged staff there to keep working in order to maintain 'essential supplies'. In the Lisburn-Hillsborough-Moira area, south of Belfast, some 600 farm vehicles took part in a cavalcade to call for an improvement in the security situation. Those behind the protest however made clear that their actions did not represent any support for the UUAC strike.

Sunday 8 May 1977

Day 6 of the UUAC Strike
The loyalist paramilitary group the Ulster Freedom Fighters (UFF), a cover name (pseudonym) used by the Ulster Defence Association (UDA), announced that it might be forced to 'coerce' loyalists in Northern Ireland into supporting the UUAC strike. Ian Paisley, then leader of the Democratic Unionist Party (DUP), reiterated his belief that the strike had already been a success even if at some point it had to be called off. However a spokesman for the UUAC stated that there was 'no chance' of the strike being called off.

Monday 9 May 1977

Day 7 of the UUAC Strike

There were many demonstrations and roadblocks across Northern Ireland in support of the United Unionist Action Council (UUAC) strike. Ian Paisley joined farmers who were blocking the town of Ballymena in the middle of his North Antrim Westminster constituency. Across Northern Ireland there were a series of similar protests with demonstrations, roadblocks and cavalcades taking place in Belfast, Enniskillen, Larne, Portadown and Newtonards. Uncertainty still surrounded the situation at Ballylumford power station with reports continuing to emerge about meetings involving workers at the plant.

Tuesday 10 May 1977

Day 8 of the UUAC Strike

Harry Bradshaw (46), a Protestant civilian, was shot dead by Loyalist paramilitaries as he drove a bus on the Crumlin Road, Belfast. He was killed because he was working during the United Unionist Action Council (UUAC) strike. John Geddis (26), a member of the Ulster Defence Regiment (UDR), was killed in a Loyalist bomb attack on a petrol station on the Crumlin Road, Belfast. Again this attack was carried out because the petrol station had opened during the strike. Two members of the Ulster Defence Association (UDA) were killed as the result of a premature explosion of an incendiary bomb they were working on at a derelict house in Monkstown, Newtownabbey, County Antrim.

At a roadblock outside Ballymena Ian Paisley, Ernest Baird, and other members of the UUAC were arrested. Paisley was charged with obstruction of the highway and then released. In Toomebridge, County Antrim a roadblock by farmers supporting the UUAC was attacked by local nationalists. In the disturbances that followed farm vehicles were pushed into the River Bann as the blockade was dispersed. It was reported that a number of shots were also fired during the disturbances.

Wednesday 11 May 1977

Day 9 of the UUAC Strike

At Larne, County Antrim, there were a number of ferry sailings to and from the port despite the fact that workers were still on strike. To mark the death of Harry Bradshaw who had been killed by Loyalist paramilitaries on 10 May 1977, bus services were halted. However elsewhere the situation appeared to be stabilising with electricity supplies continuing as normal and with apparently fewer street disturbances. In Donaghdee, County Down the Copelands Hotel was destroyed in a suspicious fire. The incident is alleged to have followed the decision of the owners to stay open during the strike.
[UUAC Strike.]

Thursday 12 May 1977

Day 10 of the UUAC Strike

The port of Larne, County Antrim, was reopened and ferry sailings were resumed. In an incident on the Donegall Road in Belfast the driver of a petrol tanker was shot when he was forced to stop by a large crowd of loyalist protestors. [image] During a debate at Westminster Don Concannon, then Minister of State at the Northern Ireland Office (NIO), defended the British government's security policy in Northern Ireland and pointed to figures which he claimed showed a fall in incidents over the past year. He also claimed that the UUAC strike was simply diverting the security forces from concentrating on the activity of paramilitary groups. On the political front Concannon also held out the possibility that the government hoped to launch a new initiative after the local council elections scheduled for 18 May 1977.

End of United Unionist Action Council (UUAC) Strike

Day 11 of the UUAC Strike

The United Unionist Action Council (UUAC) called an end to its strike which began on 3 May 1977. The strike had failed to stop many aspects of industry and commerce. Ian Paisley declared the strike a success. [However, many commentators considered that in comparison with the Ulster Workers Council Stike of 1974 the UUAC strike was not a success. The Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC) were to report later that 3 people had been killed, 41 RUC officers injured, and 115 people charged with offences committed during the strike.]

Nairac was posthumously awarded the George Cross.]

Leo Ryan Jungle ambush and assassination investigating CIA research and activities in

Jonestown Guyana

Leo Joseph Ryan Jr. (May 5, 1925 November 18, 1978) The entire group left Jonestown and arrived at the Kaituma airstrip by 4:45 p.m. Their exit transport planes, a twin-engine Otter and a Cessna, did not arrive until 5:10 p.m. The smaller six-seat Cessna was taxiing to the end of the runway when one of its occupants, Larry Layton, opened fire on those inside, wounding several.

Concurrently, several other Peoples Temple members who had escorted the group out began to open fire on the transport plane, killing Ryan, three journalists and a defecting Temple member, while wounding nine others, including Speier.[23][38] The gunmen riddled Ryan's body with over 20 bullets before shooting him in the face.[39] The passengers on the Cessna subdued Layton and the survivors on both planes fled into nearby fields during and after the attack.

That afternoon, before the news became public, the wife of Ryan's aide William Holsinger received three threatening phone calls. The caller allegedly said, "Tell your husband that his meal ticket just had his brains blown out, and he better be careful." The Holsingers then fled to Lake Tahoe and later Houston.

After taking off, the Cessna radioed in a report of the attack, and U.S. Ambassador John R. Burke went to the residence of Prime Minister Burnham.[32] It was not until the next morning that the Guyanese army could cut through the jungle and reach Jonestown.[32] They discovered 909 of its inhabitants dead after consuming grape Flavor-aid mixed with several poisons. They died in what the United States House of Representatives described as a "mass suicide/murder ritual.

The Special Relationship and the Birth of Treason

It was not the Kennedy family plan to commit treason against the USA or war crimes that Nixon and others planned out under the Marshall Plan and MK-Ultra run by the NSC under Vice President Nixon called "Executive Action." While the plans were made by the Congress of the USA, high ranking CIA officials and international participants, it was all illegal, all plotting overthrows and after Cuba and after the appointment of Robert F. Kennedy as attorney General on JFK's first acts as President the Kennedy war against V.P. Nixon, George H.W. Bush, Sam Giancana, Marcello, and many others began on day one and continued to escalate. If you ask Wayne Madesen the CIA plans to create Barrack Obama Jr likely in the plan to make Suharto strongman lead Indonesia was well under way since 1958 or so and continued despite Allen Dulles and Charles Cabell being fired by JFK. The Donegan's and the Joseph Kennedy Jr. Foundation and Ford Foundation had created many of the plans for Indonesia the Kennedy's after rebelled against. Marilyn Monore and my family were a part of that plan but like the Kennedy's and Monroe are victims of it.

Paul Schrade and Robert F. Kennedy had a common story about to become a national campaign matter in 1968. Paul Schrade was part of the labor movement RFK was backing and the North American Aviation story of CIA activities in WWII and the Cold War. Nixon and the CIA were fighting labor in the world and the USA. The Donegan family my family and the CIA role of my North American Aviation CIA history is the material tie between these events.

British (England and its colonies) and the USA were leading the post-WW II effort to fight against Communism. Cuba received the most press attention but in some ways Ireland, Guatemala, The Dominican Republic, Vietnam, and Indonesia were equally or more important to the thinking of independence minded JFK and RFK than the level of press attention to those countries indicate.

Google AI Overview

Ireland's recognition by the United Nations occurred on December 14, 1955, when it was admitted as the 63rd member. This membership has been a cornerstone of Irish foreign policy since then. Ireland's active participation in the UN, including its recent term on the Security Council (2021-2022), has contributed to the country's international standing and its engagement in issues like human rights, peacekeeping, and development.

Elaboration

Initial Challenges:

While Ireland's neutrality during World War II initially led to its exclusion from the UN's founding, it eventually applied for membership in 1946.

Key Milestones:

Ireland's journey to UN membership involved overcoming initial obstacles, including a veto from the Soviet Union.

Ongoing Engagement:

Beyond membership, Ireland has actively participated in UN activities, including:

- UN Human Rights Council: Ireland was elected to the UN Human Rights Council in 2012 for a three-year term.
- UN Security Council: Ireland has served as a non-permanent member of the Security Council on four occasions (1962, 1981-82, 2001-02, and 2021-2022).
- Peacekeeping: Ireland has a long history of contributing to UN peacekeeping missions since 1958.

Foreign Policy Priorities:

Ireland's UN engagement reflects its commitment to multilateralism, the rule of law, and the promotion of international peace and security.

Irish Aid:

Ireland also provides financial support to UN-led humanitarian and development efforts through its Irish Aid program.

Historians now say Wild Bill Donovan and his disciples, the Bush and Walker families, FDR, and others were part of the Family Jewels program

This included the Salvation Army and extensive intelligence work together. George H.W. Bush a WASP and under POTUS Eisenhower VPOTUS Nixon was part of a CIA run oil business that were non-Congressional funding for CIA activities via profit centers, CIA "proprietary interests," CIA owned and controlled private enterprises. Activities included purchasing and using military surplus and feeding intel gained around the world to CIA headquarters. Phillip Twombly was another. In addition George H.W. Bush had started setting up in 1957 to 1958 fake identities for those in the Family Jewels Program including planning for the CIA at McMartin Preschool and Franklin Nebraska Boystown. Even much later as president he will be connected to recruiting CIA placed orphans into families around the world. He and Donald Barr of the OSS CIA were doing this together. Many direct witness accounts tie George H.W. Bush and his circle of political operatives to the activities in those preschools and the mainstream media has done exposes on that activity even done from within the White House when he was V.P. in the 1980's.

It is complicated but what began as hiding some bastard children of the Windsor family (Albert and Edward) via Maria Von Trapp in Los Angeles and North Carolina turned into that DNA being studied and tested in Eugenics and Genetics for defects. In the next generation the hidden identies children tied to the Windsor family had more test children, some in orphanages and some selected to place into political and media family lines to be groomed for political or media life.

Phillip A. Twombly from Spartacus Educational

Phillip A. Twombly was Executive Vice President of Coca Cola for their Caribbean operations. Later he owned a bank in Fullerton, California. According to Chauncey Holt this bank was used to distribute CIA funds for covert operations.

In 1963 Holt received instructions from Twombly to provide false ID documents for Lee Harvey Oswald. These documents (in the names of Lee Harvey Oswald and Alek Hiddell) were delivered by a man called George Reynolds. In August, 1963, Twombly asked Holt to travel to New Orleans, where he met Oswald and Carlos Bringuier.

Chauncey Holt later claimed he was went to Dallas in November, 1963, with Charlie Nicoletti, James Canty and Leo Moceri. In Dallas he passed on forged documents and guns (with silencers) to Charles Harrelson and Charles Rogers (Richard Montoya). Holt was told that "an incident was going to be created which could be laid at the door of pro-Castro Cubans. The word attempted assassination was never used. We assumed that from all this light loaded ammunition that maybe somebody was going to try to take a shot from somewhere, probably the Dal-Tex building, or one of the buildings around there. But at no time was it ever intimidated to us that an assassination or attempted assassination on Kennedy." - https://spartacus-educational.com/JFKtwombly.htm

Asia, Tokyo, Soviet Union, Guatemala, and Indonesia (ATSUGI) as Threatened since 1949

British intelligence and he CIA and US Naval Intelligence in Japan believed these locations were threatened in the unfolding world of post WWII Communism. Indonesia and Papua New Guinea were close to Australia and the Gulf Of Mexico and Latin America very close to the USA.

The Windsor discovery in the earl 1920's of the defect Albert of York possessed occurred contemporaneously with the Romanov defect of Hemophilia that brought down the Russian Tzars and led into the communist overthrow of the weakened Royalist state. Watching the defect in those genetically tied to the Windsors (but not by name) was of importance to Eugenics and Genetics research. My book series and family history and the corroborating statements of Jen Moore (and theories of Ted Gunderson) indicate Marylin Monroe and Glorian Donegan were among those hiddenn identities of 1926 births here in the USA.

Barrack Obama Sr. was a part of CIA plans there have been shrouds of mystery and unanswered questions never fully explained until now.

The USAID program was based in Los Angeles County where both propoganda was being made into films and the Kennedy and Lawford families had a West Coast stronghold inside of an area the CIA and LAPD Intelligence Division were highly active around the world. Nixon and the Hearst family were a little further south but Orange County, Los Angeles County of the 1950's were Grand Old Party)(GOP) and CIA strongholds. It also had military industrial complex aviation companies that included Boeing research labs area and North American Aviation Inglewood California production plant.

As for the Indonesia CIA and British and Australian Anglican plans a clumsy attempt to plant a birth certificate used an existing serialized real one to base fakes on. A bumbling attempt by Australian and British intellgigence to put a birth certificate of Barrack OBama Jr. in Kenya

Who else was in on that plan? THe CIA had close connections to Barrack Obama Sr in Kenya and Madelyn Payne Dunham in Hawaii.

Within a few days the [Mombasa Kenya birth certificate for Barrack Obama Jr. was clearly revealed to be a fake - it was actually a forgery based on a copy of an Australian Registration of Birth issued to one David Jeffrey Bomford (who was born in South Australia in 1959) which was grabbed off the Internet and used as a template for creating the fake Kenyan certificate:

(Note the many features shared by these documents: Same certificate number, same book number, same page number, and the remarkable similarities in names - the Registrar listed on the Australian document is G.F. Lavender, while on the Kenyan

Comedy. Via The Washington Independent, the Australian Broadcast Channel found the man whose birth certificate was used in the latest chapter of the racist, birther movement's quest to prove Barack Obama isn't really an American citizen:

DINA ROSENDORFF: Looking over the documents in question Mr Bomford still can't quite believe his eyes.

DAVID JEFFREY BOMFORD: It's little old me and my mum and everything else up there. Oh I definitely confirm that the birth certificate was mine. That was quite easy to see – my address, even the style of the birth certificate was an old South Australian one.

So it's quite easy to identify that it's mine.

DINA ROSENDORFF: And looking at the fake Kenyan birth certificate what do you make of it?

DAVID JEFFREY BOMFORD: It's definitely a copy of my certificate. It's so laughable it's ridiculous.

Unfortunately, there is nothing too ridiculous for the birthers to latch onto. Oh, and Lou Dobbs. - https://www.dailykos.com/stories/2009/8/4/761742/-

I Ed Donegfan assert George H.W. Bush and his Eastern Establisment allies were hiding the identities of those in those schools and shot JFK to keep the British based Family Jewels program secret.

Rafer Johnson pressed his face against Sirhan's and looked straight in his eyes. "Why did you do it?" he demanded. The gunman said nothing. Johnson placed a clenched fist on Sirhan's forehead. "Why did you do it?" "I'll explain it," said Sirhan. "Shut up!" someone cried, and that was the end of it.

As chaos swirled around the pantry, wild-eyed memorabilia collector Michael Wayne ran out through the Colonial Room and into the lobby with a rolled poster in his hand. A voice called out: "Stop him! He's getting away!" Several bystanders chased Wayne into a cul-de-sac, and Ace guard Augustus Mallard handcuffed him. Wayne pleaded innocence-he was just running for a phone. Several witnesses later claimed they saw a black metal object hidden inside the poster, but no gun was ever found.

FIFTEEN WHo killed Bobby by Shane O' Sullivan

The Manchurian Candidate In 1959, Richard Condon published his second novel, The Manchurian Candidate, a heady psychodrama of assassination, conspiracy, and paranoia. It pushed all the hot buttons of the time-the Communist witch hunts of McCarthyism and the threat of Communist brainwashing evoked by American POWs returning from the Korean War with accounts of mind manipulation. Protagonist Raymond Shaw is a hypnotically programmed assassin, a U.S. soldier brainwashed by the North Koreans whose father is running for vice president in a campaign orchestrated by his mother, Eleanor Iselin. The Iselins pose as McCarthyites but are actually Communist agents. Raymond's mission is to assassinate the presidential nominee so that his father and the Communists can rise to power. Every time Raymond hears the phrase "Why don't you pass the time by playing a little solitaire?" it triggers a hypnotic trance in which he kills, with no memory of having done so. In 1962, with Frank Sinatra playing Major Bennett Marco, Shaw's former comrade (and Laurence Harvey as Shaw), John Frankenheimer directed the film of the book, which became a cult classic. Frankenheimer reflected on the film before his death in 2002: I became good friends with Bobby, who loved the movie. I made all the films for Bobby's 1968 campaign, he stayed at my house, and I drove him to the Ambassador Hotel on the night he died. Did I think that the political assassination in The Manchurian Candidate prompted Sirhan Sirhan to kill Bobby? No way. But the incident affected my perspective on life because, with Bobby, I felt I was part of something that could change the world: he turned me into an idealist. Then, suddenly, it was gone and nothing mattered. My career was defused. It took a long time to reinvest my life with some kind of meaning. I finished the sixties with a bad case of burn-out . . . his death was the defining moment of my life. By 1968, the idea of a "Manchurian candidate" was still dismissed as a Hollywood fantasy, and Dr. Diamond referred to the idea that Sirhan could have been programmed by someone else as a "crackpot theory." But unknown to the public or Sirhan's small army of psychiatrists, the CIA had in fact been working on their own "Manchurian candidate" since the early 1950s. Dr. Diamond did, at least, agree that Sirhan was in a hypnotic trance at the time of the shooting, and there are a number of clues that suggest this. Between nine thirty and eleven that night, Sirhan stood staring, mesmerized by the Teletype machine in the Colonial Room, as described by Western Union operator Mary Grohs: "Well, he came over to my machine and started staring at it. Just staring. I'll never forget his eyes." Vincent Di Pierro's strongest impression of Sirhan was "that sick smile on his face" while he was shooting. Several other witnesses remarked on this strange smile; one also described how Sirhan's brow was furrowed in "tremendous concentration" as he fired.-

O'Sullivan, Shane. Who Killed Bobby? : The Unsolved Murder of Robert F. Kennedy . Kindle Edition.

Here is something very weird. -Sirhan's first contact with the police came on August 4, 1963 [Barrack Obama Jr. said to be 2 year birthday], when he approached Officer Cannow at an intersection near the Sirhan house and said he'd had an argument with his mother and was afraid to go home. Cannow brought him home and was told by Mrs. Sirhan that Sirhan was at an age where he would not listen to the advice of his elders. Mother and son started to argue again, so Cannow advised Sirhan to leave the house until he "cooled off."

In 1968 former Congressman and former V.P. Nixon would run for President against likely Democrat candidate RFK. RFK would be shot in the Nixon Southern California political stronghold. Max Rafferty was running for US Senate on the GOP slate.

Max Rafferty was a Nixon like Los Angeles area politician who in 1968 was running for US Senate. At the Rafferty Party were shadowy figures tied to the Flying Tigers and the woman in the Polka Dot Dress and Sirhan Sirhan. That Rafferty party seems linked to Nixon enemy RFK and the assasination of RFK per the Polka Dot File book.

PREFACE - The Polka Dot File on the Robert F. Kennedy Killing: The Paris Peace Talks Connection

a Palestinian youth, shot at Sen. Robert F. Kennedy as he passed through the kitchen of the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles. There is credible evidence that there was a second gun firing, raising doubts about who killed the Senator.

Seconds after the shooting stopped, a young woman in a polka-dot dress ran out of the kitchen, past Sandra Serrano, a Kennedy campaign worker. The woman shouted, "We shot him, we shot him." Asked who they shot, the woman replied, "Kennedy," and she ran into the morning darkness and history, never to be found.

Early in the investigation, witnesses reported having seen her in several places inside the hotel, accompanie by Sirhan and two other me Today Sirhan, in his appeal for a re-trial, claims to have been a "Manchurian Candidate" and the "Girl in the Polka-Dot Dress" his trigger - a "Manchurian Candidate" being a person Induced to commit murder while under hypnosis. This book concerns itself only with my first-person experience.

I was then a reporter with the Hollywood Citizen News, and I spent many hours hunting for the mysterious "polka-dot girl" - long after the police lied about her existence, saying there was no such person, because they had failed to find her.

Here is the day-to-day account of my hunt for the mystery woman. The story here is a firsthand narrative of my personal, detailed investigation, recorded as it happened. It includes actual, accurate transcripts of interviews I conducted before the police or the FBI intimidated the witnesses into changing their stories. FBI and Los Angeles police records clearly show that my investigation was more advanced than theirs.

"The girl in the polka-dot dress" remains a mystery today. Yet many know she is the key to solving the Robert F. Kennedy killing.

The same day, and by coincidence, surfing the Internet I ran into mentions of several books written about Richard Nixon's conspiracy to scuttle the Paris Peace Talks. When I read the names of the Nixon co-conspirators, I was shocked and stunned to recognize one of them as a person the "girl in the polka-dot dress" had mentioned as having met in New York, just three days before the assassination. That spurred me to renew my investigation. I reviewed my notes and tapes and decided to publish this firsthand account.

The time has finally arrived for me. I feel responsibility to complete the record of such a seminal moment in American political history. In doing so I want to thank Lisa Pease and Shane O'Sullivan, fearless investigators, for their encouragement. My children finally get their wish, and this book is dedicated to them.

No one knew that "the girl in the polka-dot dress" had met with Anna Chennault the week of the assassination. Not the LAPD, not the FBI. Only Fahey, Faura and the "girl in the polka-dot dress."

None of the investigators, and over time the researchers and historians of the killing, made the connection between the two conspiracies since the "peace talks" conspiracy was top secret, and neither Faura nor Life magazine had revealed that the "polka-dot girl" had met with Anna Chennault three days before the killing.

Did "National security" trump Faura and Life magazine's investigation because it was headed towards Anna Chennault, presidential candidate Richard Nixon, future Vice President Spiro Agnew and an influential and powerful senator from Texas, John Tower?

- The Polka Dot File on the Robert F. Kennedy Killing: The Paris Peace Talks Connection

The story is made up of the event covered in the RFK assassination story and in the fabric of history in which it occured. The two parts each chapters of The Great Treason Book are concattinated into a single RFK Pamplet file. RFK was (along with Paul Schrade) shot over aircraft politics by Sirhan Sirhan who was a Palestinian put up to the job by imbuing him with a rage such that attempting kill RFK and Paul Schrade was an "automatic behavior" his mid felt was the only escape from the trauma he lived in.

Dr Lo and Jen Moore discuss the Hypnotic production of antisocial and self injurious behavior

“I am sure you’ve all heard the old wives tale but no hypnotized subject may be forced to do that which is repellent to his moral nature whatever that may be nonsense of course oh you note-takers might set down a reminder to consult brandman’s paper experiments in the hypnotic production of antisocial and self-injurious behavior Orwell’s 1941 paper which was titled I believe experiments in the hypnotic production of crime or of course Andrew Salters remarkable book conditioned reflex therapy to name only three

- The Manchurian Candidate 1962. When Sirhan Sirhan shot RFK he had been programmed with the rage RFK MUST DIE so intensely his personality structure needed to satisfy the rage or else continue in the trauma. Could this realy happen? Was asked at John Frankenhiemer (Mancurian Candidtate movie producer) home where RFK was staying the weekend he was shot.

The fabric made by all the threads is aircraft developer Howard Hughes and Robert Mahue were industrial devices (Glomar Explorer salvage, military planes) suppliers to the US DOD and CIA. This included surplus planes modified covertly for groups like the Flying Tigers or Chauncey Holt for Guatemala or for the CIA in attacking Cuba. All of this was done in places like SSFL, Inglewood North American Aviation, the atomic proving grounds, and the CIA activities in that area. This is where the Richard Nixon CIA plants operated out of from 1951 through January 1961 and continued briefly under JFK but were called off. This is where the Donegan piece of the story comes in too. Even in 1968 RFK is about to find out what really happened regarding the Indonesia plans by these same group of people and the Manchurian Candidate story.

The Fabric when fully unrolled is longer than WWII and The Battle of Britain. It goes back to 1902 and the death of Cecil Rhodes and the death of the methods of Cecil Rhodes. It goes into Psychological Warfare and 1910 and Queen Mary and her children Edward and Albert and the Kings Speech. During this tine genetics and eugenics were being studied and so were the Windsors.

A Lie Too Big To Fail by Lisa Pease

In 1956, when President Sukarno of Indonesia came to visit the United States, Scott McLeod of the State Department contacted Maheu and asked him to vet hookers for Sukarno from a security standpoint under the CIA's Project Harpstar. Maheu said this was done to "please" Sukarno, but no doubt this was also an attempt to compromise him with photographs and other material for potential blackmail. The problem was, Sukarno's appetite for women was part of his appeal to a segment of the public in Indonesia. A little over a year later, according to Maheu, he got a call from Sheffeld Edwards at CIA, the security offcer who oversaw the Bluebird and ARTICHOKE CIA mind control programs. Edwards wanted Maheu to perform another operation relative to Sukarnoæ Evidently, the Soviets supplied Sukarno with prostitutes too, but one of them was a KGB agent. Edwards was initially asked to contact Maheu by the CIA's Far East Division.

Edwards asked Maheu to make a film purporting to show Sukarno and this Soviet agent having sex to insinuate that Sukarno was under the control of a Soviet agent, to be titled Happy Days. "It was never in any way intended to be a 'porno' movie," Maheu wrote. 836 So Maheu contacted Bing Crosby and his brother Larry. "The reason was simple," Maheu explained. "The Company [CIA] liked Bing and Larry's politics and, after doing a security check on them, felt they could be trusted completely Maheu admitted working with the man who was Sheriff at the time of the Robert Kennedy assassination, Peter Pitchess, on Happy Days for the CIA, but Maheu omitted mention of the involvement of the LAPD in this episode. Initially, the CIA hoped to find footage they could use from existing pornographic movies, supplied by no less than Police Chief William Parker.an It appears Maheu was loath to brag about his connections to the LAPD, which was unusual, as he tended to brag about everything else. When Maheu worked for Hughes, he hired Jack Hooper to head Howard Hughes' personal security detail. Hooper was "a retired Los Angeles Police Department detective he had used on special assignments since the late 1950s, to supervise overall security.

John Meier

JOHN MEIER WAS A TOP AIDE TO HOWARD HUGHES

FROM 1966 TO 1970. He was one of the few people allowed in the room with Hughes. Meier was a computer analyst before and after a stint in the Korean War. He met Howard Hughes in the 19 50s, and impressed Hughes. Meier is a charismatic, articulate and obviously intelligent individual with a mischievous sense of humor, so it's easy to see why Hughes would have wanted this man at his side. Meier did not realize, when he took the job, just how deeply embedded the CIA was within the Hughes organization. For its part, the CIA's nickname for Hughes was "The Stockholder," presumably because so much of his money paid for the operations of "The Company," as the CIA called itself. The CIA was so deeply entwined with the Hughes organization that no less than James Angleton, the 25-year head of the CIA's Counterintelligence unit, spoke at Hughes' small funeral service after he died:

> Howard Hughes! Where his country's interests were concerned, no man knew his target better. We were fortunate to have him. He is a great patriot."

Meier first learned of the CIA's role with Hughes two months after Robert Kennedy was assassinated, in August 1968, when a CIA operative named Michael Merhage, who assumed Meier was also CIA, mentioned his CIA employment. Merhage gave Meier a list of American politicians the CIA wanted to support. The list included former Warren Commissioner and soon-to-be President Gerald Ford. Others on the list included James Eastland, John Tower, Paul Laxalt, Wallace Bennett (father of Robert Bennett, whose Mullen Company PR firm employed E. Howard Hunt, one of the Watergate participants when Hunt was ostensibly "retired"-for the third time-from the CIA.)

When I [Lisa Pease] visited Meier in his home in Canada in the 1990s, he had told me the Robert Kennedy assassination had been organized by Robert Maheu. His proof related to the many daily diaries he had kept all his adult life. At the time, he would not show me nor read to me from his diaries, and I didn't press.

But when I visited him again with David Talbot in 2013, Meier read us diary entries that included the following:

> [June 1, 1968] I completed the speech and the supporting background documentation I had prepared for Robert Kennedy on the AEC underground testing programs in Nevada. Spent the morning with George Roth, my research editor on additional background information. At noon, Bob Maheu called and told me to cancel my trip scheduled for Monday, and wait until after the fifth. I was upset and advised him a schedule had already been arranged and I was to meet with Harry Evans and Paul Schrade of the UAW who were assisting Kennedy in his campaign in California. They were also assisting Howard Hughes and myself in stopping the underground testing in Nevada. ...

> [June 4, 1968] Maheu called in the > morning and said he wanted me to call Don Nixon urgently and ask him to fly to Las Vegas to meet with Maheu on Wednesday the 5th. He wanted me to introduce him, as they had never met. That was the reason Maheu wanted me to stay in Vegas and not fly on to L.A. I left a message for Don Nixon He called me at 11 A.M. and advised me that he was very busy and was not able to make the meeting on the 5th. I called Maheu and when he heard Don was not coming out, he told me to call Don back and have him call his brother again. At 3 P.M. Don called me back and I gave him the message to call his brother Richard Nixon. Don was upset that this Maheu would try and run his life!

The OSS and CIA and support for the right-wing "bannana republic" strongmen the CIA had been engaging in before and after WWII were a key part of the history of unions RFK supported and union-busting Nixon supported. In 1968 RFK was nearing a contest with Richard Nixon of the OSS CIA for President.

Paris Peace Talks on Vietnam Following the strong showing of anti-war candidate Eugene McCarthy in the New Hampshire primary, in March 1968 U.S. President Lyndon B. Johnson halted bombing operations over the northern portion of North Vietnam (Operation Rolling Thunder), in order to encourage Hanoi (the perceived locus of the insurgency) to begin negotiations. Although some sources state that the bombing halt decision announced on March 31, 1968, was related to events occurring within the White House and the Presidents counsel of Secretary of Defense Clark Clifford and others rather than the events in New Hampshire.[7] Shortly thereafter, Hanoi agreed to discuss a complete halt of the bombing, and a date was set for representatives of both parties to meet in Paris. The sides first met on May 10, with the delegations headed by Xuân Thuỷ, who would remain the official leader of the North Vietnamese delegation throughout the process, and U.S. ambassador-at-large W. Averell Harriman. - Wikipedia

The First American Volunteer Group (AVG) of the Republic of China Air Force, nicknamed the Flying Tigers, was formed to help oppose the Japanese invasion of China. Operating in 1941–1942, it was composed of pilots from the United States Army Air Corps (USAAC), Navy (USN), and Marine Corps (USMC), and was commanded by Claire Lee Chennault. Their Curtiss P-40B Warhawk aircraft, marked with Chinese colors, flew under American control. Recruited under President Franklin Roosevelt's authority before Pearl Harbor, their mission was to bomb Japan and defend the Republic of China, but many delays meant the AVG first flew in combat after the US and Japan declared war.

The group consisted of three fighter squadrons of around 30 aircraft each that trained in Burma before the American entry into World War II to defend the Republic of China against Japanese forces. The AVG were officially members of the Republic of China Air Force. The group had contracts with salaries ranging from $250 a month for a mechanic to $750 for a squadron commander, roughly three times what they had been making in the U.S. forces. While it accepted some civilian volunteers for its headquarters and ground crew, the AVG recruited most of its staff from the U.S. military.

The Flying Tigers began to arrive in China in April 1941. The group first saw combat on 20 December 1941, 12 days after Pearl Harbor. It demonstrated innovative tactical victories when the news in the U.S. was filled with little more than stories of defeat at the hands of the Japanese forces, and achieved such notable success during the lowest period of the war for both the U.S. and the Allied Forces as to give hope to America that it might eventually defeat Japan. AVG pilots earned official credit and received combat bonuses for destroying 296 enemy aircraft, while losing only 14 pilots in combat. The combat records of the AVG still exist and researchers have found them credible. On 4 July 1942 the AVG was disbanded and replaced by the 23rd Fighter Group of the United States Army Air Forces, which was later absorbed into the U.S. Fourteenth Air Force with General Chennault as commander. The 23rd FG went on to achieve similar combat success, while retaining the nose art on the left-over P-40s.

Origin

The American Volunteer Group was largely the creation of Claire L. Chennault, a retired U.S. Army Air Corps officer who had worked in China since August 1937, first as military aviation advisor to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in the early months of the Sino-

Japanese War, then as director of a Chinese Air Force flight school centered in Kunming. Meanwhile, the Soviet Union supplied fighter and bomber squadrons to China, but these units were mostly withdrawn by the summer of 1940. Chiang then asked for American combat aircraft and pilots, sending Chennault to Washington as an adviser to China's ambassador and Chiang's brother-in-law, T. V. Soong.

Chennault spent the winter of 1940–1941 in Washington, supervising the purchase of 100 Curtiss P-40 fighters and the recruiting of 100 pilots and some 200 ground crew and administrative personnel that would constitute the 1st AVG. He also laid the groundwork for a follow-on bomber group and a second fighter group, though these would be aborted after the Pearl Harbor attack.

Original American volunteer group

Of the pilots, 60 came from the Navy and Marine Corps and 40 from the Army Air Corps. (One army pilot, Albert Baumler was refused a passport because he had earlier flown as a mercenary in Spain, so only 99 actually sailed for Asia. Ten more army flight instructors were hired as check pilots for Chinese cadets, and several of these would ultimately join the AVG's combat squadrons.) The volunteers were discharged from the armed services, to be employed for "training and instruction" by a private military contractor, the Central Aircraft Manufacturing Company (CAMCO), which paid them $600 a month for pilot officers, $675 a month for flight leaders, $750 for squadron leaders (no pilot was recruited at this level), and about $250 for skilled ground crewmen. Some pilots were also orally promised a bounty of $500 for each enemy aircraft shot down, and this was later confirmed by Madame Chiang Kai-shek.

The first batch, some 300 men, departed San Francisco on 10 July 1941 and arrived in Rangoon, Burma, on 28 July, on the Dutch ship Jaegersfontaine, operated by Java-Pacific Lijn. The second batch, some 30 pilots, departed on 24 September 1941 and arrived on 12 November on the Dutch ship Boschfontein. These volunteers used civilian passports on these trips. After arriving in Rangoon, they were initially based at a British airfield in Toungoo for training while their aircraft were assembled and test flown by CAMCO personnel at Mingaladon Airport outside Rangoon. Chennault set up a schoolhouse that was made necessary because many pilots had "lied about their flying experience, claiming pursuit experience when they had flown only bombers and sometimes much less powerful aeroplanes." They called Chennault "the Old Man" due to his much older age and leathery exterior obtained from years flying open cockpit pursuit aircraft in the Army Air Corps. Most believed that he had flown as a fighter pilot in China, although stories that he was a combat ace are probably apocryphal.

Of the 300 original members of the CAMCO personnel, nine were Chinese-Americans recruited from America's Chinatowns. All nine were trained at Allison Engineworks in Indianapolis, Indiana: all were P-40 mechanics. Upon arrival in Kunming, two other Chinese-Americans were hired, a Ford Motor truck specialist and a doctor, raising the total to 11. Prior to 4 July 1942, three of the P-40 mechanics resigned. The official AVG roster lists the original eight.[citation needed][clarification needed]

The AVG was created by an executive order of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. He did not speak English, however, and Chennault never learned to speak Chinese. As a result, all communications between the two men were routed through Soong Mei-ling, "Madame Chiang" as she was known to Americans, and she was designated the group's "honorary commander."

United States Army Air Forces

United States Army Air Forces A total of 15 USAAF pursuit/fighter groups (FG), along with other pursuit/fighter squadrons and a few tactical reconnaissance (TR) units, operated the P-40 during 1941–45. As was also the case with the Bell P-39 Airacobra, many USAAF officers considered the P-40 exceptional but it was gradually replaced by the Lockheed P-38 Lightning, the Republic P-47 Thunderbolt and the North American P-51 Mustang. The bulk of the fighter operations by the USAAF in 1942–43 were borne by the P-40 and the P-39. In the Pacific, these two fighters, along with the U.S. Navy Grumman F4F Wildcat, contributed more than any other U.S. types to breaking Japanese air power during this critical period.

Pacific theaters

The P-40 was the main USAAF fighter aircraft in the South West Pacific and Pacific Ocean theaters during 1941–42. At Pearl Harbor and in the Philippines, USAAF P-40 squadrons suffered crippling losses on the ground and in the air to Japanese fighters such as the A6M Zero and Ki-43 Hayabusa respectively. During the attack on Pearl Harbor, most of the USAAF fighters were P-40Bs, the majority of which were destroyed. However, a few P-40s managed to get in the air and shoot down several Japanese aircraft, most notably by George Welch and Kenneth Taylor.

The Dutch East Indies campaign of 1941–1942 was the conquest of the Dutch East Indies (present-day Indonesia) by forces of the Empire of Japan in the early days of the Pacific campaign of World War II. Allied forces attempted unsuccessfully to defend the islands. The East Indies were targeted by the Japanese for their rich oil resources which would become a vital asset during the war. The campaign and subsequent three-and-a-half-year Japanese occupation was also a major factor in the end of Dutch colonial rule in the region.

In the Dutch East Indies campaign, the 17th Pursuit Squadron (Provisional), formed from USAAF pilots evacuated from the Philippines, claimed 49 Japanese aircraft destroyed, for the loss of 17 P-40s The seaplane tender USS Langley was sunk by Japanese airplanes while delivering P-40s to Tjilatjap, Java. In the Solomon Islands and New Guinea Campaigns and the air defence of Australia, improved tactics and training allowed the USAAF to better use the strengths of the P-40. Due to aircraft fatigue, scarcity of spare parts and replacement problems, the US Fifth Air Force and Royal Australian Air Force created a joint P-40 management and replacement pool on 30 July 1942 and many P-40s went back and forth between the air forces.

The 49th Fighter Group was in action in the Pacific from the beginning of the war. Robert M. DeHaven scored 10 kills (of 14 overall) in the P-40 with the 49th FG. He compared the P-40 favorably with the P-38.

POLKA DOT FILE ON THE ROBERT E KENNEDY KILLING: THE PARIS PEACE TALKS C...

CHAPTER 49

John Fahey's information about the woman he spent the day with having known Anna Chennault would have surely opened up a feverish line of investigation, had Chennault's treasonous activities been known at the time. It tied up with the woman's desire to get to Australia because "the Chinese" could not get her there. She would be safe in Australia.

At the time no one knew (other than President Johnson, his advisors, NSA and FBI and the conspirators), that Anna Chennault was a principal in a conspiracy to scuttle the Paris Peace Talks to help candidate Nixon win the election.

No one knew that "the girl in the polka-dot dress" had met with Anna Chennault the week of the assassination.

Not the LAPD, not the FBI. Only Fahey, Faura and the "girl in the polka-dot dress."

None of the investigators, and over time the researchers and historians of the killing, made the connection between the two conspiracies since the "peace talks" conspiracy was top secret, and neither Faura nor Life magazine had revealed that the "polka-dot girl" had met with Anna Chennault three days before the killing.

Did "National security" trump Faura and Life magazine's investigation because it was headed towards Anna Chennault, presidential candidate Richard Nixon, future Vice President Spiro Agnew and an influential and powerful senator from Texas, John Tower?

But who was Anna Chennault?

Anna Chennault, also known as Anna Chan and Anna Chen, was born (Chen Xiangmei) in Beijing, China, on June 23, 1925. She married Gen. Claire Chennault, the legendary founder of the famed Flying Tigers during the Sino-Japanese war, on Dec. 21, 1947. The Flying Tigers were a group of American mercenary pilots flying for the Chinese during that war.

Their storybook love story and years of marriage is well documented and the subject of several TV productions in Taiwan.

Claire Chennault was a daring pilot who attained the rank of general before he died. He had an avocation for intrigue and intelligence work. He was also a close friend and confidant of Gen. Chiang Kai- shek, who ruled China and fought the communists under Mao Tse Tung, until Mao's forces overwhelmed him and forced him to retreat to Taiwan.

Among Gen. Chennault's many accomplishments and cloak-and-dagger work for the United States during the clandestine war for China against Japan, before Japan attacked Pearl Harbor, was the organizing of the Flying Tigers, and founding Flying Tiger Airlines and Civil Air Transport (CAT), which later morphed into Air America - both of them CIA proprietaries. By the time he died, in 1958, he had a long list of intelligence associations with the U.S. government.

CAT operated until June of 1968, the same month Senator Kennedy died - coincidentally? Anna Chennault, a very rich and enterprising woman became a powerhouse in Republican politics in Washington, D.C., and a member of the Republican National Committee after her husband's death. Being very wealthy and seeking influence, she became known as "Washington's hostess." Her detractors called her "The Dragon Lady."

Michael Jon Hand (8 December 1941) was a US ex-Green Beret known for co-founding the Nugan Hand Bank. He has more recently been the owner of TOPS Knives.

Career

Hand grew up in New York City, where he attended DeWitt Clinton High School. After graduation, he attended Syracuse University, completing a year long course in the State Ranger School. In May 1963, Hand enlisted in the United States Army, where he served in the Army Special Forces ("Green Berets"). After Special Forces training at Fort Bragg, Hand was posted to Vietnam, where he received a Purple Heart, a Silver Star, and the Distinguished Service Cross, the second highest military award in the United States. He received this for his actions on 9 June 1965 in defending the Special Forces camp at Dong Xoai against a Viet Cong attack during the Battle of Dong Xoai.

Reporter Jonathan Kwitny, who wrote extensively on the Nugan Hand Bank, cites a passport document in which Hand claimed to have left the army in May 1966, and from 1966-67 "worked directly for the U.S. government." According to other unnamed sources cited by Kwitny, Hand helped train guerrilla forces in Laos and worked with the Air America crews that supplied them.

In September 1967, Hand moved to Australia, where he found work in real estate, selling development lots. He was a close associate of Bernie Houghton, the owner of the Bourbon & Beefsteak bar in Sydney's Kings Cross, a nightspot notorious for drug use. In 1969, Hand formed his own development company, which soon began doing business with Australian lawyer Francis John Nugan. In 1973, Hand and Nugan founded the Nugan Hand Bank, with Hand concentrating on the international side of the bank. In January 1975, Hand spent over a year in southern Africa seeking to arrange arms deals, at a time when the CIA was providing support to groups such as UNITA in Angola. Efforts to arrange deals included incorporating a company in Pretoria, South Africa, and sending Bernie Houghton with two Nugan Hand employees to the United States to meet Edwin P. Wilson.

Returning to Sydney in March 1976, Hand developed "a close business and social relationship with Murray Riley", a former policeman turned criminal patron of leading Australian criminals. Within a month of his arrival, Hand began transferring cash to Nugan Hand's Hong Kong branch on Riley's behalf. Australian police later concluded that "Throughout 1976 Hand was knowingly involved in drug activity with the 'Riley' group in that he permitted and even encouraged the use of Nugan Hand facilities for the movement of 'drug' money." Following the June 1976 incorporation of a bank branch in the Cayman Islands, Hand moved to Hong Kong in October 1976 to develop the international side of the bank, developing a network of 12 branches across three continents. In 1977-8, as the bank expanded dramatically, Houghton was able to use his connections to bring a range of US military and intelligence figures to the bank. This expansion and influx of links coincided with the collapse of the CIA-linked Castle Bank & Trust in the Bahamas. In August 1977, Hand moved from Hong Kong to Singapore, from where he managed Nugan Hand's international operations until its collapse in 1980.

Nugan Hand collapsed in January 1980 following the apparent suicide of Frank Nugan. Subsequently, Hand shredded many of Nugan Hand's remaining records from both the office and the home of Nugan. He then fled Australia under a false identity, that of a Sydney butcher named Alan Glenn Winter, on a flight to Fiji in late June 1981. Hand wore a false beard and mustache to look like Winter and obtained a passport after getting Winter's birth certificate and having two photos taken. After a week in Fiji, he made his way to Vancouver, British Columbia, and then on to New York City.

In March 1987, Theodore Shackley responded to an article in

The New York Times about the Nugan Hand Bank scandal with a letter to the editor stating that the newspaper had incorrectly described his activities in a manner than served to negatively affect public confidence in the CIA. Shackley stated he had met Hand in the mid-1960s while employed by the CIA in Laos and once again in Washington D.C. after retirement, and denied involvement in the scandal stating: "I was in no way involved in establishing the Nugan Hand Bank. I never made or caused to be made any deposit into or withdrawal from that bank. No money over which I exercised any control was ever deposited in this bank."

News reports appeared in the 1980s that claimed Hand had been sighted in a number of different countries, but none of these were ever confirmed. In March 1991, the Australian magazine The Eye reported that Hand was living in the United States, giving an address and other details, but according to reporters following up on the story, Australian authorities indicated that there were no plans to pursue further actions against Hand.

In his 2015 book Merchants of Menace, Peter Butt identified Hand as living under the name of Michael Jon Fuller in Idaho Falls, Idaho.

Paul Schrade was a union leader for the UAW and a Kennedy confidant. Like Bobby Kennedy’s son, he always maintained there had been a second gunman.

"The prosecution’s own evidence showed that Sirhan fired two shots, missed Kennedy and hit me.” Autopsy results seemed to back him up, showing RFK was shot at point-blank range from behind, and that 13 shots were fired. Sirhan’s gun held only eight bullets. According to Schrade, RFK Jr. asked for his help explaining what happened to his children. Schrade said, he asked him: "Look, Paul you were there that night. They don’t know what happened to their grandfather. Would you please tell them?"

For the rest of his life, Paul Schrade continued to support the

Joseph Kennedy Sr. did not endear himself to the British population during German air raids on London. As the Blitz attacks grew stronger, the ambassador moved his family out of London to escape the raids. After touring the destruction in London, he remarked at how much he admired the local citizens for their bravery and fortitude in the face of such horrific German attacks. In time, the papers began calling Kennedy, “Jittery Joe.”

Believing that his effectiveness as ambassador was coming to an end, Kennedy, on October 6, 1940, wrote a letter to FDR asking that he be relieved of his duties in London and demanded that he be brought home. If his request was denied, he would come home anyway. The Roosevelt administration accepted Kennedy’s wishes, and he arrived in New York on October 27, arriving at La Guardia Airport. FDR had asked Joe and Rose to come to see him at the White House when they arrived, and they took the train to Washington immediately. After dinner, Joe gave the president a piece of his mind. He told FDR that he did not like the way he was treated in London, saying candidly that he was kept out of the loop as far as policy formulation was concerned. He took a direct swipe at the State Department, saying it was directly responsible for his being shut out of policy making.

Joe arrived home one month before the 1940 presidential election in which FDR was running for an unprecedented third term. The press was aware of the growing rift between FDR and Kennedy, and speculation was the order of the day when it came to what trouble Kennedy might inflict on the campaign. Joe agreed to make a radio speech endorsing the president, which he paid for himself. It cost $20,000 for a nationwide hookup. He endorsed FDR but said that he still believed it wise for the U.S. to stay out of the European war. https://warfarehistorynetwork.com/article/joseph-p-kennedy-most-controversial-ambassador-to-great-britain/

First Broadcast as Prime Minister to the British People

By May 14, the news from the front was uniformly bad. The Germans had broken through the French defences at Sedan, and everywhere the French forces were reeling under a devastating barrage from land and air. “At almost all points where the armies had come in contact,” Churchill later wrote, “the weight and fury of the German attack was overwhelming.” Holland fell on May 15, and Churchill flew to Paris on the same day to confer with the French leaders. It was evident that the military situation was near to catastrophic, and that the military commanders and political leaders were resigned to overwhelming defeat. Churchill agreed to send ten fighter squadrons to France, thereby imperilling the situation in England, as a desperate attempt to restore the spirits of his Ally. On May 19, the Cabinet was informed that Lord Gort was “examining a possible withdrawal towards Dunkirk.” In these sombre circumstances, Churchill made this, his first broadcast as Prime Minister to the British people.

First Broadcast as Prime Minister

I speak to you for the first time as Prime Minister in a solemn hour for the life of our country, of our empire, of our allies, and, above all, of the cause of Freedom. A tremendous battle is raging in France and Flanders. The Germans, by a remarkable combination of air bombing and heavily armoured tanks, have broken through the French defences north of the Maginot Line, and strong columns of their armoured vehicles are ravaging the open country, which for the first day or two was without defenders. They have penetrated deeply and spread alarm and confusion in their track. Behind them there are now appearing infantry in lorries, and behind them, again, the large masses are moving forward. The re-groupment of the French armies to make head against, and also to strike at, this intruding wedge has been proceeding for several days, largely assisted by the magnificent efforts of the Royal Air Force.

We must not allow ourselves to be intimidated by the presence of these armoured vehicles in unexpected places behind our lines. If they are behind our Front, the French are also at many points fighting actively behind theirs. Both sides are therefore in an extremely dangerous position. And if the French Army, and our own Army, are well handled, as I believe they will be; if the French retain that genius for recovery and counter-attack for which they have so long been famous; and if the British Army shows the dogged endurance and solid fighting power of which there have been so many examples in the past - then a sudden transformation of the scene might spring into being.

It would be foolish, however, to disguise the gravity of the hour. It would be still more foolish to lose heart and courage or to suppose that well-trained, well-equipped armies numbering three or four millions of men can be overcome in the space of a few weeks, or even months, by a scoop, or raid of mechanized vehicles, however formidable. We may look with confidence to the stabilization of the Front in France, and to the general engagement of the masses, which will enable the qualities of the French and British soldiers to be matched squarely against those of their adversaries. For myself, I have invincible confidence in the French Army and its leaders. Only a very small part of that splendid Army has yet been heavily engaged; and only a very small part of France has yet been invaded. There is good evidence to show that practically the whole of the specialized and mechanized forces of the enemy have been already thrown into the battle; and we know that very heavy losses have been inflicted upon them. No officer or man, no brigade or division, which grapples at close quarters with the enemy, wherever encountered, can fail to make a worthy contribution to the general result. The Armies must cast away the idea of resisting behind concrete lines or natural obstacles, and must realize that mastery can only be regained by furious and unrelenting assault. And this spirit must not only animate the High Command, but must inspire every fighting man.

In the air - often at serious odds, often at odds hitherto thought overwhelming - we have been clawing down three or four to one of our enemies; and the relative balance of the British and German Air Forces is now considerably more favourable to us than at the beginning of the battle. In cutting down the German bombers, we are fighting our own battle as well as that of France. My confidence in our ability to fight it out to the finish with the German Air Force has been strengthened by the fierce encounters which have taken place and are taking place. At the same time, our heavy bombers are striking nightly at the tap-root of German mechanized power, and have already inflicted serious damage upon the oil refineries on which the Nazi effort to dominate the world directly depends.

We must expect that as soon as stability is reached on the Western Front, the bulk of that hideous apparatus of aggression which gashed Holland into ruin and slavery in a few days will be turned upon us. I am sure I speak for all when I say we are ready to face it; to endure it; and to retaliate against it - to any extent that the unwritten laws of war permit. There will be many men and many women in this Island who when the ordeal comes upon them, as come it will, will feel comfort, and even a pride, that they are sharing the perils of our lads at the Front - soldiers, sailors and airmen, God bless them - and are drawing away from them a part at least of the onslaught they have to bear. Is not this the appointed time for all to make the utmost exertions in their power? If the battle is to be won, we must provide our men with ever-increasing quantities of the weapons and ammunition they need. We must have, and have quickly, more aeroplanes, more tanks, more shells, more guns. There is imperious need for these vital munitions. They increase our strength against the powerfully armed enemy. They replace the wastage of the obstinate struggle; and the knowledge that wastage will speedily be replaced enables us to draw more readily upon our reserves and throw them in now that everything counts so much.

Our task is not only to win the battle – but to win the war. After this battle in France abates its force, there will come the battle for our Island - for all that Britain is, and all the Britain means. That will be the struggle. In that supreme emergency we shall not hesitate to take every step, even the most drastic, to call forth from our people the last ounce and the last inch of effort of which they are capable. The interests of property, the hours of labour, are nothing compared with the struggle of life and honour, for right and freedom, to which we have vowed ourselves.

I have received from the Chiefs of the French Republic, and in particular form its indomitable Prime Minister, M. Reynaud, the most sacred pledges that whatever happens they will fight to the end, be it bitter or be it glorious. Nay, if we fight to the end, it can only be glorious.

Having received His Majesty's commission, I have formed an Administration of men and women of every Party and of almost every point of view. We have differed and quarrelled in the past; but now one bond unites us all - to wage war until victory is won, and never to surrender ourselves to servitude and shame, whatever the cost and the agony may be. If this is one of the most awe-striking periods in the long history of France and Britain, it is also beyond doubt the most sublime. Side by side, unaided except by their kith and kin in the great Dominions and by the wide empires which rest beneath their shield – side by side, the British and French peoples have advanced to rescue not only Europe but mankind from the foulest and most soul-destroying tyranny which has ever darkened and stained the pages of history. Behind them – behind us – behind the Armies and Fleets of Britain and France – gather a group of shattered States and bludgeoned races: the Czechs, the Poles, the Norwegians, the Danes, the Dutch, the Belgians – upon all of whom the long night of barbarism will descend, unbroken even by a star of hope, unless we conquer, as conquer we must, as conquer we shall.

Today is Trinity Sunday. Centuries ago words were written to be a call and a spur to the faithful servants of Truth and Justice: “Arm yourselves, and be ye men of valour, and be in readiness for the conflict; for it is better for us to perish in battle than to look upon the outrage of our nation and our altar. As the Will of God is in Heaven, even so let it be.”

O'BRIEN: Let's begin this morning with Robert Kennedy's involvement in Indonesia. I know that you've gone into this in your book, in your manuscript. I understand that his initial involvement was with the releasing of Allen Pope.

Jones: No, no, no. Not at all. His initial involvement with--or at least exposure to--Indonesia was before he took office. I talked with him about Indonesia and its problems when he was in the Senate.

Then, as we discussed earlier, in the fall, shortly after he /John F :· Kenned~_l had been elected, we · in the embassy advised the .State Department that we thought it would be important for him either to visit Indonesia or to invite Sukarno to come to Washington. And so we passed that word oh to him even before he took office. I was able also to report from ·Indonesia the extremely favorable reaction that Sukarno had to Kennedy and the speeches he'd been making during his campaign and the consequent fact that Sukarno had come to the conclusion that he and Kennedy had pretty much the same view of the world--perhaps I shouldn't say "the world," but the same view of the economic and social revolution that was sweeping Asia and Africa. And so I thought that it was important to begin communication between these two men. Sukarno felt very strongly that international relations were based pretty much on personal relations, so that he was anxious to develop a rapport with the new President of the United States. Kennedy responded to this, and early in his administration, as you know, April of the first year, he invited . Sukarno to an unofficial visit to the White House . So that's really when~e the Kennedy involvement with Sukarno began. Pope was not mentioned in the plans for the visit although President Kennedy did bring up the subject during the visit.

The British, of course, are and have been for a century and a half our closest allies. We have disagreed with them on many things from time to time, but basically our ties are very deep and very close. Consequently, even when we had differences with them, we consulted with them regularly. And our differences we~e relatively minor in the stream of ·world issues. In Indonesia most of the European ambassadors were close working colleagues. The Japanese ambassadors who were there during the period were not only close friends, but we were working very closely with the Japanese. But we had special relationships with the British, the Australians and the Canadians due to the long period of association and deep and lasting friendship between our countries.

Obrian: And then /James G.7 Parsons and /Walter P.7 McConaughy and /W. Averell Harriman and {Roger, Jr~7 Hilsman. Starting at the beginning, do you have any strong differences or any strong affiliations or agreements with any of these men? Which one, do you think, was the most effective?

Jones: if I had to pick one, I'd pick Harriman. If two, I'd select Robertson and Harriman. Quite different men representing quite .different points of view.

O'Brian: Well, how about the . ·President's brother here, Robert Kennedy? When does Robert Kennedy become a major factor?

The Packard plant was opened in 1903 and contained 10,000 square feet of floor space and at the time was considered the most modern automobile manufacturing facility in the world: modern, efficient, and massive in scale. By 1908, when an enlargement for the construction of trucks was announced, the factory was already six times larger than when constructed and occupied over fourteen acres of space.[6] At its peak the complex employed 40,000 people, including skilled craftsmen involved in over eighty trades. The plant turned out Packard automobiles from 1903 to 1956, except during World War II, when production was shifted to war material, particularly the Packard V-1650 Merlin, which powered the North American P-51 Mustang fighter plane.

Paul Schrade, once a top aide to UAW leader Walter Reuther and a former leader of the United Auto Workers on the West Coast, who was gravely wounded when Robert F. Kennedy was assassinated in 1968, has died at 97 at his home in Los Angeles.

Former adviser to Robert Kennedy and UAW organizer Paul Schrade, who's impact on the union has been overlooked, died this week. His death was reported by the Los Angeles Times.

"He embodied the spirit of the UAW at its best," said Harley Shaiken, a professor at the University of California, Berkeley.

Activist to the end In recent years, Schrade, who often found himself at odds with the UAW's established leadership even before Reuther's death in 1970, helped campaign for reform in the UAW, making a video in support of the "One-member, One-vote campaign," noted Michael Cannon, a retired member of the UAW's professional staff involved in the reform

Paul Schrade worked at North American Aviation in Los Angeles Inglewood where the Packard Motors Merlin engines were fitted into the P-51s.

Robert F. Kennedy was a crusader as well and died in Los Angeles campaigning with Paul Schrade against unions antagonist Richard Nixon. Strike Breakers in combiation with Strike No Takers (won't use the strike tactic) served to undermine the tool of labor bargainign collectively. The Teamsters were Strike Non Takers.

Treason § 2381 says, "Whoever, owing allegiance to the United States, levies war against them or adheres to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort within the United States or elsewhere, is guilty of treason and shall suffer death, or imprisoned and fined, and incapable of holding any U.S. office." The Power Control Group under the NSC during the Eisenhower years especially under V.P. Nixon rushed on the to Republican ticket by financial backers in a back-room deal and using George H.W. Bush and others tied to oil money and the CFR and English royals and MI6 adhered to British overthrows using corrupt corporate fronts for dirty-wars including against the USA.

The Donegan family was part of what some called the Irish Mafia and it wasn't quite liquor dealing under Joseph Kennedy Sr.

I haven't read an account or at least remmeber a credible one that considered Joseph Kennedy Sr. a prohibition era liquor dealer. Though he did expect the repeal of prohibition and reportedly later profited on liquor sales he was associated with some bootlegger because he was above all else a King Maker in the century of WWI and WWII during which he lived his entire life.

As is now being uncovered before history Sam Giacanca and others were recurited by the CIA and British Secret Service for mafia activities that would do the dirty work of the CIA. Considered thumb-on-the-scale preemption thugs or media friends help bring down political enemies with harassing condescension or praising words of ascension

The nuclear weapons, supersonic flight, space flight and rocketry, were together the new realities of the world after the surrender of Japan ending the super-powers major fights but there were few smaller governments after the end of WWII that shared more than a street address with governments that had existed before during the war or before that. This was the post WWII work and for Great Britain bringing the horses back into the barn, the lost colonies, was important to the new strategy of stopping off-shore missiles an bases held by the enemy.

In WWI FDR relied upon him and some would call it Kennedy Sr. riding the coattails of FDR the Undersecretary of the Navy in WWI tied to England and later in peace an Ambassador to Great Britian (As FDR ascended to the US Presidency) and in close of WWII helping shape the leaders of the post-war world, his own family included. During this time he and the CIA planted Agents of Influence and covert and overt operations through MK-ULTRA that would defeat and preempt non Western movements be they Nazi or Communist.

The Democrat Party was less enthused about these activities and the Roman Catholics from Boston even less enthused than most Democrats. During this time from 1949 an the Marshall plan an the allies working together it was hoped an unstable world map could be formed into what had existed in the time between WWI and WWII yet countries like Indonesia were not independent because during the war many governments were toppled and as the warring super-powers pull back into their own borders nations were experimenting with, claiming, an fighting for full independence or keeping not that they had it.

Nothing of what happened was Joseph Kennedy Sr's plan but in the post WWII era the US made bedfellows of the worst of assassinations expertise and putting that jeanie bak in the bottle was a task John F. Kenedy Robert F. Kennedy could not complete in part because of the capability they were up against and in part because they had partial knowledge of many of the CIA's activities.

Prof. Harry Howe Ransom of Vanderbilt University, considered a leading expert on the C.T.A. and its legal and Congressional authority, said in telephone interview that in his opinion the 1947 statute included “a clear prohibition against any internal security functions under any circumstances.”

Col Fletcher Prout in The Secret Tream: As Ransom points out, “At the first meeting of the NSC in 1947, President Truman indicated that he regarded it as ‘his council,’ that is to say, as a purely advisory body. Later President Eisenhower, although inclined to regard it as ‘the council,’ made clear nonetheless that NSC was absolved of any responsibility per se for national decisions.” The NSC advises; the responsibility for decision is the President’s, insisted Eisenhower. President Kennedy came to office with an apparent bias against the kind of use Eisenhower made of NSC. Borne into office on a great chorus of rhetoric about the need for purposeful, energetic Presidential leadership, Kennedy “at first made little use of the Council” as a formal advisory body. Following the 1961 Cuban fiasco, however, “the NSC was restored somewhat.”

The New York Times shocked the world on Sunday, June 13, 1971, with the publication of the first elements of the Pentagon Papers.3 The first document the Times selected to print was a trip report on the situation in Saigon, credited to the Secretary of Defense, Robert S. McNamara, and dated December 21, 1963. This was the first such report on the situation in Indochina to be submitted to President Lyndon B. Johnson. It came less than thirty days after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and less than sixty days after the assassinations of President Ngo Dinh Diem of South Vietnam and his brother and counselor Ngo Dinh Nhu.

Whether from some inner wisdom or real prescience or merely simple random selection, the Times chose to publish first from among the three thousand pages of analysis and four thousand pages of official documents that had come into its hands that report which may stand out in history as one of the key documents affecting national policy in the past quarter-century-not so much for what it said as for what it signified. This report is a prime example of how the Secret Team, which has gained so much control over the vital foreign and political activities of this government, functions.

Most observers might have expected that the inner group of men who had worked so closely with President Kennedy for three years would have lost heart in those days following his tragic death. On the contrary, they burst forth, as though from strong bonds and fetters and created this entirely new report, thus shaping the future of the Indochina conflict. Their energy and their new sense of direction seemed almost to rise from the flame of Kennedy's tomb in Arlington.

In a very prescient paragraph, Ransom shows how important this grasp for power by an inner secret team was becoming as far back as 1952. Even as the NSC was getting started, a struggle for control of that body was under way; and the control was to be elected by gradually making that advisory committee into an operating power center. Ransom's comment is worth repeating here:

> “Early in NSC’s life, according to President Truman, ‘one or two of its members tried to change it into an operating super-cabinet on the British model.’ Truman identifies the members as his first two Secretaries of Defense, James Forrestal and Louis Johnson, who would sometimes, Truman recounts, put pressures on NSC’s executive secretary to use NSC authority to see that various governmental agencies were following NSC policy. The executive secretary declined to do this, on the ground that his was an advisory staff rather than an executing ‘line’ function. Truman fought to keep the subordinate nature of NSC clear to all, emphasizing that Congress had in fact changed the title of NSC ‘Director’ to ‘Executive Secretary.’ Forrestal had, Truman notes, advocated using the British cabinet system as a model for the operation of postwar American government. To change to this system, wrote Truman, “we would have to change the Constitution, and I think we have been doing very well under our Constitution.”

One aspect of the Pentagon Papers that makes them suspect of not being exactly what they are purported to be, that is, an expose of the role of the Pentagon in the United States’ involvement in Vietnam (this is an oversimplified definition of them, but it will serve here) is that they laud the role of the CIA and the overall intelligence community while they disparage the rest of the Government, especially the Pentagon. The following extract is from The New York Times’ book of the Pentagon Papers, in an introductory and formative early chapter, page 6 [an from which Robert F. Kennedy and his close friend from the Rand Corporation Daniel Elseburg who leaked them in part will rely]:

[Daniel Ellsberg (April 7, 1931 - June 16, 2023) was an American political activist, economist, and United States military analyst. While employed by the RAND Corporation, he precipitated a national political controversy in 1971 when he released the Pentagon Papers, a top-secret Pentagon study of U.S. government decision-making in relation to the Vietnam War, to The New York Times, The Washington Post, and other newspapers.

The Pentagon account discloses that most of these major decisions from 1950 on were made against the advice of the American intelligence community. Intelligence analysts in the CIA warned that the French, Emperor Bao Dai and Premier Diem were weak and unpopular and that the Communists were strong. In early August 1954, for example, just before the NSC decided to commit the U.S. to propping up Premier Diem, a national intelligence estimate warned: “Although it is possible that the French and Vietnamese even with firm support from the U.S. and other powers, may be able to establish a strong regime in South Vietnam, we believe that the chances for this development are poor and moreover, that the situation is more likely to continue to deteriorate progressively over the next year.” The NIE continues. Given the generally bleak appraisals of Diem’s prospects, they who made U.S. policy could only have done so while assuming a significant measure of risk.”

And

> A few pages after this statement, the Times version of the Papers tells us that Edward G. Lansdale went to Saigon with a team in August 1954. This date may be one of the correct dates, but the facts are that plans for Lansdale’s move to Saigon from Manila, where he had engineered Magsaysay’s rise from soldier to President, were laid long before he actually went there with his team. (The author was a frequent visitor to Manila and Saigon from 1952 through 1954 as the commanding officer of a Military Air Transport Service squadron which provided much of the military airlift between those cities in those days, and on more than one flight carried as special passengers members of the Lansdale team, both U.S. and Filipino personnel, to and from Saigon).

A 1951 brochure for a sale of horses from Peter Licavoli's Grace Ranch Chauncey Holt asserts this ranch that was very near Tucson Arizona was a CIA training facility for overthrow activities. He provides records of B-52's and ammunition being bought and sold and he reports flying C-47's with military cargo into nations for the CIA., Holt asserts a souped up Oldsmobile was bought in Arizona and driven to Dealey Plaza. A pickup truck was also acquired and made a stop by "the strip club" in Dallas. Selling off the betting horses freed up the operators of the ranch for CIA activities

In GraceRanchDispersal1951Picture.png in 1951 the deal with Murder Inc., (Myers Lanskey and his accountant and artist Chauncey Marvin Holt) Ray Ryan, Sam Giacanca (Sam Gold) Enrnie Dunieve, William King Harvey, and others are at work setting up Cold War overthrows as subversion work. George H.W. Bush in the 1950's will be a part of this in CIA backed Zapata Petroleum. There is a long list of nations that should be grouped together, they are the nations The Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean that are possible submarine or land missle points for Soviet encroachment. Further away of the coast of Australia is Australia. Bush and Nixon, Ford, Rockefeller, and others including LBJ and Texas oil have a plan for using dirty war in those nations to back strong men by the businesses in those countries supporting those puppets. With the Strongmen backed Communist attempts at overthrow can be suppressed.

This is a key time for JFK. His father was close to England and embrace these plans. Fault with any of the Kennedy family is limited as the Nixon (US Representative and Vice President Nixon) and the oil based CIA companies left most of the Kennedy's out of full plans most of the time. Senator JFK did defeat V.P. Nixon for the presidency in the November 1961 election but in the ten years since 1951 plans with England, the Vatican, and others were well underway. The assassination of JFK allowed these plans to continue under LBJ who had with Prescott Bush and others been part fo the planning and that planning included Barrack Obama Jr for Indonesia part of ASTUGI planning during the 1950's as world key territories.

This occurred in the Special Relationship with Great Britain and Battle of Britain

The story of the Kennedy assassinations includes the complex and strained relationship with Great Britain and its methods. This will include military hardward and military propaganda including propaganda about the hardware.

Rolls-Royce R (R27) on display at the London Science

Design: Rolls Royce

Model: Merlin

Builder: Rolls Royce and Packard Motor Company

Most known Appllications: Spitfire and P-51 D

The rectangular red objects are the exhaust ports blanking plates which would be replaced by the exhaust stubs/pipes when fitted to an aircraft or other vehicle

The first V-1650s, with a one-stage supercharger, equivalent to the Merlin XX, were used in the P-40F Kittyhawk fighter and in Canadian-built Hawker Hurricanes. Later versions based on the Merlin 60 series included a more advanced two-stage supercharger for improved performance at high altitudes. It found its most notable application in the North American P-51 Mustang fighter, improving the aircraft's performance so it could escort Allied heavy bombers from Britain to Germany and back.

This will be shown in more detail and history in this chapter later but the summary is here. Gas compresses. at seal level gravity has pulled atmosphere down to earth at the measure of pressure of 1 atmosphere. As these planes flew higher and higher to reach high altitude bombers whose defense was altitude the single and two stage superchargers compressed thin atmosphere into dense atmosphere for high levels of combustion at high altitude resulted in an exhaust that spit out fire. This property of gasses would create a limit too. Air only moves well at a certain speed. As planes go faster and faster it accumulates in front of the plane gathering into a density the plane can not fly through and the competing structural forces and turbulence of these high forces can destroy the plan as the speed of sound is approached.

These planes flying high overhead could spot and swoop down on land, sea, and airborne target in dive bombinb and strafing operations. Packard Motor Company and the US steal industry could produce these in large quantities.

Much of this occurred with Joseph Kennedy Sr. who must have had some but perhaps not complete or not completely accurate suspicions on how some of his children were assassinated in a story-line of his life and times and his actions being concealed by the actions of another political party who (the Bush family among them) their role in the assassination of JFK mostly successfully until quite recently (mid 2020's.)

In WWI two later public figures were associated with a rising star and became rising stars themselves in US politics. FDR in WWI was Undersecretary of the US Navy. Joseph Kennedy Sr. during that time got ships into the water with steel companies building them in Massachusetts Harbor and later Admiral Halsey worked with the British in the War Effort just as FDR and Kennedy Sr were doing.

Following WWI the Von Trapp family got a new singing coach from the convent, this in 1926. She left the convent pregnant gave birth in the USA to some bastard children tied to the Windsors, exact story still unknown to most including to me. As WWII approached the Von Trapp Family Singers entered the USA. Finally, in the Cold War those bastard children (dare I say it now, Glorian Gainey my mother and Norma Jean) became part of more history, asked to be part of faking family histories as a public record so children could be given influential parents in whose shadow children of future influence would be raised and groomed by the CIA. This political-party plan of wealthy oil business types rubbed JFK the wrong way and he went for independent nations freeing themselves of the big money family and plans of subversion, overthrows, robber-barons, and exploitation of nations like Guatemala, Cuba, and Indonesia.

During WWI and WWII and the Cold War the USA was very close to Great Britain and this was part of Joseph Kennedy Sr who along with the Queen of England (The Queen Mother) of WWII helped make and groom world leaders himself and his children and others included as world elites in a doomed future he could not foresee: Incomprehensible evil from the Operation 40 that used oil money to fund the assassination of his own son JFK and also the eruption of 1960's violent in the Irish Nation-States over independence from Great Britain.

It is in this story line nearly every president of the USA after FDR becomes part of a world-wide plot laid out by W. Averell Harriman for a post-WWII "devils chessboard" some in the USA contested and some in the USA were assassinated over.

P-51C THUNDERBIRD HISTORY JIMMY STEWART & JACKIE COCHRAN

The letter "P" in military aircraft designations indicates the aircraft's role as a pursuit aircraft. The term "P" comes from the French Avion de Chasse, which means "pursuit" or "hunt" airplane. The US Army Air Service used the "P" designation from 1924 to 1947 to indicate pursuit aircraft. After World War II, the USAF adopted the term "fighter" (F). For example, the Lockheed F-80C Shooting Star was redesignated F-80 in 1948. - Wikipedia

The first American order for 150 P-51s, designated NA-91 by North American, was placed by the US Army on 7 July 1940.[5] This was on behalf of the RAF in a Lend-Lease deal.[6] All but the last 57 went to the British. After the attack on Pearl Harbor, the USAAF 'held back' these Mustang Mk IAs for their own use.[7] Fifty-five of these P-51-1s were outfitted with a pair of K.24 cameras in the rear fuselage for tactical low-level reconnaissance and re-designated F-6A (the "F" for photographic, although confusingly also still referred to as the P-51 or P-51-1). Two kept their P-51-1 designation and were used for testing by the USAAF. It was the F6 verion of the Mustang my father flew during WWII. As John Wayne says of his recon plane in Jet Pilot all he could do is photograph the enemy. In my father's case (who also used that line) the M2 machine guns were removed from the wings and cameras installed. The fire button function was replaced as a camera rolling button function.

Rolls Royce started calling their aircraft engines after birds of prey with the World War One "Eagle". We then had the more famous ones - Merlin, Kestrel, Griffon and the not so famous Goshawk, Exe, Peregrine and Vulture. They decided to call their jet engines after British rivers (Derwent, Tay, Trent, Dart, Nene, Tyne, Avon, Conway etc) Then they gave up on the river names and went down the boring "numbers" route - RB162, RB211 etc https://www.key.aero/forum/historic-aviation/40151-prewar-british-engine-names

Paul Schrade as a United Auto Worker official in the Packard Motor plant that produced the Rolls Royce Merlin engine for the

P-51 giving the fighter the supercharged flight characteristics to hit high altitude Luftwaffe fights and bombers. In 1968 while running for US President to face Richard Nixon in the General Election RFK and Paul Schrade and Others are Shot.

This story as Jen Moore was also telling and I am telling is and too many historic authors to name as I integrate their works is the story, the personal stories, that go into WWI and WII history and Joseph Kennedy Sr will be a key figure in telling its history as WWII closes out and the Cold War begins in 1951 and 1952 and the Long Memo posturing the USA against the front of the Soviet Union.

It was probably Lisa Pease in A Lie Too Big To Fail about Robert Maheu of TWA and Howard Hughes and the role of Maheu in assassinating RFK with a worker for security Eugene Thane Ceaser. Lisa Pease and others pointed out that Joseph Kennedy Sr. was a can- do man in WWI. In Boston his family was connected to the Pope, in industry he was a steel maker when in WWI we needed boats in submarine and naval warfare, and in diplomatic relation the Convent in Salzburg Austria area got a pregnant Maria Kutschera children like Norma Jean and Glorian Gainey adoptions in the USA where they were likely born in Los Angeles County near Peter Lawford's home in Santa Monica, Los Angeles County, California.

FDR rose to become President going into WWII and had his Can-Do man Kennedy Sr become Ambassador to Great Britain. Seeing Great Britain losing and saying so he will go on likely then a classified operation for the neutral USA to build Rolls-Royce engines for the P-51 that was under-powered and low altitude and perhaps to increase production for British aircraft like the Spitfire that used the same engine as well.

This is the story of Paul Schrade whose union built that engine at Packard Motors, Los Angeles overshadowed by Detroit but a place of many car makers.

It is also the story of blackmailed and illegal activities of the CIA against it own citizens the Donegan's included when secret identities of the dark side of WWII history would have been exposed unless victims had to cooperate with the CIA. Two of those blackmailed people were Stanley Armour Dunham who was caught stealing Boeing bomber blueprints for the Nazis and owed the CIA a favor and another was Glorian Gainey who through no fault of her own was born to a Nazi propagandist Maria Kutschera the neice of Franz Kutschera. While Maria Kutchera married Captain Von Trapp a British ally and Baron the ties those people had to death camps was too intense from a PR standpoint among other problems.

At the time of his death Robert F. Kennedy was staying with Manchurian Candidate producer John Frankenheimer in his Los Angeles County home and while there very troubled and later assassinated at the Ambassador Hotel where Frankenheimer was discussing the film with nervous listeners. The blackmail piece here was the story of the P-51 plane and the James Donegan role in it (my father) and also the role of Peter Lawford and others including Joseph Kennedy in WWI, WII, and the Cold War were a thread of history of secret identities (of Glorian Donegan my mother, Norma Jean, and others) played out over generations. Shot along with RFK was Paul Schrade who was part of the P-51 story. At Packard Motors he was an autoworkers union rep who on request of Joseph Kennedy Sr. helped step-up of production of V-12 engines for fighters, this time using the plans given to us by Rolls-Royce for the Merlin Spitfire engine that would be placed in the low altitude P-51 and making it a high performance attack plane of incoming high altitude Luftwaffe bombers.

The apparent assailant who may have shot the fatal shot into RFK from behind (Eugene Thane Ceaser) or assisted in that was tied to Robert Mahue of TWA and also the CIA. Howard Hughes designed new planes for aviation but also retrofitted WWII surplus planes for the CIA in the Cold War at the secret CIA airbase in Licavoli's Grace Ranch in Arizona (where the JFK assassins drove from in the station wagon) for use in Guatamala, and elsewhere.

Los Angeles California and its history -Drawn from Pillory Tools and Fools of the USA itself relying on Wikipeida and other sources

Peter Sydney Ernest Lawford (né Aylen; 7 September 1923 - 24 December 1984) was an English-American actor.[1][2]

He was a member of the "Rat Pack" and the brother-in-law of US president John F. Kennedy and senators Robert F. Kennedy and Edward Kennedy. From the 1940s to the 1960s, he was a well-known celebrity and starred in a number of highly acclaimed films. In later years, he was noted more for his off-screen activities as a celebrity than for his acting; it was said that he was "famous for being famous".[3]

Born in London in 1923, Lawford was the only child of Lieutenant General Sir Sydney Turing Barlow Lawford, KBE (1865-1953) and May Sommerville Bunny (1883-1972). At the time of his birth, his mother was married to Lieutenant Colonel Dr. Ernest Vaughn Aylen DSO,[4] one of Sir Sydney's officers, while his father was married to Muriel Williams.[5] At the time, May and Ernest Aylen were living apart. May confessed to Aylen that the child was not his, a revelation that resulted in a double divorce. Sydney and May wed in September 1924 after their divorces were finalised and when their son was one year old.[6]

Lawford's family was connected to the British aristocracy through his uncle Ernest Lawford's wife (a daughter of the Scottish 14th Earl of Eglinton) as well as his aunt Ethel Turner Lawford (who married a son of the 1st Baron Avebury). His aunt, Jessie Bruce Lawford, another of his father's sisters, was the second wife of the Hon Hartley Williams, senior puisne judge of the Supreme Court of the colony of Victoria, Australia. A relative, through his mother, was Australian artist Rupert Bunny.

Accident (Costing him his right arm and thus sending him to Los Angeles to be a star) At the age of 14, Lawford severely injured his right arm in an accident when it went through a glass door.[11] Irreversible nerve damage severely compromised the use of his forearm and hand,[12] which he later learned to conceal.[13] The injury resulted in his being unable to follow a military career as his parents had hoped.[14] Instead, Lawford pursued a career as an actor, a decision that resulted in one of his aunts refusing to leave him her considerable fortune, as she had originally planned.

In 1938, Lawford was traveling through Hollywood when he was spotted by a talent scout. He was screen tested and made his Hollywood debut in a minor part in the film Lord Jeff starring Freddie Bartholomew.[16][17]

The outbreak of World War II found the Lawfords in Florida. In a matter of days, they realised that they had been stranded. Their money was in Britain and Britain was at war. Their assets were frozen. Peter, then 16, took a job parking cars. When he saved enough money for the fare, he went back to Hollywood where he supported himself working as a theatre usher until he began to get film work.[18]

Extra work and bit parts The advent of World War II saw an increase in British war stories and Lawford found himself in demand playing military personnel, albeit usually in uncredited parts. He is briefly seen in Mrs. Miniver (1942) and Eagle Squadron (1942), both times as pilots.[19]

Eagle Squadron is a 1942 American war film directed by Arthur Lubin and starring Robert Stack, Diana Barrymore, John Loder and Nigel Bruce. It was based on a story by C.S. Forester that appeared in Cosmopolitan magazine, and inspired by media reports of the fighting in the Battle of Britain, in particular, the American pilots who volunteered before the United States entered World War II, to fly for the Royal Air Force in the actual Eagle Squadrons. -Wikipeda

Packard vehicles featured innovations, including the modern steering wheel, air-conditioning in a passenger car, and one of the first production 12-cylinder engines, adapted from developing the Liberty L-12 engine used during World War I to power warplanes.

During World War II, Packard produced 55,523 units of the two-stage/two-speed supercharger equipped 1,650 cu in (27.0 L) Merlin V-12s engines under contract with Rolls-Royce. Packard also made the 2,490 cu in (40.8 L) versions of the Liberty L-12 V-12 engine. This updated engine powered United States Navy PT boats.- Wikipeda

These engines were fitted into the P-51 in Inglewood and Los Angeles had many tool and die facilities to produce these engines. Britain did not have the factories build for large scale production of its Rolls Royce engines. It had been limited to low production racing while Germany had been ramping up for years and it takes two years or more to build a motor factory for a specific motor. Paul Schrade was part of this as Joseph Kennedy Sr set it up resigning as Embassaodr to Great Brittian.

After WWII and the atomic bombing of Japan and the final surrender of Japan the Desert In and El Mirador (Guatemala Overlook) hotels in the Cal Neva Arizona area will become CIA airbase hotspots as Princess Elizabeth becomes Queen Elizabeth II and the Special Relationship with Great Britian will work together in the Caribbean nations using modified surplus airplanes Prouty will supply from the Pentagon. Maheu and others with Howard Hughes will convert this into disguised Latin American planes with sometimes English speaking CIA pilots in Guatemala 1954 and elsewhere with CIA figures lke Jack Youngblood, Leroy Young, and others conduct covert warfare. During this time James Donegan my father will meet Glorian Gainey my mother.

During this retreats of all the key players will write white papers on the history of WWI and WII while at Desert Inn. FDR died in office before the Atomic Bomb was dropped but Harry Truman his successor will go to the Desert in. James Donegan will be there and the Windsors as the CIA reviews its past and plans its future.

The Special Relationship and the Birth of Treason

The assertion of Ed Donegan is Robert F. Kennedy was placed in charge of overseeing a careening black operations CIA group funding itself via the front oil companies and other businesses that were created by the CIA and though requisitioned by purchase surplus military equipment was rouge unitary executive profiteering activity.

The problem grew under V.P. Richard Nixon and under JKF he asked Robert F. Kennedy to augment supervision of this assassinations team. His attempts later lead to his death in the city and county of Los Angeles California were the Donegan's from Massachusetts and a friend of the Prouty's were living at the time.

My conspiracy theory backed up by the deceased Jen Moore is that my family had some hidden identities in it, tied to the rise of Nazim and that is the Sound of Music story-line and North Carolina, my mother;s side, and my father in ATSUGI Korean War with E. Howard Hunt and in WWII with the 8ith Army Air Force and the P-51 role in winning WWII in an agreements (like with WWI) to bring US industrial might into the British war

RFK

Howard Hughes and Robert Maheu were central to the story of aviation, exploration, and in particular the Battle of Britain. These story-lines in Hollywood propaganda still exist and led the deaths of Marilyn Monroe, JFK, then RFK and Sunny Bono as the real story much of it happening in Los Angeles began to come out by whistle-blowers silenced just before they spoke.

Robert Aime Maheu (October 30, 1917 - August 4, 2008) was an American businessman and lawyer, who worked for the FBI and CIA, and as the chief executive of Nevada operations for the industrialist Howard Hughes. -Wikipedia

My father had a few stories to tell about TWA and Howard Hughes. Ikipeida The first flight from Idlewild (JFK Airport NYC) was on July 1, 1948, with the opening ceremony attended by U.S. President Harry S. Truman and Governor of New York Thomas E. Dewey, Trans World Airlines opened the TWA Flight Center in 1962, designed by Eero Saarinen with a distinctive winged-bird shape. With the demise of TWA in 2001, the terminal remained vacant until 2005 when JetBlue and the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey (PANYNJ) financed the construction of a new 26-gate terminal partly encircling the Saarinen building. Called Terminal 5 (Now T5), the new terminal opened October 22, 2008. T5 is connected to the Saarinen central building through the original passenger departure-arrival tubes that connected the building to the outlying gates. The original Saarinen terminal, also known as the head house, has since been converted into the TWA Hotel.

According to James Paul Donegan the massive tubular ovals were Howard Hughes spreading his DNA across the world according to airline legend. We as a family James Glorian Tom and Ed (myself) were frequently in the airport as us an airline family had traveled oversees mostly to Europe in the 1960's, and 1980s's as a space available airline pilot family flying for free.

No matter what source of documents which historians accounts are based out of most well research books funnel through the lives of Maheu, McCone, USAF General Edward Lansdale, the Cabell brothers, Charles Pearre Cabell (USAF AND Deputy Director of CIA), his brother Earle Cabell mayor Dallas when JFK was shot there, the Dulles John Foster Dulles Secretary of State under JFK and Allen Dulles CIA director fired by JFK , Phillip A. Twombly and George Younglood and CIA and oil interests, CIA and Zapata Petroleum, James Jesus Angleton, Richard M. Bissell Jr. , and the Bush family since Prescott Bush in the US Senate and part of MK-ULTRA helped create the regime change plans and covert mafia groups that later turned onJ JFK and RFK and Ted Gunderson and others.

Robert Maheu And Guy Banister Were Concealers

Maheu was involved in the Indonesia plot staring in earnest in 1958. I Edward Paul Donegan think JKF and RFK were shot over this, tied to Peter Lawford and Birther theory, Obama for Indonesia by the CIA.

The independence minded Sukarno was an Indonesian statesman, orator, revolutionary, and nationalist who was the first president of Indonesia, serving from 1945 to 1967. Sukarno was the leader of the Indonesian struggle for independence from the Dutch colonialists. Wikipedia

Suharto the dictator and love of the CIA was placed into power by the CIA starting with CIA operations Robert Maheu and others began under Vice President Nixon in 1958. This is tied to Obama Jr history and the CIA plans for him in Indonesia.

Indonesia 1958: Nixon, the CIA, and the Secret War By L. Fletcher Prouty is the article on that subject Prouty wrote and was in Prouty's opinion part of the CIA effort to control the world and even assasinate JFK to keep the plans in operation after V.P. Nixon lost the presidential election to JFK in 1960.

Spy Culuture Podcast

> Returning to Maheu, the following year the CIA launched Project HARPSTAR, again targeting Sukarno. They sought to exploit his ‘weakness for Caucasian women’ and got Maheu to source a suitable female. He came up with Florence Horn, a ‘well to do widow’, 35, who was considered ‘highly intelligent and extremely attractive’. Not sure where he found her because women like that are in fairly short supply. She teamed up with a female CIA officer, under cover as her secretary. The idea was to get close to Sukarno, befriend him, maybe sleep with him, and try to ascertain his thinking and future plans.
>
> They needed to come up with a plausible cover story, and given Florence’s close association with what Maheu called ‘the movie colony’, he suggested they take that path. They came up with the idea of saying she was part of a location scout of Far East locations for a proposed movie version of Journey to the Center of the Earth, and put money into accounts of the Indonesian branch of 20th Century Fox in Jakarta, to provide a funding source for the operation.
> In the event, Florence was unable to get close to Sukarno and gather intelligence on him, largely due to travel conflicts. But 20th Century Fox did produce a film version of Journey to the Center of the Earth, which came out in 1959.

Both Guy Bannister and Robert Mahue (who had a detective agency as well and also was former FBI as Bannister was) were FBI (Former) working for the CIA. Guy Bannister was running guns, grenades, etc., for Brigade 2506 Cuban overthrow run out of New Orleans while Robert Maheu had a similar org to the Guy Bannister front, a private security firm. Maheu came to work for Howard Hughes and Hughes Tool became Hughes Aviation trying to build the successor to the P-38 and P-40 reconnaissance planes. The motor and cam shaft bearings and tooled heavy engines made his company perfect for aviation and he pioneered Jet aircraft. This may or may not mean anything but while in the military I beleive Chauncey Holt was assigned to guard spy planes. That may also have been or instead have been Lee Harvey Oswald in addition to his RADAR operating.

GSF Explorer, formerly USNS Hughes Glomar Explorer (T-AG-193), was a deep-sea drillship platform built for Project Azorian, the secret 1974 effort by the United States Central Intelligence Agency's Special Activities Division to recover the Soviet submarine K-129.[3][4] - Wikipedia

The operation became public in February 1975 when the Los Angeles Times published a story about "Project Jennifer". Other news organizations, including The New York Times, added details. The CIA declined to either confirm or deny the reports, a tactic that became known as the Glomar response and subsequently used to confront all manner of journalistic and public inquiry, including Freedom of Information Act requests.[10] The actual name, Project Azorian, became public only in 2010.

He (Howard Hughes) used the recon planes to film his own movie about those planes in Jet Pilot 1957.

You might believe me or Ted Gunderson (former FBI Special Agent In Charge in Santa Monica and also right hand man to

Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy and Whitehouse liaison between the FBI and Johnson Administration of the John F. Kennedy assassination. That the part of this story that I am in that occurs in 1962 (a key time for the McMartin preschool) was part of CIA activity tied to a similar case in Franklin Nebraska about which the documentary and book Conspiracy of Silence were made and that Ted Gunderson and William Colby (for CIA Director) were assassinated over as Jen Moore was (one time Tracy former police officer and later Central Intelligence Agency whistle-blower.)

Ted Gunderson was one of the defenders as law under Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy and love of the Kennedy family. Micheal Levon Kennedy, US Representative Sonny Bono wbo died nearly at the same time as Micheal Lavone Kennedy as was an oversight investigator from Palm Springs Nevada, of Marilyn Monroe close friend of the Kennedy family and though his career branched away from the Kennedy family as LBJ appointees and others affter that moved into top FBI spots in retirement Ted Gunderson went to work in Santa Monica California pursuing his theories McMartin School, Norma Jean, and CIA activities in that area that I and Jen Moore assert at connected to the NWO versus Patriotic Sovereign Citizens from the Kennedy family and others who had lives in media, government, business, and charity.

One year before I enter that preschool I am born in an Inglewood hospital home of the P-51 and F-86 that my father and Paul Schrade were tied to and one year after I entered that preschool JFK was assassinated and later Robert F. Kennedy was assassinated on this same LA County beach strip staying with Manchurian Candidate producer John Frankenheimer telling a story in 1962 similar to my families AND thought to tie to the Kennedy assassination.

Howard Hughes the CIA and Robert Mahue, TWA and the CIA and aviation history were part of the military industrial complex including aviation and propaganda films about it during the Cold War. It was a big deal Sputnik was first into space in 1957 but Hollywood responded with films of Yankee aviation glory.

A LIE TOO BIG TO FAIL - The Real History of the Assassination of ROBERT F. KENNEDY retrieved from Amazon Kindle Edition and copied or modified to here

By Lisa Pease (a Bernie Sanders nutjob in r/l but first tier of 5 people JFK RFK researcher)

The morning of the primary, June 4, 1968, Robert Kennedy slept in. The day before, Kennedy had campaigned in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Long Beach, Watts, San Diego, and Los Angeles again. He had covered 1,200 miles in 12 hours before spending the night at the Malibu beachfront home of John Frankenheimer.

The choice of Frankenheimer would prove ironic. Frankenheimer had directed the film The Manchurian Candidate (1962 film release based on the 1959 novel by Robert Condon), in which a U.S. soldier is captured in Manchuria, hypnotized by Communists, and sent back to the U.S. to be used as a mind-controlled assassin. Before the next 24 hours were over, a consultant to that film would suggest on the radio that Robert Kennedy's assailant had been hypnotically programmed. Shortly before his death, that consultant would also claim to have been the assailant's hypnotist.

In Suite 511 of the Ambassador Hotel, Kennedy and his aides strategized. Senator George McGovern called from South Dakota to give Kennedy an update on the primary results there. McGovern told him that Kennedy had received more votes than Humphrey and McCarthy combined. He had won both the Native Americans' and the farmers votes.

Down the hall, in Suite 516, Pete Hamill, Jack Newfield, Budd Schulberg, Jimmy Breslin, John Frankenheimer and another 25 or so members of the press gathered. "There were no laptops, or cell phones, or BlackBerrys, or cable-television news either. So telephones rang insistently in the suite, were picked up, and names were called in stage whispers," Hamill recalled. Hamill talked for a while to Frankenheimer about his film The Manchurian Candidate.

"Do you think it could happen in what is laughingly called 'real life'?" Hamill asked.

Frankenheimer smiled nervously as he glanced at the suite' door. "Yeah."

In 1956, when President Sukarno of Indonesia came to visit the United States, Scott McLeod of the State Department contacted Maheu and asked him to vet hookers for Sukarno from a security standpoint under the CIA's Project Harpstar. Maheu said this was done to "please" Sukarno, but no doubt this was also an attempt to compromise him with photographs and other material for potential blackmail. The problem was, Sukarno's appetite for women was part of his appeal to a segment of the public in Indonesia. A little over a year later, according to Maheu, he got a call from Sheffield Edwards at CIA, the security offcer who oversaw the Bluebird and ARTICHOKE CIA mind control programs. Edwards wanted Maheu to perform another operation relative to Sukarno. Evidently, the Soviets supplied Sukarno with prostitutes too, but one of them was a KGB agent. Edwards was initially asked to contact Maheu by the CIA's Far East Division.

On June 15 , Jack Hooper told Meier "that he was speaking with Bob Maheu and I was never to mention his name or Bel Air Patrol!" What was so sensitive about the Bel Air Patrol?

The answer came not from Meier's diary but from something Carl McNabb, a former CIA operative, had told me long ago. McNabb had told me that he had learned there was some association prior to the assassination between Maheu and Thane Cesar from the time when Cesar had worked for Maheu at Bel Air Patrol. I could never confirm this, as Bel Air Patrol refused to share its records. But a CIA document (discussing the granting of QKENCHANT clearance to Maheu's son Peter) confirms that Maheu was, in fact, one of the owners of Bel Air Patrol.

Given that he and Hooper owned a number of security firms together, it seemed likely that Hooper too shared the ownership. If there had been a prior connection between Thane Cesar, Hooper and Maheu through Bel Air Patrol, that would have connected the dots for serious researchers very quickly.

It makes sense, then, that Meier would be scared into silence with threats from both Maheu and Hooper. It also might explain why on my first trip to see Meier, Maheu called Meier out of the blue and asked if he needed anything. Meier thought it was so odd that Maheu would have called that day, after not having talked to him for ten years.

On that trip, Meier told me that J. Edgar Hoover had said he knew that Robert Maheu was behind the assassination of Robert Kennedy. In the years after that first trip, I had come to believe Maheu, due to his connections listed earlier, was a credible candidate for the assassination plot's mastermind.

Meier was not the only person to assert that Maheu was behind the assassination. Researcher Steve Gaal gave me another source. His father, a WWII veteran, had been an electrician for the City of Los Angeles, working often at the "Glass House," the nickname for the LAPD's

Parker Center. "Sometime between 1977 and 1979," Gaal wrote me:

"Dad and I were talking about the Vietnam War at our house in Highland Park. I said that if RFK had been elected history would have been different. Dad said maybe that was so. Dad then said that he had talked to the detectives at the Glass House and that they had told him Maheu had done it. Dad was a big gossip with hard right wing views. That the detectives talked to Dad is for myself very believable."

Thane Cesar It's hard to overstate the significance of finding a current or future CIA contract agent holding Kennedy's right arm at the moment of the shooting. Recall how one witness felt someone was "holding" Kennedy in place while someone else shot him in the head. But if that was Cesar's only role, why did he, by his own admission, draw his gun?

He claimed he didn't fire it, but he did admit to drawing it. The more reasonable supposition is that Cesar held Kennedy long enough for someone to get off a shot or two to his head, while Cesar fired three shots into Kennedy from behind and to the right-the very position where Cesar was standing.

It makes much less sense that Cesar fired all four or five shots into Kennedy. He would have been much more exposed for a head shot. Cesar's body, however, could have hidden his gun from anyone not looking in that exact spot at the moment while Sirhan was quite obviously pulling focus. Another source for a connection between Thane Cesar and the security arm of the Hughes organization can be found in the book The Assassination Chain. Sybil Leek, one of the authors, saw Cesar in Las Vegas in the company of a "hit man for a Florida group".

[The hit man] always seemed to be near a sturdy, well-> built and quite interesting-looking man, but they never spoke. So I asked my Las Vegas friend who this other man was. "He's a professional bodyguard," he replied; and I remarked that I was looking for a bodyguard myself, he would fit the bill perfectly. "You are too late," said my friend. "He is owned by Howard Hughes and his name is Thane Cesar and he is as tough as they Cesar was apparently not the bodyguard for the hit man, however, as Cesar left the room first and the hit man followed. Perhaps he was simply hanging out with a coworker.

I Edward Donegan will show in the chapter Indonesia Kenya Obamas 1958 that under V.P. Nixon and Bissle Jr., Lansdale, and others operations for Kenya were already underway before JFK become president but while he was a US Senator and aware of Joseph Kennedy Sr.'s plans with Great Britain.

THE SUSPICIOUS SECURITY GUARD

https://justiceforrfk.com/the-investigation.html

As the shooting began, security guard Thane Eugene Cesar was standing behind and slightly to the right of Kennedy, in the exact firing position described by the autopsy. Several witnesses observed Cesar drawing his weapon and one witness saw him fire. He was interviewed within hours by the LAPD but they never checked his gun. Cesar claimed he was carrying a .38 caliber revolver that night but he also owned a .22 caliber revolver at the time. Cesar later lied saying he had sold the .22 four months prior to the assassination but the sales receipt proved he actually sold it three months afterwards. He also told the buyer it had been involved in a "police shooting."

Thane Eugene Cesar held extreme right-wing views, supported George Wallace for President and openly admitted hating the Kennedys. At that time, he was working at Lockheed, home of the U-2 spy plane, with a high-level security clearance from the Department of Defense. A week before the assassination, he took a part-time job working evenings as a security guard for Ace Guard Service. Kennedy was assassinated on Cesar's second assignment.

I (Tom Specker) have wanted to do an episode on Robert Maheu for some time, because his life hooks into several topics that we've examined a lot on this podcast. The CIA-Hollywood relationship, the Bay of Pigs and anti-Castro black operations, Watergate, even Howard Hughes. He worked for both the FBI and CIA and his antics even became the inspiration for the original TV series of Mission: Impossible.

Bob was born on October 30th 1917 in Maine, to parents of French Canadian descent, hence the surname Maheu. He studied at the Jesuit College of the Holy Cross before moving on to Georgetown to study law. At this point, in 1941, he was hired by the FBI to work in counter-intelligence, hunting Nazis and so on. He left the FBI in 1947 and founded a company called Dairy Dream Products, presumably selling ice cream. This resulted in bankruptcy in 1952, and so he re-entered government work with the Small Business Administration. In 1954 he was forced to resign from the SBA due to political reasons, which a CIA biography of Maheu says were 'determined to be the result of backing the wrong political party in the election.'

He responded to this setback by setting up his own private detective firm, Robert A Maheu and Associates, in Washington DC. His first steady client was the CIA, whose documents refer to the firm by the acronym RAMA. They used Maheu and others as a cut-outs - contract agents used to make contact with people and carry out missions that the CIA proper cannot be caught talking to or doing. They were stupid enough to write a lot of this down, but many of those documents only became available in recent years via CREST and the JFK disclosures.

In 1955 he was hired by Howard Hughes, and worked for him until 1970, but apparently never met him face to face. They communicated via memo and telephone calls, but Maheu rose to become a close confidante and head of Hughes' Nevada operations. This covers the period when Hughes was hiding out in a hotel in Vegas, calling up the local TV station he owned and telling them to replay his favourite bits of Ice Station Zebra, as we covered in a previous episode. It was also while Hughes was financing CIA operations such as the Glomar Expedition.

Robert Maheu and Watergate

We should also talk about the connection between Robert Maheu and Watergate. And before we do that I will say that if you're going to set up a fast buck disaster tourism submarine business, don't put the suffix 'gate' in the name. It's a recipe for scandal.

In 1974 the CIA undertook several file reviews to find material related to Watergate. The hearings the previous year had led to impeachment hearings in the first months of '74, and the Agency kept getting embarrassed by testimony and media coverage. According to the review guidelines, the purpose was 'to the extent possible to ensure that Agency management is aware of all such material in our files and that there will be no future "surprises" in this regard.'

The list of individuals to use as a basis for the file search included those related to the Watergate break in and the cover-up, so the five burglars, Hunt, Liddy and White House figures like Colson, Erlichmann, Dean and so on. There is also a list of topics including the 1972 election, the Mexican money laundering that financed the Plumbers' operations, the break in at Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office. Then, there's Howard Hughes and Robert Maheu.

But what did they have to do with Watergate? While Maheu's activities for the Agency in many way prefigured what the White House attempted with the Plumbers, he wasn't involved in those operations. Part of this relates to Maheu's past running dirty tricks either to help Nixon during the 50s, or black ops authorised by Nixon when he was vice-president. Another element of this is that Hughes donated large sums to Nixon and his re-election campaign, and Maheu testified at the hearings that he gave $50,000 in cash in a briefcase to Nixon's vice-president Hubert Humphrey.

Then there's the $100,000 given to Nixon personally, not to his campaign. This was also delivered by Maheu, via Nixon's friend Bebe Rebozo. At this point - 1968 - Larry O'Brien worked for the Hughes organisation, having been hired by Maheu. A couple of years later and he was national chairman of the Democratic Party, and the theory is that the break-in was to try to find out if he knew about the dodgy money from Hughes to Nixon.

Then, there was the attempted break-in on the safe of Hank Greenspun, publisher of the Las Vegas Sun. Hank had a large collection of memos between Maheu and Hughes, presumably covering the dodgy money given to Nixon. Around the time the Plumbers were discussing breaking into his safe, someone tried - but failed. This attempted safe-cracking was among the topics included in the CIA's Watergate file review.

Ed Donegan asserts Howard Hughes and others were working on the CIA Secret Airbase at Licavoli Ranch preparing surplus planes for battle and Jim Donegan may have been there as well trying to break the sound barrier or push to that limit in P-51 H airplanes. He was also in early jet aircraft and secret RECON work.

Frank Wisner, OPC's first Director, planned a counter demonstration. He had gathered his own roster of intellectuals, artists and writers, all anti- communists. OPC would need funding for the plan and Wisner knew just where to get it.

Wisner cabled Dorothy's boss Averell Harriman for help.

Harriman diverted 5 million francs from the coffers of the Marshall Plan and made that available to OPC members in Paris to fund the counter demonstration.

Dorothy was on Harriman's secretarial staff and as such was taking notes, preparing cables, and compiling lists of those persons who would take part in this counter demonstration. It was here, in Paris she reunited with Howard Hunt. He worked for Harriman as a speech writer and film producer although it is more than likely Hunt was actually working for both Harriman's OEEC office and for Wisner's OPC unit.

JM WAVE [Overseen by Attorny General Robert F. Kennedy retrieved from Spartacus Eductional and copied or modified to here

JM WAVE was the Central Intelligence Agency station in Florida. Located south of Miami in a heavily wooded 1,571-acre tract. The numerous buildings were said to belong to Zenith Technological Enterprises.

After the Bay of Pigs disaster President John F. Kennedy created a committee (SGA) charged with overthrowing Castro's government. The SGA, chaired by Robert F. Kennedy (Attorney General), included John McCone (CIA Director), McGeorge Bundy (National Security Adviser), Alexis Johnson (State Department), Roswell Gilpatric (Defence Department), General Lyman Lemnitzer (Joint Chiefs of Staff) and General Maxwell Taylor. Although not officially members, Dean Rusk (Secretary of State) and Robert S. McNamara (Secretary of Defense) also attending meetings.

At a meeting of this committee at the White House on 4th November, 1961, it was decided to call this covert action program for sabotage and subversion against Cuba, Operation Mongoose. Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy also decided that General Edward Lansdale (Staff Member of the President's Committee on Military Assistance) should be placed in charge of the operation.

The CIA JM WAVE station in Miami served as operational headquarters for Operation Mongoose. The head of the station was Ted Shackley and over the next few months became very involved in the attempt to overthrow Fidel Castro. One of Lansdale's first decisions was to appoint William Harvey as head of Task Force W. Harvey's brief was to organize a broad range of activities that would help to bring down Castro's government.

By the spring of 1962, JM/WAVE employed more than 200 CIA officers. They in turn ran over 2,200 Cuban agents. JM/WAVE had a navy of over 100 craft, including the 174-foot Rex, that had the latest electronic eqquipment and 40-millimeter and 20-millimeter cannons. The CIA station also had a large number of V-20 Swift craft and access to F-105 Phantoms from nearby Homestead Air Force Base.

William Harvey was ordered to activate an assassination plot against Fidel Castro. This became known as the ZR/RIFLE project. Harvey arranged for David Sanchez Morales to move from Mexico City to join the project based at the JM WAVE station.

In the winter of 1962 Eddie Bayo claimed that two officers in the Red Army based in Cuba wanted to defect to the United States. Bayo added that these men wanted to pass on details about atomic warheads and missiles that were still in Cuba despite the agreement that followed the Cuban Missile Crisis.

Bayo's story was eventually taken up by several members of the anti-Castro community including William Pawley, Gerry P. Hemming, John Martino, Felipe Vidal Santiago and Frank Sturgis. Pawley became convinced that it was vitally important to help get these Soviet officers out of Cuba.

William Pawley contacted Ted Shackley, the head at JM WAVE. Shackley decided to help Pawley organize what became known as Operation Tilt. He also assigned Rip Robertson, a fellow member of the CIA in Miami, to help with the operation. David Sanchez Morales, another CIA agent, also became involved in this attempt to bring out these two Soviet officers.

In June, 1963, a small group, including William Pawley, Eddie Bayo, Rip Robertson, John Martino, and Richard Billings, a journalist working for Life Magazine, secretly arrived in Cuba. They were unsuccessful in their attempts to find these Soviet officers and they were forced to return to Miami. Bayo remained behind and it was rumoured that he had been captured and executed. However, his death was never reported in the Cuban press.

Col Prouty wrote Guns of Dallas and Nixon and Indonesia, two truthful and previously unconnected articles on the CIA that are included here.

L. Fletcher Prouty (1917-2001), a retired colonel of the U.S. Air Force, served as the chief of special operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff during the Kennedy years. He was directly in charge of the global system designed to provide military support for the clandestine activities of the CIA. He was the author of JFK: The CIA, Vietnam, and the Plot to Assassinate John F. Kennedy and The Secret Team: The CIA and Its Allies. - Amazon author profile “Flexible Response” (to Communist influence on nations of the world rather than uniformed combat) was CIA based assassinations and Psychological Warfare studying how to and then influencing popular opinions in foreign nations and included full overthrow operations lending hands to internal combatants of contested countries.

Col. Prouty spent 9 of his 23 year military career in the Pentagon (1955-1964) VP Nixon served from 1952 to 1960 and JFK inaugurated 1961 to 1963:

- 2 years with the Secretary of Defense,
- 2 years with the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and

- 5 years with Headquarters, U.S. Air Force

In 1955 he was appointed the first "Focal Point" officer between the CIA and the Air Force for Clandestine Operations per National Security Council Directive 5412. He was Briefing Officer for the Secretary of Defense (1960-1961), and for the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

At times he would be called to meet with Allen Dulles and John Foster Dulles at their home on highly classified business. He was assigned to attend MKULTRA meetings. In this capacity Col. Prouty would be at the nerve center of the Military-Industrial Complex at a time unequaled in American History. He has written on these subjects, about the JFK assassination, the Cold War period, and Vietnamese warfare, and the existence of a "Secret Team". He backs up his his work with seldom seen or mentioned official documents - some never before released.

Oversight of United States covert operations

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Executive oversight of United States covert operations has been carried out by a series of sub-committees of the National Security Council (NSC).

Birth of covert operations in the Cold War

At the beginning of the Cold War, it was not inevitable that covert operations would become the dominion of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). The National Security Act of 1947 did not explicitly authorize the CIA to conduct covert operations, although Section 102(d)(5) was sufficiently vague to permit abuse. At the very first meetings of the NSC in late 1947, the perceived necessity to "stem the flow of communism" in Western Europe-particularly Italy-by overt and covert "psychological warfare" forced the issue. The actual responsibility for these operations was a hot potato, and when it was decided that the State Department would be in charge, Secretary of State George Marshall sharply opposed it, fearing it would tarnish the international credibility of his department. The upshot was that responsibility for covert operations was passed on to the CIA; this was codified in a NSC policy paper called NSC

4-A,[4] approved in December 1947. NSC 4-A provided the authorization for the intervention of the CIA in the Italian elections of April 1948.[5]

One question and I will get to it early is was there a Col Robert F. Kennedy military officer we didn't know about who with Prouty, Donegan, and others wrote and replicated the story of The Battle of Britain in still ofuscated history.

Paul Schrade was an American trade union activist. While vice president of the United Auto Workers, he was shot in the head during the 1968 assassination of Robert F. Kennedy. Schrade believed that while he was shot by Sirhan Sirhan, Kennedy was shot by a second gunman. Wikipedia

I will leave open he secretly was in the Army Air Corp CIA based version of V12. vThe V-12 Navy College Training Program was designed to supplement the force of commissioned officers in the United States Navy during World War II. Between July 1, 1943, and June 30, 1946, more than 125,000 participants were enrolled in 131 colleges and universities in the United States. Numerous participants attended classes and lectures at their respective colleges and earned completion degrees for their studies. Some even returned from their naval obligations to earn a degree from the colleges where they were previously stationed.

The V-12 program's goal was to produce officers, not unlike the Army Specialized Training Program (ASTP), which sought to turn out more than 200,000 technically trained personnel in such fields as engineering, foreign languages, and medicine. Running from 1942 to 1944, the ASTP recruits were expected but not required to become officers at the end of their training.

The celebrity status of her What's My Line? appearances stretched to her being covered when she covered an important event. Always assigned to the headline-making stories, Kilgallen wrote about Queen Elizabeth and Prince Phillip's 1957 visit to the United States. Her Journal-American colleague Bill Slocum described the scene:

"Everywhere we went the crowds oohed about the Queen, aahed about the Prince and screamed 'Hiya Dorothy' when they saw Miss Kilgallen. Dorothy was only a little less regal than the royal pair, better dressed than any of her colleagues, or the Queen, and writing the best copy being filed on the trip." The New York Post agreed with the "Dorothy look," describing her as 'tall, slim, unwrinkled, unruffled, fresh-faced, and dressed in a brown suit with a chinchilla beret" while reporting on the queen's visit.

Without doubt, Kilgallen had become as big a celebrity as those she covered. Millions of fans admired her accomplishments. She was a true Renaissance woman in every sense of the word. That Joseph Kennedy Sr and the Hearst publications (out of which Doroth Kilgallen was born as was Joseph Kennedy Sr well connected with) and US Navy and Presidency and Navy Undersecretaries were close to the English royals is well documented by me and others. I assert the deceased Dorothy Kilgallen knew too much about possible children in the USA and that Ted Gunderson knew of this too and McMartin school I was at as did Jen Moore and Tom Donegan my brother. Dorothy Kilgallen, Ted Gunderson, and Jem Moore have all been called Conspiracy theorist and my childhood, and story of my parents is all tied to them and their deaths as they were silenced as was JFK and RFK themselves.

Records from any school I went to show my attendance of those schools was insignificant. If homework can be found from me at those schools it was and can still treated as insignificant. What Jen Moore and I can say though is my parents, the parents of that young child (me) at McMartin school had purposely secret stories told only by whispers inside the Donegan and Gainey households and I think the adults in the room at the time of my childhood had CIA plans underway, my mother had a mixed WWII background part Kutschera given a new life in the USA arranged by the Kennedy family and she married as a result of my father's war hero story him as an Air Force Pilot in Japan working with Howard Hughes, RKO, Joseph Kennedy, and others telling filming a story based on the Special Relationship Joseph Kennedy Sr especially had with Great Britain, Admiral Halsey and the US Navy had as well, and FBI and OSS Propaganda workers were working with, the Von Trapp family sought and got publicity but their secret of Franz Kutschera turned into Glorian Donegan secret of Franz Kutschera.

Massachusetts think my father James Paul Donegan got help from the his St Aidans Church friends in Dorchester. Dorchester, Boston, the Kennedy's and even if I had done well in school that my mother was tied to Franz Kutschera probably meant little non-military support for the Donegan family who would live on after Korean War as a TWA pilot family happy middle class family life in the new jet age and each generation lives better United States of America. Dorchester is a Bostonian neighborhood comprising more than 6 square miles (16 km2) in the City of Boston, Massachusetts, United States.

Jen Moore (murdered, found dead in a hotel after threats to her life) told that story as I do of my mother. If we are to believe Ted Gunderson and others that this was all State Department, CIA, and NWO plans I begin with February 20, 1961 my probably insemination, November 18 1961 my late-night birth in an Inglewood Catholic hospital possibly via a surrogate mother after miscarriages, and in that same area the death of Marlin Monroe (part of the hidden identities story of the CIA and Kennedy's) and later the death of Ted Gunderson investigation the nebula of CIA activities and related deaths.

Now onto my father's military history that included flying with the first and second atomic bombing wings to Japan and in Korea during the Cold War as an interceptor recon pilot. In wartime, the B-29 was capable of flight at altitudes up to 31,850 feet (9,710 m), at speeds of up to 350 mph (560 km/h; 300 kn) (true airspeed). This was its best defense because Japanese fighters could barely reach that altitude, and few could catch the B-29 even if they did attain that altitude. - Google Knowledge Panel

Before I go into high altitude German bombers way up in the air so far up in the air the can be picked up by RADAR I will go into the State Department, Council on Foreign Relations, National Security Council, and other matters the sew all of this together.

After World War II, New Orleans businessman Clay Shaw returned to New Orleans where he became a founder of the International Trade Mart (ITM). From 1947 to his retirement in 1965, Shaw ran the ITM as a managing director.

The International Trade Mart was chartered in 1945, first opened in 1948, and in 1968, merged with International House to form the World Trade Center New Orleans (WTCNO), a private, non-profit organization with a membership of 2,000 corporations and individuals dedicated to improving international trade with New Orleans.

"Like its predecessor organizations, the WTCNO continues to sponsor trade missions to Latin American and Caribbean nations to conduct a variety of educational programs, conferences, seminars, and trade shows and to host dignitaries and other visitors from New Orleans' trade partner nations. Wikipedia

These were along with executive Phillip Twombly the world dealing of Clay Shaw and others the plans against Guatemala, Cuba, Indonesia, and other nations.

New Orleans was a CIA gun running location for the Caribbean and Gulf of Mexico nations and regime change and overthrows. In this area Guy Bannister and others operated under J. Edgar Hoover in world espionage operations JFK was trying to stop. Building backstories for sleeper agents the State Department, CIA, OSS, and religious or aide groups were the CIA subversion and overthrow front and these preschool and daycare and orphanages has some hidden identities of CIA tracked and backed families of disavowed offspring raised as bastard otuside their orignal families but given cover identities, passports, and new CIA backed lives in other countries often placed into celebrity or government worker families. To some these missing children were kidnapped or sold into slavery after sometimes traveling to the Geroge H.W. Bush Whitehouse. To others these children were part of CIA covert activities.

According to Winston Churchill the Finest Hour of Britain was the Battle of Britain and the USA USAAF role in should be articulated early in this chapter and the related technologies Paul Schrade and others would speak of.

In this one minute five second video you will see how RFK was driven to the place of his death in Los Angeles that was quite near Marilyn Monroe's death and where JFK had visited in 1961 and how all of this is part of the Manchurian Candidate real life story that explains all these deaths, and supports Ted Gunderson's, Mark Lane's, Penn Jones Jrs, and Col Fletcher Prouty's Super Conspiracy theories about the CIA and their role in these assassinations that are tied to my life, birth, and parents who were James Donegan and Glorian Gainey.

Speaking in the video below is Frank Dutton. Dutton was asked to co-ordinate the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library, and oversaw its Oral History Project. Dutton travelled with Kennedy during much of his 1968 presidential campaign from his 1968 presidential election. He was at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles, California when the Senator was shot at the kitchen hotel, and rode in the ambulance with him at Good Samaritan Hospital. Kennedy died the next day. In an interview after he became a lobbyist, he said "After Bobby was shot, the lights went out for ."

Simi Valley

The Santa Susana Field Laboratory Simi Hills was used for the development of pioneering nuclear reactors and rocket engines beginning in 1948. The site was operated by Atomics International and Rocketdyne (originally both divisions of the North American Aviation company who built the British Spitfire Rolls Royce engin under license as the North American P-51 in Inglewood City Los Angeles County). The Rocketdyne division developed a variety of liquid rocket engines. Rocket engine tests were frequently heard in Simi Valley. The Atomics International division of North American Aviation designed, built and operated the Sodium Reactor Experiment, the first United States nuclear reactor to supply electricity to a public power system.

This is the where Olga has her "coinciding" with the Boeing Bomber designs of Stanely Dunahm and James Donegan of the P-51. in fact not only did P-51s defend from nazi planes and defend US Bombers, US Bombers served as AWACS for US fighters in Fighter Control Radio.

I Edward Paul Donegan have a lot in common with Ted Gunderson (former FBI Special Agent In Charge) and I have a lot in common with his allegations. At the same time I reported Havana Syndrome in 2008-2009 he was doing so as well and blaming CIA DOJ FBI DHS as I was as well. I did not know of him then. He wrote on the McMartin Schools scandal and I went to it then, in 1962, when The Manchurian Candidate film came out by John Frankenheimer. Were children abused there? Can you tell at an early age it is asked in Manchurian Candidate by Dr. Lo who is a stable personality and can it be made (by inflicting injurious activities) to become unstable, perhaps to fight or flight, flight including suicide?

I also remember being teamed with a black person along this time the first black person I saw and now I suspect this is tied to Birther and Barrack Obama Jr. and the CIA activities of this time. I will have to show most of that later and elsewhere because if that has a chance the P-51 part of the story must be understood and foundation for that later conspiracy theory.

This is an image taken from The_McMartin_Scientific_Report._Gunderson.pdf and shows a 922 address across the stret from the 931 address and I assert is tied to testing I underwent.

Lot 584 was my home as a child and I turned one years old in 1962

Depicted here is the MarMartin school and a lot that was adjoined to it by a secret tunnel Gunderson investigators (a Phd in Archaeology and others) discovered with scientific exploration instruments that were then excavated. What Gunderson may not have found or or disclosed is the lot across the street 922 that is tied to 3233 the last four of my SSN. I believe from my parents and my own memories at St Joseph's Inglewood hospital I was being given EEGs and other testing at this time.

My association to Ted Gunderson could be described as indirect but with Col Fletcher Prouty who also held the views about the CIA and FBI and the assassination of JFK it was direct. I knew Prouty as a family freind, he as a Donegan family close friend.

High altitude bombers including with pressurized cockpits were in use in WWII and after the Battle of France was over German bombers and fighters crossed the English Channel with ease.

Super Marine fighters from England like the Spitfire were fighting them off but limited in number and had little advanced warning until ground based radar. When they were airborn the US P-51 planes joining them (on a voluntary basis at first) had a hard time climbing to altitude with the engines they had. It was bad enough the v12s were not supercharged from basic performance standpoint. But the problem was worse at high altitude when air breathing engines lacked the oxygen to develop combustion. Like compressors on Turbojets the superchargers of the Merlin Spitfire by Rolls Royce engines licensed to Packard Motors in Inglewood California helped turn the corner in WWII. My father and my birth are part of that story as was my mother's hidden identity.

This document The Special Relationship and the Birth of Treason focuses on the Robert F. Kennedy assassination and a story fictionalized in 1957 by Hollywood and the Kennedy's that had been pushed onto JFK by Averal Harriman, Prescott and George H.W. Bush, Nixon, Ford, and other Rockefeller Republicans. In the middle of the story I go into in my books not in this chapter or a pamphlet using this chapter is the assassination of JFK in 1963 tied to the CIA creation of the Obama family also tied to JFK and my birth in Inglewood California and the hidden identities tied to that.

I don't want to focus on fictionalized films especially early in this chapter and or pamphlet this chapter is included in. But I must show how OSS Propaganda was in use for the military industrial complex and Dorothy Killgallen, Howard Hughes, Joseph Kennedy Sr., RKO, Disney, and others were a part of it that fits all together into Truther.

https://spartacus-educational.com/JFKpataky.htm In June, 1964, Pataky went on a trip paid for by Twentieth Century-Fox who used it to publicize three of its films:1) The Sound of Music, 2)The Agony and the Ecstasy and 3) Those Magnificent Men in Their Flying Machines. On the trip Pataki\y met and began a relationship with fellow journalist, Dorothy Kilgallen. This relationship was kept a secret. In her book, Kilgallen (1979), Lee Israel gives Pataky the name of "Out-of-Towner".

Apparently Pataky went up to Kilgallen and asked her if she was Clare Booth Luce.

Outlined in Those Magnificent Men and their Flying Machines are the still-persisting hazards of modern flying despite today's advanced technology, as a night-time civilian flight across the English Channel is cancelled owing to heavy fog. One of the delayed passengers (Skelton) gets the idea of learning to fly under his own power, perpetuating man's pioneering spirit.

Coming into Paris, Ponticelli's plane catches fire, and Newton detours to rescue him as Mays is landing, winning for Britain. Mays recognises Newton's heroism and shares the glory and the prize with him, while Ponticelli agrees to give up flying for his family. The only other successful aviator is Dubois, completing his race for France. Patricia finally chooses Newton, breaking the love triangle. Their kiss is interrupted by a strange noise: they and the others at the field look up to see a flyover by six English Electric Lightning jet fighters, as the time period leaps forward to the "present" (1965).

The English Electric Lightning is a British fighter aircraft (interceptor) that served as an interceptor during the 1960s, the 1970s and into the late 1980s. It was capable of a top speed of above Mach 2. The Lightning was designed, developed, and manufactured by English Electric. After EE merged with other aircraft manufacturers to form the British Aircraft Corporation it was marketed as the BAC Lightning. It was operated by the Royal Air Force (RAF), the Kuwait Air Force (KAF), and the Royal Saudi Air Force (RSAF).

A unique feature of the Lightning's design is the vertical, staggered configuration of its two Rolls-Royce Avon turbojet engines within the fuselage. The Lightning was designed and developed as an interceptor to defend the airfields of the British "V bomber" strategic nuclear force[.

I Edward Donegan assert in the 1920's Joseph Kennedy Sr and FDR and Admiral Halsey got some Windsor bastard children into the USA who knew secretly of their history. Glorian Gainey was one of them and Norma Jean was another. Glorian Gainey was my mother and like Norma Jean had an orphaning experience and possible fake parents.

The need for this was Albert of York had a genetic defect and Windsor out-of-wedlocks including with Maria Kutschera impregnated in early 1926 and giving birth in the USA late in 1926 in the USA helped by Peter Lawford in Los Angeles is my maternal history. That is also the Sound of Music later by 20th Century Fox but the diary and earlier versions of play and film productions are much closer to the truth.

The paternal peice of this is my father is from a Roman Catholic family near the Kennedy home town and likely knew the Kennedy's who, when the Donegan's lost their money in the depression, the Kennedy's pulled some strings for getting my non-college educated railroad worker into the US Army Air Corp and Pennsylvania based reconnaissance school.

That led into the historic P-51 role of WWII, the Battle of Britain, and finally the atomic bombing of Japan twice my father was also a part of.

It seems during re-enacting much of this for Howard Hughes and Joseph Kennedy Sr RKO films for Jet Pilot 1957 release my father met my mother and at that time the FBI and CIA informed him she had a past, Franz Kutschera and Himmler worked together with the Von Trapp children (Agatha Whitehead and Captain Von Trapp) with Nazi propaganda. Jim and Glorian US born and patriotic in WWII in every way had nothing to hide they were told at least by some but it does seem they were pressured by the OSS CIA and Vatican to allow additional secret family lines to be test bred and I assert one was Barrack Obama Jr. and the CIA and others hare hiding that.

This is not necessary to understand Paul Schrade and the assassination of RFK but it does further explain that and also then explains the assassination of JFK and it being tied to the OSS CIA Nixon 1958 plans for Indonesia this was the fabricfabric of.

My father James Paul Donegan who lived in the area of the Kennedy family and a Roman Catholic appears to have had some friends with some pull and seemingly became a test-pilot at the Inglewood plant of the P-51 and became a pilot as well as the war grew in scale. He was part of atomic testing blasts and the atomic bombing of Japan as well as P-51 missions over Europe durung WWII and later Korea during the Korean War likely with E. Howard Hunt at ATSUGI. In that time he seems have met while on set of an RKO Howard Hughes film Glorian as she like Duke Edward King Edward VIII were getting post-war recreations of the Battle of Brittian. This became Jet Pilot 1957. As for Sound of Music that expalins how Kutschera Windsor children arrive in the mid 1920's from biological mohter Maria Kutschera that King Edward VIII had been "too close to."

In the movie Pearl Harbor the British Spitfire and North American Aviation P-51 (same thing, under license) fly over the White Cliffs of Dover, Dover Air Force Base, England defending against German bombers attacking London and escorting British bombers to Germany.

I assert that for observers in the 1950's Jet Pilot was filmed at the most modern radar edge of Allies Airspace, then ATSUGI Japan where Lee Harey Oswald showed recon and airspace monitoring as a radar operation and recon and fighter planes were showed off showing who in today's battleground is was a refresher course to defending England in the Battle of Brittain of WWII. Further, that this refresher course had Peter Lawford of the movies, RKO, Howard Hughes, TWA, Robert Maheu and James and Glorian Donegan of Manhattan Beach and the Fat Boy atomic bomb tests and p-51 and F86 recon planes history also told by another 1960's set movie Rocky Horror Picture Show. As with everything here more in the rest of the books but enough is here to.

Rolls-Royce R retrieved from Wikipedia and copied or modified to here

Rolls-Royce R (R27) on display at the London Science Museum. The rectangular red objects are the exhaust ports blanking plates which would be replaced by the exhaust stubs/pipes when fitted to an aircraft or other vehicle

The Rolls-Royce R is a British aero engine that was designed and built specifically for air racing purposes by Rolls-Royce Limited. Nineteen R engines were assembled in a limited production run between 1929 and 1931. Developed from the Rolls-Royce Buzzard, it was a 37-litre (2,240 cu in) capacity, supercharged V-12 capable of producing just under 2,800 horsepower (2,090 kW), and weighed 1,640 pounds (770 kg). Intensive factory testing revealed mechanical failures which were remedied by redesigning the components, greatly improving reliability.

The R was used with great success in the Schneider Trophy seaplane competitions held in England in 1929 and 1931. Shortly after the 1931 competition, an R engine using a special fuel blend powered the winning Supermarine S.6B aircraft to a new airspeed record of over 400 miles per hour (640 km/h). Continuing through the 1930s, both new and used R engines were used to achieve various land and water speed records by such racing personalities as Sir Henry Segrave, Sir Malcolm Campbell and his son Donald, the last record being set in 1939. A final R-powered water speed record attempt by Donald Campbell in 1951 was unsuccessful.

The R was a physically imposing engine designed by a team led by Ernest Hives and including Cyril Lovesey, Arthur Rowledge and Henry Royce. The R shared the Buzzard's bore, stroke and capacity, and used the same 60-degree V-12 layout. A new single-stage, double-sided supercharger impeller was designed along with revised cylinders and strengthened connecting rods.[6] The wet-liner cylinder blocks,[nb 3] crankcase and propeller reduction gear castings were produced from "R.R 50" aluminium alloy;[7] and because of the short life expectancy of these engines, forged aluminium was used to replace bronze and steel in many parts.

The experience gained by Rolls-Royce and Supermarine designers from the R engine was invaluable in the subsequent development of the Rolls-Royce Merlin engine and the Spitfire. A de-rated R engine, known as the Griffon, was tested in 1933, but it was not directly related to the production Rolls-Royce Griffon of 1939, of the same exact bore/stroke and resultant displacement figures as the "R" design. Three examples of the R engine are on public display in British museums as of 2014. wikipedia

TURBOCHARGERS retrieved from https://www.aopa.org/training-and-safety/students/solo/special/turbochargers and copied or modified to here

Better engine performance at altitude

Critical altitude

Turbochargers increase a piston engine's critical altitude, which is the maximum altitude at which an engine can maintain its full, rated horsepower. Because the maximum horsepower of a normally aspirated (nonturbocharged) engine is achieved in standard, sea level conditions, sea level is this engine's critical altitude. However, since most airports are above sea level, normally aspirated engines-which account for the vast majority of piston aircraft engines including those on almost all trainers-don't produce their full, rated power on takeoff. This is why aircraft performance charts give performance data for various pressure altitudes.

A turbocharger compresses the engine's intake air to maintain sea-level takeoff manifold pressure and full, rated power up to the engine's critical altitude. This altitude depends on the individual engine/turbocharger installation. But when the aircraft climbs above its critical altitude, the manifold pressure and resulting power decrease, just as a normally aspirated engine does when climbing away from sea level.

Following reports of sexual abuse at the school, McMartin was arrested in March 1984 on child molestation charges. The charges were dropped after the district attorney determined there was insufficient evidence to prove her guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, according to the Los Angeles Times. She and her granddaughter successfully sued the parent of one child for slander in 1991, but the plaintiffs were only awarded $1 each, according to the Los Angeles Times. Patricia Kennedy met English actor Peter Lawford through her sister Eunice in the 1940s. They met again in 1949, and again in 1953. They courted briefly, and officially announced their engagement in February 1954. They married on April 24, 1954, at St. Thomas More Church in New York City, twelve days before her thirtieth birthday. They settled in Santa Monica, California, and often socialized with actress Judy Garland and her family. Garland gave birth to her son Joseph at the same hospital, and on the same day, Kennedy gave birth to her son Christopher.

Patricia and Peter (who was a member of Frank Sinatra's "Rat Pack") held lavish parties at their mansion during the 1950s and early 1960s with guests such as Marilyn Monroe.

At the outbreak of World War Two, the British aviation industry expanded greatly. There was great need for the Rolls-Royce Merlin engine with shadow factories being established in Crewe, Manchester, and Glasgow. This was not enough to meet increasing demand with the British government looking to expand production using U.S. manufacturers. An agreement was reached between Rolls-Royce and the Packard Motor Car Company in September 1940 to manufacture the Merlin under license, with a $130,000,000 order being placed. The first Packard-built engine, designated V-1650-1, ran in August 1941.

Robert F. Kennedy’s namesake son has uncovered the identity of the slain politician’s true assassin! The National ENQUIRER has learned RFK Jr. has discovered evidence a security guard at Los Angeles’ Ambassador hotel fired the kill shot into the back of his father’s head at point-blank range. RFK Jr. believes Thane Eugene Cesar and his father’s convicted assassin, Sirhan Sirhan, doubled up as a hit squad - and he’s demanding the LAPD open a new probe into the decades-old cover-up.

“Compelling evidence suggests that Cesar murdered my father,” RFK Jr. wrote on Instagram. “Police have never seriously investigated Cesar’s role in my father’s killing.” Read more at:https://www.magzter.com/stories/Celebrity/National-Enquirer/RFK-JR-Hunts-Down-His-Dads-Real-Killer

As the shooting began, security guard Thane Eugene Cesar was standing behind and slightly to the right of Kennedy, in the exact firing position described by the autopsy. Several witnesses observed Cesar drawing his weapon and one witness saw him fire. He was interviewed within hours by the LAPD but they never checked his gun. Cesar claimed he was carrying a .38 caliber revolver that night but he also owned a .22 caliber revolver at the time. Cesar later lied saying he had sold the .22 four months prior to the assassination but the sales receipt proved he actually sold it three months afterwards. He also told the buyer it had been involved in a "police shooting."

Thane Eugene Cesar held extreme right-wing views, supported George Wallace for President and openly admitted hating the Kennedys. At that time, he was working at Lockheed, home of the U-2 spy plane, with a high-level security clearance from the Department of Defense. A week before the assassination, he took a part-time job working evenings as a security guard for Ace Guard Service. Kennedy was assassinated on Cesar's second assignment.

A POSSIBLE HIGH-LEVEL CONSIIRATOR

Authors David Talbot ("Brothers: The Hidden History of the Kennedy Years") and Lisa Pease ("A Lie Too Big to Foil") hove identified Howard Hughes' right-hand man, former FBI agent, and the CIA's Castro assassination plot coordinator, Robert Maheu, as the likely planner of Robert Kennedy's assassination. Multiple government documents prove that Maheu worked for the CIA in assassination plots and other covert activities in the 1960s. Maheu also admitted to Talbot that he hated the Kennedys.

Maheu's principal accuser is former top Howard Hughes executive and Maheu associate, John Meier. Meier knew that Thane Eugene Cesar was an employee of Maheu's private security firm that performed top secret activities for the CIA. Meier also described suspicious conversations he heard between Maheu and Donald Nixon, Richard Nixon's brother, shortly before and after the assassination and wrote about them in his diary (partially published in Gerald Bellett's "Age of Secrets"). Hughes had long been a major financial supporter of Richard Nixon and a close collaborator with the CIA. Meier, now 88, has continued to try to get his information about the case out to the public. https://justiceforrfk.com/the-investigation.html

NYT - After dropping out of Yale University in his junior year, Mr. Schrade headed to Southern California, where he got a job at North American Aviation, an aerospace company that was later known as North American Rockwell and Rockwell International.

He became a union activist, rising in the ranks of the United Auto Workers to become president of the union local at the Rockwell plant in Los Angeles before moving to Detroit in the mid-1950s as the assistant to Walter Reuther, the union’s president.

"In a speech to college students in Ohio in 1959, Mr. Schrade pointed to labor’s role in fighting communism and building the American dream: “We have the brains, we have manpower and we have the natural resources and scientific ability to provide ourselves with both plenty and freedom.”

Mr. Reuther, his patron, died in plane carsh in 1970.

Walter Philip Reuther (/ˈruːθər/; September 1, 1907 - May 9, 1970) was an American leader of organized labor and civil rights activist who built the United Automobile Workers (UAW) into one of the most progressive labor unions in American history.[1] He saw labor movements not as narrow special interest groups but as instruments to advance social justice and human rights in democratic societies.[1] He leveraged the UAW's resources and influence to advocate for workers' rights, civil rights, women's rights, universal health care, public education, affordable housing, environmental stewardship and nuclear nonproliferation around the world.[1] He believed in Swedish-style social democracy and societal change through nonviolent civil disobedience.[2][3] He cofounded the AFL-CIO in 1955 with George Meany.[4] He survived two attempted assassinations, including one at home where he was struck by a 12-gauge shotgun blast fired through his kitchen window.[5] He was the fourth and longest serving president of the UAW, serving from 1946 until his death in 1970.[6]

As the leader of five million autoworkers, including retirees and their families,[7] Reuther was influential inside the Democratic Party.[8] Following the Bay of Pigs in 1961, President John F. Kennedy sent Reuther to Cuba to negotiate a prisoner exchange with Fidel Castro.[9] He was instrumental in spearheading the creation of the Peace Corps[10][11][12] and in marshaling support for the Civil Rights Act of 1964,[13][14] the Voting Rights Act of 1965,[15] Medicare and Medicaid,[16] and the Fair Housing Act.[14] He met weekly in 1964 and 1965 with President Lyndon B. Johnson at the White House to discuss policies and legislation for the Great Society and War on Poverty.[17] The Republican Party was wary of Reuther, leading presidential candidate Richard Nixon to say about John F. Kennedy during the 1960 election, "I can think of nothing so detrimental to this nation than for any President to owe his election to, and therefore be a captive of, a political boss like Walter Reuther."[18] Conservative politician Barry Goldwater declared that Reuther "was more dangerous to our country than Sputnik or anything Soviet Russia might do."

A powerful ally of Martin Luther King Jr. and the civil rights movement,[20] Reuther marched with King in Detroit, Selma,[21] Birmingham,[22] Montgomery,[23] and Jackson.[24][25] When King and others including children were jailed in Birmingham, Alabama, and King authored his famous Letter from Birmingham Jail, Reuther arranged $160,000 for the protestors' release.[26] He also helped organize and finance the March on Washington on August 28, 1963, delivering remarks from the steps of the Lincoln Memorial shortly before King gave his historic "I Have a Dream" speech on the National Mall.[22][27] An early supporter of Cesar Chavez and the United Farm Workers, he asked Robert F. Kennedy to visit and support Chavez.[28] He served on the board of directors for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP)[29] and was one of the founders of Americans for Democratic Action.[30] A lifetime environmentalist, Reuther played a critical role in funding and organizing the first Earth Day on April 22, 1970.[31] According to Denis Hayes, the principal national organizer of the first Earth Day, "Without the UAW, the first Earth Day would have likely flopped!"[31] -

On May 9, 1970, Walter Reuther, his wife May, architect Oscar Stonorov, Reuther's bodyguard William Wolfman, pilot George O. Evans and co-pilot Joseph U. Karaffa were killed when their chartered Learjet 23 crashed in flames at 9:33 p.m. Eastern Time. The plane, arriving from Detroit in rain and fog, was on final approach to Pellston Regional Airport in Pellston, Michigan, near the UAW's recreational and educational facility at Black Lake, Michigan.[153][154] The National Transportation Safety Board discovered that the plane's altimeter was missing parts, some incorrect parts were installed, and one of its parts had been installed upside down,[155] leading some to speculate that Reuther may have been murdered.[142] Reuther had been subjected earlier to two attempted assassinations and a similar near-crash in a small plane in 1969.

Journalist Michael Parenti wrote, "Reuther's demise appears as part of a truncation of liberal and radical leadership that included the deaths of four national figures: President John Kennedy, Malcolm X, Martin Luther King, and Senator Robert Kennedy."[156]WIkipedia

V12 Aircraft Engines (various sources)

WWI Aviation - The Liberty L-12 is an American water-cooled 45° V-12 aircraft engine displacing 1,649 cubic inches (27 L) and making 400 hp (300 kW) designed for a high power-to-weight ratio and ease of mass production. It saw wide use in aero applications, and, once marinized, in marine use both in racing and runabout boats.

A single bank 6-cylinder version, the Liberty L-6, and V-8, the Liberty L-8, were derived from the Liberty L-12. It was succeeded by the Packard 1A-2500.

The Packard V-1650 Merlin is a version of the Rolls-Royce Merlin (Birds of Prey Names for British Fighters) Spitfire aircraft engine, produced under license in the United States by the Packard Motor Car Company. The engine was licensed to expand production of the Rolls-Royce Merlin for British use. The engine also filled a gap in the U.S. at a time when similarly powered American-made engines were not available.

The first V-1650s, with a one-stage supercharger, equivalent to the Merlin XX, were used in the P-40F Kittyhawk fighter and in Canadian-built Hawker Hurricanes. Later versions based on the Merlin 60 series included a more advanced two-stage supercharger for improved performance at high altitudes. It found its most notable application in the North American P-51 Mustang fighter, improving the aircraft's performance so it could escort Allied heavy bombers from Britain to Germany and back.

The first American model was a version of the Mark XX, designated the V-1650-1 by the American military and the Packard Merlin 28 by the British. This engine used a single-stage, two-speed supercharger, the gear changing mechanism of which originally came from a French Farman patent license. The Merlin 28 was used for the Avro Lancaster bomber. The USAAF V-1650-1 version of this engine was used in the Curtiss P-40Fs. The initial Packard modifications to this engine changed the main crankshaft bearings from a copper-lead alloy to a silver-lead combination and featured indium plating. This had been developed by General Motors' Pontiac Division to prevent corrosion, which was possible with lubricating oils that were used at that time. The bearing coating also improved the break-in (running-in) and load-carrying abilities of the surface. [citation needed]

In answer to a request from the British Air Ministry for a high-altitude Merlin for the pressurised Wellington VI high-altitude bomber, a Rolls-Royce team under the direction of Stanley Hooker developed a Merlin with two-stage supercharging, which became the Merlin 60-series. The first 60-series engine ran in March 1941, and was first flown in July the same year.[4] When only 63 examples of the otherwise-cancelled Wellington VI were produced, these engines were instead introduced on the Spitfire IX as the Merlin 61.

This model was later produced by Packard as the V-1650-3 and became known as the "high altitude" Merlin destined for the P-51, the first two-stage Merlin-Mustang conversion flying with a Merlin 61[5] as the Mustang X in October 1942, the production V-1650-3 engined P-51B (Mustang III) entering service in 1943. The two-speed, two-stage supercharger section of the two-stage Merlins and V-1650-3 featured two separate impellers on the same shaft that were normally driven through a gear train at a ratio of 6.391:1. A hydraulic gear change arrangement of oil-operated clutches could be engaged by an electric solenoid to increase this ratio to 8.095:1 in high speed blower position.[citation needed]

Packard Motors 1942-1945 In 1942, the Packard Motor Car Company converted to 100% war production.[41] During World War II, Packard again built airplane engines, licensing the Merlin engine from Rolls-Royce as the V-1650, which powered the P-51 Mustang fighter, ironically known as the "Cadillac of the Skies" by GIs in WWII.[42][43] Packard also built 1350-, 1400-, and 1500-hp V-12 marine engines for American PT boats (each boat used three) and some of Britain's patrol boats. Packard ranked 18th among United States corporations in the value of wartime production contracts.[44] The end Studebaker-Packard retired the Packard marque in 1959. In 1962, "Packard" was dropped off the corporation's name at a time when it was introducing the all-new Avanti.

By the end of the war in Europe, Packard Motor Car Company had produced over 55,000 combat engines. Sales in 1944 were $455,118,600. By May 6, 1945, Packard had a backlog on war orders of $568,000,000.

1946-1956 Postwar use - In the United States many war surplus engines and airframes were sold relatively cheaply - two of the most popular items were North American P-51 Mustangs and Packard V-1650 Merlin engines, several of which were "souped up" and modified for air racing in the Bendix Trophy, the Cleveland Air Races,[7] and the Thompson Trophy. Many of these engines remain heavily used to this day in Drag Racing, Hydroplane racing, and Land Speed Racing at places like the Bonneville Salt Flats. The Mynarski Lancaster flown by the Canadian Warplane Heritage Museum in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, one of only two Lancasters flying in the world, uses four Packard Merlin engines.

Work continues on increasing the power output of the Merlin for the Unlimited Class racers at the Reno Air Races. Innovations, such as the use of Allison V-1710 connecting rods and the replacement of the intercooler with ADI (Anti-Detonation Injection) (50% Distilled Water and 50% Methanol), nearly identical in chemical composition to the Luftwaffe's wartime MW 50 system, and similar to the water injection system used on Pratt & Whitney engines during World War II, have allowed great increases in power output.[9][10] Many of the fastest Unlimited racers increase Merlin manifold pressures as high as 145 inHg (56.6 psi, 4.8 atm) to obtain up to 2,835 kW (3,800 horsepower), achieving Mustang speeds up to 490

The P-51H Mustang by Curtis Fowles, Mustangs Mustangs In July of 1943, U.S. Army approved a contract with North American Aviation to design and build a lightweight P-51. Designated NA-105, 5 aircraft were to be built and tested. Edgar Schmued, chief of design at NAA, began this design early in 1943. He, in February of 1943, left the U.S. on a two month trip to England. He was to visit the Supermarine factory and the Rolls Royce factory to work on his lightweight project.

Rolls Royce had designed a new version of the Merlin, the RM.14.SM, which was proposed to increase the manifold pressure to 120 (from 67 max) and thus improve horsepower to 2,200. Schmued was very eager to use this powerplant. The new Merlin was not heavier than the earlier models. Schmued visited with the engineers at Rolls Royce and they answered his many questions. Schmued left the Rolls Royce factory very satisfied with their cooperation.

Brittish fighters were lighter than U.S. fighters. Schmued ask for detailed weight statements from Supermarine on the Spitfire. Schmued wanted to know why the Spitfires were so much lighter than the P-51. Supermairne did not have such data on the Spitfire, so they started weighing all the parts they could get a hold of and made a report for Schmued. The Brittish had design standards that were not as strict in some areas of design as the U.S. Landing gear, angle of attack and side engine design loads were higher in the U.S.

When Schmued returned, they began a new design of the P-51 Mustang that used Brittish design loads. They shaved weight on any part that could yield. They were able to reduce the empty weight of the P-51 by 600 pounds. This would translate into more performance.

P-51H-10NA_26t.jpgP-51H-10NA_9t.jpgP-51H-5NA_1t.jpgP-51H-5NA_2t

version, NA-126 P-51H, was closest to the XP-51F. The project began in April of 1944 and the contract for 1,000 P-51Hs was approved on June 30, 1944.

The H model was a completely new design. Yes it looks like a P-51, but you can tell there is something not the same. I remember as a teenager when I saw my first P-51H in person. I asked my dad, "that's a Mustang ... isn't it?" as I looked at it and tilted my head slightly. He looked and my uncle looked, and then they paused and decided that yes it was a mustang and it must be the later H model (they were seldom stumped when I asked them aircraft ID questions).

Almost all the parts from the D line were not usable in the P-51H. This was the first production P-51 with a complete overhaul. The wing did not have that famous leading edge kink in it. The landing gear was visibly smaller. The profile shows new lines with a taller tail (later versions). The fuselage was a bit more slender and the length was increased to 33.33 feet. The wingspan stayed the same. The belly scoop inlet profile was not angled any longer but was now square again like the first P-51s. The chin scoop for the engine was decreased in size.

The wheels now had disk brakes. The oil cooler was moved from inside the belly scoop to in front of the oil tank ahead of the firewall. This eliminated the oil lines that ran from the engine to the old location in the scoop. The oil was now cooled by a heat exhanger mounted next to the engine intercooler.

The engine mounts were incorporated into the structural engine cradle, thus saving weight. The engine would not be the newer RS.14.SM Merlin as in some of the lightweight prototypes. The Rolls Royce Merlin V-1650-9 was chosen. Take-off horsepower was actually down from the -7 series to 1,380. But, the new -9 Merlin used water/alcohol injection and was able to up the war emergency power to 2,200 at 10,200 feet. This was the fastest production P-51 clocking 487 mph at 25,000 feet.

The propeller of the P-51H was the Aeroproducts 11'1" 4-blade Unimatic otherwise know as the "H prop". This prop is even lighter than the K model Aeroproducts but it looks much different. The blades are wider and keep approx. the same width almost the whole blade. The tips are rounded.

Armament was the same as in the P-51D. Removable ammo boxes and a redesign of the ammo doors were added. This saved time reloading and must have eased up on the laminar flow killing scratches and scuffs on the wings. The earlier models had to be loaded by hand out of portable ammo boxes. The top surfaces of the wings were taking a huge beating and disrupting the true laminar flow of the wing surface. I honestly doubt the crews in the field either knew or cared much about that.

Fuel in the fuselage tank was decreased to 55 gallons max. The fuselage skins were lighter and thinner, made from a new alloy. The cockpit panel was improved and simplified. The canopy was redesigned and the "hump" moved further forward. The pilot sat higher for a better angle using the gunsight.

The first P-51H flew on Feb 3, 1945 with Bob Chilton at the controls. This P-51H-1NA, 44-64160 was wrecked three days later when the prop failed. The USAAF flew test flights on P-51H 44-64161 from Apr 4-14, 1945 by pilot Major J. D. Onerem. Production continued and 221 P-51Hs were delivered by July 30 and 370 by VJ Day in early September.

Contrary to what many believe, the P-51H did not start out as "the tall tail Mustang". The first 20 P-51H-1NA were built with the lower D model height tail. These units were later retrofitted with the taller tail. The taller tail and smaller fuselage fuel tank of 55 gallons, rid the P-51 of the annoying directional stability problem.

Production was cut short by the end of the war. All P-51H versions were built at Inglewood, Ca. The Dallas, Tx version of the P-51H, NA-129 P-51L with the newest Merlin, the V-1650-11, would not finish any models. The last P-51 off the Texas production line was an NA-124 order which included the newer P-51M which was an improved P-51D-30 with the V-1650-9A Merlin and a Hamilton Standard Prop. The -9A Merlin did not have water injection. One production M model was completed. The 63 partially built units were scrapped.

The last P-15H-10NA rolled out of the Inglewood factory in November of 1945. In all, a total of 555 P-51H models were completed: 20 P-51H-1NA, 280 P-51H-5NA and 255 P-51H-10NA were finished and accepted in the USAAF.

Even though some units in the pacific received the P-51H before VJ Day, they did not see any action. Ironically, when the start of the the Korea War broke out, the earlier version of the P-51, the P-51D was chosen to do the fighting, not the P-51H. In the years to follow, the H was used in many Air National Guard units around the U.S.

Only 5 P-51Hs survived, 2 are display quality only, 2 are airworthy and the last is in restoration to be airworthy. One of the XP-51G prototypes does exist and is in a long term restoration with John Morgan in California. This G model was saved by chance and fast action while on its way to the scrapper.

The Tempest is a play by William Shakespeare, probably written in 1610-1611, and thought to be one of the last plays that he wrote alone. After the first scene, which takes place on a ship at sea during a tempest, the rest of the story is set on a remote island, where Prospero, a complex and contradictory character, lives with his daughter Miranda, and his two servants: Caliban, a savage monster figure, and Ariel, an airy spirit. The play contains music and songs that evoke the spirit of enchantment on the island. It explores many themes, including magic, betrayal, revenge, and family. - Wikipedia

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.1

Alonso, King of Naples.
Sebastian, his brother.
Prospero, the right Duke of Milan.
Antonio, his brother, the usurping Duke of Milan.
Ferdinand, son to the King of Naples.
Gonzalo, an honest old Counsellor.
Caliban, a savage and deformed Slave.

Colonization - Theme Analysis

During the time when The Tempest was written and first performed, both Shakespeare and his audiences would have been very interested in the efforts of English and other European settlers to colonize distant lands around the globe. The Tempest explores the complex and problematic relationship between the European colonizer and the native colonized peoples through the relationship between Prospero and Caliban. Prospero views Caliban as a lesser being than himself. As such, Prospero believes that Caliban should be grateful to him for educating Caliban and lifting him out of "savagery." It simply does not occur to Prospero that he has stolen rulership of the island from Caliban, because Prospero can't imagine Caliban as being fit to rule anything. In contrast, Caliban soon realizes that Prospero views him as a second-class citizen fit only to serve and that by giving up his rulership of the island in return for his education, he has allowed himself to be robbed. As a result, Caliban turns bitter and violent, which only reinforces Prospero's view of him as a "savage." Shakespeare uses Prospero and Caliban's relationship to show how the misunderstandings between the colonizer and the colonized lead to hatred and conflict, with each side thinking that the other is at fault.

In addition to the relationship between the colonizer and colonized, The Tempest also explores the fears and opportunities that colonization creates. Exposure to new and different peoples leads to racism and intolerance, as seen when Sebastian criticizes Alonso for allowing his daughter to marry an African. Exploration and colonization led directly to slavery and the conquering of native peoples.

An important read cover-to-cover because the USA teamed with British Colonialsim when the Nazis (though defeated) had freed many colonial ruled nations world-wide

Once the war ended, both the United States and Soviet Union spent the next several years consolidating their respective positions. Stalin created a Warsaw Pact empire in the nations it occupied in Eastern Europe, while the United States became fearful that the devastation and economic collapse that existed throughout Europe immediately after World War Il could serve as a breeding ground for communism. American leaders saw the Great Depression bring fascism to Italy and Germany and could easily imagine how similar economic hardships could cause Western Europe to go red unless they did something about it.

Out of such worries sprang the Truman Doctrine, the Marshall Plan, and covert operations funding anticommunist political parties in Greece and Italy. George Kennan's containment policy laid out the rationale for these policies and explained their purpose - basically to consolidate the position of the United States and its "free world" allies in Western Europe and prevent the Soviet Union from spreading its empire.

The United States came out of the war from a position of great power over the Soviet Union. While the United States had the atomic bomb, it would take the Russians several years to develop one. Stalin tried to blockade Berlin from June 1948 to May 1949 in an attempt to starve out West Berlin and prevent the United States from revitalizing West Germany, but he failed. This defeat essentially marked the successful containment of the Soviet Union after which the Russians failed to expand their empire in any meaningful way. In fact, they had trouble holding on to what they had and eventually lost everything in 1989.

Although the United States successfully contained the Soviet Union in 1949, the Cold War went on for fifty more years and morphed from a Cold War in Europe designed to contain Soviet expansion into a global Cold War to manage the world. In 1949, the Soviet Union successfully exploded an atornic bomb - an act that changed the face of war forever. The fact that the two nations had atomic bombs made it so that conventional war between great powers was now obsolete. That meant the Cold War became a series of “limited” wars in places such as Korea, Vietnam, and Afghanistan, and an imperial “covert” war for control of various “third world” nations throughout the world.

Who has got the Captain's Chair and should we be worried?

https://www.youtube.com/©AntPDC Images from the first three generations of Star Trek. This melody is from one of my favourite episodes from Next Generation: "The Inner Light". I also loved the later episode "Lessons" which featured this tune in another rather moving context - Captain Picard on his Ressikan flute and Commander Nella Daren on roll-up piano.

It was later orchestrated for the 30th anniversary of Star Trek, and that is the work featured here. As an aside, I'm reminded of a similar melody: "The Skye Boat Song", better-known as "Over the sea to Skye" (old Scottish song).

In some of the Enterprise images I was influenced by Stanley Kubrick's balletic spacecraft sequences in his film "2001". I was stunned by what he did in the late 1960's in terms of imagery, and I remain so today, notwithstanding advances in technology.

I hope you enjoy, and please forgive my partial treatment of the Star Trek characters - just my take in the context of this music.

The Cabal has consolidated power including control of the media establishment.

It is my belief that the government simple is armed while I am not and has public cooperation and I do not, and like with Ghandi I have to find the power of non-violence and like glider rather than a powred plane, try to float on the air rather than push my way through, being areodynamic, my argument supporting me.

I resent the US disinterest in the death of Jen More and Ted Gunderson. I belive no duty exists greater than killing polce and fire and EMS. I am glad to see growing Targeted Individual groups able to explain what the threat is - and how the threat dressess, what uniforms they wear and how they use illegal tactics.

Chapter 6

The Assassinations of Robert Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King and Lyndon B. Johnson's Withdrawal in 1968

The Power Control Group faced several dangers in 1968. While President Johnson had cooperated fully with their desires in Viet Nam and in other parts of the world, he had not met their requirements in other areas. He had gone too far in appeasing the blacks and had shown some signs of giving in to the young people in America in early 1968. Through threats to expose his role in covering up the truth about the JFK assassination or personal threats to the safety of his family, the Group forced his withdrawal from the 1968 election race. Their plan now was to install Richard Nixon as president at all costs.

Robert Kennedy and Dr. King posed real threats to this plan. Dr. King was beginning a movement in the direction of a coalition with Malcom X followers and other black militant groups. He was speaking out against the Viet Nam war. His influence might help defeat Nixon at the polls. So the Power Control Group created an environment in which he could be assassinated by his arch enemies.

After Ray was identified and arrested in London, Hoover and the Justice Department had to manufacture some evidence to get Ray back to the U.S. They had no qualms about bribing one witness, Charlie Stevens, to do this. They forced him to say he had seen Ray. Then a new problem arose. Ray began telling the truth to his lawyer and a writer, William Bradford Huie. He almost 9/19/23, 11:04 AM Chapter 6, The Assassinations of Robert Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King and LyndoB. Johnson's Withdrawal in 1968, revealed Frenchy's true identity. The Power Control Group, led by J. Edgar Hoover, solved this problem by getting rid of Ray's lawyer, Arthur Hanes, and they hired Percy Foreman to keep Ray quiet. They also were forced to pay off or frighten off author Huie who had by then become convinced Ray was telling him the truth. Huie had found several witnesses who had seen Ray and Frenchy together.

The group got Foreman to talk Ray into pleading guilty and Huie to retract his conspiracy talk and publish an article and a book claiming Ray was the lone assassin. Ever since Ray was put away for 99 years, the FBI and the Power Control Group have been hard at work covering up the truth, bribing or influencing judges who have heard Ray's appeals for a trial, publishing disinformation like Gerold Franck's book, An American Assassin, suppressing evidence, and placing key witnesses in psychiatric wards. It is still going on. They have killed at least one reporter -- Louis Lomax -- who was getting too close to the truth. The local D.A., Phil Canale, was brought into the conspiracy along with Percy Foreman, Judge Battle, Fred Vinson (who extradited Ray, using Stevens' false affidavit), and local authorities who committed Grace Walden Stevens to a mental institution because she knew Charlie had been dead drunk and saw nothing.

The mechanics of the assassination are as follows: Youngblood and Frenchy recruited Ray in Montreal for smuggling drugs into the U.S. from Mexico and Canada. They recruited him in the assassination plan in such a way as to make him believe they were smuggling guns to Cuba.

Frenchy (Ray knew him as Raoul) set up Ray as a patsy by planting evidence with Ray's prints on it near the fake firing point. He persuaded Ray to rent a room opposite Dr. King's motel, to buy a rifle with telescopic sight, and a white Mustang, and park the Mustang outside the rooming house to wait for Frenchy to come out. Youngblood stationed himself on a grassy knoll beneath the rooming house where Frenchy was located. When King came out on his balcony, Youngblood killed him with one shot fired at an upward angle. Frenchy ran from his perch overlooking King's balcony. He made plenty of noise to attract attention, and dropped a bag full of items with Ray's prints on them in front of an amusement parlor next door to the rooming house.

Frenchy must have had some anxious moments then because Ray had driven the Mustang to a gas station a few blocks away to have a low tire pumped up. Three witnesses remember his being there. When Ray returned, not yet knowing what had happened, Frenchy told him to drive away toward the edge of town where Frenchy got out of the back seat. Ray drove on to Atlanta with the intention of meeting Frenchy there.

Meanwhile, Youngblood mingled with the crowd under King's balcony and then faded away. A false trail was created by another member of the team who drove away in a second white Mustang and then created a fake auto chase on the police band radio. Youngblood was tracked down by various reporters in early 1976 and began negotiating to tell his story for a very high price. Meanwhile, judge after judge and court after court keep turning down Bernard Fensterwald and James Cesar, Ray's new lawyers, who appealed for a new trial.

All of the information above has been reported with factual evidence backing it up in several articles, one book, and at Ray's legal hearing for a new trial in Memphis in 1975.[2] After Dr. King was eliminated, the Power Control Group faced a much greater threat. Robert Kennedy began his quest for the presidency. There was little doubt in the minds of anyone in the Group that Kennedy would be nominated as Democratic candidate at the convention, and would have a very good chance of defeating Richard Nixon. This would be a near certainty if Eugene McCarthy decided to drop out and support Senator Kennedy. Robert Kennedy represented a double threat to the Group in that he would undoubtedly expose them after becoming president and seize control.

The plan they adopted was again to create an environment in which it would be easy for an enemy like the Minutemen or the Mafia or certain local hate groups in California to assassinate RFK and get away with it by setting up another patsy. Available at the time was a CIA agent planted inside the Los Angeles police department. Strong influence was brought to bear on chief of police, Ed Davis, to remove all official protection for Senator Kennedy in the Ambassador Hotel.

Arrangements were made for the Ace Guard Service to supply three extreme right wing, militant guards at the hotel to guard the Senator after his victory speech. One of these was Thane Eugene Cesar, a known Kennedy hater and friend of a group of Southern California Minutemen. He was 9/19/23, 11:04 AM Chapter 6, The Assassinations of Robert Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King and Lyndon B. Johnson's Withdrawal in 1968, also almost certainly a CIA contract agent or "blind" assassin. At the same time another group was recruited to hypnotize Sirhan Sirhan and to program him for firing some shots in Robert Kennedy's direction.

Two hypnotists and at least three other people were involved in the framing of Sirhan. Cesar killed Robert Kennedy from behind while Sirhan was firing under hypnosis from in front of the Senator. His programmed signal was given by a girl in a polka dot dress and another young Arabic man with them in the pantry.

After the crime, the FBI, the CIA agent (Manny Pena), the District Attorney's office (Evelle Younger and Joseph Busch) and the Los Angeles Police Department (Ed Davis, Robert Houghton and others), knowing the truth, all teamed up to suppress all other evidence except that which was aimed at framing Sirhan. The Power Control Group has since wielded its influence to keep the RFK case under wraps. They pushed legislation through the California legislature to lock up the evidence. They put Thomas Noguchi, the L.A. County Coroner who wouldn't keep quiet about the autopsy evidence which proved conspiracy, in an insane asylum. They arranged for the FBI report on the assassination to be classified and locked up. They killed at least one person who knew what had happened. They controlled the media on the subject, especially the Los Angeles Times through its owner, Norman Chandler, and his friend Evelle Younger, who became California State Attorney General.

After Al Lowenstein, Jerry Brown, Paul Schrade, Vincent Bugliosi, Robert Vaughn, Tom Bradley and others began to try to expose the truth, the Group fought back by setting up their own expert ballistics panel and buying or frightening them into distorting the evidence proving there were two guns fired. The Group is certainly not through yet. More planted disinformation can be expected and more bribing of judges and expert witnesses. There may be more killings. Cesar's life and the lives of the two hypnotists won't be worth much if they ever start talking.

The assassination https://justiceforrfk.com/the-investigation.html

The assassination of Robert Kennedy seemed, at first blush, to leave little room for mystery. Everyone near Kennedy saw Sirhan Sirhan firing towards him. But for those watching closely, and for those who would later wonder if there was more to the story, there was abundant reason to look beyond first appearances.

Just after midnight on June 5th, 1968 at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles, after Senator Kennedy had won the California Democratic primary and thanked his assembled supporters, assistant maitre d' Karl Uecker led him through a dimly lit kitchen pantry en route to a press conference. Thane Eugene Cesar, a security guard hired for the night, followed Kennedy closely behind, holding the senator's right elbow and appearing to guide him.

As Kennedy stopped at the edge of a steam table to shake hands with kitchen workers, a 24-year-old Palestinian Christian, Sirhan Sirhan (who had moved to the LA area as a child}, began firing at Kennedy from several feet in front of him. After two shots, Uecker grabbed Sirhan's arm and, with the help of others, pushed him down onto the steam table, pinning his gun hand. Though his hand was pinned down and pointed away from Kennedy, Sirhan continued firing wildly injuring five bystanders. According to the eyewitness testimony, Sirhan's gun always remained one and a half to five feet in front of the senator while the coroner's report determined Kennedy was hit three times from behind, with the fatal shot to the back of his head at point blank range of l to 3 inches. He died 26 hours later.[1] autopsy indicates a second gunman

According to respected LA County Coroner Dr. Thomas Noguchi, who performed the official autopsy, the three bullets that entered Kennedy's body were fired from behind him at close range. The fatal shot, Noguchi concluded, was fired from approximately one to three inches behind Kennedy's right ear, penetrating his brain. Two other bullets entered his right armpit and a fourth went through the shoulder pad of his jacket.[2]

Paul Schrade, a United Auto Workers Union executive, walking behind Kennedy, was struck by a different bullet altogether. Witnesses saw Schrade fall before the senator did, suggesting Schrade was hit by the first shot from Sirhan's gun.[3] Noguchi later stated that he believed the fifth shot killed Kennedy. Since Uecker had grabbed Sirhan's firing hand after the second shot and, with help from others, pinned his arm to a table in front of Kennedy, Sirhan could not have fired the fifth and fatal shot from behind at point blank range.

In the 1970s, Schrade, along with actor Robert Vaughan and former Congressman, Allard Lowenstein, requested that the LAPD and California courts reopen the case. They were repeatedly denied. Now, at the age of 96, Schrade has long ago forgiven Sirhan for shooting him and has made it his life's work to seek parole for Sirhan and to reopen the case to determine RFK's actual killer. He is supported by attorney Denise Bohdan whose father, Fernando Faura, was a journalist at the Ambassador Hotel that night. Faura uncovered significant evidence indicating an accomplice with Sirhan who was never investigated by the authorities. In fact, witnesses to the accomplice were browbeaten by the LAPD investigator to change their accounts.

Reacting to the news of Cesar's death, Robert Kennedy's son, RFK Jr., revealed he "hod plans to meet Thane Eugene Cesar in the Philippines until he demanded $25,000 through his agent Don Moldea ... ," adding that "Compelling evidence suggests that Cesar murdered my father... Police hove never seriously investigated Cesar's role in my father's killing."9 bullet count proves multiple gunman

In addition to the three gunshots hitting Kennedy from behind and a fourth bullet that passed through his coat, five other people were shot and injured, totaling nine shots. Sirhan's .22 caliber gun only held eight bullets so another person would have had to be shooting as well. Within hours, FBI agent William Bailey found two additional bullets lodged in the pantry door frame, increasing the bullet count to 11.[4] Police and FBI photographs showing two more bullet holes in the pantry door divider and another hole in the jamb of a backstage door suggested four more shots may have been fired.[5] Additionally, two witnesses reported hearing at least 12 shots.

In 2005, an expert audio engineer, Philip Van Praag, laboriously examined a sound recording of the shooting and made several important discoveries. There were 13 "shot sounds," with two instances of "double shots" (shots fired so closely together, they could not have come from the same gun). He also determined that five of the shots were fired from the opposite direction of Sirhan's eight shots, indicating that they were fired from behind Kennedy.[6]

the suspicious security guard

As the shooting began, security guard Thane Eugene Cesar was standing behind and slightly to the right of Kennedy, in the exact firing position described by the autopsy. Several witnesses observed Cesar drawing his weapon and one witness saw him fire. He was interviewed within hours by the LAPD but they never checked his gun. Cesar claimed he was carrying a .38 caliber revolver that night but he also owned a .22 caliber revolver at the time. Cesar later lied saying he had sold the .22 four months prior to the assassination but the sales receipt proved he actually sold it three months afterwards. He also told the buyer it had been involved in a "police shooting."

Thane Eugene Cesar held extreme right-wing views, supported George Wallace for President and openly admitted hating the Kennedys. At that time, he was working at Lockheed, home of the U-2 spy plane, with a high-level security clearance from the Department of Defense. A week before the assassination, he took a part-time job working evenings as a security guard for Ace Guard Service. Kennedy was assassinated on Cesar's second assignment.

Given this incriminating information, Cesar remains a key suspect as a second gunman. Dan Moldea, the author of a book presenting Sirhan as a lone assassin, claims Cesar passed a polygraph test that proved his innocence.[7] However, Moldea has never been willing to release the results of that test, calling into question its existence and, if so, its actual results. Announcing Cesar's death in 2019 in the Philippines on Facebook, Moldea disclosed he was the godfather to Cesar's son, handled his media inquiries and held his Power of Attorney.[8]

Reacting to the news of Cesar's death, Robert Kennedy's son, RFK Jr., revealed he "had plans to meet Thane Eugene Cesar in the Philippines until he demanded $25,000 through his agent Dan Moldea ... ," adding that "Compelling evidence suggests that Cesar murdered my father ... Police have never seriously investigated Cesar's role in my father's killing."[9]

These sessions also produced new evidence of "range mode" programming possibly used to set up Sirhan as a distraction in the pantry, while a second gunman fired the fatal shot from an inch behind Kennedy's right ear. After Brown identified physical and verbal cues, on three occasions, Sirhan assumed a firing stance, entered "range mode" and fired at imagined targets, as Brown believes he did on the night of the assassination. Brown also believes Sirhan was conditioned to forget his actions and connections to others involved while in this dissociated state. He believes the girl in the polka dress, who was seen with Sirhan and later running away from the crime scene, gave Sirhan the cues to enter "range mode" and fire involuntarily at Kennedy, with no conscious intent to kill him.21

Authors David Talbot ("Brothers: The Hidden History of the Kennedy Years") and Lisa Pease ("A Lie Too Big to Foil") hove identified Howard Hughes' right-hand man, former FBI agent, and the CIA's Castro assassination plot coordinator, Robert Maheu, as the likely planner of Robert Kennedy's assassination. Multiple government documents prove that Maheu worked for the CIA in assassination plots and other covert activities in the 1960s. Maheu also admitted to Talbot that he hated the Kennedys.

Maheu's principal accuser is former top Howard Hughes executive and Maheu associate, John Meier. Meier knew that Thane Eugene Cesar was an employee of Maheu's private security firm that performed top secret activities for the CIA. Meier also described suspicious conversations he heard between Maheu and Donald Nixon, Richard Nixon's brother, shortly before and after the assassination and wrote about them in his diary (partially published in Gerald Bellett's "Age of Secrets"). Hughes had long been a major financial supporter of Richard Nixon and a close collaborator with the CIA. Meier, now 88, has continued to try to get his information about the case out to the public.

He believes the girl in the polka dress, who was seen with Sirhan and later running away from the crime scene, gave Sirhan the cues to enter "range mode" and fire involuntarily at Kennedy, with no conscious intent to kill him.21

sirhan's alleged motive

Sirhan was arrested with a newspaper clipping in his pocket criticizing Kennedy's campaign pledge to sell jet bombers to Israel to replenish jets lost in the Arab-Israeli War the year before. A notebook found in his bedroom contained repetitions of the phrase "RFK must die ... RFK must be assassinated by June 5 '68," the first anniversary of the Arab-Israeli War.

At trial, the strange "automatic writing" in Sirhan's notebooks was cited as evidence of the cold, callous, premeditated nature of the crime but Sirhan claims he has no memory of writing in the notebooks nor of the shooting itself. And it hos never been explained how it was possible for Sirhan to have written the most incriminating page on Moy 18th, two days before Kennedy made his first campaign speech promising bombers to Israel. [11]

"sirhan's confession"

Supporters of the lone assassin story point to Sirhan's "confession" in which he stated "I killed Robert Kennedy willfully, premeditatively, with 20 years of malice aforethought." Sirhan's claim that he had been planning the RFK killing since the age of four was ridiculous and nobody in court took his outburst seriously.

The outburst came after days of pleading with the Judge to fire his attorney due to the dismal defense he was being provided. Yet, the "confession" has been taken out of context and used against him ever since.[12]

the cover-up

Sirhan's lead attorney Grant Cooper (who had the threat of an indictment hanging over him for lying about the source of stolen grand jury transcripts in another case} never raised any of the obvious discrepancies at trial. Cooper accepted that his client was guilty but mounted a defense of "diminished capacity" claiming he was in a dissociated state and not fully responsible for his actions. The jury did not accept that theory and Sirhan was convicted of murder and he has remained in prison ever since.[13]

There were serious concerns about LAPD criminalist DeWayne Wolfer's work on other cases and the L.A. District Attorney failed to conduct an independent evaluation of the firearms evidence, despite an offer from the L.A. Sheriff's Office to do so.[14] Wolfer mis-labelled and mis-represented the bullet and gun evidence to the Grand Jury at trial, such that at no time was the bullet recovered from Kennedy's neck ever matched to Sirhan's gun. The test bullets he presented were not from Sirhan's gun, but from a wholly different gun taken from an LAPD evidence locker. He also lied in a subsequent investigation in the 1970s to cover his tracks which became evident when the records of his daily logs and other LAPD and trial items became available in the 1980s.

The LAPD also destroyed crucial evidence including photos seized at the scene, door frames and ceiling panels with bullet holes and suppressed their files on the case for 20 years.[15]

Witnesses who gave accounts conflicting with the official story of Sirhan as a lone assassin were either given coercive polygraph examinations by LAPD Sergeant Enrique Hernandez or their testimony was ignored. In audiotapes of these sessions, Hernandez is heard browbeating witnesses into retracting their statements.[16]

Researchers later discovered that the two LAPD officers in charge of the investigation were connected with the CIA. The LAPD were working closely with the CIA on their Operation Chaos program in the late l960's using domestic surveillance, agent provocateurs and other tools to target anti-war and civil rights activists. The two men in day-to-day control of the LAPD investigation, Enrique Hernandez and Manuel Pena, had both trained police officers in South America for the CIA-connected Office of Public Safety.[17] Pena signed off on every report and decided which leads to follow and who to interview. According to FBI agent Roger La Jeunesse, Pena had performed assignments for the CIA for a decade.[18]

The Ed Donegan family story line that explains Franklin Nebraska and McMartin Preschool

The independently corroborated, strong, and weak reasons I assert my family experimental genome is tied to Allen Dulles, the CIA, Mc Martin School, Peter Lawford, and Indonesia at least

The corroborated: Jen Moore told the story of my family using photos of the Arlington Virginia 2nd floor apartment my mother and I Glorian Donegan lived at. Jen Moore who after being a Tracy California police officer became a master's degree holder in psychology and gained access to CIA files matching the information I have from inside my family. My mother when living under her maiden name Gainey was actually a bastard child likely of Maria Kutchera who was probably impregnated by Alert of York or Edward of wales. This was a form of internal oral (and an artifact) history of my birth and the still secret former king in the family background.

Jen Moore shows this had all been part of Allen Dulles and CIA activity and this even was part of the story of the JFK assassination. My genome contains a defect the Windsors and others secretly wish to know all they can about. I assert more than one egg was used from Glorian Donegan in 1961 for research purposes. I assert this was part of McMartin Preschool testing of me in early childhood development (1962-1963) where I had electroencephalographs, etc., and clear childhood developmental issues.

Ted Gunderson cofirmed CIA research at the preschool I was in and Jen Moore agreed this research was at both McMartin and Fanklin Nebraska.

At the time of my birth JFK as in town and at a fundraising event staying the night at Peter Lawford's. I assert the Donegan and Kennedy connection went back to St. Aidan's church in Dorchester ad lasted into JFK helping his non-college graduate friend James Paul Donegan in to the US Army Air Corps. Hints of this exist in some fiction namely Love Story though that is very week to interpret that as representing non-fiction.

In the Whitehouse Photo Archive of the JFK photos is a picture of Donald Barr (it seems) holding an experimental monkey having a birthday party and seemingly by the artwork is headed to Indonesia. That CIA test birth has an artifact of my birth in the background on the lamp table, something in the Donegan home of Moraga California was called EPD III, a birth of Ed Donegan to a weird evolutionary study.

Dean Rusk was very close to where my mother was placed as Gainey and he was part of I think an underground Davidson College rescue of Nazi party activities in Salzburg around the still very young Maria Kutschera under the influence of her uncle Franz Kutschera until Capt. Von Trapp a British loyalist married her in 1927 and finaly led her out of the county as conditions worsened. This too is part of Glorian interal family history of growing up in poverty making clothes from gunny-sacks and singing songs and dancing, the basic Von Trapp story in North Carolina and later.

Fictionalized version of Peter Lawford disciples attempting and failing and a JFK and LBJ common attempt at a sperm bank two child birth, a strong man, and Eddie who has a brain birth defect are in Rocky Horror. It is clealry Peter Lawford's home and Peter Lawford's story with the right arm injury, etc. and oddly the rare names of the Donegan family and Nona Chaffin my god mother are on the medical notes drawn on the wall where the two children are being born from the sperm bank Eddie is trapped inside of. It is hard to imagine a coincidence of these names and the story seems to have LBJ as riff raff based on a lot of evidence of the relationship between him and LBJ. This leading to child abuse (at McMartin School) and the result being the death of LBJ's boss (JFK?) seems to result. Hard to argue for this being true but equally hard to argue though that this isn't true, why those names on the Medical Notes?

It started in England not long after UAL 553 went down with Dorothy Hunt and during the Watergate years. United Air Lines Flight 553 was a scheduled flight from Washington National Airport to Omaha, Nebraska, via Chicago Midway International Airport. On December 8, 1972. The Rocky Horror Show is a musical with music, lyrics and book by Richard O'Brien. Richard O'Brien (born Richard Timothy Smith; 25 March 1942) is a British-New Zealand actor, writer, musician, and television presenter. He wrote the musical stage show The Rocky Horror Show in 1973, which has since remained in continuous production. He also co-wrote the screenplay along with director Jim Sharman for the film adaptation, The Rocky Horror Picture Show (1975), and appeared on-screen as Riff Raff.

Jim Sharman also helped make O'Brien's draft of a gothic-themed, schlock-horror comic-book fantasy romp into a reality. Sharman suggested changing the working title from They Came from Denton High [North Carolina], and The Rocky Horror Show opened at the Theatre Upstairs in June 1973. Within weeks it had become a box-office hit, moving from the Royal Court to the Classic Cinema, a cinema up for demolition on the King's Road, then to the King's Road Theatre (formerly a cinema known as the Essoldo[15]) and eventually into the West End at the Comedy Theatre.

Denton is a small town located in southeastern Davidson County, North Carolina. The town occupies 1.98 square miles, and is situated approximately 30 miles southeast of Winston-Salem.

Davidson College is a private liberal arts college in Davidson, North Carolina. I Ed Donegan assert this is the Dean Rusk Davidson College of where Glorian Gainey (Donegan) was from and Dean Rusk was there in the underground railroad.

The show uses extensive Peter Lawford facts, his home, the Novermber 18 night of the Democratic Fundraiser rich weirdos, secret service detail, and the TWO births that night from a sperm bank. Arnold Schwarzenegger of Venice Beach (married into USAID Peace Corp) is implied in the Los Angels County setting. They did not marry in until 1986 Spouse Maria Shriver (m. 1986; div. 2021)

The names of my mother Glorian, brother Tom, god mother Nona Chaffin, all of there in the area Manhattan Beach City, on the womb medical notes of the babies to be delivered is hard to explain except for coy references. one of the files in this book is EvaBanBanner.jpg showing that zoom into the notes on the wall fore the doctor to follow. There is other stuff too, but these names and no others are central to that womb.

The Gloria Gainey picture fits this. From Davidson County area North Carolina she grows up and meets Brad. The actually met a refresher course (to Duke Edward during and with the filming of Jet Pilot) though they are attending a different wedding in Denton North Carolina the home of Janet watcher over by "aliens."

Jim or Col Shannon or Brad does marry her and they end up on Los Angeles County. While there they happen into Peter Lawfor'ds mansion that late November night as sperm bank fertilized babies (a single brain split between them) are being born.

The British Nationalists running the entire experimentation on genome needs the experiments on the genome, but Brad and Janet are hostile to the operation.

At the close of the film is Australia with Indonesia in an area between black and white and possibly what these people visting earth were trying to influence.

There is a weird situation where a birth SSN number is missing between my brother Tom Donegan and me. 022-46-3233 and 022-46-3235 are my brother and me. Though born in California we had Massachusetts SSN our family of origin area. 022-46-3234 is missing as a person. The experimental birth story of the strong man would fit into this slot.

What I can tell you is that now I am being followed as Micheal Hastings was (also researching Obama birth certificate origins) and as Jen Moore was and as Seth Rich was. Jen Moore assert Rod Rosenstein has or had an illegal operation under way possibly with Machen Jr. and Eric Holder to silence mk-ultra secrets coming out.

It is possible experiments in my and other genome went on through the 1980's in these locations and the list of possible parties connected to it is far reaching.

Focus Britain's enemies and British attitudes in Rocky Horror bases on two consectuive "If's"

If "They came from Denton" [high school lovers who were forced into Rocky's bizarre DNA sperm bank experiments amdist their resentments can some symetry be made out the movie, its props and storyline, and the theory Brad ("asshole") is James Donegan (and maybe JFK as an Irish Roman Catholic Bostonian) and Janet is Glorian?

Edelweiss Lodge and Resort is a U.S. Department of Defense owned recreation hotel in Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany. Located in the Bavarian Alps near the Austrian border, the facility opened in September 2004 at a cost of $80 million.

Edelweiss Lodge and Resort was built to replace a series of older Armed Forces Recreation Center (AFRC) hotels (General Patton Hotel and General Von Steuben in Garmisch-Partenkirchen). Other hotels throughout the AFRC Resort history included the now-demolished General Walker Hotel in Obersalzberg.

Pronounced as V the German Wies of Janet's history, the Nazi songs of 1926 and on that help give rise to Nazi Germany and the war costs Great Britian endured.

Great Britain and the USA were Special Relationship allies in the war against the Nazi's so her "apple pie might not taste so nice."

There are Belfast, Ulster, and other types of references into set prop pieces and other part of the movie set in Peter Lawford's home. The Irish of "Brad" (Jim Donegan and Nazi songs of Denton's Glorian would not be appreciated, but the couple Brad and Janet were forced into some activities for while during the experiments. In the Rocky Horror Decode chapter of the Great Treason some of those costum and prop references are desribed.

So if 1970's GB hates the Irish Roman Catholics and If Brad and Janet are James and Glorian that the twins were from them as well makes sense.

The Eastern Establishment had to play in some ways and at some times by Nobility rules. There were bastard children of Windsors, Kutchera's, and others in hidden identities. These were the Family Jewels who often were adopted into, married into, or forged documents placed into political or media positions around the world. The grooming of CIA backed family lines to hold and gain power is a Cold War system in that if the CIA backed families are properly planned even from birth their later ascendance to political leadership will guide nations into allegiance with the USA or Great Britain rather than an attempt to conquer satellite nations by force.

Edward Donegan Fletcher Prouty St John Hunt expose press Figures and Events in History (Chapter)

The Major Figures of History and Events of History now until now unanswered now explained by the last Donegan coming forward and interconnecting the still open questions of history.

I am the last living Donegan from family of origin with a background as covert at the E. Howard Hunt and other families though still unknown.

It is an Internet truth that George H.W. Bush was photographed at the Dal-Tex building near the JFK assassination, the E. Howard Hunt, Chauncey Marvin Holt, and others have credibly confessed to the train yard area assassination of JKF, and Charles Harrelson (and Chauncey Marvin Holt as well) have been clearly facially identified at the scene of the assassination by expert Lois Gibson.

The Dal-Tex Building is a seven-story office building located at 501 Elm Street in the West End Historic District of downtown Dallas, Texas, United States. The building is located on the northeast corner of Elm and North Houston streets, across the street from the Texas School Book Depository in Dealey Plaza, the scene of the assassination of U.S. President John F. Kennedy on November 22, 1963. The Dal-Tex Building, sometimes called the Dallas-Textiles Building, the Dal-Tex Market Building, or the Dal-Tex Mart Building, was a center of the textile business in Dallas. - Wikipedia Recording exist of both Charles Harrelson and E. Howard Hunt exist of their confession to the assignation of JFK. As for Harrelson it was am undercover activity of taping him while in custody and ALSO during a shootout with law enforcement.

In addition to being fingered by Lois Gibson Charles Harrelson was by his Dealy Plaza cohort Chauncey Holt in his book and on a TV interview. "Charles Harrelson's dad killed JKF and I gave him the gun!" ran headline i a paper shown in Holt's book. Holt was the accountant and buyer for Myers Lansky mostly working in Florida until they moved to the Bermuda Dunes and Grace Ranch area. They were tied to Cuban orgies, drug trafficking, and lotteries and casinos. Harrelson's business card restored in my book THe Great Treason says he was a mobster hit man killing casino debtors, rats, and if needed hired by the Government to fight against comuist insurgencies as a mafia hit man.

In addition to evidence of his guilt in being part the Railroad Yard team of assassins Harrelson was convicted for a later and similar crime, the assasination of a Texas judge for the Mafia as a contract hitman for which he was convicted.

The section of Holt's book going into detail as Jack Moon (cover identity) for buying and selling arms that names Harrelson is in the area of Coup De Tat and the overthrow of the Kennedy administration who was tying to stop the mafia by the mafia. Think of George H.W. Bush and Operation Zapata as exactly those activities LBJ confessed to days before his own death, what LBJ and Nixon had been doing with Murder Inc., mafi in the Caribbean and against Cuba.

US AID and CIA Operations researcher Wayne Madsen has culled through endless CIA files and primary source material as has the experts from Spartacus Educational and it appears on oil business and Philip Twombly - Richard Nixon tied CIA MK-

ULTRA Marshall Program for shaping Post WWII global outlook were part of Indonesia, Guatemala, and other plans. Lyndon B. Johnson and Richard Nixon served in Indonesia, the "Cuba" to Australia, and were part of planning since the 1950's to gain influential CIA assets in that country and introduce some future leaders at a very young age, Barrack Obama Jr. one of those leaders, his mother Stanley Ann Dunham also a CIA Agent of Influence for Indonesia.

JFK vs. Allen Dulles: Battleground Indonesia

Two of the most fascinating figures in history, John F. Kennedy, thirty-fifth president of the United States, and Allen Dulles, our nation’s longest-serving CIA director, often clashed over intelligence issues and national security. However, one such conflict has remained in the shadows until now. JFK vs. Allen Dulles: Battleground Indonesia takes reader to the vast archipelago 3350 miles wide where this secret showdown occurred.

In 1936, an Allen Dulles-established company discovered the world's largest gold deposit in remote Netherlands New Guinea. In 1962, President Kennedy intervened, and Netherlands New Guinea was added to President Sukarno's Indonesia. Neither Sukarno nor JFK was aware of the gold, since Dulles had not informed Kennedy. - Publisher

The Robber Barrons under Allen Dulles had plans to take Indonesia and this is the CIA plan JFK opposed to and was assasinated over. Author Dr. Greg Poulgrain has a well researched leading work this and each page of the books should be studied and can not be refuted. - Ed Donegan

Indonesia 1958: Nixon, the CIA, and the Secret War By L. Fletcher Prouty

In the Pentagon there are thousands of nondescript offices in which all sorts of tasks are done. One of these unobtrusive offices was an Air Force Plans Division office. One day in 1958 two men from the CIA entered that office. After being identified they were permitted entrance to an interior office that was the "Focal Point" office for all U.S. Air Force Support of the clandestine operations of the CIA. I had established that office in 1955 on orders from Gen. Thomas D. White, then Chief of Staff of the Air Force. This came about after several meetings with Allen W. Dulles, the Director of Central Intelligence, and others. When the CIA men entered that office in 1958, I was still in charge.

The agents outlined the Indonesian Plan, the Philippine support and training program, and told me about their own special operations staff that had been put together specifically for this vast project. Then they urgently requested light bombardment aircraft and long-range transport aircraft. We decided to take a number of twin engine B-26 aircraft out of mothball storage, put them through a retrofit line, and modify them so that they could be armed with a special 50-caliber machine gun package of eight guns, in the nose of the plane. This would give the B-26 more firepower than it ever had during the Korean War or World War II. The project was given top priority and covered in deep secrecy. Programs for pilot training and the recruitment of "mercenaries" were established. - Col Prouty and his personal involment under V.P. Nixon for the plan

The Story of Obama: All in The Company (Part 1 and Part II)

President Obama's own work in 1983 for Business International Corporation, a CIA front that conducted seminars with the world's most powerful leaders and used journalists as agents abroad, dovetails with CIA espionage activities conducted by his mother, Stanley Ann Dunham in 1960s post-coup Indonesia on behalf of a number of CIA front operations, including the East-West Center at the University of Hawaii, the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID), and the Ford Foundation. Dunham met and married Lolo Soetoro, Obama's stepfather, at the East-West Center in 1965. Soetoro was recalled to Indonesia in 1965 to serve as a senior army officer and assist General Suharto and the CIA in the bloody overthrow of President Sukarno.

Barack Obama, Sr., who met Dunham in 1959 in a Russian language class at the University of Hawaii, had been part of what was described as an airlift of 280 East African students to the United States to attend various colleges - merely "aided" by a grant from the Joseph P. Kennedy Foundation, according to a September 12, 1960, Reuters report from London. The airlift was a CIA operation to train and indoctrinate future agents of influence in Africa, which was becoming a battleground between the United States and the Soviet Union and China for influence among newly-independent and soon-to-be independent countries on the continent.

The Ed Donegan Story and hidden identities and covert families of Los Angeles County surround Peter Lawford and British Intelligence operations for Indonesia

My book series show the Donegan's were pressured and in some ways offered (my mother had many miscarriages) experimental IVF however more than one egg was fertilized and were part of surrogacy the delivered a sleeper agent - Barrack Obama Jr. that "late November night." November 18,1961 with JFK present and me Ed Donegan born on that day at Inglewood hosptial, home of the P-51 and Paul Schrade.

My mother Glorian Donegan (how had lived under a hidden identity) had the problems of FOXP2. She spent her life vomiting from trying to eat a condition I inherited (like other symptoms of FOXP2) turned to be a dry throat condition. Her genome was used for a research surrogacy as well, and I believe this was in White House photos the (pardon the indiscretion) the "research monkey" who had one half her genome. My book goes into an artifact in that photo of Donald Barr and an item in the Donegan home Honey Bee might be able to remember if located.

Guns of Dallas by Prouty who I Ed Donegan knew as child

As we prepare now to celebrate the beginning of the third century of the founding of this country, we wonder if we live in the land of the free. We wonder if at least we still have a government of the people and by the people. Certainly, it is no longer a government for the people. The sound throughout the land is ugly: there is frustration, hate, and fear. We must act while there may still be time.

There is a grave conspiracy over the land. The people have come alive because of Vietnam and Watergate; but they have scarcely scratched the surface. A President and a Vice-President have been forced to resign. A President has been shot to death. Two Presidential candidates have been shot, one of them killed. Many of the President's men have been forced to leave, some have gone to jail; others are still under indictment.

, history has been made by a series of murders, but not enough has been done to solve them. The trial of Watergate was the trial of the cover-up. There has been no trial about the real crime of Watergate. There has been no trial of the big power behind Watergate. The Hunts, Liddys, McCords, and the Cubans were not drawn into that drama solely for their own interests. They were working for someone much higher up. They were all pawns, just like Nixon was. This is a game for the biggest stake of all-absolute control of the government of the United States of America; and, with control of this government, control of the world. And yet the real crime underlying all of this has not even been identified, stated, and charged. The real criminals still walk the streets, run their corporations, control their banks, and pull strings throughout their political and financial machines.

This control mechanism did not start in 1972 with Watergate. It began, in a tentative way, in the Korean War era, when the military and the executive branch found out how easy it was to fool the Congress and the American public. And with that recognition, power-hungry and money-mad industrialists began to usurp more and more power. And when those rifles crackled over Dealey Plaza, in Dallas, Texas on November 22, 1963 and John F. Kennedy's brain was splattered across the road, they had made their move into the big time. They took over control of the President and of the Presidency. The man they had killed was no longer a problem and they had made certain that his successor, Lyndon Johnson, heard and remembered the sound of those guns. It is the sound of those guns in Dallas, and their ever-present threat, which is the real mechanism of control over the American government.

It is possible now to reconstruct the scenario of that day, and, with new information, to show why the murder of JFK may properly be called the "Crime of the Century." If we the people of the United States do not demand its resolution this year, it will stand in the way of a free election in 1976. It will doom a third century of democratic government in this country.

Almost everyone who has taken the time to do any reading and thinking about that crime knows by now that John Kennedy was killed not by a lone assassin, but by a group of hired "mechanics." Let's look at some of the hard facts of this murder and put to rest once and for all the "cover-up" report of the Warren Commission. The Guns of Dallas

Leroy Fletcher Prouty Junior Soldier author 1917 – 2001

It is appropriate that Fletcher Prouty will best be remembered as the model for Colonel X, played by Donald Southerland in Oliver Stone’s film JFK.

Prouty, who believed the assassination of President John F. Kennedy was a coup d’etat perpetrated by be elements of the Unites States military and intelligence communities, was a career military man who spent a decade liasing between the Pentagon and the CIA. After leaving the US Air Force be became an outspoken critic of the intelligence establishment, although by the time JFK was filmed, he had been relegated to the fringes.

When asked why he did not use Prouty’s name in the film, Stone said: “Because the man does not want to be known." Yet his identity was common knowledge. It seemed that the shadowy image of the figure Southerland portrayed, instructing the naïve Jim Garrison (Kevn Costner), was one Prouty was proud to fit. As a young man in Massachusetts, his ambition to become a singer was interrupted by WWII. He served as an Army Tank commander and then as a transport pilot.

In 1955 he was assigned to coordinate operations between the Air Force and CIA, and remained in intelligence until retiring in 1964 to join an aircraft company. He later worked in banking and public relations, while writing on intelligence topics and assassination.

His 1973 book, The Secret Team, was reviewed seriously. In it, Prouty called the CIA and the Cold War, a cover story, which had allowed elements of the military and, intelligence communities, to work on behalf of interests of "high cabal" and of industrialists and bankers. It found a ready audience in the atmosphere of Watergate and the Pentagon Papers and in light of Iran-Contra and CIA drug-running controversies, many of its revelations have been confirmed.

A mass-market paperback was published by Ballantine in 1974, but the book immediately became hard to find. Prouty believed it was "disappeared"; at any rate, copies remain collectors items.

After that, his writing became increasingly marginalized. He continued to develop links between secret team [of Eastern Elites Eastern J.P. Morgan tied Walker family tied banking elements in the US Government] and the assassination, characterizing the events in Dallas as a way of thwarting JKF's plans to take control of the CIA after the Bay of Pigs fiasco.

General Edward Lansdale was in charge of Operation Mongoose, aimed at overthrowing Fidel Castro. As General Y in JFK, he assigns Prouty to a South Pole trip to remove him from the Pentagon at the time of the assassination. Prouty later claimed that Lansdale was in Dallas on the Kennedy was killed. "He was there like the orchestra leader, coordinating things," he said.

[General Edward Lansdale had been working for CD Douglas of CIA overthrows since the 1950's in Latin American elsewhere as Eisenhower library documents reveal. Lansdale and Prouty worked that function together in the Pentagon Office of Special Operations, a fore-runner to the Defense Intelligence Agency that Prouty created at the request of JFK. The absence of Lansdale in the office shared with Prouty may have been noticed by Prouty but for Prouty also being absent at the same time. Lansdale and Prouty were close as coworkers living near each other, using the same local bank in D.C., etc., and easily recognized each other. Prouty met with Allen Dulles in the home of Allen Dulles and other locations as MK-Ultra overthrows were being planned out on behalf of NSC Chair Vice President Nixon.]

Like other assassination critics, he found an outlet via the Liberty Lobby, a far-Right organization with ties to Holocaust deniers. Although Prouty himself never espoused such beliefs, thke connection enabled critics to dismiss his later writing.

He remained active, via his own web site, until death from organ failure. He is survived by his wife and three children.

In The Manufacturing of a President (Barrack Obama Jr.) by Wayne Madsen note that by 1960 the plans were already far advanced started in the 1950's. JFK would not be sworn into office until January 20, 1961 and inherited this and other plans he later tried to stop.

By Wayne Madsen https://waynemadsenreport.com

President Obama's grandmother, Madelyn Payne Dunham, the woman who actually raised the future President of the United States, served as the vice president and chief escrow account officer for the bank of Hawaii at an interesting time for the CIA's murky operations in the 50th state. Dunham retired from the Bank of Hawaii in 1986 but not before a massive financial network was exposed in 1983 as a result of the financial failure and Internal Revenue Service investigation of a major CIA proprietary headquartered in Honolulu, Bishop, Baldwin, Rewald, Dillingham and Wong (BBRDW), the Bishop being a member of one of Hawaii's landed gentry families and one that both Madelyn Dunham and her husband Stanley, as well as their daughter, Stanley Ann, had past interactions.

New York businessman Charles Reed Bishop married Bernice Pauahi Paki of the royal House of Kamehameha in 1850. Their descendants would play a major role in Hawaii to the present day. Charles Bishop, through the Bishop Trust, built a number of buildings at the elite Punahou School, where Obama attended. The Bishop Trust also funded the Bishop Museum for whom Obama's mother briefly worked as a Javanese history specialist.

For an agency that disavowed any connection to BBRDW, the CIA curiously maintains detailed files on the failed corporation that was involved, according to the editor's book, The Manufacturing of a President, in making pay-offs to Asian dictators who were allies of the United States. These payments were made via the escrow accounts overseen at the Bank of Hawaii by Obama's grandmother.

Among the CIA files is an obscure article on BBRDW written by John Kelly for the June-August 1984 issue of CounterSpy, a now-defunct magazine. BBRDW was an investment advisory firm on the surface but underneath its charade, it was a facilitator for various CIA clandestine operations.

Although the CIA vehemently denied that BBRDW belonged to them, One of the company's consultants and investors was John "Jack" Kindschi, the former CIA station chief in Hawaii who previously served in clandestine positions in Stockholm and Mexico City. More interesting, Kindschi's cover in Mexico City was the Robert Mullin Company, a public relations firm that employed one E. Howard Hunt, who would later emerge as one of conspirators in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Kindschi would most certainly have been known to Office of Strategic Services (OSS) and CIA veterans Stanley and Madelyn Dunham who arrived in Hawaii from Seattle just as Hawaii became a state in 1960.

The CIA had cleverly provided Stanley cover as a "furniture salesman." In fact, Pratt Furniture of Honolulu, Dunham's alleged employer, never existed save for a filing in the business records held by the State of Hawaii.

BBRDW founder Ron Rewald, CIA code name "WINTERDOG" and "R," attempted to commit suicide in a room at the Waikiki Sheraton in 1983, after BBRDW's financial collapse, the CIA's "plausible denial" machine went into full gear. CIA general counsel Robert Laprade stated in a sworn statement:

"the CIA did not cause Bishop, Baldwin, Rewald, Dillingham &Nixon and W. Averell Harriman post WWII planning lead the JFK death led by these powerful figures of MK-ULTRA who worked through James Jesus Angleton and others for illegal CIA works.

Upon the assasintion of JFK Watergate followed, and upon Watergate the downing of UAL 553, and upon that the downing of TWA 800 ad Pan AM 103. These planes carried those who knew too much, [Spartacus Educational] Dorothy Wetzel was born in Ohio on 1st April, 1920. She became an employee for the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) after the Second World War and was stationed in Shanghai, China, 1949 Marshal Plan and Paris convetion years, where she met her future husband, E. Howard Hunt.

https://www.prouty.org/flight800.html does not contain comments from Prouty but Prouty had written before his death he was certain TWA 800 was shot down by the CIA in the on going cover-ups. Many Prouty like whistle-blower and suspicious crash site investigators align themselves with these beliefs. My books have extensive detail on "Paymistress Dorothy" who after the CIA was forced to cut-off use of soldier of fortune contractors she had attempted to sketch out a retirement plan for former operatives so they could live on quietly. The oil companies were being explored as a source pf payments that could not be tied back to Nixon or re-election funds.

After the war Dorothy worked for the CIA in Paris. She was liaison between the American Embassy and the Economic Cooperation Administration (a CIA front). The couple returned to the United States and settled in Maryland. Her husband E. Howard Hunt, Dorothy spent much of his time involved in covert operations in Mexico, Nicaragua, Guatemala, and Cuba. She died in the Watergate years on UAL 553 and was the wife of self confessed (on tape on Youtube) JFK assasin and Watergate burglar of the JFK era DNC offices. offices.

St. John Hunt the son of the Hunt family has written his historical biographies confirment the Bush family and LBJ connections to assasinating JFK. Additional support for their history books including support and couathorship of Roger Stone a Nixon operative close to this era of history who was at one time suggested for CREEP the Comitte To Reelect the President.

Less know by equally or more important to the Hunt Family is the Donegan family still unkown. This as my family as pawns in the USAID plans for Indonesia based on sperm bank usage. In a strange world and it is a strange world a SciFi mockery of this was a comedny moving using what were clearly the Donegan names and connections in the film if you look closely.

This still untold Donegan peice explains the RFK assassination in Los Angeles County was well as RFK staying with John Frankenhier was discover the real truth of the USAID based death of his brother John F. Kennedy that had British connections and event history through Peter Lawford in his home were a deep sleeper for Indonesia had stayed a night or two with JFK, Dave Powers, and others. It was still a plan inherited from the 1950's though the Kennedy family and Marilyn Monroe, Malcom X, and Dr. Martin Luther King all defected from but were preemptively assassinated before they could reveal in their biographies the truth of. Malcom X biography is said to have been altered from what it was and it was not completed. In addition Marilyn Monroe a few blocks from Peter Lawford was going to tell all. Somebody Normal Hodges with a phony picture but real story made a death bed confession to kill Monroe to silence here since she was threat. Allegedly she was pro-Cuba, it was more that she was anti-MKULTRA plans.

On TWA 800 was Jed Johsnon, the Interview Magazine author who knew of the powerful Hearst Publications backing Nixon and MKULTRA around the world. The Patty Hearst was radicalized knowing the inside details fo William Randolph Heart and Nixon plans of the 1950's she and Jed Johson who died on TWA 800 were very close.

The Eastern Establishment and the views of Old Money

Robber Barrons were re-encouraged after Steam. The British had an advantate in Navy and its ships, having to develop itself in that area. When steam travel came for shipping, tourism, and for industril works like mininng and farming after 1871 the British again decided to rebuild a world empire after having been more isolationist after a period of time. It meant opening up Panama and the Panama Canal and many other industrial works.

About My Story about Truther and my fear for my life writing about it

Everyone knows the Mombassa Kenya birth certificate placed in Keny is a fraud. Those same people though will not acknowledge the Hawaii birth certificate when examined in imagery or facts is just as big a fake. This is the 022-46-3234 Truther story. The Donegan's (my family I am the last living) the Chaffin's (Nona) , Marilyn Monroe, Peter Lawford and his wife Patricia, Dean Rusk, Allen Dulles, and others planned for a Los Angeles concealed birth at St Joseph's hospital using Even Ban as a surrogate mother for two in a way connected to atomic testing and sperm bank donations. Barrack Obams Jr. was born there November 18, 1961.

In the 1950's under George H.W. Bush, Prescott Bush, oil lobbyist like LBJ, and others loved MK-ULTRA and overthrows with Great Britain. By the 1960's Troubles in Ireland, the Bay of Pigs, Cuban Missile Crisis, War in Korea ad Vietnam, all was coming into doubt.

Those who had doubts had deaths. Marilyn Monroe, Dr. Martin Luther King, RFK, JFK, and Malcolm X of Nebraska all had knowledge of what had seemed a good plan until it seemed a bad plan.

George Bush: The Unauthorized Biography --- by Webster G. Tarpley & Anton Chaitkin

Charpter - I - The House of Bush: Born in a Bank

Who is George Bush? How did he become the 41st U.S. President?

He is said to be a man of the "old establishment," who "chose to seek his fortune as an independent oilman...." @s1

In fact, Bush was never "independent." Every career step in his upward climb relied on his family's powerful associations. The Bush family joined the Eastern Establishment comparatively recently, and only as servitors. Their wealth and influence resulted from their loyalty to another, more powerful family, and their willingness to do anything to get ahead.

For what they did, Bush's forebears should have become very famous, or infamous. They remained obscure figures, managers from behind the scenes. But their actions--including his father's role as banker for Adolf Hitler--had tragic effects for the whole planet.

It was these services to his family's benefactors, which propelled George Bush to the top.

Goes to War President George Herbert Walker Bush was born in 1924, the son of Prescott S. Bush and Dorothy Walker Bush. We will begin the George Bush story about a decade before his birth, on the eve of World War I. We will follow the career of his father, Prescott Bush, through his marriage with Dorothy Walker, on the path to fortune, elegance and power.

Prescott Bush entered Yale University in 1913. A native of Columbus, Ohio, Prescott had spent the last five years before college in St. George's Episcopal preparatory school in Newport, Rhode Island.

Prescott Bush's first college year, 1913, was also the freshman year at Yale for E. Roland ("Bunny") Harriman, whose older brother (Wm.) Averell Harriman had just graduated from Yale. This is the Averell Harriman who went on to fame as the U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union during World War II, as a governor of New York State, and as a presidential advisor who was greatly responsible for starting the Vietnam War.

The Harrimans would become the sponsors of the Bushes, to lift them onto the stage of world history.

In the spring of 1916, Prescott Bush and "Bunny" Harriman were chosen for membership in an elite Yale senior-year secret society known as Skull and Bones. This unusually morbid, death-celebrating group helped Wall Street financiers find active young men of "good birth" to form a kind of imitation British aristocracy in America.

World War I was then raging in Europe. With the prospect that the U.S.A. would soon join the war, two Skull and Bones "Patriarchs" , Averell Harriman (class of 1913) and Percy A. Rockefeller (class of 1900), paid special attention to Prescott's class of 1917. They wanted reliable cadres to help them play the Great Game, in the lucrative new imperial era that the war was opening up for London and New York moneycrats. Prescott

Bush, by then a close friend of "Bunny" Harriman, and several other Bonesmen from their class of 1917 would later comprise the core partners in Brown Brothers Harriman, the world's largest private investment bank.

World War I did make an immense amount of money for the clan of stock speculators and British bankers who had just taken over U.S. industry. The Harrimans were stars of this new Anglo-American elite.

Averell's father, stock broker E.H. Harriman, had gained control of the Union Pacific Railroad in 1898 with credit arranged by William Rockefeller, Percy's father, and by Kuhn Loeb & Co.'s British-affiliated private bankers, Otto Kahn, Jacob Schiff and Felix Warburg.

William Rockefeller, treasurer of Standard Oil and brother of Standard founder John D. Rockefeller, owned National City Bank (later "Citibank") together with Texas-based James Stillman. In return for their backing, E.H. Harriman deposited in City Bank the vast receipts from his railroad lines. When he issued tens of millions of dollars of "watered" (fraudulent) railroad stock, Harriman sold most of the shares through the Kuhn Loeb company.

First World War elevated Prescott Bush and his father, Samuel P. Bush, into the lower ranks of the Eastern Establishment.

As war loomed in 1914, National City Bank began reorganizing the U.S. arms industry. Percy A. Rockefeller took direct control of the Remington Arms company, appointing his own man, Samuel F. Pryor, as the new chief executive of Remington.

The U.S entered World War I in 1917. In the spring of 1918, Prescott's father, Samuel P. Bush, became chief of the Ordnance, Small Arms and Ammunition Section of the War Industries Board.@s2 The senior Bush took national responsibility for government assistance to and relations with Remington and was an unusual appointment, as Prescott's father seemed to have no background in munitions. Samuel Bush had been president of the Buckeye Steel Castings Co. in Columbus, Ohio, makers of railcar parts. His entire career had been in the railroad business-- supplying equipment to the Wall Street-owned railroad systems.

The War Industries Board was run by Bernard Baruch, a Wall Street speculator with close personal and business ties to old E.H. Harriman. Baruch's brokerage firm had handled Harriman speculations of all kinds.@s3

In 1918, Samuel Bush became director of the Facilities Division of the War Industries Board. Prescott's father reported to the Board's Chairman, Bernard Baruch, and to Baruch's assistant, Wall Street private banker Clarence Dillon.

Robert S. Lovett, President of Union Pacific Railroad, chief counsel to E.H. Harriman and executor of his will, was in charge of national production and purchase "priorities" for Baruch's board.

With the war mobilization conducted under the supervision of the War Industries Board, U.S. consumers and taxpayers showered unprecedented fortunes on war producers and certain holders of raw materials and patents. Hearings in 1934 by the committee of U.S. Senator Gerald Nye attacked the "Merchants of Death" -- war profiteers such as Remington Arms and the British Vickers company --whose salesmen had manipulated many nations into wars, and then supplied all sides with the weapons to fight them.

Percy Rockefeller and Samuel Pryor's Remington Arms supplied machine guns and Colt automatic pistols; millions of rifles to Czarist Russia; over half of the small-arms ammunition used by the Anglo-American allies in World War I; and 69 percent of the rifles used by the United States in that conflict.@s4

Samuel Bush's wartime relationship to these businessmen would continue after the war, and would especially aid his son Prescott's career of service to the Harrimans.

ost of the records and correspondence of Samuel Bush's arms-related section of the government have been burned, "to save space" in the National Archives. This matter of destroyed or misplaced records should be of concern to citizens of a constitutional republic. Unfortunately, it is a rather constant impediment with regard to researching George Bush's background: He is certainly the most "covert" American chief executive.

Now, arms production in wartime is by necessity carried on with great security precautions. The public need not know details of the private lives of the government or industry executives involved, and a broad interrelationship between government and private-sector personnel is normal and useful.

But during the period preceding World War I, and in the war years 1914-1917 when the U.S. was still neutral, interlocking Wall Street financiers subservient to British strategy lobbied heavily, and twisted U.S. government and domestic police functions. Led by the J.P. Morgan concern, Britain's overall purchasing agent in America, these financiers wanted a world war and they wanted the United States in it as Britain's ally. The U.S. and British arms companies, owned by these international financiers, poured out weapons abroad in deals not subject to the scrutiny of any electorate back home. The same gentlemen, as we shall see, later supplied weapons and money to Hitler's Nazis.

That this problem persists today, is in some respect due to the "control" over the documentation and the history of the arms traffickers.

World War I was a disaster for civilized humanity. It had terrible, unprecedented casualties, and shattering effects on the moral philosophy of Europeans and Americans.

But for a brief period, the war treated Prescott Bush rather well. - George Bush: The Unauthorized Biography --- by Webster G. Tarpley & Anton Chaitkin from Chapter - I - The House of Bush: Born in a Bank

E. Howard Hunt said on his deathbed on tape loyalists to this industrialist robber barron system killed JFK. The "Eastern Establishment" were led by LBJ and Oil money, gold miners, United Fruit Company, and many more world trade companies picking out who will govern "independent" nations and co-governing those puppet run nations.

Keeping a well prepped line of future leaders for those countries was a generations-to-generations plan as arraggned marriages, etc., were designed to create favoralbale candidates who would enter polics right out of of during university.

In more detail elsewhere I will show the Rapheal Cruz family Senior and Junior and that is Ted Cruz Sr. of Texas and Ted Cruz Jr. of Texas are a CIA connected Family Jewels family having worked at CIA/MI6 connected RCA in Cuba under Batista and having business and other ties. The entire story is very sketchy, hard to fact find in, and often contradictory but disturbing photographic evidence of ties to Lee Harvey Oswlad and other questionable data does exist.

The Donegan's Chaffin's, and others including Marilyn Monroe were part of the Family Jewels system for Indonesia. I will write elsewhere how Cuba is to the USA as Indonesia is to Australia. The Indonesia USAID Peace Corpt East-West-Center plan by the CIA was contemporaneous with the Cuba plan but remains the unexposed part of the history of the assassinations program that turned JFK and RFK, the CIA mafia assasins killing their controllers to continue their plans uninterupted by the President.

Rafael Bienvenido Cruz y Díaz (born March 22, 1939)[2] is a Cuban-American evangelical preacher and the father of U.S. Senator Ted Cruz. He has served as a surrogate in his son's political campaigns.

Cruz was born in Matanzas, Cuba, in 1939. His father, also named Rafael Cruz, was a salesman for RCA, originally from the Canary Islands, Spain. His mother, Emilia Laudelina Díaz, was a teacher.

Friday, August 13, 1926 August 13, 1926 Rose Kennedy departs for an extended trip to Europe, leaving behind JFK and his siblings in Brookline. She spends he days on vacation going to bullfights and dining in fine restaurants. In the diary she kept of the trip, she does not mention any of her children. https://dailyjfk.com/days/august-13-1926/

About this time Maria Kutchera will leave a Catholic convent pregnant and be escorted into the USA to give birth.

After a long planned CIA (formerly OSS) plan to retake Indonesia was underway in Los Angeles County that JFK visited in November 18th and 19th 1961 led to his death as he opoposed the program in 1963. Following that a massive cover-up of the Los Angeles story of Barrack Obama Jr., St, Joseph's hospital Inglewood was began including deserate attempts to place Barrack Obama Jr.'s birth anywhere but Los Angeles County California.

"The date on the document is Feb. 17, 1964, and shows it being issued by the "Republic of Kenya." History books show that Kenya was the Dominion of Kenya in February 1964 and didn't adopt the name Republic of Kenya until Dec. 12, 1964." https://www.jacksonville.com/story/news/nation-world/2010/08/08/fact-check-no-again-not-obamas-birth-certificate-kenya/15935517007/

Leslianne Shedd-a young, courageous, highly successful CIA operations officer serving in East Africa-was a passenger on an

Ethiopian Airlines flight when it was hijacked and then crashed into the Indian Ocean on November 23, 1996, killing 125 people, including Leslianne. Survivors said that Leslianne spent her final moments comforting those around her. https://www.cia.gov/legacy/honoring-heroes/heroes/leslianne-shedd/

Trans World Airlines Flight 800 (TW800/TWA800) was a scheduled international passenger flight from New York (John F. Kennedy International Airport) to Rome, with a stopover in Paris. On July 17, 1996, at approximately 8:31 p.m. EDT, 12 minutes after takeoff, the Boeing 747-100 serving the flight exploded and crashed into the Atlantic Ocean near East Moriches, New York.

All 230 people on board died in the crash; it is the third-deadliest aviation accident in U.S. history.

There have been many attempts including contemprory to the 1960's to stage what fairly clearly is NOT true; that Barrack Obama Jr. was born in Kenya. A birth certficate was placed there in 1964 and this from VICE Magazine.

> Yesterday afternoon, an anonymous source known only as “Peter R.” reached out to VICE with claims that he had in his possession a video of President Barack Obama’s birth. Peter said that the footage was shot at a hospital in Mombasa, Kenya, on August 4, 1961, by his father, Barack Obama Sr. He sent us the password to a private video on Vimeo, a short clip that appears to depict a white woman who resembles Ann Dunham, Obama’s mother, giving birth to a ginormous black baby. Peter also told us that he has the entire roughly 15-minute video in his possession and has been attempting to reach out to Donald Trump and other prominent birther theorists. We were literally at a loss for words, so we asked Peter if he’d be up for an interview about his “mind-blowing discovery” and, this morning, he said OK and we got on the phone. The > whole thing sounds fucking bananas; that's our official comment on the entire situation so don't ask us anything more about it, please. We just thought you should know about it is all, whether or not it's total bullshit.

Ties to Malcolm X and Saudi Arabia have been constant. In his own magazine he posted photos in spread in his own magazine. In the collage he looks adoringly at Ann Dunham holding young Barrack Obama Jr.

In the Malcolm X magazine Muhammad Speaks a collage exists and the placement of photos is suggestive as Malcom X looks towards Stanley Ann Dunham and Barrack Obama Jr. Brotivity_Scene.jpg" February 21 1962 Muhammad Speaks picture is shown. All of this his confused intelligence agencies with close ties to the events.

" But what made no sense to me was why anyone in the spy business, or anyone in East Germany [Or Salzburg] for that matter, would give a damn to find a foster parent for a newborn illegitimate offspring (Barrack Obama Jr.) of mixed black-white parentage. What made him so special that the Syrians and the German would go to all the trouble or see some potential in grooming him? What could possibly make intelligence agencies groom from infancy a sleeper agent. Isreali Insider with Mossad and Kenyan leaks.

The Isreal Insider article is "Is Obama the secret son of Malcolm X? There are extensive reason from Malcom X and his FBI recruitment and later life conversions that place him at key events and time of Barrack Obama Jr.'s infant life. It also asserts Saudi funding and CIA support for the plan as Malcolm X turned to Saudi Arabia and Mecca as a possible place for a son of his own.

The source didn't answer this, nor could I, over the succeeding months of the campaign. We exchanged a few more emails, but the nagging question of "why" anyone would bother with this baby would not leave me. What did come out in the ensuing weeks, however, was a litany of unexplained facts in Obama's youthful history, of help from strangers in high places all along the way, benefactors who had either Arab-Muslim or Communist-Social connections. There was his Islamic education in Indonesia. There was the fact that in Hawaii the boy was tutored in the ways of revolution by leading black activists, Muslim activists, and Communist activists. Influentia black nationalist and Communist Frank Marshall Davis would become a huge influence in the young Obama's life.

But things really got strange with the revelation that Khalid al-Mansour, close adviser to a Saudi billionaire and royal family helped Obama get into Harvard Law School (and reportedly Columbia before that) and financed his education and advancement. It was al-Mansour who asked Percy Sutton, a high profile black lawyer active in the civil rights movement in the 1950s and 1960s, to help Obama get into Harvard.

Sutton described Mansour as "the principal adviser to one of the world’s richest men. He told me about Obama and asked him to "write a letter in support of Obama's application to Harvard Law School, Sutton recalled.

"And his introduction was there is a young man that has applied to Harvard. I know that you have a few friends up there because you used to go up there to speak. Would you please write a letter in support of him?" Sutton obliged:“"I wrote a letter of support of him to my friends at Harvard, saying to them I thought there was a genius that was going to be available and I certainly hoped they would treat him kindly."

In fact most cite the oil companies as having funded most of the activities of the CIA and possible inserts into Saudi Arabia were a possible CIA plan for Barrack Obama Jr. had they attempted it based on flimsly records left.

The foolish can easily discount all of this but any web search about the intense CIA involvement in the Obama family shows clear results that are well sourced including from Wayne Madsen who focuses on the main plan of Barrack Obana Jr. planned from early on to travel to Indonesia.

If the events of Los Angeles County are true, and this is tied to the Donegan's and atomic testing it raises is Evan Ban not only the surrogate mother from atomic testing and IVF fertilization [Bikini Atoll polka dot bikini] seen with JFK and would be part of the surrogacy of Glorian Donegan could she also be the woman in the Polka Dot Dress still in Bikini Atoll fashion and at one time calling herself Oppenhiemer.

Victoria Windsor: Blogger, researcher [along with Micheal Hastings] into ancestry: .. .reported that she had “found evidence that the records of Madelyn Payne Dunham and Stanley Armour Dunham had been “tampered with.” Cause of death not yet revealed. Said to have died from a “sudden illness”

Micheal Hastings and Victoria Windsor Investigating Obama origins reporting Micheal Hastings speaks, him quoted and speaking in the first person How ironic that they accuse Trump of Russia involvement when it was they who conspired with Russia to produce a polished liar and charlatan to unleash on an unsuspecting and naïve nation.

Irony has nothing to do with it. Brennan’s carefully-laid plan was to use CIA-linked Columbia University to provide cover for Obama and pad a nice résumé for him.

In the meantime no one ever saw Obama at Columbia because Barry Soetoro was attending the Patrice Lumumba University in Moscow, named for Patrice Lumumba, the anti-colonialist who fought for Congo’s independence from Belgium and was assassinated for his troubles.

He remains a martyr for his radical e?orts and revered in Russia as a communist sympathizer. The name of the university has since changed to “People’s Friendship University of Moscow” to shed the radical connotation of Lumumba.

While Victoria [Windsor] and I were researching the Columbia discrepancies we got a lead that Barry had been in Moscow during the years 1981-83 at Lamumba.

being BHO or Harrack Obama Jr.]

I was skeptical. Something this big surely would be splayed everywhere in our underground conservative online news outlets. I went to the PLU website and clicked on “Famous Alumni.”

At the top of the list was Mahmood Abbas, President of the Palestinian Authority, or better-known as Chairman of the terrorist organization the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO). It was the second name on the list that rocked me to my core: Barry Soetoro, President of the United States. I swear on all things holy that it was there. I saw it and Victoria took a screenshot on her computer.

Immediately prior to his death, Hastings had published a strong critique of the Obama administration titled “Why Democrats Love to Spy on Americans,” which exposed the party’s hypocrisy regarding some of the civil liberty overreaches they had criticized under Bush but embraced under Obama. San Diego 6 News reported that Hastings had been investigating CIA Director John Brennan for an upcoming exposé prior to the crash [that killed Hastings wbo was being surrounded by the FBI and NSA.]

He [Fernando Faura] also knew Flying Tigers Airline had morphed into CAT, which had morphed into AIR AMERICA, a CIA proprietary reported to be the carrier for the drug traffcking of the South Vietnamese generals helping the United States during the Vietnam War.

He did not want to alarm Fahey, so he did not mention it. Fahey said he was feeling angry with himself for not remembering more. In recollecting and going over every detail of his adventure, he had remembered that the woman had shown him a picture of a girl claiming "Oppenheimer."

In mentioning passage on CAT or she was also named that she could get Flying Tigers Airlines she had referred to a man also named "Oppenheimer." Fahey could not remember the man's first name. The man named Oppenheimer, Fahey continued to recall, was an offcial of the Federal Aviation Agency in Guam. "He either operates out of Guam or Taipei," Fahey said, "or travels between the two of them quite frequently.

Marilyn Monroe was the most famous orphan Family Jewel. She knew she was out of wedlock, encouraged by Joseph Kennedy Sr. and others, treated in the USA with meth that those like Dr. Max Jacobson, Sidney Gottlieb, and Dr Greeson were researching for the Minimal Brain Defect condition. Covertly Windsors, Kutchera's, Rockefeller's, Rothschild's, or other children place into CIA anonymized conditions the Family Jewels were encouraged to tell positive versions of the story in the media using anonymized or slightly fictionalized accounts, and to help other Family Jewels being groomed for the next generation with arranged marriages, arranged adoptions, or falsified claims of parentage of children not actually their own to create a paper trail. Barrack Obame Jr. and Barrack Obama Sr were both CIA projects. Legends are the backstories espionage agents have of their identities, etc., and the are fabricated in a way to deceive. Creating a Legend for a child who will be placed into some family or home is the story the child will be raised under.

I Edward Paul Donegan an the least famous of the Family Jewels in McMartin Preschool and lived my life under the secrecy requirements.

Joseph Kennedy Sr oversaw or was the RKO Godfather or Marilyn Monroe. Dean Rusk was the Godfather of Glorian Donegan in North Carolina into the Gainey family.

The CIA was connected and using as asssets Madelyn Payne Dunham and Barrack Obama Sr. Both were part of a USAID plane the factions in Indonesia to plant Barrack Obama Jr. there and encourage his success.

This according to Ed Donegan was being carrried out with Peter Lawford, Patricia Kennedy, Jospeh Kennedy Sr., The Ford Foundation, Allen Dulles, and others. Barrack Obama Jr died in a car crash in Kenya and reports are the CIA had killed him in a staged accident.

The Family Jewels Program the Kennedy's were tying to stop married, adopted, or used assumed identities to move CIA covert bastard children into future leader families.

At 3:30am on August 5, 1962, Marilyn Monroe’s psychiatrist Dr. Ralph Greenson, broke into her bedroom by smashing a window to find the actress dead in her bed, with an empty bottle of sleeping pills on her nightstand. Monroe's housekeeper, Eunice Murray, had awakened in the middle of the night to find a light on in Marilyn’s room and the door locked. Murray called Dr. Greenson, worried that something was amiss.

Or at least that’s what was reported at the time. In a new Netflix documentary, The Mystery of Marilyn Monroe: The Unheard Tapes, Monroe's biographer, Anthony Summers, presents a new timeline of events of the night Monroe died, deduced from hundreds of interviews conducted for an updated version of his 1985 biography, Goddess. Featuring new audio interviews with members of Dr. Greenson’s family, the new documentary addresses rumors and inconsistencies surrounding Monroe's death. The Mystery of Marilyn Monroe also digs into the Niagara actress' alleged romantic relationships President John F. Kennedy and his brother Attorney General Robert Kennedy. -https://www.esquire.com/entertainment/movies/a39840131/marilyn-monroe-death-true-story-netflix/

Decamp - "I go on in this very brief opening forward to explain why I was with Colby he's friend advisor going back to Vietnam days.

I was in Washington standard his place and I was telling him you know I received these threats and he was somewhat familiar with Franklin he he had received national press and and I think he had a lot more knowledge than I'll ever know he had but anyway he was warning me to get away from it to stay away - leave it alone to not touch it anymore and I said wait a minute Bill you know how can you walk away from something when you know terrible things are happening when you know institutions of government and we all rely on that there being corrupt?

Yeah it's a real import and then he said to me he said John sit down just it's just cool off and relax and Sully his wife was there Sally ford and Sally by the way was prominant I think ambassador to more countries than any other person has ever been in the history of the United States appointed by Carter so Sally's got a little little heavy duty things herself and she was listening and nodding her head and agreeing with Bill bill says let me tell you my personal story because maybe it'll have a message for you there.

And he says you know last night I returned from Russia now this is the former head of the CIA under President Nixon and President Ford and he sitting me down and telling me that with that I I just better listen he says last night I returned from Russia is what was I doing in Russia he said I was there and remember this is three weeks three weeks before the Gorbachev coup that hmm changed Russia forever tonight the collapse of Russia he said I was there in Russia with kind of a secret group of people whose names you would instantly recognize and those powerful people from all over the world names like myself you know Colby had been the head of the CIA he said we were there to save Russia from a revolution when and if it collapses so that it doesn't explode into World War Three.

A world war he said this what were you doing trying to actually work with the people we had been defeating to prevent a revolution okay and he says it was the night before I was due to come home he said last night he said I was in my hotel right there on Red Square the most sacred place in all of Russian d'amore communism he said and I couldn't sleep and I got thinking about just how significant these world events were that were occurring he says so I decided what excuse me what they have I'm just gonna go for a walk he said I knew that was forbidden because you know you can't just go walking around Red Square in the middle of the night particularly the head of the CIA spent 40 years trying to destroy Russia he said but I thought I'd see how far I can get.

He says I walked out past the guards nobody's paying attention so I go out of the hotel then I am in Red Square and from the tomb of Lenin walking up to the doors of the Kremlin itself he said nobody cared nobody was paying attention here was the head of the CIA the most hated the most feared enemy that communism had over the years bill Colby head of the CIA during the most critical time he said in it then it struck me he said that I realized it he said we'd won the Cold War was over Russia was dead communism was dead he said after 40 years and Reverend Weezer his words not mine now he said after 40 years of fighting the bastards we had won we won.

It was over the Cold War was Dunnan and I was the only one of the whole planet to recognize know it right then at that instant and then he said something else struck me something something to just really slam me I said well what was that he said I realized that this walk I was having in Red Square was it that was the only parade I was ever going to have for all our achievements there wasn't gonna be the ticker tapes down Madison Avenue there wasn't gonna be the the waving and he said it was all over and we'd won and this was my private parade.

And it was the only one I said okay bill now we've heard about your private parade in the defeat of communism so on so what's that got to do with Franklin and this whole mess I'm trying to get something he said sometimes you better face up to the fact and this is one of those times that the things you're involved in have have significance and people too big too powerful events and things involved you don't even know about that are just too big and powerful for you to deal with and you have to face up the fact that maybe in in the time frame you'd like to deal with them and the way you'd like to do and can't be done.

He said then sometimes evil does succeed for a while and that's just you have to walk away from it get away from it and he says the only way Franklin will ever get exposed and where it leads to and what it goes is if the national press an independent national press just like happened in Watergate happened in iran-contra happened happening with old [Roman Catholic] Joe McCarthy at the independent national press really gets interested and delves into it and takes it all the way to where it leads Morrow interjecting - is there such a thing [as a free and indeendent press] anymore in this country?

DeCamp again -See that that's that's why I said I said well how do you do that bill he says I'll help y'all I know something he's called notified a number of people he says the problem is getting one of them to really put the investigative research and reporters onto it and not having back off and where it leads.

Well so I went home thought about it was frustrated and I thought okay I'll do my part to start it all right the story of Franklin as a documentary as a documentary with the things that are available right now today that show there was clearly at least again in my opinion a cover-up.

I won't mince words I won't hedge things I'll spit it out straight and what it cost me it cost me but at least the foundation will be there and of course since since writing the book I've learned a lot more I now believe I think I'm beginning to understand maybe a little more of what bill was saying and where this thing really does lead and I I think now I'm finally understanding why it's so powerful where it leads as I say and I think it leads into things that almost move into the fantasy world that we went to movies and watched and in the 60s and 70s and 80s.

In other words the mysteries of the Cold War battle and how far governments go with their secret services whether it be the CIA or or the Gestapo or the KGB in Russia and I believe and I know this sounds like I'm floating off into Fantasyland right tyro can bring you back here you're right and I dimin the first one a few years ago to say well yeah make good movie but you aren't gonna believe any of this here's what I believe I believe that Franklin had a lot of personalities who through one way or another were linked up to the cold war effort the CIA and other things back during the 70s and 80s.

Morrow: We ran across some information about Larry King in one point that it looked like that he had at one time had some ties with the CIA.

Decamp: he did and I document some of those in the book but beyond that information I've learned since I wrote the book I have no doubt now no doubt Larry King was one of the underlings of the CIA involved in a specific program recruiting particularly young boys particularly kind of a particular kind of boy who were then used in a kind of mental programming a brainwashing (PsyOps) if you would that we were doing to use them for such things as assassinations such things as drug dealing.

remember drug dealing hmm back during the 70s and 80s we now know pretty well was one of the main methods to finance our covert operations we were actually involved in in drug dealing and even even even a lot of those things that sounds like sex, blackmail, so on and so forth at least, yeah mind-control (MKULTRA) thing now as they say sounds "off".

now if anybody's listening I think yeah DeCamp is off with the Lulu Birds you know like Manchurian Candidate you remember that old movie were they yeah well I guess what I'm (DeCamp is) saying is I think that [The Manchurian Candidate and MKULTRA of the CIA and DIA]is a integral part of this [Temple of Set Micheal Aquino].

If you have that kind of thing at stake predicting because the (elite)personalities that it goes up to ultimately mm-hmm the American public would be shocked to find it yes our government really really did these things same thing we accuse the other guys are doing which they were doing too well Congress investigated that back in the early 50s and the CIA.

Yeah but remember this a sophistication of the 50s was nothing compared to what it was in the 70s and 80s this is post Vietnam we had suffered our worst defeat in the history of this country our only defeat we now we're not gonna let it happen again between 1975 roughly and 1986 roughly was the most intense Cold War period in this country

I mean it was just that close to a hot war at all times we always think of the Cuban crisis is the time not really 1975 to 1986 remember the Evil Empire, remember Star Wars SDI, remember the contest to see who could build up [GDP and economic strength and military] faster that's what finally broke the Russians they just couldn't keep up in the contest financially so that was the period when technology was going rampant.

Remember the invention of the computer the understanding of the human mind so much more and the information I've learned since the book came out that is poured in from a variety of sources makes me believe that that may well be why it's necessary for the protection of our entire government in a sense embarrassment.

What people would believe what people would feel about their government if they knew some of the things that we had done profilers the motives for the cover-up.

I think that's one of the major motives he says people just protecting themselves other people of course have a vested interest of all a child abuser these kind of things you're certainly willing to cooperate if you are a if you're a judge or an official who got your position as a result of help from this or that.

Remember another surprised and this I'm now convinced of which I didn't know when I wrote the book off at Air Force Base if you're gonna pick the most sacred military installation in the United States for the last 140 years where is it it's off at Air Force Base right in the center of the United States what land USA the farthest you can get from Russia.

mmm-hmm well I am convinced now that there was a major CIA operation out of there handled there and of course Omaha the Heartland at least likely place in the world to have something like this that's a major part of this Larry King was merely a tool in this whole thing.

remember another surprised and this I'm now convinced of which I didn't know when I wrote the book off at Offutt Air Force Base is a U.S. Air Force base south of Omaha, adjacent to Bellevue in Sarpy County, Nebraska. It is the headquarters of the U.S. Strategic Command, the 55th Wing, and the 55th Wing of the Strategic Air Combat Command, the latter serving as the host unit. Wikipedia if you're gonna pick the most sacred military installation in the United States for the last 140 years where is it it's off at Air Force Base right in the center of the United States what land USA the farthest you can get from Russia.

Sherman H. Skolnick Sherman Skolnick Sounds Off! An Interview by Kenn Thomas Steamshovel Press editor Kenn Thomas recently had the distinct pleasure of having dinner with legal researcher Sherman Skolnick at his usual haunt, the River Flame restaurant off Highway 94 outside of Chicago. Sherman Skolnick has been on the scene since his early courtroom victories regarding the corruption of Illinois state courts and congressional reapportionment in that state. His research has made him a perennial figure in national politics. He helped expose the existence of a Chicago-area assassination plot against JFK involving a Lee Harvey Oswald. He demonstrated that sabotage was the probable reason for a United Airlines crash that killed the wife of E. Howard Hunt and eleven other Watergate figures. He surfaced a great deal of information regarding witnesses to events surrounding the Inslaw investigation. In fact, he continually exposes interesting and under-reported details about current political scandals on the hotline of his group, the Citizens Committee to Clean Up the Courts (312-731-1100), which also has helped many people with their struggles in bankruptcy court. Sherman also produces a Chicago public access cable television program that further documents the issues and cases he has brought to public scrutiny. Virtually dismissed entirely by the mainstream and often labeled a kook even by some in the conspiracy research community, Skolnick's work has nevertheless had a remarkable staying power and his successes in court and in the media have earned him much respect as a champion dirtdigger and exposer of hidden truth. This interview provided a rare opportunity to discuss history with him, his own as well as that of the people and events he has investigated over the years.

It was Sherman Skolnick's belief Richard Nixon was responsible for downing UAL 553 and this was tied to Phillip Twombly, the Caribbean islands, and CIA regime change in those areas and this went all the way back to FDR.

Especially important to Australia was the islands surrounding it including Indonesia.

So what did FDR do? Using his loyal sidekick Joseph Kennedy Sr. FDR helped the Windsor family in 1925 1926 get out of wedlock children with the speech defect gene into the USA where they were studied. WWII was an opportunity for Albert of York to become King since the Nazi's focused on genetic perfectionism. But the Windsors still wanted those like Marilyn Monroe, GLorian Gainey who would marry my father James Paul Donegan to keep their identities covert after being placed in the USA. Like my mother GLorian Donegan I carry the FOXP2 gene that includes bad grammer and hand writing as well as other minor problems.

It was felt by the Eastern Establishment (Bush family, Walker family, J.P. Morgan, Hearst family, Mueller family, DuPont family) since some of these people knew who they were anyway why not give them a head start into political or media families and become agents of influence with covert backing. Testing the children for stability was important. Complex Post Traumatic Stress Disorder is a problem linked to FOXP2 though any can get it. Testing the children "ritualistically" allowed select children who survived the abuse to moved by the CIA to other countries they might be placed in with cover-identities.

Col Prouty who my family was close to in Boston held similar views to Sherman Skolnick including on TWA 800 being downed by the CIA and many news outlets believe UAL 553 was shot down to cover up the activities of the Cold War CIA Nixon had overseen that included assassinating JFK since JFK wanted to protect the independence of nations (and the Republic of Ireland) all which had increased following WWII despite British and CIA wishes.

The theory offered by pilots and sea captains at the time of TWA 800 was never explored by the FBI at least in terms of variations. That a flare of some type flew to the TWA flight anad ignited it during its fuel hazard condition is not the same theory of a normal missile strike. The facts do support the flare theory as the RADAR does and witness statements do.

As I child I had some confusion as to my name at this very time we were close to the Col Fletcher Prouty's. Ned Edward Donegan I thought was my name and I thought others initials were their name to but then I found out that wasn't true and here is how my father explained it to me.

Ned is the British abbreviation for Edward. Edward was my name after my grandfather (since I have found out on my mother's side) and his wishes were the British use of Ned for me. That stuck and my father despite Irish sympathies went along with it.

Only in the 1980's did I switch from Ned to Ed as how I introduce myself. Edward Or Albert had GLorian out of wedlock and it was later in the days following WWII my father came in to contact with Duke Edward and his offspring including covert ones, meeting my mother Glorian. It was known in my family especially in the South Carolina side there was an abdicated king from England Ireland area that my mother (and Harold too it seems) had come from, and all three of us the older brother of Glorian Harold and GLorian and my carry that gene, and all three of us talked about the royal somewhere in our background.

There are several facets to my father's background I think tied him into creating other hidden identities. He was part of the watching of the first atomic blast (in history) from a watchtower before he began his first and second wing flights to bomb Japan. He was watched over his life for affects and I think he was asked for his wife to donate eggs too. In this case it was the radiation but the speech defect they wanted to research in children secretly cousins to Albert and his Kings Speech going into WWII. SO both his and her DNA were in people like Sidney Gottlieb test labs.

After leaving politics, Salinger became known for his work as an ABC News correspondent, particularly for his coverage of the Iran Hostage Crisis; the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland; and his claims of a missile being the cause of the explosion of TWA Flight 800.

On the evening of December 21, 1988, Pan Am Flight 103, a Boeing 747, took off from London headed for New York City. As it was climbing on its northerly flight path and was nearing 30,000 feet in altitude, the aircraft exploded over Lockerbie, Scotland

A CIA officer was among the victims of the 1988 Pan Am Flight 103 bombing in Lockerbie, Scotland: The bombing On December 21, 1988, a Libyan-planned terrorist attack destroyed Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, killing 270 people from 21 countries. The victims included a CIA officer, 35 Syracuse University students, and 11 Lockerbie residents. The bomb The bomb was hidden in a cassette player in a suitcase and was made of the odorless plastic explosive Semtex.

The Devout Catholic who learned so much. What turned out to be Matt's last assignment, in the late fall of 1988, was important, sensitive, and risky. As one of only a handful of case officers who possessed the language and operational skills required for this assignment, Matt agreed to fill in temporarily in a hectic position in the Middle East. Soon after his arrival, he produced 24 intelligence reports in as many days. These reports added considerably to the Agency's storehouse of knowledge. By every measure, Matt's TDY was a complete success. https://www.cia.gov/legacy/honoring-heroes/heroes/matthew-kevin-gannon/

Google AI Overview

A "surface to air" or "air to air" missile charge shell refers to the explosive warhead contained within a missile designed to be launched from the ground (surface-to-air) or from another aircraft (air-to-air), used to destroy enemy aircraft or other airborne targets upon impact; essentially, the destructive part of the missile that detonates when it hits its target.

Key points about missile charge shells: Function:
The primary function of a missile charge shell is to create a large blast and fragmentation pattern upon impact, causing significant damage to the target aircraft. Types of warheads:

Depending on the missile design, the charge shell can be filled with high explosive (HE), high explosive fragmentation (HE-FRAG), or specialized warheads like proximity fuzes that detonate near the target for maximum effect.

Guidance systems:
The missile's guidance system, whether radar, infrared, or other methods, directs the warhead towards the target before detonation.

Distinguishing between Surface-to-Air and Air-to-Air:

Surface-to-Air (SAM):

Launched from a ground-based platform like a launcher or ship, designed to engage aircraft flying at high altitudes. Air-to-Air (AAM):

Launched from a fighter aircraft to intercept and destroy other aircraft in mid-air. -Google AI overview

The FBI ruled out an overt-warfare air-to-air or surface-to-air missles with a charge contained in a nose shell because not fragments of a containing shell were found in the skin of the airplane.

Semtex or RDX (Cyclonite)Summary: RDX stands for Royal Demolition eXplosive. It is also known as cyclonite or hexogen. The chemical name for RDX is 1,3,5-trinitro-1,3,5-triazine. It is a white powder and is very explosive. RDX is used as an explosive and is also used in combination with other ingredients in explosives. Its odor and taste are unknown. It is a synthetic product that does not occur naturally in the environment. It creates fumes when it is burned with other substances. This or something similar to this allowed a flare to ignite a plane at risk of explosion as if a car being fueled with excess fuel running into a pond under the car.

On the plane was an insider member of the Press (Jed Johnson) who knew the Nixon and William Randolph Hearst familyl backed plans for MK-ULTRA across the globe.

Dear Dick,

I found, awaiting me here upon our return from Spain, a package delivered by the safe hand of Pursor Moreno of S.S."UNITED STATES". I lost no time unpacking it and was quite overcome to find that it contained four boxes of Laranaga Cetros clarisimos bearing your card.

I cannot thank you enough for such a wonderful and welcome present. These cigars are my favorites and my appreciation of your kind and generous thought of me, knows no bounds.

The Duchess and I are glad you and Honey had a nice summer. The weather was lousy here July and August around Paris, but we found it really warm and sunny on the Costa del Sol. We spent a few days in Madrid on our way back, and were invited to a party where we had the pleasure of seeing your friends, the Fieros again.

We plan to spend the winter here, except maybe for another trip to Spain after New Year's. Then, we look forward to going to America in the late Spring and to seeing you and Honey again. One can only hope that the "New Frontiersmen" will not have completely wrecked the economy by then.

Thanking you again for the wonderful cigars and with the Duchess' and my love to you both,

Sincerely Your's

Thomas Hale Boggs Sr. (February 15, 1914 – disappeared October 16, 1972; declared dead December 29, 1972) was an American Democratic Party politician and a member of the U.S. House of Representatives from New Orleans, Louisiana. He was the House majority leader and a member of the Warren Commission.

In 1972, while still majority leader, Boggs was on a fundraising drive in Alaska when the twin engine airplane on which he was travelling along with Alaska congressman Nick Begich and two others disappeared en route from Anchorage to Juneau, Alaska.

Boggs was the youngest member of the Warren Commission, which, from 1963 to 1964, investigated the assassination of John F. Kennedy. Boggs has been reported to have differing positions regarding the Warren report. Based upon Office of the House Historian and Clerk of the House Office of Art and Archives, Politico reports that "Boggs dissented from the commission's majority report which supported the single bullet thesis - pointing to a lone assassin. Boggs said he "had strong doubts about it". But in a 1966 appearance on Face the Nation, Boggs defended the commission's findings and stated that he did not doubt that Lee Harvey Oswald killed Kennedy. He said that all the evidence indicated that Kennedy was shot from behind and that the argument that one bullet hit both Kennedy and Texas Governor John Connally was "very persuasive". Boggs took issue with the assertions of Warren Commission critics and stated that it was "human nature" that "many people would prefer to believe there was a conspiracy". It is unknown why his position was stated in such opposite terms, but conspiracy theorists have pondered that difference as significant. In Oliver Stone's film JFK, it is Sen. Russell Long who prompts Jim Garrison the District Attorney of Orleans Parish to reopen his investigation into Lee Harvey Oswald's activities in New Orleans during the summer of 1963, beginning with association with David W. Ferrie and Guy Bannister. According to author Joan Mellen in her book A Farewell to Justice, Jim Garrison told her it was actually Boggs that prompted him to reopen his investigation into the assassination of the President.

In the 1979 novel "The Matarese Circle", author Robert Ludlum portrayed Boggs as having been killed to stop his probe into the assassination.

He served as majority whip from 1962 to 1971 and as majority leader from January 1971 to his disappearance. As the whip, he ushered much of President Johnson's Great Society legislation through Congress. In late 1966, Boggs was asked to help the AFL-NFL merger by having the merged league receive an exemption from antitrust law sanctions. He helped get the merger attached to a bill that would get to a vote (as assisted by state senator Russell Long), which resulted in both a successful merger and a professional football team in Louisiana, which soon became known as the New Orleans Saints.

On August 22, 1968, while Secretary of State Dean Rusk was testifying in a hearing concerning the Vietnam War, Boggs interrupted the session to announce the invasion of Czechoslovakia by the troops of the Soviet Union, after hearing of a recent Radio Prague broadcast telling the Czechoslovaks not to take any action against the occupying forces. That caused Secretary Rusk, who was previously unaware of the situation, to excuse himself immediately, mid-testimony, to attend to the issue of the invasion. (Source: Walter Cronkite: The Way It Was: The 1960s)

In April 1971, he made a speech on the floor of the House in which he strongly attacked Federal Bureau of Investigation Director J. Edgar Hoover and the whole of the FBI.

That led to a conversation on April 6, 1971 between President Richard M. Nixon and the Republican minority leader, Gerald Ford. Nixon said that he could no longer take counsel from Boggs as a senior member of Congress. In the recording of this call, Nixon asked Ford to arrange for the House delegation to include an alternative to Boggs. Ford speculated that Boggs was either drinking too much or taking pills that were upsetting him mentally.

On April 22, 1971, Boggs went even further: "Over the postwar years, we have granted to the elite and secret police within our system vast new powers over the lives and liberties of the people. At the request of the trusted and respected heads of those forces, and their appeal to the necessities of national security, we have exempted those grants of power from due accounting and strict surveillance."

Disappearance in Alaska

As majority leader, Boggs often campaigned for others, including Representative Nick Begich of Alaska. On October 16, 1972, Boggs was aboard a twin engine Cessna 310 with Representative Begich, who was facing a possible tight race in the November 1972 general election against the Republican candidate, Don Young, when it disappeared during a flight from Anchorage to Juneau. Also on board were Begich's aide, Russell Brown; and the pilot, Don Jonz; the four were heading to a campaign fundraiser for Begich.

The search for the missing aircraft and four men included the U.S. Coast Guard, Navy, Army, Air Force, Civil Air Patrol and civilian fixed-wing aircraft and helicopters.

An Emergency position-indicating emergency locator transmitter (ELT) was not required at this time. But this accident influenced the adoption of the ELT requirement in 1973.

No emergency transmission signal determined to be from the plane was heard during the search. In its report on the incident, the National Transportation Safety Board stated that the pilot's portable emergency transmitter, permissible in lieu of a fixed transmitter on the plane, was found in an aircraft at Fairbanks. The report also notes that a witness saw an unidentified object in the pilot's briefcase that resembled, except for color, the portable emergency transmitter. The safety board concluded that neither the pilot nor aircraft had an emergency location transmitter.

On November 24, 1972, the search was suspended after 39 days. Neither the wreckage of the plane nor the pilot's and passengers' remains were ever found. After a hearing and seven-minute jury deliberation, his death certificate was signed by Judge Dorothy Tyner.

Orient Airlines Flight 305 1971? Timed with CREEP

Resentful CIA Agents For Hire were being fired and resentful (as Dan Cooper said he had a grudge. Paymistress Dorothy Hunt was hunting for "retirements" funding. This led to UAL 553.

The Committee for the Re-election of the President (or the Committee to Re-elect the President, CRP, but often mocked by the acronym CREEP) was, officially, a fundraising organization of United States President Richard Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign during the Watergate scandal. In addition to fundraising, the organization also engaged in political sabotage against Nixon's opponents, the various Democratic politicians running in the election.

History

Planning began in late 1970 and an office opened in the spring of 1971. Besides its re-election activities, CRP employed money laundering and slush funds, and was involved in the Watergate scandal.

The CRP used $500,000 in funds raised to re-elect President Nixon to pay legal expenses for the five Watergate burglars. This act helped turn the burglary into an explosive political scandal. The burglars, as well as G. Gordon Liddy, E. Howard Hunt, John N. Mitchell, and other Nixon administration figures (Watergate Seven), were indicted over the break-in and their efforts to cover it up.

The acronym CREEP became popular due to the Watergate scandal. - Wikipedia

Was he a cold-war CIA pilot like Holt? Trained to sneak into Guatamala or other countries by parachute drop? A Boeing B-26 crewmemeber or pilot? Boeing is in Seatle and he recrognized McCord airbase.

During the flight from Portland to Seattle, Cooper demanded Mucklow remain by his side at all times.[7]: 150 She later said Cooper appeared familiar with the local terrain; while looking out the window, he remarked, "Looks like Tacoma down there", as the aircraft flew above it. When told the parachutes were coming from McChord Air Force Base, Cooper correctly noted McChord was only a twenty-minute drive from Sea-Tac.[7]: 156 She later described the hijacker's demeanor: "[Cooper] was not nervous. He seemed rather nice and he was not cruel or nasty."[20]: 174

https://cowboystatedaily.com/2024/11/23/who-is-d-b-cooper-new-evidence-may-crack-one-of-americas-greatest-mysteries/ Retired pilot, skydiver and YouTuber, Dan Gryder told Cowboy State Daily that he may have found the missing link after uncovering the modified military surplus bailout rig he believes was used by D.B. Cooper in the heist. It belonged to Richard Floyd McCoy II, and was carefully stored in his deceased mother’s storage stash until very recently.

McCoy has long been one of the FBI’s leading suspects after successfully pulling off an identical, but better-executed, hijacking in Utah just five months later.

“That rig is literally one in a billion,” Gryder said of the distinct parachute.

McCoy’s children, Chanté and Richard III, or “Rick,” agree with Gryder that they believe their father was D.B. Cooper, a secret that shrouded the family but wasn’t overtly discussed.

For years, they said, the family stayed mum out of fear of implicating their mother, Karen, whom they believe was complicit in both hijackings. Upon her death in 2020, they broke their silence to Gryder after being contacted by him off and on for years.

Gryder, who has been researching the case for more than 20 years, documented his investigation in a lengthy two-part series on his YouTube channel, “Probable Cause,” in 2021 and 2022, where he connects the dots and shows actual footage of him finding the parachute in an outbuilding on the McCoy family property in North Carolina in July 2022. https://cowboystatedaily.com/2024/11/23/who-is-d-b-cooper-new-evidence-may-crack-one-of-americas-greatest-mysteries/

In October, 1991, Chauncey Holt confessed to John Craig, Phillip Rogers and Gary Shaw about his role in the assassination of John F. Kennedy. Holt's story was undermined in 1992 when the Dallas Police Department revealed that the three tramps were Gus Abrams, John F. Gedney and Harold Doyle. Ray and Mary LaFontaine carried out their own research into this claim. They traced Doyle and Gedley who confirmed they were two of the tramps in the photograph. Gus Abrams was dead but his sister identified him as the third tramp in the photograph.

Chauncey Marvin Holt (October 23, 1921 - June 28, 1997) was an American known for claiming to be one of the "three tramps" photographed in Dealey Plaza. Eight days before his cancer death he went on a news television show and passed the documents he had proving is CIA operation in the Bermuda Dunes airport and Grace Ranch CIA experimental airbase were part of the Kennedy assasinaion. Charles Harelson Holt said was also a part of it. His book had been in planning perhaps since the assasion of JFK similar to Shawshak Redemption since Holt was forced into his role by J. Edgar Hoover who Holt bitterly resented and hated for forcing into CIA work though Holt was also an anticommunist patriot.

In 1995 Harrelson attempted to break out of Atlanta Federal Prison. He was recaptured and moved to Florence Administrative Maximum Penitentiary in Colorado. Woody Harrelson attempted to have his father's conviction overturned and secure a new trial. https://spartacus-educational.com/JFKharrelson.htm

The FIM-92 Stinger is an American man-portable air-defense system (MANPADS) that operates as an infrared homing surface-to-air missile (SAM). It can be adapted to fire from a wide variety of ground vehicles, and from helicopters and drones as the Air-to-Air Stinger (ATAS). It entered service in 1981 and is used by the militaries of the United States and 29 other countries. HMX, also called octogen, is a powerful and relatively insensitive nitroamine high explosive chemically related to RDX. The compound's name is the subject of much speculation, having been variously listed as High Melting Explosive, High-velocity Military Explosive, or High-Molecular-weight RDX.

How does laser guiding work? Laser guidance - Wikipedia The missile, bomb, etc. is launched or dropped somewhere near the target. When it is close enough for some of the reflected laser energy from the target to reach it, a laser seeker detects which direction this energy is coming from and adjusts the projectile trajectory towards the source.

The Stinger is launched by a small ejection motor that pushes it a safe distance from the operator before engaging the main two-stage solid-fuel sustainer, which accelerates it to a maximum speed of Mach 2.54 (1,930 mph; 864 m/s). The warhead contains 2.25 lb (1.02 kg) of HTA-3[5] (a mix of HMX, TNT, and aluminium powder) explosive with an impact fuze and a self-destruct timer that functions 17 seconds after launch.

FIM-92K: Variant of FIM-92J designed to use a vehicle datalink rather than the missile's own seeker for targeting. ADSM: Air Defense Suppression Missile: Cancelled experiment variant fitted with a passive radar seeker, designed to be used against radar wave transmitters.[citation needed] The program began in FY 1983[17] and a final report was issued 3 December 1986.

Was a flare or Stinger type missile laser guided to the center tank of TWA 800 by a P3 Orion tracking it?

Meanwhile, TWA chief 747 pilot Robert Terrell Stacey, who was participating in the official investigation as a TWA representative, became convinced that a reddish-brown substance observed on the backs of recovered passenger seats was suspicious, and possibly indicative of explosive residue or rocket fuel. Working with journalist James Sanders, and Sanders' wife Elizabeth, a TWA flight attendant, he removed items from the wreckage reconstruction site, specifically the samples of seat fabric as well as documents related to the investigation. In 1997 Sanders' published the book The Downing of TWA Flight 800, in which he proposed that TWA 800 had been downed by a missile, and that a government cover-up had taken place so as to not panic the public. Later, with the information provided by Sanders, the Riverside Press-Enterprise published a series of articles alleging that the substance was consistent with unexpended rocket fuel from a missile that struck TWA 800.

The NTSB determined the locations and appearance of the substance found on the seatbacks was consistent with adhesive used in the construction of the seats, and additional laboratory testing by NASA identified the substance as being consistent with those adhesives (results which Sanders disputed).

On December 5, 1997, federal prosecutors charged Sanders, his wife Elizabeth, and Stacey with theft of government property. The Sanders' defense attorney Bruce Maffeo described the prosecution as "extremely vindictive" and insisted that the couple had a First Amendment right to take the sample and crash-related documents to expose a cover-up. In April 1999, both were convicted of stealing evidence from civil aircraft wreckage, and were sentenced to probation (Stacey had previously pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor in the case). In 1999, James Sanders authored a second book, Altered Evidence.

T.W.A. Flight 800 Skeptics Paying a Heavy Price

Back in 1997, Mr. Sanders got two swatches of seat material from a disgruntled source inside the investigation of Trans World Airlines Flight 800 to test for rocket fuel. The test backed his theory that a Government missile brought the plane down, he reported, thereby enraging the Government, which prosecuted him and his wife, Liz, for aiding and abetting the removal of parts from a crash site, a law aimed at scavengers. Since then, the couple has lived a journalist's nightmare. They had to sell their house, their son had to leave college. Mrs. Sanders lost a beloved job.

Their case has what her attorney Jeremy Gutman calls "totalitarian" overtones: The Government has repeatedly characterized the couple's crime as putting out "misinformation" or, as NBC put it, "what the [F.B.I.] calls a plot to rewrite the history of T.W.A. 800."

IN JULY 1996, T.W.A. FLIGHT 800 crashed in the Atlantic Ocean off Long Island, killing all 230 aboard. Jim Sanders, then a 51-year-old former cop who'd published books on conservative causes, was a natural to write about it. His wife, Elizabeth, was a longtime

T.W.A. employee who knew that many at the airline had doubts about the official investigation.,

Mrs. Sanders called Terrell Stacey, a top T.W.A. pilot who had flown the plane the day before it crashed and was a member of the National Transportation Safety Board investigation. Captain Stacey was disturbed. He knew that a veteran pilot who had witnessed the crash from the air had been warned not to use the word "missile" to describe what he saw to the press. He felt that the F.B.I. was not sharing information and had lagged in testing a suspicious red residue on some seats.

The author and pilot met secretly, and in January 1997 Captain Stacey removed two two-inch swatches of foam from two seats and sent them by Federal Express to the journalist at his Virginia home. Mr. Sanders said he felt he was acting legally. All he wanted were "scrapings." There was plenty of material left.

He had one strip tested at a California lab. He said the test revealed high percentages of magnesium and calcium, consistent with solid rocket fuel, and he shared the findings with an old friend, David Hendrix. A seasoned reporter at the Riverside, Calif., Press-Enterprise , Mr. Hendrix had investigated T.W.A. 800 for months for a simple reason: The Government had misled him when it said initially that no military assets were near the crash. On March 10, 1997, the Press-Enterprise bannered Mr. Sanders' news on the front page.

The F.B.I. was enraged. It called Mr. Hendrix and summoned the Sanderses, threatening to indict the couple if they didn't reveal the name of the source Mr. Sanders called Hangar Man. In the noblest journalistic tradition, the Sanderses refused. Mr. Sanders feared that the F.B.I. would raid his house and seize the second sample. He sent it on to the Press-Enterprise to preserve it for a corroborative test.

The newspaper felt lonely. Its bombshell story had been all but ignored by the mainstream press. “James Kallstrom [the F.B.I. chief in New York] finally called us back the day before the story ran and said, ‘I can tell you that it is not traces of missile fuel,'” said Mel Opotowsky, former managing editor. “‘What is it then?’ we said. ‘I can’t tell you,’ he said. Then the next day we published our story, and he and his lieutenants said, ‘It was glue.’ Why didn’t he tell us that before? He didn’t even try, off the record. I don’t trust that man.” https://observer.com/2000/02/twa-flight-800-skeptics-paying-a-heavy-price/

Over the next several months, the Grumman hangar seemed to bulge with the staggering volume of recovered plane parts. What had been an empty cavernous building, steadily morphed into a crazy-quilt of twisted debris - all bearing the unmistakable signatures of sudden violence and death. Metal and plastic pieces - both large and small - airplane tires and landing gears mixed with thousands of miles of wires and cables strung out in long rows or bundled like plates of spaghetti began filling the entire floor space.

It was a jigsaw puzzle of staggering dimension which ASAC Ken Maxwell and dozens of other Agents working around the clock seven days a week, began to methodically reassemble. On-site forensic experts from the FBI Laboratory, working with Ken and his team, carefully examined every item - often sending questionable pieces to Washington for more detailed examination - all with negative results. We did, however, learn one thing for certain. The center fuel tank exploded. But we didn’t know why. Was it a bomb?

Was there an electrical/mechanical failure? Did a missile hit the tank?

One anxious moment came in August, when laboratory technicians found traces of PETN and RDX, chemicals used in plastic explosives, on pieces of two-sided tape that attached carpet tile squares to the floor near Row 22/23 directly over the center fuel tank. Still, despite the uniqueness of this new evidence, there was insufficient proof of a bomb in that particular section of the aircraft. But why was it there? Then there were the more than 200 eyewitness reports of something in the sky, streaking in an upward direction near the aircraft. Some believed it was a missile. For the next year, while investigators tracked down and interviewed every eyewitness and scientists analyzed every plane part for telltale signs of a missile strike, Bureau and military ballistics experts worked feverishly to determine if a land-based projectile could have taken down the plane.

A vast assortment of shoulder-fired missiles were shot at graveyard airframes at the Navy's ballistic testing center at China Lake, CA. The idea was to create a record of warhead strike patterns for identifying unusual damage on the TWA 800 fuselage. Along the way, we were surprised to learn that no missile damage database existed in the FBI or anywhere else in the world. The exercise, however, produced one crucial conclusion. No shoulder-fired projectile, in any arsenal in the world, had the range to engage the aircraft from the Long Island shoreline. If (a big "if ") a missile had struck the aircraft, then the killer would have had to have fired the shot from a boat in the ocean directly under the plane as it moved through the sky at hundreds of miles an hour in a easterly direction more than two and a half miles above the earth. Then, what did those witnesses see that evening? https://fbistudies.com/wp-content/uploads/2016/10/FBI-Grapevine-TWA-Flight-800.pdf

On December 23, 1975, Richard Skeffington Welch, the Chief of Station (COS) for the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) in Athens, Greece, was assassinated outside his home by the Revolutionary Organization 17 November (17N). The assassination led to the Intelligence Identities Protection Act, which makes it illegal to identify or expose officers who work in covert roles but have not been officially acknowledged by the U.S. government.

Welch's assassination was also used by the CIA to try to discredit Senator Frank Church and the Church Committee, the first congressional investigation of the CIA. The authorities initially thought the assassination was the result of internal conflicts in the American services or a hoax, but a secret political group later claimed responsibility. The group, calling itself the Committee of Greeks and Greek Americans, said it assassinated Welch to show that the Greek government and military were under the control of U.S. imperialism.

On November 18, 1978, Congressman Leo Ryan was hit by gunfire at the Port Kaituma, Guyana, airstrip. He was investigating the CIA and trying to rain it in including activities the CIA was sponsoring at the People's Temple and CIA activities in Folsom Prison.

United Air Lines Flight 553 was a scheduled flight from Washington National Airport to Omaha, Nebraska, via Chicago Midway International Airport. On December 8, 1972, the Boeing 737-222 serving the flight, City of Lincoln, registration N9031U, crashed while approaching Midway Airport.

In 1973, the CIA destroyed most of its classified records on its MKULTRA program, which involved secret human experimentation. The destruction was ordered by then-CIA Director Richard Helms. The Rockefeller Commission and the Church Committee's investigations into MKULTRA relied on the few documents that survived and on the testimony of participants. The destruction made it difficult for investigators to understand the program, which included more than 150 subprojects funded by the CIA.

The Watergate scandal was a major political controversy in the United States during the presidency of Richard Nixon from 1972 to 1974, ultimately resulting in Nixon's resignation. Wikipedia

Of special interest to Ryan was the complex story behind the 1974 kidnapping of publishing heiress Patricia Hearst by the group that called itself the Symbionese Liberation Army.

In September 1978, Ryan wrote to CIA Director Stansfield Turner seeking information about CIA experiments. On September 27, 1978, less than two months before the Guyana tragedy, Ryan wrote to then CIA Director Stansfield Turner. Noting that he had been conducting a “personal investigation of the Patricia Hearst case,” Ryan asked Turner to provide information “regarding CIA experiments using prisoners at the California medical facility at Vacaville.”

In 1974, Senator Harold Hughes joined Ryan in co-sponsoring legislation that increased oversight of CIA covert operations.

On the morning of February 4, 1974, a 19-year-old college student named Patty Hearst was kidnapped from her apartment in Berkeley, California by a group of armed men and women. This group of radical anarchist and extremist men and women from different walks of life called themselves the Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA). The SLA was attempting to instigate a guerrilla war against the U.S. government and had already shot two Oakland school officials, killing one and wounding the

The Buried Agenda of Leo Ryan by Tom Whittle

On October 22, 1868, Congressman James Hinds was struck in the back by a shotgun blast while riding to a political event in Monroe County, Arkansas.

An advocate for the rights of former slaves, Hinds died at the site, but not before identifying the gunman, George Clark, a member of the Ku Klux Klan. As reported by multiple sources, Clark was neither arrested nor prosecuted for the murder. Hinds became the first U.S. congressman to be assassinated in office.

One hundred and ten years later, on November 18, 1978, Congressman Leo Ryan was hit by gunfire at the Port Kaituma, Guyana, airstrip.

[image]

To this day, the assailants that closed in on Ryan's fallen body and riddled it with rifle and shotgun blasts have not been conclusively identified, although as many as a dozen or so "possibles" have been named in connection with the attack. And so, as in the case of Congressman Hinds, the killers of Congressman Ryan escaped accountability from any court of law.

Media coverage in the wake of the tragedy customarily featured Ryan in some prominent manner, often crediting his courage and leadership on vital issues of the day.

In a United Press International article on November 20, 1978, for example, Congressman Lester Wolff paid tribute to Ryan as exemplifying a “whole new breed of investigative congressmen … who go out to see things for themselves.”

Today, however, his name and, in particular, his interests can be hard to find in stories about the tragedy. An extensive November 2018 Time article posted on the net, for example, fails to mention Ryan; his name is relegated to a caption. And that caption shows not Ryan but the remains of some of those who died at Jonestown itself.

Who was Leo Ryan? The Time feature identifies him as “Congressman,” saying nothing about the man himself. Setting aside Peoples Temple, what had occupied the attention of this “investigative congressman”? Such questions are rarely asked today.

His record can be found by anyone willing to look beyond superficial “retrospectives” about Jonestown.

[image]

A few short years before the tragedy, for example, he and Senator Harold Hughes of Iowa co-authored legislation that set limits on intelligence agency autonomy.

As described by former CIA officer John Stockwell in his 1978 book, In Search of Enemies:

> The Hughes-Ryan Amendment to the National Assistance Act of 1974 required that no funds be expended by or on behalf of the CIA for operations abroad, other than activities designed to obtain necessary intelligence, unless two conditions are met: (a) the president must make a finding that such operation is important to the national security of the United States; and (b) the president must report in a timely fashion a description of such operation and its scope to congressional committees.

For Leo Ryan, the MK ULTRA documents and the work of John Marks and other researchers would have provided keys to unlock areas of psychiatric experimentation and covert activities he had been seeking to explore.

And there was a need for further exploration. As Marks wrote, despite the release of the documents, “the final result is not the whole story of the CIA’s attack on the mind. Only a few insiders could have written that, and they choose to remain silent. I have done the best I can to make the book as accurate as possible, but I have been hampered by the refusal of most of the principal characters to be interviewed and by the CIA’s destruction in 1973 of many of the key documents.”

Jed Johnson (December 30, 1948 - July 17, 1996) was an American interior designer and film director. The New York Times hailed Johnson as "one of the most celebrated interior designers of our time."

Initially hired as a janitor at artist Andy Warhol's Factory, Johnson moved in with Warhol after he was shot to help him recuperate, and they subsequently had a romantic relationship for 12 years.[2] Johnson rose through the ranks at The Factory from assisting director Paul Morrissey to directing a film on his own. He edited several films, including Trash (1970), Heat (1972), and Blood for Dracula (1974), and he directed the film Bad (1977) before starting a decorating business. Johnson was a member of the Andy Warhol Art Authentication Board following Warhol's death.

Johnson was known for his signature American Empire style when decorating. His clients included Mick Jagger, Pierre Bergé, Yves Saint Laurent, and Barbra Streisand. Johnson had become one of the most acclaimed interior designers when he was killed in a plane crash aboard TWA Flight 800 in 1996.[3] He was posthumously inducted into the Interior Design Hall of Fame and Architectural Digest named him as one of "The World's 20 Greatest Designers of All Time."

The Andy Warhol Art Authentication Board, Inc. was a private corporation that certified the authenticity of works by the artist, Andy Warhol, from 1995 to 2012.

The organization was created in 1995 in association with The Andy Warhol Foundation for the Visual Arts.

The Board, based in New York City, consisted of six members, including art historians, curators and those who personally knew Warhol and his work. Board members included Warhol's studio manager Vincent Fremont, Warhol's former lover, interior designer Jed Johnson, art curator David Whitney, and Warhol experts George Frei, Neil Printz, and Sally King-Nero.[2][3] After Johnson was killed in 1996, he was replaced by art historian Robert Rosenblum.

The four-year NTSB investigation of TWA Flight 800 concluded with the approval of the Aircraft Accident Report on August 23, 2000, ending the most extensive, complex, and costly air disaster investigation in U.S. history at that time.[7] [8] The report's conclusion was that the probable cause of the accident was the explosion of flammable fuel vapors in the center fuel tank. This was part of the reason a heat seeking missile was discounted as theory but adds into the theory of fuel tank spillage and a canvass suitcase full of Semtex.

TWA Flight 800 had a passenger connected to the inside story of MK-Ultra and Nixon and Executive Action. That person was Jed Johnson. That flight was delayed for rewiring, a passenger and baggage mismatch, and disabling due to false positives fuel overflow computer. PETN and RDX were found on carpet fiber and canvass and I suggest the suitcase may have dispersed explosive into the atmosphere to be ignited by flares and that would ignite leaking wind fuel top. The Air Conditioner system may be such as to push passenger consumer breathable air into the outdoors of the fuselage as more oxygenated air is introduced to the pressurized cabin.

The importance of the 1950's and Anti-Communism led by William Randolph Hearst in his castle are important. George Hearst moved to California to profit from the Gold Rush in California and worldwide and tied himself in with the richest of global world industrilist like J.P. Morgan and backed Congressman Nixon who created the CIA and worked the the Marshall Plan then implimented it under the NSC as V.P. After that Hearst backed V.P. Nixon over Senator Kennedy but Kennedy won. In that time frame Patty Heart and Brigid Berlin were artists under Andy Warhol and Jed Johnson taking on and talking about that history as insiders. Patty Hearst resentful of the wealth gained from exploitation of colonies would after the explosion of reporting and cover-ups related to Nixon, J. Edgar Hoover, and the CIA including with King Edward VIII operating in Bermuda with the CIA to control Guatemala and British-American subversion and overthrow will take up after the deceased Che. Although man CIA documents have been destroyed about the CIA activities, many exist and are redacted, or released to little fanfare by Chauncey Holt. What differed with Jed Johnson and Warhol and Patty Hearst and Brigid Berlin was the oral history in their families and family letters conserved by them and the inside story living as their memories and memorabilia if you can call Hearst Castle memorabilia.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Semi-automatic_command_to_line_of_sight

Command guidance is a type of missile guidance in which a ground station or aircraft relay signals to a guided missile via radio control or through a wire connecting the missile to the launcher and tell the missile where to steer to intercept its target. This control may also command the missile to detonate, even if the missile has a fuze.

Semi-automatic command to line of sight (SACLOS) is a method of missile command guidance.[1] In SACLOS, the operator must continually point a sighting device at the target while the missile is in flight. Electronics in the sighting device and/or the missile then guide it to the target.

Many SACLOS weapons are based on an infrared seeker aligned with the operator's gunsight or sighting telescope. The seeker tracks the missile, either the hot exhaust from its rocket motor or flares attached to the missile airframe, and measures the angle between the missile and the centerline of the operator's sights. This signal is sent to the missile, often using thin metal wires or a radio link, which causes it to steer back toward the center of the line-of-sight. Common examples of these weapons include the BGM-71 TOW wire-guided anti-tank guided missile (ATGM) and the Rapier radio-command surface-to-air missile (SAM).

CIA: Executive Action

The Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) was established in September 1947. Its role was to evaluate intelligence reports and coordinate the intelligence activities of the various government departments in the interest of national security. Richard Bissell joined the CIA and was placed in charge of the Directorate for Plans, an organization instructed to conduct covert anti-Communist operations around the world. His deputy was Richard Helms, who had successfully mounted a mount a massive convert campaign against the Communist Party during the post-war elections in Italy.

The Directorate for Plans was responsible for what became known as the CIA's Black Operations. This involved a policy that was later to become known as Executive Action (a plan to remove unfriendly foreign leaders from power). This including a coup d'état that overthrew the Guatemalan government of Jacobo Arbenz in 1954 after he introduced land reforms and nationalized the United Fruit Company.

Other political leaders deposed by Executive Action included Patrice Lumumba of the Congo, the Dominican Republic dictator Rafael Trujillo, General Abd al-Karim Kassem of Iraq and Ngo Dinh Diem, the leader of South Vietnam. However, his main target was Fidel Castro who had established a socialist government in Cuba.

In March I960, President Dwight Eisenhower of the United States approved a CIA plan to overthrow Castro. The plan involved a budget of $13 million to train "a paramilitary force outside Cuba for guerrilla action." The strategy was organised by Bissell and Helms. An estimated 400 CIA officers were employed full-time to carry out what became known as Operation Mongoose.

Sidney Gottlieb of the CIA Technical Services Division was asked to come up with proposals that would undermine Castro's popularity with the Cuban people. Plans included a scheme to spray a television studio in which he was about to appear with an hallucinogenic drug and contaminating his shoes with thallium which they believed would cause the hair in his beard to fall out.

These schemes were rejected and instead Bissell decided to arrange the assassination of Fidel Castro. In September 1960, Richard Bissell and Allen W. Dulles, the director of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), initiated talks with two leading figures of the Mafia, Johnny Roselli and Sam Giancana. Later, other crime bosses such as Carlos Marcello, Santos Trafficante and Meyer Lansky became involved in this plot against Castro.

Robert Maheu [TWA and Howard Huges], a veteran of CIA counter-espionage activities, was instructed to offer the Mafia $150,000 to kill Fidel Castro. The advantage of employing the Mafia for this work is that it provided CIA with a credible cover story. The Mafia were known to be angry with Castro for closing down their profitable brothels and casinos in Cuba. If the assassins were killed or captured the media would accept that the Mafia were working on their own.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation had to be brought into this plan as part of the deal involved protection against investigations against the Mafia in the United States. Castro was later to complain that there were twenty ClA-sponsered attempts on his life. Eventually Johnny Roselli and his friends became convinced that the Cuban revolution could not be reversed by simply removing its leader. However, they continued to play along with this CIA plot in order to prevent them being prosecuted for criminal offences committed in the United States.

When John F. Kennedy replaced Dwight Eisenhower as president of the United States he was told about the CIA plan to invade Cuba. Kennedy had doubts about the venture but he was afraid he would be seen as soft on communism if he refused permission for it to go ahead. Kennedy's advisers convinced him that Fidel Castro was an unpopular leader and that once the invasion started the Cuban people would support the ClA-trained forces.

On April 14, 1961, B-26 [reconditioned from Palm Springs area scrapyards and provided by Prouty to the CIA] planes began bombing Cuba's airfields. After the raids Cuba was left with only eight planes and seven pilots. Two days later five merchant ships carrying 1,400 Cuban exiles arrived at the Bay of Pigs. The attack was a total failure. Two of the ships were sunk, including the ship that was carrying most of the supplies. Two of the planes that were attempting to give air-cover were also shot down. Within seventy-two hours all the invading troops had been killed, wounded or had surrendered.

In February, 1962, the FBI became aware of this CIA assassination plot on Fidel Castro. When Robert Kennedy, U.S. Attorney General, found out about these plots in Febuary 1962, he was furious. He turned against Richard Helms for not telling him of the plots, and for using the same gangsters he was trying to prosecute. However, Kennedy did not bring an end to the operation. Instead he insisted that he was kept informed about the development of the project.

In April 1962, William Harvey took control of the ZR/RIFLE project. He told Johnny Roselli that Santos Trafficante and Sam Giancana had to cease involvement in the project to kill Castro. Ted Shackley, the new head of JM WAVE, also began to play a more important role in planning the assassination. Eventually Johnny Roselli and his friends became convinced that the Cuban revolution could not be reversed by simply removing its leader. However, they continued to play along with this CIA plot in order to prevent them being prosecuted for criminal offences committed in the United States.

In February, 1963, William Harvey was removed as head of the ZR/RIFLE project. Harvey was now sent to Italy where he became Chief of Station in Rome. Harvey was convinced that Robert Kennedy had been responsible for his demotion. A friend of Harvey's said that he "hated Bobby Kennedy's guts with a purple passion".

On 22nd November, 1963, President John F. Kennedy was assassinated. Rumours began to circulate that gang bosses such as Johnny Roselli, Santos Trafficante, Carlos

Marcello and Sam Giancana, were involved in the crime. Some CIA agents such as David Atlee Phillips, William Harvey and David Morales were also implicated in this conspiracy. - https://spartacus-educational.com/JFKexecutiveA.htm

AI Overview

Pentaerythritol tetranitrate (PETN) and hexahydro-1,3,5-trinitro-1,3,5-triazine (RDX) are both explosives that are often used in combination:

PETN. In its pure form, PETN is too sensitive to friction and impact, so it's usually mixed with plasticized nitrocellulose or synthetic rubber. PETN is a key ingredient in Semtex, a plastic explosive that's also made with RDX. PETN is also used as a weapon in terrorist bombings because it's powerful, can be molded into unusual shapes, and is hard to detect with conventional equipment.

RDX is a major component of many polymer-bonded explosives (PBX), which typically contain RDX and at least 13 different polymer binders. RDX is also used in plastic explosives, which have been used as explosive fill in almost all types of munition compounds. For example, the plasticized form of RDX, composition C-4, contains 91% RDX, 2.1% polyisobutylene, 1.6% motor oil, and 5.3% 2-ethylhexyl sebacate.

Semtex is a general-purpose plastic explosive containing RDX and PETN.[1] It is used in commercial blasting, demolition, and in certain military applications.On 25 May 1997, Bohumil Šole, a scientist who claimed to have been involved with inventing Semtex, committed suicide at a spa in Jeseník by blowing himself up with explosives. Šole, 63, was being treated there for psychological problems. It was unclear what explosives were used. Twenty other people were hurt in the explosion, while six were seriously injured. According to the manufacturer, Explosia, he was not a member of the team that developed the explosive in the 1960s.

Aspects of conspiracy theories Explosive residues

As wreckage was recovered, preliminary testing indicated the presence of explosive residue on three samples of material from three separate locations of the recovered airplane wreckage (described by the FBI as a piece of canvas-like material and two pieces of a floor panel).[3]: 118 These samples were submitted to the FBI's laboratory in Washington, D.C., which determined that one sample contained traces of cyclotrimethylenetrinitramine (RDX), another nitroglycerin, and the third a combination of RDX and pentaerythritol tetranitrate (PETN);[3]: 118 these findings received much media attention at the time.[7][8] While investigators from the FBI viewed these positive tests as strong indications of a criminal act, the NTSB was more cautious, noting the lack of any patterns on the recovered wreckage characteristic of an explosion.

Ultimately, the NTSB was unable to determine the exact source of explosive residues found on the wreckage. Some of the possibilities considered were contamination from the aircraft's use in 1991 transporting troops during the Gulf War or its possible use in a dog-training explosive detection exercise about one month before the accident;[3]: 258-259 however, the lack of any other corroborating evidence associated with a high-energy explosion led the NTSB to conclude that "the in-flight breakup of TWA flight 800 was not initiated by a bomb or missile strike [because metal shell fragmets holes were not found]". https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/TWA_Flight_800_conspiracy_theories Jeseník remained with the Austrian Empire and the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy until World War I and the creation of Czechoslovakia in 1918. According to the Austrian administration census of 1910 the town had 6,859 inhabitants, with 6,588 (99.5%) were speaking German, 16 Czech and 13 Polish. Jews were not allowed to declare Yiddish, most of them thus declared German. Most populous religious groups were Roman Catholics with 6,552 (95.5%), followed by Protestants with 208 (3%) and the Jews with 83 (1.2%).

In 1938, Jeseník was ceded to Nazi Germany as a result of the Munich Agreement. It was administered as a part of Reichsgau Sudetenland. During World War II, the German occupiers operated several forced labour subcamps of the Stalag VIII-B/344 prisoner-of-war camp in the town.[7] The town was restored to Czechoslovakia after the defeat of Nazi Germany in World War II in 1945. Two unlikely fuel events occurred on TWA 800. A flare with ignition materials flew towards the plane moments before the plane blew up and moments before the plane blew up the pilot conversation indicated strange fuel system control readings. I am a lay person reading the technical document but the Volumetric Shut Off Computer on the 747 is included in this press kit. The basic idea is that if a tank is sensed to be fuel as to its volume or predicted volume based on flow rates into the tank the fuel system computer will sht the fueling valve off to prevent over-filling. Fuel moves into the tanks, between the tanks and into the engines and also possibly into atmospheric dumps at pilot commands and automated systems. The fuel system can also return fuel to fuel trucks after a flight. A fuse was pulled on this VSOC that could have allowed a fuel flow into a fuel component passed its fuel handling capacity resulting in spilled fuel.

TWA 800 was scheduled to depart JFK for Charles de Gaulle Airport around 7:00 p.m., but the flight was delayed until 8:02 p.m. by a disabled piece of ground equipment and a passenger/baggage mismatch. After the owner of the baggage in question was confirmed to be on board, the flight crew prepared for departure, and the aircraft pushed back from Gate 27 at the TWA Flight Center. The flight crew started the engines at 8:04 p.m. However, because of the previous maintenance undertaken on engine No. 3, the flight crew only started engines No. 1, No. 2, and No. 4. Engine No. 3 was started 10 minutes later at 8:14 p.m. Taxi and takeoff proceeded uneventfully.

The ground-maintenance crew locked out the thrust reverser for engine No. 3 (treated as a minimum equipment list item) because of technical problems with the thrust reverser sensors during the landing of TWA 881 at JFK, before Flight 800's departure. Additionally, severed cables for the engine No. 3 thrust reverser were replaced. During refueling of the aircraft, the volumetric shutoff (VSO) control was believed to have been triggered before the tanks were full. To continue the pressure fueling, a TWA mechanic overrode the automatic VSO by pulling the volumetric fuse and an overflow circuit breaker. Maintenance records indicate that the aircraft had numerous VSO-related maintenance writeups in the weeks before the accident.

The term New Frontier was used by Democratic presidential candidate John F. Kennedy in his acceptance speech, delivered July 15, in the 1960 United States presidential election to the Democratic National Convention at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum as the Democratic slogan to inspire America to support him. The phrase developed into a label for his administration's domestic and foreign programs.

In the words of Robert D. Marcus: "Kennedy entered office with ambitions to eradicate poverty and to raise America's eyes to the stars through the space program."

Origin

Kennedy proclaimed in his speech:

> We stand today on the edge of a New Frontier—the frontier of the 1960s, the frontier of unknown opportunities and perils, the frontier of unfilled hopes and unfilled threats. ... The pioneers gave up their safety, their comfort, and sometimes their lives to build our new west. They were determined to make the new world strong and free - an example to the world. ... Some would say that those struggles are all over, that > all the horizons have been explored, that all the battles have been won. That there is no longer an American frontier. ... And we stand today on the edge of a new frontier, the frontier of unknown opportunities and perils. ... Beyond that frontier are uncharted areas of science and space, unsolved problems of peace and war, unconquered problems of ignorance and prejudice, unanswered questions of poverty and surplus. ... I'm asking each of you to be pioneers towards that New Frontier. My call is to the young in heart, regardless of age. ... Can we carry through in an age where we will witness not only new breakthroughs in weapons of destruction, but also a race for mastery of the sky and the rain, the ocean and the tides, the far side of space, and the inside of men's minds? ... All mankind waits upon our decision. A whole world waits to see what we shall do. And we cannot fail that trust, and we cannot fail to try.

In June 1953, instead of attending the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II, his niece, in London, Edward and Wallis watched the ceremony on television in Paris. Edward said that it was contrary to precedent for a sovereign or former sovereign to attend any coronation of another. He was paid to write articles on the ceremony for the Sunday Express and Woman's Home Companion, as well as a short book, The Crown and the People, 1902–1953.

In 1955, the couple visited President Dwight D. Eisenhower at the White House. The couple appeared on Edward R. Murrow's television-interview show Person to Person in 1956, and in a 50-minute BBC television interview in 1970. On 4 April of that year President Richard Nixon invited them as guests of honour to a dinner at the White House with Chief Justice Warren E. Burger 11th United States Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Division In office May 1, 1953 – April 14, 1956, Charles Lindbergh, Alice Roosevelt Longworth, Arnold Palmer, George H. W. Bush, and Frank Borman.

[Frank Borman is an interesting figure in history. The future astsronuat started USAF flying in Tuscon Arizona where in practive bombings he suffered a ruptured eardrum. This is the Tuscon Arizona area of Grace Ranch that according to Holt was becoming a CIA secret airbase to prep planes for CIA usage in foreign wars such as Guatamala using planes from the boneyards, etc.,]

Borman chose to be commissioned as a second lieutenant in the United States Air Force (USAF) on June 2, 1950. Before the United States Air Force Academy was built, the USAF was authorized to accept up to a quarter of each West Point graduating class. So that USAF officers graduating from West Point had equal seniority with those graduating from the United States Naval Academy, the entire class was commissioned four days ahead of their graduation. Borman graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree on June 6, 1950, ranked eighth in his class of 670.

Borman drove back to Tucson with his parents in his brand-new Oldsmobile 88 for the traditional sixty-day furlough after graduation. He had split up with Susan while he was at West Point, but had since reconsidered. She had earned a dental hygiene degree at the University of Pennsylvania, and was planning to commence a liberal arts degree at the University of Arizona. He persuaded her to see him again, and proposed to her. She accepted, and they were married on July 20, 1950, at St. Philip's in the Hills Episcopal Church in Tucson.

Air Force

After a brief honeymoon in Phoenix, Arizona, Borman reported to Perrin Air Force Base in Texas for basic flight training in a North American T-6 Texan in August 1950. The top students in the class had the privilege of choosing which branch of flying they would pursue; Borman elected to become a fighter pilot. He was therefore sent to Williams Air Force Base, near Phoenix, in February 1951 for advanced training, initially in the North American T-28 Trojan, and then the F-80 jet fighter. Fighter pilots were being sent to Korea, where the Korean War had broken out the year before. He asked for, and was assigned to, Luke Air Force Base near Phoenix—Susan was eight months pregnant—but at the last minute his orders were changed to Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada. There, he practiced aerial bombing and gunnery. His first child, a son called Frederick Pearce, was born there in October. Borman received his pilot wings on December 4, 1951.

The royal family never fully accepted the Duchess. Queen Mary refused to receive her formally. However, Edward sometimes met his mother and his brother, George VI; he attended George's funeral in 1952. Mary remained angry with Edward and indignant over his marriage to Wallis: "To give up all this for that", she said. In 1965, the Duke and Duchess returned to London. They were visited by his niece Elizabeth II, his sister-in-law Princess Marina, Duchess of Kent, and his sister Mary, Princess Royal and Countess of Harewood. A week later, the Princess Royal died, and they attended her memorial service. In 1966 Edward gave the journalist Georg Stefan Troller a TV interview in German; he answered questions about his abdication. In 1967, the Duke and Duchess joined the royal family for the centenary of Queen Mary's birth. The last royal ceremony Edward attended was the funeral of Princess Marina in 1968. He declined an invitation from Elizabeth II to attend the investiture of Charles, Prince of Wales, in 1969, replying that Charles would not want his "aged great-uncle" there.

In the 1960s, Edward's health deteriorated. Michael E. DeBakey operated on him in Houston for an aneurysm of the abdominal aorta in December 1964, and Sir Stewart Duke-Elder treated a detached retina in his left eye in February 1965. In late 1971, Edward, who was a smoker from an early age, was diagnosed with throat cancer and underwent cobalt therapy. On 18 May 1972, Queen Elizabeth II visited the Duke and Duchess of Windsor while on a state visit to France; she spoke with Edward for fifteen minutes, but only Wallis appeared with the royal party for a photocall as Edward was too ill.

Following the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and German declaration of war against the U.S., Lindbergh avidly supported the American war effort but was rejected for active duty, as Roosevelt refused to restore his colonel's commission. Instead he flew 50 combat missions in the Pacific Theater as a civilian consultant and was unofficially credited with shooting down an enemy aircraft. In 1954, President Dwight Eisenhower restored his commission and promoted him to brigadier general in the U.S. Air Force Reserve.

[Overalap with Duke Edward?] While in Europe, Charles Lindberg was invited to evaluate the German Air Force. Impressed with both the German military and the German people, Charles publicly praised Hitler as a “great man” and expressed his intention to move his family to Berlin. Although he found certain aspects of a totalitarian state appealing, the Lindberghs returned to the United States in the spring of 1939, having come to the conclusion that a European war was inevitable. Upon his return to the United States, Charles became the spokesman for America First, an isolationist organization which advocated neutrality. In this capacity, he made many public pronouncements against American involvement, invoking the ire of the Roosevelt administration. Having been labeled both a defeatist and a traitor by ranking administration officials, including the President himself, Charles resigned from the Army Air Corps Reserve. http://law2.umkc.edu/faculty/projects/ftrials/hauptmann/clindbergh.html

Following the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, Charles attempted to re-enter the Army Air Corps. His effort was rebuffed by the Roosevelt administration. Nonetheless, he was sent to the South Pacific theatre as a test pilot. Once there, he not only tested aircraft for the military and instructed pilots on how to increase the range of their aircraft, but he flew combat missions as well, winning the praise of General Douglas MacArthur. In the Fall of 1944, he returned home to New Jersey. Less than a year later, however, the U.S. Navy called upon him to travel to Germany to assess German aeronautical advancements. After the war, Charles served both the U.S. Air Force and Pan-American Airlines as an aviation consultant.

In 1953, Charles completed a memoir of his historic transatlantic flight. For the work, titled simply “The Spirit of St. Louis,” Charles received the Pulitzer Prize. The following year, in 1954, he was recommissioned in the U.S. Air Force and appointed to the rank of Brigadier General by President Eisenhower.

auctioneer - EDWARD VIII Edward signed this typed letter to Richard E. Berlin, CEO of the Hearst Corporation, in 1962. He wrote it to thank Berlin for a gift of cigars - "my favorites" - and to let Berlin know his plans for the winter. Typed letter signed: "Edward", 1p, 7¼x10½. On stationery from one of the Windsor's homes at 4, Route du Champ d'Entrainement, Bois de Boulogne, Paris. Paris, France, 1962 October 12. Addressed to Richard E. Berlin, New York City.

Edward wrote this letter to thank Berlin, who succeeded William Randolph Hearst as CEO of the Hearst Corporation from 1943 to 1973, for a gift of Laranaga Cetros clarisimos cigars - "my favorites". He added that he and his wife, Wallis Simpson, intended to spend the winter in Paris, "except maybe for another trip to Spain after New Year's. Then, we look forward to going to America in the late Spring and to seeing you and Honey again. One can only hope that the 'New Frontiersmen' will not have completely wrecked the economy by then." Honey was Berlin's wife. Relations between Edward and the British royal family were still what could be diplomatically called "strained" when Edward wrote this letter.

He wouldn't be invited to attend an official public ceremony with them for another five years. In 1930, 36-year-old Edward (1894-1972), then the Prince of Wales and already known for having a number of affairs, met and fell in love with Simpson(1896-1986), a married American woman. After he succeeded his father, King George V, on January 20, 1936, concern about his private life grew in the Cabinet, especially over his association with Mrs. Simpson. Her status as a then two-time American divorcée was unacceptable to many as a potential Queen. On December 10, 1936, King Edward VIII executed the Instrument of Abdication.

He was never crowned; his reign lasted 325 days. Following his abdication, Edward (his title reverting for a few hours to "His Royal Highness The Prince Edward" before his brother created him "Duke of Windsor" the following morning) broadcast a message to the people from Windsor Castle. His broadcast was moderate in tone, telling his people, in part: "But you must believe me when I tell you that I have found it impossible to carry the heavy burden of responsibility and to discharge my duties as King as I would wish to do without the help and support of the woman I love." In 1937, Edward married Wallis Simpson. Edward and Wallis, now the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, settled in France and were married for 35 years. Lightly toned and creased. Red pencil notations touch typescript but not signature. Staple holes near upper left corner. Folded twice and unfolded. Otherwise, fine condition.

An overtly imperialist Hearst Family and its manager Richard Berlin supported colonialism in Latin America with J.P. Morgan and others and in 1960 backed V.P. Nixon who ran imperialism under Eisenhower over JFK. JFK won. Eventually Nixon would become President and August 8, 1974 resigned after being impeached by Hosue of Representative and caught in the Watergate burglary. It may related back to the JFK assassination. The Checkers Speech may have been Hearst in the background getting Nixon into the V.P. position under Eisenhower. It was this early 1970's period Patty Hearst converted to a voluntary SLA member. after speing time with Warhol and Jed Johnson at Interviews Magazine. #TWA800 and UAL553 could cover this up.

1949 to 1964 are key years. In 1949 Averell Harriman and others met to form a plan as Mao took over China and post WWII planning was underway largely using Japan as the base for overt and covert operations. The newly crowned QEII was coronated in the 1951-1952 years in practice and in reality. Congressman Nixon in 1946 turned into V.P. Nixon elected in 1952 and sworn in during 1953 with President Eisenhower and Guatemala, Latin America, Cuba and Iran and overthrows began.

Heast in the 1960 general election would hack V.P. Nixon over Senator Kennedy. Kennedy would win but (like with RFK) be assasiated creatig a large sense of betrayal inside the USA and around the world Patty Hearst and the world looked a the CIA history and resented it.

Oddly enough this has much to do with Patty Hearst who was a descendant of George Hearst, George Hearst a Gilded Age (1860's on) mining or rail family and a perfect example of the Gilded Age wealth from colonialism at least in part from colonialism. There is some statistically unexpected interplay between February 20th births and November 18/19th births as well. Patty Hearst born February 22 will fight as Tania after Tania's death. Both fought asa global movement against J.P Morgan, Allen Dulles and United Fruit Company, etc.,

Patty Heart will join the SLA as Tania.

Hearst was a major force behind the anticommunist crusade that was underway for years before McCarthy arrived on the scene.

William Randolph Hearst was nearly on his deathbed on February 9, 1950 when a little known junior senator from Wisconsin named Joseph McCarthy announced during a routine political speech to a group of Republican women in Wheeling, West Virginia, that he held in his hand a list of 205 Communists in the State Department. Over the next few days the numbers fluctuated. Was it 57 reds? Or 81? The names and numbers didn't matter. It was the boldness of his charges and their supposed specificity that threw the Democratic administration into a tizzy and made McCarthy so notorious that his name became synonymous with the longest and most widespread episode of political repression in American history.

Yet Joe McCarthy did not invent McCarthyism. William Randolph Hearst was the main progenitor of the anticommunist crusade that had been under way for years before McCarthy arrived on the scene. The most important media mogul of his time, Hearst had used the wealth he inherited from his father's fabulously successful mining operations to buy up nearly 30 newspapers in the nation's largest cities and create a syndicate of cartoonists, journalists and columnists that reached nearly 20 percent of the American population at a time when the daily press was the primary source of political information in the country.

William Randolph Hearst, The Bison Archive Beginning in the mid-1930s, Hearst had been waging a major campaign to eliminate communism and all the individuals, groups, and ideas associated with it from any position of influence within American society. Together with his key subordinates and a group of dedicated anticommunist activists and writers whom he often bankrolled, Hearst presided over the framing of a narrative about how American communists had undermined the New Deal administration. In the process, the conservative press lord created a formidable network of professional red-baiters who brought that narrative into the political mainstream during the early Cold War. https://www.pbs.org/wgbh/americanexperience/features/citizen-hearst-william-randolph-hearst-and-mccarthyism/

William Lawton Wolfe (February 17, 1951 - May 17, 1974) was one of the founding members in 1972 of the Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA), an American radical group based near Oakland, California. While in the group, he adopted the name "Kahjoh", though the media misspelled this as "Cujo". [He was born at about the same time the descendednt of Queen Elizabeth was herself being crowned as Queen Elizabeth II. King Geroge VI her father had just died, that was Albert of York who was a son of the Queen Mother had died. During that time frame the USA and the CIA were strengthening their coordination of world planning as China fell to Communism.

Che and companion arrived in La Paz, the Bolivian capital, during July 1953. They were immediately caught up in the revolutionary upheavals that were rocking one of the poorest and most “Indian” of American nations. A mass revolt of the predominantly indigenous peasants and tin miners had broken out twelve months earlier. This mass uprising had brought the radical Movimiento Nacionalista Revolucionario (MNR) to power.

Che, who wanted to see the renowned Bolivian miners first hand, visited the Balsa Negra mine just outside La Paz. Prior to the revolution company guards had used a machine gun to open fire on striking miners. Now the mine was nationalized. Che encountered truckloads of armed miners returning from the capital to protest their support for land reform and the struggle of peasants. With their “stony faces and red plastic helmets they appeared to be warriors from other worlds”.

Despite witnessing the tremendous strength of the Bolivian miners Che never really absorbed the potential role of the working class in the socialist revolution, even in countries such as Bolivia where they constituted a minority of the population. This weakness, combined with other factors, would have a direct bearing on the ideas he later developed.

At this stage in Che’s political evolution however, it is sufficient to note the impact the events in Bolivia had on his outlook. For the first time in his life he was touched directly by the heat of the flame of revolution. Despite the sweep of events he was still an observer rather than an active participant.

After extending their stay in La Paz to nearly one month Che and Calica moved on. They spent some time in Peru and in Lima again met with Doctor Pesce and also Gobo Nogues. Gobo ensured that they ate on a few occasions at the Country Club and in Lima’s most expensive hotel, the Gran Hotel Bolívar.

They moved on to Ecuador where they forged new friendships with a group of adventurers. Che’s intention had been to move on with Calica to Venezuela. After a series of excursions Calica and Che departed company, the former heading for Caracas and the latter with a new companion, Gualo, to Guatemala. They were totally broke and had to work their passage on a ship. Before reaching Guatemala they passed through Costa Rica, Panama and Nicaragua, meeting and discussing with individuals and groups along the way.

By traveling north to Central America Che had entered a somewhat different world to that which existed in the southern cone of Latin America. Imperialism dominated the southern countries in conjunction with an enfeebled national capitalist class. There was a relatively strong urban population and working class in the cities and the societies tended to be more developed. This was even the case in the poorest countries at the time, such as Bolivia and Peru.

In a series of Central American countries US imperialism arrogantly imposed local tyrants as dictatorial heads of state while despised and hated companies, such as Coca Cola and the United Fruit Company, plundered the economies. As Che commented: "…the countries were not true nations, but private estancias".

This was only fifty years after US imperialism had created Panama, and ran it as a client state in order to keep control of the canal it had built for trade purposes and strategic interests. Nicaragua had been ruled for thirty years by the corrupt dictatorship of Somoza. El Salvador was run by a succession of dictatorships intent on defending the interests of the coffee plantation owners, and Honduras was virtually run as a packaging plant for the United Fruit Company.

The United Fruit Company symbolized the exploitation of the continent by imperialism. Che's favorite poet, Pablo Neruda, wrote an ironical verse, La United Fruit Co., reflecting the sentiments of Latin America towards its imperialist domination:

"When the trumpet sounded, everything was prepared on earth, and Jehovah divided the world between Coca-Cola Inc., Anaconda,

Ford Motors, and other entities:
the United Fruit Company Inc.; reserved for itself the most beautiful place,
the central coast of my land;
the sweet waist of America…"

Neruda's poem continues and denounces the company for creating the "Tyrannical Reign of Flies" the dictators of Central America: Trujillo, Tachos, Ubico, Martínez, Garias - "the bloody domain of flies."

On to Guatemala 1953 1954 and the CIA overtrow of Arbenaz by Chauncey Holt, Jack Youngblood, and others

If events in Bolivia had made an impact on Che, developments in Guatemala, where he got actively involved for the first time, would change the direction of his life. He arrived in Guatemala City on Christmas Eve and openly identified with a political cause and with some idea of what he now intended to commit his life to.

Just prior to his arrival he had written a letter dated December 10, in which he outlined his political views to his aunt Beatríz, with whom he had an especially close relationship. These were undoubtedly a reflection of the effect events in Bolivia had had on him. For the first time he clearly identified himself ideologically with socialist ideas.

"My life has been a sea of found resolutions until I bravely abandoned my baggage and, back pack on my shoulder, set out with el compañero García on the sinuous trail that has brought us here. Along the way I have had the opportunity to pass through the dominions of the United Fruit, convincing me once again of just how terrible these capitalist octopuses are. I have sworn before a picture of the old and mourned Stalin that I won't rest until I see these capitalist octopuses annihilated. In Guatemala I will perfect myself and achieve what I need to be an authentic revolutionary." He signed the letter "from your nephew of the iron constitution, the empty stomach and the shining faith in the socialist future. Chao, Chancho".

By 1953 the populist left-leaning government in Guatemala, presided over by Colonel Jacobo Arbenz, was locked into a head-on confrontation with US imperialism and the rich elite of Guatemala City. Arbenz was continuing a reformist program begun by the preceding government that came to power during the 1940's having toppled the ruthless Ubico dictatorship.

US imperialism would tolerate a lot from this reformist administration. But in 1952 the Arbenz administration took a step too far. A land reform decree was enacted which abolished the latifundia system and nationalized the properties of the detested United Fruit Company.

This measure provoked the wrath of Guatemala's white Creole elite and won massive support from the mainly indigenous and mestizo poor rural peasants and urban workers. The United Fruit Company and the Eisenhower administration were outraged. It would only be a matter of time before the CIA would instigate the overthrow of the Arbenz government.

The "socialist" experiment in Guatemala had drawn thousands from all over Latin America to see first hand this challenge to US imperialism. Mass mobilizations were taking place all the time and numerous militias were established by both the government and the various political parties. In the main these were not armed. However, the forces of reaction began to arm and mobilize.

Amongst those present during the Guatemalan drama, apart from Che Guevara, were numerous future leaders of Latin American left-wing organizations, including Rodolfo Romero, a future leader of the Nicaraguan Sandinista FSLN (Frente Sandinista de Liberacion Nacional) that overthrew the Somoza dictatorship in 1979.

Che met with a series of political activists and engaged in discussion. He secured work as a doctor in a hospital and was introduced to Hilda Gadea, an exiled leader of the youth wing of the radical populist Peruvian movement, APRA. She introduced him to activists and leaders of various political groupings and gave him political works to study, including some works of Mao Tse Tung.

It was during these events that Che encountered a number of Cuban exiles. They had been given asylum by the Arbenz regime and had participated in an attempted assault on July 26 1953 against the Moncada military barracks in Cuba. For the first time Che began to discover about the struggle developing against the Cuban Batista regime.

The speed with which events developed in Guatemala also resulted in Che's ideas maturing. He began to criticize the communist parties that had adopted a policy of 'Popular' or 'People's Fronts'. This put them in alliances with sections of the national capitalist class. The leadership of the communist parties wrongly argued a tactical alliance with this "progressive" wing of the national capitalist class was necessary in the struggle against imperialism, in order to defend and widen parliamentary democracy. They said a stage of 'capitalist democracy and economic development' was necessary before the working class could struggle for and hope to obtain socialism.

This policy resulted in the communist party leaders limiting the struggles of the working class to prevent them challenging the interests of capitalism. The workers' movement was frequently paralyzed by this policy that often resulted in bloody defeat at the hands of reaction. Decisive sections of the capitalist class were quite prepared to abolish democratic rights and utilize repressive methods of rule in order to defend their own class interests.

Che, although not clearly presenting an alternative to this policy, felt that the communist parties were moving away from the masses simply to get a share of power in a coalition government. He wrongly argued at this time that no party in Latin America could remain revolutionary and contest elections.

Though beginning to articulate his thoughts, Che's ideas did not become fully formulated until later. Meanwhile, events in Guatemala overtook the polemics he had begun to be engaged in. The US was increasingly uneasy about the course events were taking and had concluded the government must be overthrown. The example of the movement in Guatemala was beginning to spill over into other Central American countries. A general strike broke out in Honduras. The Nicaraguan dictator, Somoza, feared his own population may follow the example of events in neighboring countries.

The CIA had put together a plan to topple the Guatemalan administration. A figurehead named Castillo Armas was handpicked to replace Arbenz as President. A paramilitary force was trained in Nicaragua and those friendly to the US in the Guatemalan Army were involved in a plot against the government.

Arbenz refused to take action against those in the military known to be sympathetic to the plotters and tried to appease the military. A few days before his government was overthrown in 1954 by the conspirators he appealed to the army itself to distribute arms to the militias which had been established. The military command refused and the government fell. The existing capitalist state machine had been left intact and no alternative of workers' and peasants' committees had been established from which an appeal could have been made to the rank and file soldiers.

This defeat and the failure of Arbenz to take any action against the capitalist state apparatus was to leave a lasting impression on Che, one which he would not forget as the revolution in Cuba unfolded.

After seeking asylum in the Argentinean Embassy and hiding for a period, Che eventually found his way to Mexico by September. As a fresh activist his movements had not gone unnoticed. The CIA opened a file on him for the first time. Over the coming years it was to become one of the thickest ever compiled by them on any one individual.

It was while Che was in Mexico that he initially met one of the leaders of the July 26th Movement fighting the Batista dictatorship in Cuba, Fidel Castro. Their first meeting was during 1955, after which Che eventually joined the Movement.

Following his experiences in Bolivia and in particular after his participation in events in Guatemala, Che entered the next phase of his life no longer as the medical doctor and social observer. From this point on he was to be an active participant in and eventual leader of historic events.

Beliefs and symbols

In their manifesto "Symbionese Liberation Army Declaration of Revolutionary War & the Symbionese Program", co-founders Donald DeFreeze and Patricia "Mizmoon" Soltysik wrote:

> The name 'symbionese' is taken from the word symbiosis and we define its meaning as a body of dissimilar bodies and organisms living in deep and loving harmony and partnership in the best interest of all within the body.

They intended the political symbiosis to encompass the unity of all left-wing struggles: feminist, anti-racist, anti-capitalist, and others. They wanted all races, genders, and ages to fight together in a left-wing united front, and to live together peacefully.

The group adopted a seven-headed SLA hydra-like cobra symbol, using it as a logo. The SLA featured this image on their publications.

Tamara Bunke aka "Tania" in 1964, before leaving for Bolivia where she would later meet up with Che Guevara

Haydée Tamara Bunke Bider (November 19, 1937 - August 31, 1967) was an Argentine-born East German revolutionary known for her involvement in feminism, leftist politics, and liberation movements.

Born to communist parents, Bunke joined the Free German Youth at fifteen and later studied philosophy at university. She was recruited as an interpreter for the Socialist Unity Party of Germany, where she met Che Guevara during his visit to Leipzig. In 1961, she moved to Cuba and participated in the Cuban literacy campaign and Federation of Cuban Women.

Bunke was recruited for Bolivian Campaign, Che Guevara's guerrilla expedition in Bolivia aimed at sparking revolution across Latin America. Using the alias Tania, she infiltrated Bolivian high society and developed ties with Bolivian President René Barrientos.

In 1966, her cover was blown, leading her to join Guevara's armed guerrilla campaign in Bolivia. During this time, she was responsible for the food and monitoring radio communications. Bunke was killed in 1967 during an ambush by Bolivian Army Rangers while attempting to escape with a leg injury and fever.

Born in November 1937 in Buenos Aires, Argentina, Tamara Bunke was the daughter of Erich Bunke and Nadia Bider.

J.P. Morgan, George Hearst, and others in the "Colony" of Peru

In 1877, James Ben Ali Haggin, Alfred W. McCune, George Hearst, and gamonles planters organized the "Cerro de Pasco Syndicate to explore the possibility of developing the deposits in the Peruvian Highlands." Fifteen years later, in 1902, James Ben Ali Haggen sponsored a dinner party in New York, which "assembled several of the wealthiest American magnates of the time...'[b]efore the evening was over [Haggin] had raised $10 million capital to begin a project which would dominate the economic and social life of central Peru for the next three-quarters of a century.' Haggin alone put up $3 million that evening, retaining a 34 percent interest." By 1913, a "syndicate of some of our richest men have bought the mines here," from Haggin, J. P. Morgan, and Henry Clay Frick to Phoebe Hearst and the Vanderbilt family. "Today the prosperity of Cerro de Pasco, indeed this whole mining region," Carpenter proclaimed, "is dependent on American capital."[10]

Carpenter's guide for narrating the indigenous Andean labor community, the mines, social imperialism, and American imperialism itself was "J.T. Glidden", then the "assistant superintendent of the Cerro de Pasco mines." Glidden secured equestrian transportation for himself and the peripatetic author. The life and career of John Tinker Glidden exemplified the multivalent consequences of what the present-day PMEI describes as "relations between the [indigenous] community and the U.S. managers and employees." During Carpenter's visit, Glidden wed, in the Church of St. Michael the Archangel overlooking Chaupimarca Square, "a Peruvian lady (whose name was Angélica) and had two daughters [named after Yolanda of Vianden-Beryl and Olga of Kiev-Saint Bibiana, also spelled Saint Viviana]." Glidden met his wife in 1912, when he collaborated with Ayarza gamonles in drilling a sublevel Cerro de Pasco mine, which he christened Roosevelt. Glidden, a graduate of M.I.T. (1905), had formerly served as U.S. Geological Surveyor for Oregon land fraud scandal acreage confiscated by the Roosevelt Administration and Charles Doolittle Walcott. Amidst autumn financial negotiations during the Panic of 1907, Theodore Roosevelt reclassified the Cerro de Pasco Mining Company as a subsidiary of a "good trust." One week after celebrating the 1908 New Year, Glidden accepted an employment offer from the subsidiary company and relocated to the Ayarza base of operations in Cerro de Pasco. https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Cerro_de_Pasco George Hearst (September 3, 1820 - February 28, 1891) was an American businessman, politician, and patriarch of the Hearst business dynasty. After growing up on a small farm in Missouri, he founded many mining operations, and is known for developing and expanding the Homestake Mine in the late 1870s in the Black Hills of South Dakota. In 1879, he listed it on the New York Stock Exchange and went on to other pursuits. The mine's gold production continued uninterrupted until 2001.

Phoebe Apperson Hearst was born 1842 in Franklin County, Missouri. Before marrying her distant cousin, 41 year-old George Hearst at the age of 19, Miss Apperson worked as a teacher in area schools.

Soon after their marriage, the couple moved to San Francisco where Phoebe gave birth to their only child, William Randolph (named for his grandfathers) in 1863. In 1873, Phoebe took young William on a grand tour of Europe where the two spent more than a year visiting castles, museums and various cultural centers. This trip would prove to be a pivotal inspiration for William’s later endeavor constructing Hearst Castle. She established several free libraries in the towns where her husband’s mines provided employment. https://hearstcastle.org/history-behind-hearst-castle/historic-people/profiles/phoebe-apperson-hearst/over the support of his family: his mother, brother, and sister. In addition, he did some mining and ran a general store.[6] He first heard of the discovery of gold in California in 1849. Before deciding to depart, he read further news on the subject to make sure it was true. In 1850, as a member of a party of 16, he left for California.

Pictures a Gold and Red San Francisco football team logo referencing the Gold Rush of 1849 and the discover of Gold in the Sierra Nevada mountains. I Ed Donegan usd to work across the street from and live in walking distance to the Old San Francisco mint in operation until quite recently. Its scales at the truck bays are still visible where gold was weighed in and coins or bullion struck. This was brought down by mining to this location to be exchanged for paper money bring printed or gold coins. Sacramento is the State Capital (seat of government) because the mountains and its commerce were so critical to the California. Hearst Castle is other landmark to the era.

After settling in San Francisco in the early 1860s, Hearst became a politician, first representing San Francisco in the state legislature for one term. He also maintained mining interests through his company. Hearst was appointed as a United States senator in 1886 to fill a vacancy and was elected as a Democrat later that year on his own account. He served in the Senate from 1887 to his death in 1891. His only child from his late marriage (at age 42) was his son William Randolph Hearst, who became internationally known as a newspaperman and publisher, and was a primary inspiration for Orson Welles' 1941 film Citizen Kane.

Hearst was appointed to represent California as a Democrat to the United States Senate to fill the vacancy caused by the death of John F. Miller, and served from March 23, 1886, to August 4, 1886, when a successor was elected. In 1886, he was elected in the regular election that year by the state legislature to the Senate as a Democrat, serving from March 4, 1887, until his death in 1891. As a senator, Hearst focused on reducing Central Pacific's power in American commerce.

The Central Pacific Railroad (CPRR) was a rail company chartered by U.S. Congress in 1862 to build a railroad eastwards from Sacramento, California, to complete most of the western part of the "First transcontinental railroad" in North America. Incorporated in 1861, CPRR ceased independent operations in 1875 when the railroad was leased to the Southern Pacific Railroad. Its assets were formally merged into Southern Pacific in 1959.

With other mining investors, Hearst set up Hearst, Haggin, Tevis and Co., in which he was a partner. He had interests in the Comstock Lode and the Ophir mine in Nevada, the Ontario silver mine in Utah, the Pacific mine in Pinos Altos, New Mexico, the Homestake gold mine in South Dakota, and the Anaconda Copper Mine in Montana. The Homestake Mine was one of his biggest investments. Although the gold ore was lean, the massive deposit supported an active mine until 2001. Hearst later[when?]invested in the Cerro de Pasco Mine in Peru. His company grew to be the largest private mining firm in the United States. Hearst acquired the reputation of being the most expert prospector and judge of mining property on the Pacific coast. He contributed to the development of the modern processes of quartz and other[vague] kinds of mining.

Peru,[e] officially the Republic of Peru,[f] is a country in western South America. It is bordered in the north by Ecuador and Colombia, in the east by Brazil, in the southeast by Bolivia, in the south by Chile, and in the south and west by the Pacific Ocean.

George Hearst acquired the San Francisco Examiner newspaper as a sign of loyalty to his friends by accepting it as payment for a gambling debt owed to him. He primarily used the Examiner to promote the interests of the Democratic Party and to laud the party's initiatives, especially when they were under public attack. His son William Randolph Hearst insisted on taking control of this holding of his father. The younger Hearst made the Examiner the foundation of what became his Hearst publishing empire.

Patricia Campbell Hearst (born February 20, 1954) has a birthday that overlaops with members of Royal family and odd Feb 20 and Novemeber 18 combinations (nine months apart) or August 4 birthdays also English royalty tied as the Queen Mother's birthday.

While building his mining career, George Hearst had supported his family in Missouri. In 1860, he returned to the state to care for his ailing mother and take care of some legal disputes. During this time, he became reacquainted with Phoebe Apperson, a neighbor of 18. The 42-year-old Hearst married her two years later, on June 15, 1862.

In the same year, Hearst and his new bride moved to San Francisco. Phoebe gave birth to their only child, William Randolph Hearst, on April 29, 1863.

Mr. President; Distinguished delegates:

The delegation of Cuba to this Assembly, first of all, is pleased to fulfill the agreeable duty of welcoming the addition of three new nations to the important number of those that discuss the problems of the world here. We therefore greet, in the persons of their presidents and prime ministers, the peoples of Zambia, Malawi and Malta, and express the hope that from the outset these countries will be added to the group of Nonaligned countries that struggle against imperialism, colonialism and neocolonialism.

We also wish to convey our congratulations to the president of this Assembly [Alex Quaison-Sackey of Ghana], whose elevation to so high a post is of special significance since it reflects this new historic stage of resounding triumphs for the peoples of Africa, who up until recently were subject to the colonial system of imperialism. Today, in their immense majority these peoples have become sovereign states through the legitimate exercise of their self-determination. The final hour of colonialism has struck, and millions of inhabitants of Africa, Asia and Latin America rise to meet a new life and demand their unrestricted right to self-determination and to the independent development of their nations.

We wish you, Mr. President, the greatest success in the tasks entrusted to you by the member states.

Cuba comes here to state its position on the most important points of controversy and will do so wit

Hearst was elected to the California State Assembly in 1864, serving one term from 1865 until 1866. He was one of 12 members representing San Francisco. His knowledge of mines and the mining industry proved valuable, and he was selected for a special Committee on Mines and Mining Interests. During this time (1865) he acquired Rancho Piedra Blanca at San Simeon, California. He later bought parts of adjoining ranchos. This land was later developed by his son as the Hearst Castle. The Hearsts also maintained a townhome in San Francisco at the corner of Chestnut and Leavenworth.

TWA 800 received a series of heading changes and generally increasing altitude assignments as it climbed to its intended cruising altitude.[Weather in the area was light winds with scattered clouds, with dusk lighting conditions. The last radio transmission from the airplane occurred at 8:30 p.m., when the flight crew received and then acknowledged instructions from Boston Center to climb to 15,000 feet (4,600 m). The last recorded radar transponder return from the airplane was recorded by the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) radar site at Trevose, Pennsylvania, at 8:31:12 p.m.

Thirty-eight seconds later, David McClaine, the captain of Eastwind Airlines Flight 507, operated by Boeing 737-200 N221US (which had suffered a near-crash of its own a month prior)[16] reported to Boston ARTCC that he "just saw an explosion out here", adding, "we just saw an explosion up ahead of us here ... about 16,000 feet [4,900 m] or something like that, it just went down into the water." -Wikipedia

Captain McLaine was not the only pilot in the air observing the events from up-close. Unlike those on the ground with a confusing 2d view of far off objects in the sky those airbone and expert in observing motions in relations to the horizons and curioius optical affects when little relative positions are present in observations of objects and motion, these pilots were similar to Lee Bowers in the Trainyard of Dealy Plaza, in observation positions. They observed flares traveling towards TWA 800 and did so consistently.

Volumetric shut-off valves allow a set amount of water to flow before automatically closing the valve. Perfect for filling large storage tanks, sprayer tanks, flushing or other applications where a specific amount of water needs to flow before stopping. Must be manually reset after each run.

Trouble with fuel and fuel sensing on TWA 800 The ground-maintenance crew locked out the thrust reverser for engine No. 3 (treated as a minimum equipment list item) because of technical problems with the thrust reverser sensors during the landing of TWA 881 at JFK, before Flight 800's departure. Additionally, severed cables for the engine No. 3 thrust reverser were replaced.[12] During refueling of the aircraft, the volumetric shutoff (VSO) control was believed to have been triggered before the tanks were full. To continue the pressure fueling, a TWA mechanic overrode the automatic VSO by pulling the volumetric fuse and an overflow circuit breaker. Maintenance records indicate that the aircraft had numerous VSO-related maintenance writeups in the weeks before the accident.[1]: 31

Pentaerythritol tetranitrate (PETN) is a nitrate ester explosive commonly used in commercial detonators. RDX stands for Royal Demolition eXplosive. It is also known as cyclonite or hexogen. The chemical name for RDX is 1,3,5-trinitro-1,3,5-triazine. It is a white powder and is very explosive. RDX is used as an explosive and is also used in combination with other ingredients in explosives. Its odor and taste are unknown. It is a synthetic product that does not occur naturally in the environment. It creates fumes when it is burned with other substances.

> "What we didn't know when we kidnapped her was that she had rejected her mother, a gold-digger and right-wing ideologue."
> She was also having serious doubts about marrying Hearst-in-waiting Steve Weed, who was fascinated with the precious Hearst rugs and artwork that had become a kind of dowry ahead of their June wedding.
>
> "Talking with the feminist women of the SLA confirmed her fears about going back to Weed." Harris said. "She fell in love with one of the SLA men, Willie Wolfe."
>
> Harris believes the failure of Patty Hearst's father Randy [Randolph A. Hearst], chair of the multibillion-dollar Hearst Corporation, to ransom her for a sum in the low millions, was one of the reasons she decided to run with the SLA.

“Patty was the son Randy never had. They had always been close. Listening to the radio, she couldn’t believe he refused to meet our demands.

“Our group trained her on a sawed-off shotgun that would have been given to her to defend herself if we were encircled by the FBI. Releasing her would have been good propaganda for the SLA. Our intent was to not have her stay with us. I spent hours trying to convince her that remaining with the SLA would get her killed.

“Her problem was she couldn’t go back to the damaged apartment she shared with Weed, who she chose not to marry. The last thing she wanted to do was go to the macabre Felliniesque media spectacle at her home where Weed and the FBI agents were staying.

“On March 31, the group chose to let her make her own decision. After Patty chose to remain with us, we took off our face masks and she saw all of us for the first time.

“There was something else that most people don’t know. We were, with the exception of doctor’s son Wolfe, pretty much middle class.

“Patty enjoyed an ultra-privileged background. She taped devastating communiques published on the front page of her father’s San Francisco Examiner and broadcast, per our demands, on television and radio stations verbatim.

“It was a publicity bonanza for our cause, the ‘liberation of colonized, marginalized, and oppressed people everywhere.'

"She was able to attack the family and the Hearst Corp. from firsthand experience. Much of what she had to say about the Vietnam War, racism, feminism, automation and the corporate power structure resonates today. She became an important, credible and inspiring ally.

"In these powerful recordings, she voiced outrage about her father's absurd claims of relative penury leaving the family unable to meet our ransom demands. Patty knew her father was not being honest.

"She was stunned that [her mother] Catherine was close to [Ronald] Reagan, who voiced the hope that recipients of groceries from Hearst's multimillion dollar People In Need ransom program would become victims of an 'epidemic of botulism.'"

After joining the SLA bank robbery at San Francisco's Hibernia bank on April 15, Hearst transitioned from being a kidnap victim to a wanted felon.

"San Francisco was getting hot," says Harris. "When we went down to Los Angeles the nine of us divided into three units. She, Emily, and I were a team. We left the safe house to shop for the SLA at a sporting goods store. That decision saved her life and ours, but evidence from those events (a parking ticket) ultimately led the Feds and LAPD to our comrades who had set up refuge on East 54th Street.

"With four weapons and keys in the ignition, she could have driven off while I was being tackled by store security guards for allegedly shoplifting. Instead, she unexpectedly opened fire to rescue us. This was the spontaneous act of a true comrade that put her in great jeopardy."

> A day later, on May 17, 1974, six of the SLA members, including Patty's lover Wolfe, perished in a Los Angeles Police Department firefight. In hiding at an Anaheim motel near Disneyland, Hearst and the Harrises joined a worldwide audience watching live television coverage of the biggest shootout to ever take place on American soil.
> "By now, Patty fully understood the risks of trying to turn herself in," says Harris. "We began traveling separately across the country, a pattern that continued for the next 16 months. For much of that time we didn't even know where Patty was living. That was done for security reasons."

The formal sworn statement of Mr Dwight Brumley who held a top secret security clearance and was trained in missle defense in and served in the military on a warhsips such as missle destroyers and aircraft carriers and electronic counter-warfare (which by the the electronics instructor of myself Edward Paul Donegan did, his name was I think Dan Leonard.)

Dan Brumley was on commercial flight US Air 217 inbound to the Tristate area (Providence Rhode island) from North Carolina. A small plane passed under US AIR 217 that fits the role of an anomalous RADAR blip noted by the NTSB and FBI but the direction Mr Brumley confidently asserts of the small plane was different than the official reports described. Mr Brumlye stated this small plane flew just a few hundred feet under USA 217 in which Mr Brumley had a window seat and was observing the plane. The small plane fired of what to him were clearly flares a flare with a trajectory, the transcription makes it hard to determine, the the flare ignited something it is path, and than after that a larger explosion occurred. Mr Brumely did not see the TWA 800 plane directly and only later learned of the event. His testimony fits with a wing or engine fuel bleed into the atmosphere creating a carborated combustible mixture that would catch on fire and lead into the wing tank of TWA 800. Incendiary chemicals were found on textures that are consistent with flare construction in the waters the wreckage of TWA 800 disperse into. Mr Brumley's statement was consistent with may others and a "crazy" indication from the fuel gauge system monitoring the wing tank that might have CORRECLTIY indicated unexplained fuel loss.

The NTSB may not have Mr Brumley's statement since only volunteer investigators took the affidavit. The NTSB ruled that the "crazy" reading on the fuel gauge (Fuel Quantity Information System) was from a shorted wire, not fuel loss, and that same shorted wire ignited the tank. While the flare burned towards the plane as launchpad flares to it appeared to some be be missile underway but all evidence discounts a missile strike taking down TWA 800.

Tensions in the investigation Relatives of TWA 800 passengers and crew, as well as the media, gathered at the Ramada Plaza JFK Hotel. Many waited until the remains of their family members had been recovered, identified and released. This hotel became known as the "Heartbreak Hotel" for its role in hosting families of victims of several airliner crashes.

Many grieving relatives became angry because of TWA's delayed confirmation of the passenger list,[33] conflicting information from agencies and officials and mistrust of the recovery operation's priorities. Although NTSB vice chairman Robert Francis stated that all bodies were retrieved as soon as they were spotted and that wreckage was recovered only if divers believed that victims were hidden underneath, many families were suspicious that investigators were not truthful or were withholding information.

Since (film) retrieved from Wikipedia and copied or modified to here

Since (also known as Kennedy's Assassination) is a 1966 film directed by Andy Warhol about the assassination of the President of the United States, John F. Kennedy. The film reconstructs the assassination with both Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson present, both before and after the event. The roles in Since are performed by Warhol's "superstars" from The Factory.

The film is based on the media coverage of the assassination and the speeches of Johnson, who succeeded Kennedy as President of the United States. The film is 67 minutes long, and shot on 16 mm film in color. It has been described as unfinished.

Warhol had been unmoved by the Kennedy assassination, commenting that he wasn't bothered that he was dead, but was bothered by "...the way the television and radio were programming everybody to feel so sad. It seemed like no matter how hard you tried, you couldn't get away from the thing." Warhol had already created the silkscreen paintings Sixteen Jackies, Nine Jackies, Jackie (The Week That Was) and Gold Jackie of Jacqueline Kennedy, and explored the reporting of the assassination in a series of eleven prints, Flash - November 22, 1963.

This series of 11 screenprints was created in 1968, depicting the media's portrayal of President John F. Kennedy's assassination on November 22nd, 1963. Patty Hearst and Brigid Berlin were Children of the Right Hand, the Right Had being the operative of the CIA and it MK-ULTRA operations run by Nixon that Hearst newspapers (Hearst and later Richard Berlin) backed and Patty Heart a friend of Brigid Berlin was best freinds with including working under Andy Warhol and Jed Johnson who was killed on TWA 800. Richard Nixion who as V.P. ran those pograms with J. Edgar Hooer, The Duke of Windsor, and other including Marilyn Monroe and the first years of the Kennedy team all had access to these papers and memories within the family. This whole matter like UAL 553 was jFK and Watergate connected and I think to Indonesia and CIA contintuing involvement with Kenya and Indonesia as well as the other nations commonly named, and MK-UTLRA led to massive deaths in Indonesia. The CIA and those connected to the Coup De Tat of 1963 still have much to hide and are still doing so.

On flight TWA 800 missles were discounted as possibility. They pack an explosive charge in a casing the the case would turn to fragments embeded in the blast target. No such fragments were found. The missle fired froma submarine or elsewhere failed because of the Bring Your Own Blast design of a missle with a warhead would have left charactertic fragments of the shell that would have traveled witih the blast. No significant levels of residue were found AND no radar supported a missle theory But I suggest engine fuel was being lost and then ignited by a flair from a small plane seen on radar and seen by a qualified expert in missle warfare as having lauched flare. The flare is dumb ad experts noted a heat seeking missle would have struck the engines or cooling unit called the CWT and none of that happened, the wing tank blew up instead as if an O Ring had failed.

2.2.1.2 Consideration of a High-Energy Explosive Device Detonation (Bomb or Missile Warhead) Several factors led to speculation that the accident might have been caused by a bomb or missile strike. These factors included heightened safety and security concerns because of the 1996 Olympics then being held in the United States, the fact that TWA flight 800 was an international flight, and the sudden and catastrophic nature of the in-flight breakup. In addition, numerous witnesses to the accident reported seeing a streak of light and then a fireball, which some people believed represented a missile destroying the airplane. Further, some anomalous primary radar targets were recorded by the Islip, New York, radar site in the general vicinity of TWA flight 800 at the time of the accident that apparently could not be explained. Accordingly, the Safety Board considered the possibility that a bomb535 exploded inside the airplane or that a missile warhead from a shoulder-launched missile exploded upon impact with the airplane. Testing performed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) found trace amounts of explosives on three separate pieces of airplane wreckage (described by the FBI as a piece of canvaslike material and two pieces of floor panel). However, none of the damage characteristics typically associated with a high-energy explosion of a bomb or missile warhead (such as severe pitting, cratering, petalling, or hot gas washing) were found on any portion of the recovered airplane structure, including the pieces on which the trace amounts of explosives were found. Only about 5 percent of the airplane's fuselage was not recovered, and none of the areas of missing fuselage were large enough to have encompassed all of the damage that would have been caused by the detonation of a bomb or missile. Although several large holes are visible in the reconstructed portion of the airplane fuselage, almost all of the structure that originally filled in these holes is attached to the remaining structure but is folded either inward or outward. No area of structure in the reconstructed portion of the airplane contained any unexplained holes large enough to represent the entry point of a missile.537 Further, the victims remains showed no evidence of injuries that could have been caused by high-energy explosives, nor was there any damage to the airplane seats and other interior components consistent with a high-energy explosion.

Investigators considered several scenarios to determine how the trace amounts of explosive residue might have gotten on the wreckage from the accident airplane. Trace amounts of explosive residue could have been transferred to the contaminated pieces from the military personnel (and their associated clothing, boots, and equipment) that were on board the accident airplane when it was used to transport troops during the Gulf War in 1991. In addition, explosives were placed and then removed from several locations in the accident airplane during a dog-training explosive detection exercise about 1 month before the accident.

However, testing by the Federal Aviation Administrationís (FAA) Technical Center indicated that residues of explosives found on the accident airplane would dissipate completely after 2 days of immersion in sea water.540 Very few pieces of airplane wreckage were recovered during the first 2 days after the accident, and those pieces that were recovered were found floating on the oceanís surface; several days of side-scan sonar searching preceded any underwater wreckage recovery operations. Therefore, it is very likely that the pieces on which the explosive residues were found were immersed in ocean water for considerably more than 2 days before they were recovered.

Thus, it is quite possible that the trace amounts of explosive residue detected on wreckage pieces from the accident airplane were not present before the airplane entered the water but, rather, were deposited during or after recovery operations. The military personnel, ships, and ground vehicles used during the recovery operations had come into frequent previous contact with explosives. Trace amounts of those substances could have been transferred from the surfaces of the ships or ground vehicles, or from clothing and boots of military personnel, onto wreckage pieces during the recovery operations or through subsequent contact with the pieces in the airplane hangar where the airplane wreckage was later assembled and laid out. Despite being unable to determine the exact source of the trace amounts of explosive residue found on the wreckage, the lack of any corroborating evidence associated with a high-energy explosion indicates that these trace amounts did not result from the detonation of a high-energy explosive device on TWA flight 800. Accordingly, the Safety Board concludes that the in-flight breakup of TWA flight 800 was not initiated by a bomb or a missile strike.

1.18.4.7 Missile-Related Information

At the Safety Boardís request, the Naval Air Warfare CenteróWeapons Division (NAWC-WD) at China Lake, California, provided assistance in identifying possible missile impact damage on the accident airplane wreckage. NAWC-WD experts conducted detailed examinations of the recovered wreckage and reconstructions and analyzed other data to evaluate the possibility that a shoulder-launched missile destroyed the airplane.

According to a ballistics/warhead testing expert from the NAWC-WD, if a missile with a live warhead impacted the airplane and detonated, the wreckage would likely have exhibited extensive damage to the impact area from the initial penetration of the missile and the subsequent dispersion of high-velocity postdetonation fragments. He described the following four regions of warhead damage as being typical for nearly all missile warheads:

- ï The first region, which is in the immediate vicinity of the detonation, i characterized by complete removal of the structure ... due to weakening by fragment penetrations and dislocation by the blast pressure wave.

- The second region contains numerous high-velocity fragment penetrations, soot residue from the explosive, and may exhibit distortion, but not widespread removal, of structure .. due to the pressure wave.

- The third region contains more widely spaced high-velocity fragment penetrations, usually with little evidence of sooting or pressure wave damage.

- The fourth region contains only occasional high- and low-velocity fragment penetrations.

According to the NAWC-WD ballistics/warhead testing expert, although some types of damage inflicted by warheads can be caused by other events.

high-velocity fragment penetrations are unique to explosive events and give investigators a conclusive method of identifying these encounters when they occur. Previous testing on both commercial and military aircraft has shown that even with small shoulder-launched weapons, high-velocity fragmentation damage to the aircraft will exist over large areas of the target. Based on previous testing performed by the military and [FAA], it is inconceivable that a warhead could have detonated in or near the fuselage without leaving evidence of high-velocity fragmentation damage somewhere on the recovered wreckage.

NAWC-WD also performed infrared signature measurements of 747s on approach to a commercial airport to identify the most likely tracking points for a shoulder-launched missile. According to the NAWC-WD report, infrared seekers on shoulder-launched missiles typically aim for hot spots, such as engine exhausts or inlets. The NAWC-WD infrared measurements showed that the four engines and the underside of the fuselage where the air conditioning pack bay is located (under the CWT) were the hot spots on the 747. The NAWC-WD report indicated that its experts observed no evidence of high-velocity fragmentation damage on the accident airplane. Specifically, the report indicated that no such damage was observed on the accident airplane's engines or air conditioning pack components.

The NAWC-WD report concluded the following:

> No conclusive evidence of missile impacts exists on any of the recovered wreckage of TWA flight 800. No evidence of high-velocity fragment impacts exists, which indicates a live warhead did not detonate within or near the exterior of the aircraft....The possibility that a shoulder-launched missile was launched at TWA flight 800, failed to intercept it, self-destructed in close proximity, and initiated the breakup of the aircraft is highly improbable.

The Safety Board used missile performance data provided by NAWC-WD, warhead detonation data from the Defense Intelligence Agency ís Missile and Space Intelligence Center (MSIC), and damage tolerance data from the Survivability/ Vulnerability Information Analysis Center (SURVIAC) in a computer simulation study to further evaluate the possibility that a shoulder-launched missile aimed at the accident airplane did not reach its target but self destructed at a point close enough for a fragment to enter the CWT. According to the Safety Board ís study, for missile self destruction to be a possible source of CWT ignition for TWA flight 800, the missile must be (1) close enough at detonation for a fragment to enter the CWT, (2) oriented such that the fragmentation pattern intersects the CWT, and (3) far enough away at detonation that the airplane was not peppered with holes.

In an effort to bracket the possible missile performance range, NAWC-WD provided the Safety Board with data for a low-performance and a high-performance missile.528 According to NAWC-WD personnel, a typical missile flight would consist of about 8 seconds of engine burn (7.8 and 8.4 seconds for the two missiles the Board received data for) followed by a high-speed coast of about 7 to 9 seconds to selfdestruction if no target has been hit. During the 15- to 17-second flight, the missile would track to a heat source on the airplane.

According to the MSIC, warhead detonation typically results in about 1,000 fragments of various sizes, with an average mass of less than 10 grains (0.0229 ounce), and a mass as large as 40 grains (0.0916 ounce) in the pattern shown in figure 43. MSIC reported that warhead fragments could have an initial velocity of up to 9,000 fps. Data obtained from the SURVIAC indicated that 10- and 40-grain fragments would require velocities of 3,500 fps and 2,000 fps, respectively, to penetrate the CWT if they impacted the bottom of the CWT at a right angle. Using the initial speed and speed decay rate for the warhead fragments, the Safety Board calculated that a detonation would have to occur 40 feet or less below the airplaneís CWT for a fragment to retain sufficient velocity to penetrate the CWT.

SURVIACís data indicated that an even greater velocity would be required for a fragment to penetrate the CWT if it struck the bottom of the CWT at an angle. For example, a 40-grain fragment impacting the CWT at a 60° angle would require a velocity of more than 4,500 fps to penetrate the bottom of the tank. Using the initial speed and speed decay rate for the warhead fragments, the Safety Board calculated that a detonation would have to occur within 17 feet of the airplaneís CWT for a fragment to retain sufficient velocity to penetrate the CWT at a 60° angle. Further, SURVIAC data showed that a fragment loses both velocity and mass when it must pass through other layers of material (such as metal or fiberglass) before penetrating the component of interest (in this case, the CWT). Additionally, when the fragment speed decay rate was adjusted to represent a fragment passing through Jet A fuel, calculations indicated that the fragment would slow from 9,000 fps to 2,000 fps in less than 1 inch. The Board notes that, regardless of where the detonation occurred, a missile fragment would have had to have penetrated multiple layers of material to enter the CWT

The Safety Board's computer simulations (using this missile performance data and taking into account the winds at the time of the accident) showed that the locations on the surface from which a missile launched at TWA flight 800 would result in selfdestruction within 40 feet of the airplane were extremely limited. Figure 44 shows airplane locations at which, if a high-performance missile were launched at the airplane, the missile would selfdestruct within 40 feet of the airplane. Note that, at the scale shown, the launch area that would result in a selfdestruction within 40 feet of the airplane is not as wide as the line showing the 15-second perimeter in this figure. Simulations further showed that, because of the pattern in which missile fragments are dispersed after selfdestruction (see figure 43), launches from many of these positions would result in no fragments having a trajectory that would result in penetration of the CWT. For example, because of the nature of missile guidance, a launch from most positions on the perimeter shown in figure 44 would result in the missile catching the aircraft from behind. The area in front of the missile is not in the fragment dispersal area.

A story-line of history once well known and in major media has been silenced sine then. One place among many you might find it is in the Paul McCartney song Uncle Albert [of York King George VI] / Admiral Halsey about a secretive birth or births in the USA for the Windsor family. Edward of York and Albert of York story-line of getting pregnant Maria Kutchera to the USA temporarily after she leaves an Austrian convent pregnant (by her own story in her autobiography telling too.) Norma Jean, Glorian Donegan, and Joseph Kennedy Sr. were all part of that story as was Undersecretary of the Navy Franklin Delano Roosevelt. The Beatles had just broken up over John Lennon's and Yoko Ono' complaints with US/GB imperialism around the world.

1951 was a key time for the OSS CIA to go into action as they converted Grace Ranch from mob gambling into a CIA backed air base that would work on CIA overthrow projects around the world run by the CIA at Asia Tokyo Soviet Union Guatemala Indonesia station known by its acronym ATSUGI. China had fallen to Communism and Japan was thus threatened as was the entire Red pacific rim from the bottom of China to the top of Soviet Union and all pacific islands.

It is little difficult to figure it all out based on casual comments but San Simeon William Randolph Heart daughter Patty Hearst and New York Richard E. Berlin daughter Brigid Berlin of Hearst Publishing learned of MK-ULTRA imperialism Presumably Richard E. Berlin and his family as President of Hearst Newspapers would take time at the Hearst Castle if an extra room might be avaialable at that time. ANd who else might be there?

Patty Hears Brigid Berlin at Hearst Castle Posted on July 29, 2024 by Edward Donegan Brigid Emmett Berlin (September 6, 1939 - July 17, 2020) was an American artist and Warhol superstar . September 6, 1939 to December 1, 1952 (randomly chosen). 13 years old 2 mos.

So right around the time of the Korean War she is old enough to get a sense of what these figures are talking about. Nixon, Duke of Windsor, J. Edgar Hoover, etc., In addition to taking the calls and social affaris at Hearst Castle (still active but no new construction) or even more likely at the home of her father in New York where he also might entertain D.C. guests. She (Brigid Berlin) is a part of the mixers and also collecting letters between these figures and her parents, important cold war information.

In 1975, Brigid Berlin began work as a permanent employee for Andy Warhol's Interview magazine, a position that she held until well after Warhol's death. Berlin transcribed interviews as well as knitted under the desk. Patricia Hearst (a close friend of Berlin who began work at Interview in 1988) observed "On my first day at work, I noticed two small pugs who seemed to have the run of the castle. They belonged to a woman who sat behind the front desk every day from 9:00 to 5:00, but who never seemed to answer the phone. Instead, she compulsively knitted, ate bags of candy and tended lovingly to the dogs." [If I am following this right this is Patty Hearst describing the Hearst Castle with Brigid Berlin taking the phone calls as an employee of Hearst Communications.]

Interview Magazine Andy Warhol period - Bob Colacello was a film student at Columbia University in 1970 when he got a call from someone at Interview while he was having dinner at his parents' house in suburban Long Island. While Interview magazine now features fashion, artists, celebrities, and creative collaborators, in the beginning, it was merely a film critique spread. Colacello subsequently began writing film reviews and essays for Interview. After about six months, Colacello was promoted to editor of the magazine, at a salary of $50 a week. (He also received course credits, as he was still working on his master's degree at Columbia). Colacello brought in his friend and classmate Glenn O'Brien as an assistant. Colacello's first issue featured film 1940s-era stills of actress Rita Hayworth on the cover and on every page. The idea came from Warhol collaborator and filmmaker Paul Morrissey, who told Colacello, "Just put one on every page and it'll be funny."

Bob Colacello (born May 8, 1947) is an American writer. He began his career writing for The Village Voice before becoming editor-in-chief of pop artist Andy Warhol's Interview magazine from 1971 to 1983.[1] As part of Warhol's entourage, they collaborated on the books The Philosophy of Andy Warhol (1975) and Exposures (1979). Colacello has been a contributing editor for Vanity Fair since 1984 and has been a special correspondent since 1993.

life and career Robert Colaciello was born to John and Libby Colaciello in Bensonhurst, New York on May 8, 1947.[3] He and his two sisters, Barbara and Suzanne, were raised in Plainview, Long Island.[4] He graduated from the Edmund A. Walsh School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University in 1969, and also has an MFA degree in film criticism from Columbia University Graduate School of the Arts.

Colacello began his writing career around 1969, when he began publishing film reviews in the Village Voice weekly.[6] As a graduate student in the Film department at Columbia University in New York, his first publications doubled as his class essays and homework assignments.

The Edmund A. Walsh School of Foreign Service (SFS) is the school of international relations at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C. It grants degrees at both undergraduate and graduate levels.

Patricia Campbell Hearst (born February 20, 1954) is a member of the Hearst family and granddaughter of American publishing magnate William Randolph Hearst. She first became known for the events following her 1974 kidnapping by the Symbionese Liberation Army. She was found and arrested 19 months after being abducted, by which time she was a fugitive wanted for serious crimes committed with members of the group. She was held in custody, and there was speculation before trial that her family's resources would enable her to avoid time in prison.

At her trial, the prosecution suggested that Hearst had joined the Symbionese Liberation Army of her own volition. However, she testified that she had been raped and threatened with death while held captive. In 1976, she was convicted for the crime of bank robbery and sentenced to 35 years in prison, later reduced to seven years. Her sentence was commuted by President Jimmy Carter, and she was later pardoned by President Bill Clinton.

At 23 in 1964 she joins up with Andy Warhol. After several years as a reluctant debutante and a failed marriage, Brigid Berlin met Andy Warhol in 1964 and quickly became a central member of his entourage. After moving to Hotel Chelsea, she took on the nickname Brigid Polk because of her habit of giving out ‘pokes’, injections of Vitamin B and amphetamines. These injections were readily available through the many ‘Doctor Feelgoods’ in New York and perfectly legal

In 1919 he joined the Hearst Corporation, where he stayed until his retirement in 1973. In 1941 William Randolph Hearst personally chose him as successor to his role.[1] In 1942 Berlin became president of the company and after Hearst’s death in 1951 he became chief executive officer.

By the late 1930s the Great Depression and Hearst’s profligacy had brought him to the brink of financial ruin. Debts totaled $126 million. He was compelled to cede financial control of the Hearst Corporation, newspapers and radio stations were sold, and much of his art collection was dispersed in a series of sales, often for considerably less than he had paid. Hearst railed against his losses, and the perceived incompetence of the sales agents, Parish-Watson & Co.: “they greatly cheapened them and us, (he) advertises like a bargain basement sale. I am heartbroken”.[85] Construction at Hearst Castle virtually ceased. After Pearl Harbor the castle was closed up and Hearst and Davies moved to Wyntoon which was perceived to be less vulnerable to enemy attack.

They returned in 1945 and construction on a limited scale recommenced, finally ending in 1947.

In early May of that year, with his health declining, Hearst and Davies left the castle for the last time. The pair settled in at 1007 North Beverly Drive in Beverly Hills. Hearst died in 1951, his death abruptly severing him from Davies, who was excluded from the funeral by Hearst's family - "For thirty-two years I had him, and they leave me with his empty room". In 1950 Julia Morgan closed her San Francisco office after a career of forty-two years. Ill health circumscribed her retirement and she died, a virtual recluse, in early 1957.

In 1958 the Hearst Corporation donated Hearst Castle, its gardens, and many of its contents, to the state of California.

No while the daughter of Berlin she did not take phone calls till working for Interview it looks like As a child she answered calls for her parents but not as an employee.

> In 1942 Berlin became president of the Hearst Newspapers and after Hearst's death in 1951 he became chief executive officer.

Berlin's daughter was Warhol superstar Brigid Berlin. He was also the godfather of writer A.J. Cronin's youngest son.

In his early career Berlin directed advertising for The Smart Set and McClure's magazines. In 1919 he joined the Hearst Corporation, where he stayed until his retirement in 1973. In 1941 William Randolph Hearst personally chose him as successor to his role. In 1942 Berlin became president of the company and after Hearst's death in 1951 he became chief executive officer.

William Randolph Hearst, Jr. claimed in 1991 that Berlin had suffered from Alzheimer's disease starting in the mid-1960s and that caused him to shut down several Hearst newspapers without just cause.

On November 8, 1965, Kilgallen who had worked for Hearst was found dead in her Manhattan townhouse located at 45 East 68th Street. She had been piecing together the parts of the story she had as to the assassination of JFK. She and the Kennedy's were very close. Mark Shaw says clear answers have emerged through the eyes of Dorothy Kilgallen, the most credible journalist to cover the assassination, in fact, the only one who interviewed Jack Ruby at his 1964 trial.

Her notes regarding the interview was gone but according to Chauncey Marvin Holt the numerous assassins of the teams that worked for the CIA overthrowing or attempting to overthrow Guatemala, Cuba, and other nations make clear Ruby was part of the Vice President Nixon "Executive Action" program run by the National Security Council Nixon headed as Vice President. Col Prouty confirms much of this and George H.W. Bush and others are clearly visible at the Del TEx building and train-yard.

As Roger Stone points out who worked for Nixon Jack Rubinstein of the Yiddish Mafia had been recruited early on as Jimmy Hoffa and others were early in Nixon's career, long before US Representative Nixon became President (after first losing to JFK) and under Nixon the cover-ups of Watergate and earlier related events, the assassination of JFK by an internal group allied with Great Britain and its methods and colonialism by subversion and assassination.

Key pieces of this were also held by Patty Hearst, E. Howard Hunt, Dorothy Hunt, Brigid Berlin, Lee Harvey Oswald, and others and their parents, the oral history of those families, and the saved personal letters and documents between them including Duke Edward, J. Edgar Hoover, and many others.

These stories including the Windsor Kutchera role in The Sound of Music are part of secret history of secret identities in the USA and my family of which I am the only one remaining may still be surviving source of the study of Windsor genes in bastard children in orphanages or adoptee families in the USA. Some of those children are now the presidential level or cabinet level posts as children follow in their parents cold war civil servant traditions, the Barr family, Burns family, Mueller family, Burns family, Bush family, Nixon family, the Obama family and many more.

Deceased whistle-blower Jen Moore telling the secret identity of Glorian DOnegan

The Donegan family including the birth of Glorian Gainey in 1926 ties to a history tied to FDR, Joseph Kennedy SR. the Vatican and others including Allen Dulles. It will also explain the downing of UAL 553 and TWA 800 as part of the cover-ups.

In the years leading into WWII it was easy for Republican Party leaders like William Donovan and Democrat leaders like FDR and former foes USA and Great Britain to unite. In the Cold War and fight against labor unions, the war between Norther Ireland and the Republic of Ireland, and religious conflicts that alliance fell apart and the Republican Party with its control of the CIA won its CIA backed power struggle with independent nations leaning JFK and RFK. While Democrat Party presidents have emerged they have retained the globalists agenda that has not seen opposition since the death of RFK.

It is thought Nixon had much to do with the cover-up of the JFK assassination and that included the Watergate Break-in and the downing of UAL 553 and TWA fits into that story-line by re-evaluation of the crash details and a crash victim.

Sherman Skolnick who was confined to a wheelchair because of Polio will claim Franklin Delano Roosevelt (former Undersecretary of the Navy) had betrayed us all, all of the USA in the Special Relationship with Great Britain and that this led into Coca-Cola's Phillip Twombly and the CIA, and the downing of UAL 553. That same propaganda run by William Randolph Hearst and Walt Disney also helped propel FDR and FDR's loyal and capable assistant into high offices leading into WWII, and the Special Relationship key operatives were J. Edgar Hoover, Entrepid, and Wild Bill Donovan with Richard Nixon, the Bush family, and LBJ in close world planning tow.

Clark Gable and Marilyn Monroe

The Misfits is a 1961 American Contemporary Western film written by Arthur Miller, directed by John Huston, and starring Clark Gable, Marilyn Monroe, and Montgomery Clift. Filming was completed on November 4, 1960, twelve days before Clark Gable's death,[11] and The Misfits was released on February 1, 1961, on what would have been Gable's 60th birthday. Several of her movies are eirly close to the P-51 Mustangs story and Von Trapp story like The Prince and the Showgirl. Plot In London in June 1911, George V will be crowned king on 22 June and in the preceding days, many important dignitaries arrive, including the 16-year-old King Nicholas VIII of the (fictional) Balkan country of Carpathia, with his father the stiff and pompous widower prince regent Charles, and his maternal grandmother the widowed queen dowager of Carpathia (inspired by King Michael I of Romania, King Carol II of Romania and Queen Marie of Romania).[3]

"Aunt" #MarilynMonroe was (like my mother who also born in 1926 in the USA to a Maria Kutschera temporarily in the USA) was bastard Windsor family Kutschera child family. Following the 1925 speech of Prince Albert son of King George V.

On the last day of October, 1925 HRH Prince Albert, Duke of York, twenty-nine years old and second son of King George V and the younger brother of Edward of Windsor, made his first broadcast speech. The occasion was the closing ceremony of the Empire Exhibition at Wembley Stadium. The Duke spoke into a microphone before a crowd of 100,000, but what often happened in private now happened in public: his words came haltingly, and he was acutely embarrassed. One man listening to the crowd that day, a speech therapist recently arrived from Australia, remarked, “He’s too old for me to manage a complete cure, but I could very nearly do it.” https://winstonchurchill.org/resources/in-the-media/film-reviews/the-kings-speech/

That was an important time for the Windsor family. King George V had married Mary of Teck, Teck being a place in Central Europe and its various and shifting kingdoms and houses. It is likely Mary had introduced the FOXP2 Minimal Brain Dysfunction gene that in early years can interfere with the finer control of brain development. Conditions similar to or by symptom group being ADHD, Borderline Personality Disorder, Dysgraphia, and speech and swallowing muscle regulation can all be affected. While Edward did not show the gene Albert did and both likely wanted and did have bastard children not in "the registry" were a genetically propagated brain dysfunction would be too publicly known though I would be studied in the bastard children.

My mother was one as was Marilyn Monroe (at least these two) these bastard children often were placed in orphanages or select families would adopt under altered names. Some were covertly groomed as sleepers for other countries who would as adult had secret affinities and ties to England. E. Howard Hunt and JFK knew of the plan an egg from my mother into Eva Ban created a sleeper or at least a test child other than just the normal Donegan family documented and natural births with genome for James Paul Donegan and Glorian Gainey (Donegan.) This plan included FDR when he was Under-Secretary of the Navy at that time and his close associate Joseph Kennedy Sr. who had helped get Hearts newspapers to back FDR and Hearst had employed the father of Dorothy Kilgallen. Andy Warhol also knew about Monroe was killed and then another in #TWA800. Dorothy Hunt #UAL553. The second generation is as useful to study as the first in inheritance studies and the generation I am in became part of V.P. Nixon plans to move at four or five second generation births into studies and possible agents of influence life preparations. One possibility had been that on August 4, 1962 Marilyn Monroe was having a birthday party for her baby boy linked to Malcom X. But that plan (though is was partly referred to in a magazine published by Malcom X) went wrong and on August 4, 1982 Monroe was found dead. Andy Warhol also had FOXP2 as did many from bastard Windsors and Warhol and Monroe (and Einstein and Monroe were part of talking about it and diagnosing it. While studying it orphans were created not by the death of parents but by the anonymity of parents and Monroe and my mother were among them. Some of these orphans knew they were bastard children and some were groomed. E. Howard Hunt was part of the CIA plot using these children to plant in countries like Indonesia but patience with the CIA was growing thin with many and JFK and Monroe and later Dorothy Hunt were about to leak the full details of Asia, Tokyo, Soviet Union, Guatemala, and Indonesia, all post WWII CIA priorities as Cuba became later too.

Some close to Andy Warhol was killed on #TWA800 that was the same year as WACO, and Dorothy Hunt died on UAL 553 also about to leak the real reason JFK was assassinated, the reason being the CIA wanted to continue plans for Indonesia.

"In August ’62 I started doing silkscreens. It was all so simple - quick and chancy. I was thrilled with it. My first experiments with screens were heads of Troy Donahue and Warren Beatty, and then when Marilyn Monroe happened to die that month, I got the idea to make screens of her beautiful face - the first Marilyns." Andy Warhol

I Edward Paul Donegan am not so sure that is true. Most who come from CIA connected families including Norma Jean conceal part of it even from their own family. I think there were more conversations about FOXP2 and a few other parts of bastard child life that was talked about. All had a British empire connection as each had these genes.

(reviewer) I saw EMPIRE at the Whitney some time circa the early 90's. I watched the first 90 minutes of it, which I thought was an appropriate feature length. The film is silent, which makes it difficult to watch in a theater. It's easy to get distracted by the sounds of viewers shifting in their seats, or the talking among the blue-haired ladies who had no idea what they walked into. The film works (at least the first 90 minutes) because the Empire State Building goes from dusk to night, so there is a change slowly occurring on the screen. The film is mesmerizing, and I don't think I have ever looked up at the Empire State Building since without thinking about this film. There is something captivating about staring at it's fixed image, flickering on screen at 16 frames per second (which is what it was shot at, and a projector at the Whitney was modified to run at that frame rate). I wouldn't sit through 8 hours of it, but it's worth viewing for the experience of seeing this rare film.

the Blitz, (September 7, 1940-May 11, 1941), intense bombing campaign undertaken by Nazi Germany against the United Kingdom during World War II. For eight months the Luftwaffe dropped bombs on London and other strategic cities across Britain. The attacks were authorized by Germany’s chancellor, Adolf Hitler, after the British carried out a nighttime air raid on Berlin. The offensive came to be called the Blitz after the German word blitzkrieg (“lightning war”).

With the surrender of France in June 1940, Germany’s sole remaining enemy lay across the English Channel. On July 16, 1940, Hitler issued a directive ordering the preparation and, if necessary, execution of Operation Sea Lion, the amphibious invasion of Great Britain. With Britain’s powerful Royal Navy controlling the surface approaches in the Channel and the North Sea, it fell to the Luftwaffe to establish dominance of the skies above the battle zone. On August 2, Luftwaffe commander Hermann Göring issued his “Eagle Day” directive, laying down a plan of attack in which a few massive blows from the air were to destroy British air power and so open the way for the invasion.

Brigid Emmett Berlin (September 6, 1939 - July 17, 2020) was an American artist and Warhol superstar.

Berlin was born on September 6, 1939, in Manhattan in New York City. She was the eldest of three daughters born to socialite parents, Muriel (Johnson) "Honey" Berlin and Richard E. Berlin. Her father was chairman of the Hearst media empire for 32 years.[4][5]

As a child, Berlin regularly mixed with celebrities and the powerful:

> I would pick up the phone and it would be Richard Nixon. My parents entertained Lyndon Johnson, J. Edgar Hoover, and there were lots of Hollywood people because of San Simeon - Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Dorothy Kilgallen... I have a box of letters, written to my parents in the late 1940s and 1950s from the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.[6]

Her socialite mother frequently worried about Brigid's weight and constantly attempted to get her to lose it through any means, from giving her cash for every pound she lost at age 11 to having the family doctor prescribe amphetamines and dexedrine. Berlin recalled, "My mother wanted me to be a slim, respectable socialite. Instead, I became an overweight troublemaker."[7]

She was briefly married to John Parker, a window dresser. They married in 1960 and later divorced. As Andy Warhol observed in his book Popism: "When Brigid brought her window dresser fiancé home to meet the family, her mother told the doorman to tell him to wait on a bench across the street in Central Park. Then she handed Brigid her wedding present - a hundred dollar bill - and told her to go to Bergdorf's and buy herself some new underwear with it. Then she added, 'Good luck with that fairy.'"[8]

She had three siblings, all younger: sister Richie, who was, for a time, the roommate of Warhol Films' "It Girl" and superstar Edie Sedgwick; youngest sister Christina "Chrissy" Berlin, who was instrumental in engineering the defection of Russian ballet star Mikhail Baryshnikov; and the youngest sibling, brother Richard Berlin Jr.[9]

Association with Andy Warhol

After several years as a reluctant debutante and a failed marriage, Brigid Berlin met Andy Warhol in 1964 and quickly became a central member of his entourage.[10] After moving to Hotel Chelsea, she took on the nickname Brigid Polk because of her habit of giving out 'pokes', injections of Vitamin B and amphetamines. These injections were readily available through the many 'Doctor Feelgoods' in New York and perfectly legal.[11]

Berlin appeared in several of Warhol's films, including Chelsea Girls (1966), in which she is seen injecting herself while performing a monologue, and Ciao! Manhattan (1972), which starred Edie Sedgwick. Decades later, she appeared in minor parts in two John Waters' films: Serial Mom (1994) and Pecker (1998). Pie in the Sky: The Brigid Berlin Story (2000) is a documentary in which she tells her life story in intimate detail and breaks her diet by consuming an entire meal of key lime pies. In its review, Variety suggests "Berlin comes across as a rather sad character despite her colorful and provocative life."[12]

She was known for her obsessive taping and photographing of everyday life. [13] Selections from these tapes were later compiled by Anthony Ingrassia to form the play Andy Warhol's Pork. Other tapes made by her were the basis for Live at Max's Kansas City (recorded 1970, released 1972), The Velvet Underground's first live album.

Berlin was complicit in one of Warhol's more infamous pranks when, in 1969, Warhol announced that all of his paintings were the work of Berlin.[14] Brigid enthusiastically followed this line when interviewed by Time. The prank led to a drop in the value of Warhol's work, and both parties eventually retracted their statements. The question of authorship looms large in valuing Warhol's paintings to this day.[15]

In 1975, Berlin began work as a permanent employee for Andy Warhol's Interview magazine, a position that she held until well after Warhol's death. Berlin transcribed interviews as well as knitted under the desk. Patricia Hearst (a close friend of Berlin who began work at Interview in 1988) observed "On my first day at work, I noticed two small pugs who seemed to have the run of the castle. They belonged to a woman who sat behind the front desk every day from 9:00 to 5:00, but who never seemed to answer the phone. Instead, she compulsively knitted, ate bags of candy and tended lovingly to the dogs."

Artwork

Berlin was also a prolific artist. Therein it has been argued by some that her artwork was both influential to Andy Warhol's and simultaneously overshadowed by Warhol's celebrity and output. Berlin's "Tit Prints" were artworks created using her bare breasts. Berlin would dip her breasts into multiple colored paints and then create a print by pressing them down onto canvas/paper. The Tit Prints are arguably Berlin's most infamous work and were exhibited by Jane Stubbs at a gallery on Madison Avenue in 1996. On occasion, Berlin would publicly create Tit Prints, integrating visual art and performance art that "is totally not about nudity, this is about, you know, art." She performed this act live at the Gramercy International Art Fair. After experiencing the performance, filmmaker John Waters later said "I think that she's the most unselfconscious nude person...[She has] great confidence for a fat girl."

Berlin also compiled and maintained scrapbooks that she referred to as "trip books."[16] Volumes of these scrapbooks collecting cartoons and sketches of male genitalia were known as "The Cock Book" and included the genitalia of artists such as Jasper Johns, Robert Rauschenberg, and Warhol.[17] Three volumes of "The Cock Book" sold for $175,000 at auction to artist Richard Prince.[18][19]

Both Berlin and Warhol used the medium of Polaroid photography obsessively, and are said to have been very competitive in the Polaroid film department, whether over the best equipment or the best film. In 1969-1970 German art dealer Heiner Friedrich did a small showing of Berlin's work called Polaroids and Tapes and created a catalogue for the work of the same name.[20] The experimental nature of Berlin's double-exposed Polaroids transcend the static, emotionless "icon" Polaroids of Warhol's, clearly showing the power of her personal vision and photographic style. Common subject matter of Berlin's Polaroids are self-portraits, Warhol Superstars, other artists and celebrities, and Off-Broadway one-woman shows. A one-woman show of her Polaroid self-portraits titled "It's All About Me" showed in 2015 at the Invisible-Exports Gallery in New York City. The New York Times review stated "Ms. Berlin's prints seem less of a lark and more like a strident, celebratory statement by an artist who was never shy about exposing...well, anything."[21]

Berlin's digitized archives were published in 2015 as Brigid Berlin Polaroids with a foreword by John Waters.[22] A review of the book in the Wall Street Journal notes that Berlin was also the first person Andy Warhol allowed to photograph his body after the 1968 assassination attempt.[23]

1996 to 2001 Joseph Patrick Kennedy II (born September 24, 1952) is an American businessman, Democratic politician, and a member of the Kennedy family. He is a son of former United States Senator Robert F. Kennedy and Ethel Kennedy, and he is a nephew of former U.S. President John F. Kennedy and former U.S. Senator Ted Kennedy.

Kennedy served as a member of the United States House of Representatives from the 8th congressional district of Massachusetts from 1987 to 1999. In 1979 he founded and, until he was elected to the U.S. House, led Citizens Energy Corporation, a non-profit energy company which provides heating oil to low-income and elderly families in Massachusetts. Thomas Crane Wales (June 23, 1952 October 12, 2001) was an American federal prosecutor and gun control advocate who was the victim of an unsolved murder. In 2018, FBI investigators announced they strongly suspected the killing to have been carried out by a paid hitman. A gunman killed Thomas C. Wales at approximately 10:40 p.m. on October 11, 2001. The gunman, standing in the backyard of Wales' Queen Anne home, fired several shots through a glass window, hitting Mr. Wales. He died at the hospital the next day.

Forensic scientists have determined that the murder weapon was a Makarov semi-automatic handgun fitted with an aftermarket barrel. Soviet Bloc countries manufactured the Makarov through approximately 1968. The aftermarket barrels are stainless steel, rifled with six lands and grooves and a left twist. Because there are a limited number of aftermarket barrels that were sold in the United States, investigators have been working to identify and test fire as many as possible.

Thomas Wales was born in Boston, Massachusetts. He was a graduate of Milton Academy, where he roomed with Joseph Patrick Kennedy II, the son of Robert F. Kennedy. The shots were heard by a neighbor who called 9-1-1.[7] The FBI state that a lone male suspect was reported to have been observed fleeing the scene Wales died at a hospital the next day. He is believed to be the only U.S. federal prosecutor in history to have been assassinated. The soviet block cold war pistol is hard to figure out but one possibility it was in the CIA arsenal to confuse investigators as to the country of origin an attack on a US official may have come from. There seems to be a reference to Nevada ATomic Testing and the Salvation Army is a letter thought to be from the assasin.

Ethiopian Airlines Flight 961 was a scheduled international flight serving the route Addis Ababa-Nairobi-Brazzaville-Lagos-Abidjan. On 23 November 1996, the aircraft serving the flight, a Boeing 767-200ER, was hijacked[1] en route from Addis Ababa to Nairobi[2] by three Ethiopians seeking asylum in Australia.[3] The plane crash-landed in the Indian Ocean near Grande Comore, Comoros Islands, due to fuel exhaustion; 125 of the 175 passengers and crew on board, including the three hijackers, died.[3] This is the first recorded instance of a ditching utilizing a wide-body aircraft.

Leul later commented:[The hijackers] knew they wouldn't make it to Australia - they just wanted us to crash. They should be dead. The way they were talking they didn't want to live. Instead of flying towards Australia, the captain followed the African coastline southward. The hijackers noticed that land was still visible and forced the pilot to steer east. Leul secretly headed for the Comoro Islands, which lie midway between Madagascar and the African mainland. During this time two of the hijackers went into the cabin, with the lead hijacker (as stated in the report) staying in the cockpit.

Crash landing Sequence showing the ditching of the aircraft; this was recorded by a South African tourist. The plane was nearly out of fuel as it approached the island group, but the hijackers continued to ignore the captain's warnings.

Most of the 230 occupants on-board were from the United States, but 42 more came from France, 10 from Argentina, and 60 more from sixteen other countries.

The pilots on board TWA Flight 800 were Captain Ralph G. Kevorkian, Co-pilot Steven E. Snyder and Flight Engineer Richard G. Campbell. All had more than 30 years employment with Trans World Airlines. There was also a Flight Engineer Trainee on board Oliver Krick, who was starting the sixth leg of his initial operating experience training.

Five pilots who were flying aircraft saw something arcing up towards TWA 800 has hundreds of others and other pilots flying then did. It appears it was a flare of some type. Not one of the usual color code for emergencies but more likely one used in counter-measures. These magnesium based pyrotechnics burn extremely hot thus can divert heat seeking missile from the engines of a jet. They an also perhaps produce higher temperatures or equal temperature to an electrical arc that is said to have set off an explosion inside the TWA Flight 800 747-100. The FQIS was giving "crazy reading" per the plane crew. The Fuel Quantity Information System may have indicated a true reading, a reading showing the defeuling or dumping of a fuel tank. The three modes of fuel operations on the plane are fueling before take off, dumping during an emergency, and defeuling at landing. The fuel movement of fuel is complex in these system during those operations and during fuel consumption as the area of discreet independent tanks are drained into jet engine usage as well. Conspiracy theories t have had trouble location a US Navy ship that fired a missile, one with a payload. But a flare fired towards a plane leaking fuel from sabotage matches all accounts.

A US Navy P3 Orion deploys flare counter-measures

Combing information that some flares were spotted and the Fuel Quantity Information System gave unexpected readings (and there was a two hour delay in take-off) opens the door to a theory a plane of some type (thought to have been a P3) could have ignited external fuel vapors.

AVIATION WEEK & SPACE TECHNOLOGY reports that right after the TWA 800 accident, ANG HH-60 helicopter co-pilot Captain Baur told federal officials: "Almost due south, there was a hard white light, like burning pyrotechnics, in level flight. I was trying to figure out what it was. It was the wrong color for flares. It struck an object coming from the right [TWA 800] and made it explode.

I have to say growing up in a fighter pilot and TWA pilot home makes me think of some scenarios. I had a carburetor fire in my Fiat 850 Spider that has a rear-mount engine and I could see as I drove down Highway 24 southbound at the Lafayette California turn-outs the fire flames in tow of my car behind me. I tried picking up speed but the fire trail grew. I took the turnout and shut down the engine and the fire burned out. "You can't outrun flames" my father told me. "Pilots have tried and it doesn't work". The plane was delayed for two hours, shortly after it took off a flare shot near its wing. In between the two events the pilot is recorded as saying there are crazy readings from the FQIS.

Trans World Airlines Flight 800 (TWA800) was a Boeing 747-100 that exploded and crashed into the Atlantic Ocean near East Moriches, New York, on July 17, 1996, at approximately 8:31 p.m. EDT, 12 minutes after takeoff from John F. Kennedy International Airport, on a scheduled international passenger flight to Rome with a stopover in Paris.

All 230 people on board died in the crash; it is the third-deadliest aviation accident in U.S. history. Accident investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) traveled to the scene, arriving the following morning amid speculation that a terrorist attack was the cause of the crash.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) and New York Police Department Joint Terrorism Task Force (JTTF) initiated a parallel criminal investigation. Sixteen months later, the JTTF announced that no evidence of a criminal act had been found and closed its active investigation.

The four-year NTSB investigation concluded with the approval of the Aircraft Accident Report on August 23, 2000, ending the most extensive, complex, and costly air disaster investigation in U.S. history at that time. The report's conclusion was that the probable cause of the accident was the explosion of flammable fuel vapors in the center fuel tank. Although it could not be determined with certainty, the likely ignition source was a short circuit. Problems with the aircraft's wiring were found, including evidence of arcing in the fuel quantity indication system (FQIS) wiring that enters the tank. The FQIS on Flight 800 is known to have been malfunctioning; the captain remarked about "crazy" readings from the system about two minutes and 30 seconds before the aircraft exploded. As a result of the investigation, new requirements were developed for aircraft to prevent future fuel-tank explosions.

Pursuant to official U.S. Navy orders, I was aboard USAir Flight 217 out of Charlotte, North Caroline, bound for Providence, Rhode Island. I was sitting in a window seat (5E) on the right side of the aircraft. lhe sun had already set and complete darkness was fast approaching. Off the left side (west) of USAir 217 was a hint of dusk, not much more than that. To the right side (east) it was near pitch black. I could not make out the surface of the water, nor make out any land features as we approached New York's Long Island. There were random small lights below us and off in the distance, but I was unable to determine which ones were coming from land based sources or which ones were coming from small crafts on the water. At about 8:20 to 8:30 PM I happened to be looking out of my window when the blinking lights of what I thought was a small private plane approach the right side and then fly under USAir217. It didn't seem to be traveling very fast as it was fairly easy to follow it's flight path. It approached USAir217 from an relative bearing of about 45 degrees. From the time I first spotted the small plane's lights until they passed under USAir217 and out of view was perhaps only about 5 seconds. The small plane appeared to be only about 200-300 feet or so below us. A very short time later, 30 seconds or less, I spotted what appeared to be a warning flare type light off the right side (perpendicular to USAir217), slightly behind my line of sight (IO to 20 degrees), and at a downward angle of 45 to 60 degrees,. I cannot remember if the "flare" was inboard or outboard of the USAir217's right engine. The "flare" moved from my right to left, repeat, left to right a north-northeast heading.

The flares' flight path was parallel or perhaps moving slowly inboard to the USAir217's flight path. The "flares" relative speed was faster than USAir 217, moderately overtaking the USAir217. I distinctly remember it's forward motion relative to the USAir217. During the approximately 7-10 seconds I observed the "flare", it appeared to be climbing. It then pitched over and then just after apex (one to two seconds at the most) a small explosion appeared in the center of the "flare." The body of the explosion was spherical in shape for a few moments and then suddenly grew much bigger and then began to elongate as it appeared to head downward, growing larger as it descended I could easily distinguish the color variations of the explosion's flame body The flame body's motion, relative to the USAir217, appeared to be slightly west-southwest, toward us. It did not appear to be heading east from my perspective. I was trying to watch the explosion as long as I could but the USAir217's right wing cut off my line of sight as the plane passed over the area. I never did see the flame ball hit the surface of the water. I asked the male passenger sitting immediately behind me, a Mr. James Nugent I later discovered, if he saw the same thing and he indicated that he did. At the time of the explosion the possibility of the explosion being a passenger jet, especially a 747, didnt even enter my mind. At no time did I see TWA800 or any other aircraft, except the small plane that passed under USAir217 shortly before the "flare" and explosion. I also notified the flight attendant what I had seen.

This is the fundamental game of the Secret Team. They have this power because they control secrecy and secret intelligence and because they have the ability to take advantage of the most modern communications system in the world, of global transportation systems, of quantities of weapons of all kinds, and when needed, the full support of a world-wide U.S. military supporting base structure. They can use the finest intelligence system in the world, and most importantly, they have been able to operate under the canopy of an assumed, ever-present enemy called “Communism.” It will be interesting to see what “enemy”

FRANCE: JOURNALISTS ACCUSE US OF CONCEALING CAUSE OF TWA 800 CRASH

Governor Pat Brown, who had supported Cranston, appointed Salinger a Democratic senator to fill the vacancy resulting from the July 30, 1964, death of retiring Senator Clair Engle; he took office on August 4, 1964. In his bid for a full six-year term in the 1964 election, Salinger was defeated by former actor and vaudeville song and dance man George Murphy. Salinger resigned from the Senate on December 31, 1964, three days before his term was to expire. Murphy, who was to take office on January 3, 1965, was appointed to fill the remaining two days of Salinger's term, giving Murphy a slight advantage in seniority in the Senate over other members elected in 1964 when seniority was more vital in Senate affairs than now.

Pierre Emil George Salinger (June 14, 1925 - October 16, 2004) (a hero in the Donegan family home) was an American journalist, author and politician. He served as the ninth press secretary for United States Presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson. Salinger served as a United States Senator in 1964 and as campaign manager for the 1968 Robert F. Kennedy presidential campaign.

Salinger was one of the managers of United States Senator Robert F. Kennedy's 1968 presidential campaign and was standing 10 to 12 feet away when Kennedy was fatally shot in the kitchen of the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles, California on June 5. Salinger, devastated by the assassination, moved to France and was a correspondent for the weekly news magazine L'Express.[7]

After leaving politics, Salinger became known for his work as an ABC News correspondent, particularly for his coverage of the 1979-81 Iran Hostage Crisis; the 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland; and his claims of a missile being the cause of the explosion of TWA Flight 800 in 1996.

The Associated Press Archive -A French magazine has published pictures it says supports a theory the U-S Navy accidentally shot down a Trans World Airlines (TWA) jumbo jet off New York last year, killing 230 people, despite repeated U-S denials.

Paris Match say the images from a radar videotape from John F. Kennedy airport showed an unidentified plane, which it claims was a U-S Navy Orion P3 surveillance aircraft.

It says another blip on the videotape might have been an intended target for a missile.

In a nine-page report, it says the images tended to back the missile theory.

Two American journalists based in Paris have accused Washington of concealing the real cause of the T-W-A 800 crash last July.

Pierre Salinger, the former ABC newsman and press secretary to President Kennedy, is co-leader of a team that claims the jet was shot down during a Navy training exercise when a missile "lost its lock on" its original target.

The 62-page report was released at a Paris news conference, coinciding with Paris- Match magazine's publication of radar images apparently showing a mystery blip racing towards the TWA plane.

The Paris-bound 747 exploded and crashed minutes after taking off, killing all 230 people aboard.

On Tuesday, the F-B-I seized a videotape, supposedly showing the radar images, from the Florida home of Richard Russell, a retired United Air Lines pilot and a member of Salinger's investigative team.

Salinger has no doubt as to the veracity of the images.

SOUNDBITE: "You have probably seen the Paris Match article this morning based on the paper as we gave them, as well as the fact that we allowed them to look at a special radar tape which showed what happened in the sky on July 17th; that tape done by the air traffic control completely confirms that a missile downed TWA 800 and despite navy statements that they have nothing to do with the TWA 800 crash we have strong evidence that they are wrong. SUPER CAPTION: Pierre Salinger, ABC journalist.

Salinger also pointed out that there were more than just a few eye witnesses to the incident.

SOUNDBITE: "Let us not forget that 154 people living in the Long Island area, where the missile testing was going on, saw one or two missiles rising in the air and a number of them saw an explosion in the air." SUPER CAPTION: Pierre Salinger, ABC journalist Mike Sommers, Salinger's colleague, explained what the radar pictures show.

SOUNDBITE: "Here are photographs of the radar tape. These are not our photographs, these are United States government photographs; Air Traffic Control, Federal Aviation Administration photographs which the FBI and the Pentagon yesterday, I gather, have described as bogus or phoney." SUPER CAPTION: Mike Sommer, ABC journalist Investigators say three possible crash theories remain - a bomb,a missile or mechanical failure - but they insist that investigation has ruled out an errant missile strike by the U.S. military.

Navy officials say no missile tests were under way at the time of the crash, and an inventory of the Navy arsenal turned up no evidence of friendly fire.

But both Salinger and Sommers say they have ample evidence to the contrary.

SOUNDBITE: "This investigation started on the night of July 17th 1996. Pierre and I were both informed by U-S intelligence sources, that a military missile had shot down Flight 800. Several other foreign intelligence agencies also informed us likewise- in a very short period of time." SUPER CAPTION: Mike Sommer, ABC journalist

However some discrepancies over the revelations have been raised.

On July 17, 1996, minutes after take-off, TWA Flight 800 was blown out of the sky, killing all 230 people on board. The FBI and CIA took over the investigation and misdirected it.

TWA employees, the aviation industry both civilian and military, and conspiracy theorists consider a crash of unsettled or unsettling factual assertions

After Salinger researched and wrote a number of articles in 1956 about labor union leader Jimmy Hoffa, Robert F. Kennedy hired him to be legal counsel for the Senate Select Committee investigating organized crime. Later, Kennedy wanted him to be press secretary to his brother, John F. Kennedy, who was then a member of the Senate.

Salinger worked on John Kennedy's presidential campaign in 1960 and became one of its leading figures. He was at times described as being part of Kennedy's Kitchen Cabinet of unofficial advisers.[10] After Kennedy was elected in 1961, he hired Salinger as his press secretary. When Kennedy became the first president to allow live television broadcasts of his news conferences, Salinger was said to have managed the press corps with "wit, enthusiasm and considerable disdain for detail",[3] which made him a "celebrity in his own right".

He accompanied Kennedy to conferences with other world leaders, including the 1961 meeting with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev in Vienna.[3] When an aide to Khrushchev invited Salinger to Moscow, Kennedy assented to his going.[3] Kennedy, however, had to explain to the press corps why he was sending a young and inexperienced Salinger to the Soviet Union.

In May 1962, Salinger went to Moscow alone to meet with the press. Upon his arrival, he was unexpectedly invited to spend time with Khrushchev at his dacha outside the city.[4] They shared meals and took long hikes along country roads as they discussed politics and world events, such as the Berlin crisis. Salinger spent 16 hours over two days with Khrushchev. After their first day together, Khrushchev said, "I have had such a good time today, I think I will do it again tomorrow."[1]:-149-

In October 1962, Salinger briefed the press about what had been learned about Soviet missiles being stationed in Cuba.[12] He later said that Kennedy's actions during that crisis were among the most incredible things a president had ever done in the 20th century and noted how close the countries had come to nuclear war.

Salinger continued as press secretary for United States President Lyndon B. Johnson after the assassination of President Kennedy.

At the time of President Kennedy's assassination in November 1963, Salinger was on a plane to Tokyo with six Cabinet members, including Secretary of State Dean Rusk.[14] Salinger was to attend an economic conference and start working on a February 1964 visit by Kennedy as the first United States president to visit Japan since the end of World War II.

Almost every sentence in his hand is full of bizarre spelling errors. Clearly, he was dyslexic, though un-diagnosed (I assume dyslexia diagnoses were rare at the time). Some of his errors: “vedio” for “video,” “polorrod” and “poliaroid” for “Polaroid,” “tailand” for “Thailand,” “scrpit” for “script,” “pastic” for “plastic,” “herion” for “heroin,” and “Leory” for “Leroy.” Biographers have suggested that sympathetic female classmates in college helped him compose his papers. But these friendly collaborative efforts weren’t enough to see him through the required course in “Thought and Expression” at Carnegie Tech, and he failed his first year. (From Andy Warhol, 2001)

On December 8, 1972, the Boeing 737-222 serving the flight, City of Lincoln, registration N9031U, crashed while approaching Midway Airport.

The plane crashed into a residential neighborhood, destroying five houses; there was an intense ground fire. Forty-three of the 61 aboard the aircraft and two on the ground were killed.

Among the passengers killed were Illinois congressman George W. Collins, CBS News correspondent Michele Clark and Dorothy Hunt, the wife of Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt. - Wikipedia

Ed Donegan asserts the Prescott Bush LBJ Donald Barr William Barr and V.P Richard Nixon NSC operation were creating Barrack Obama Jr. as part of the Indonesia plan (to keep the region free from Red China Dorothy Hunt the Treasury Dept. employee was fleeing) and this team killed JFK and then silenced JFK and RFK to keep the plan going and secret.

Howard Hunt on the assasination of JFK with is father involved, the assasination of his mother burried among so many other victims less notive was paid to her death than otherwise, and the fear E. Howard Hunt had his own son (himself) would face assasination if he spoke.

The George H.W. Bush and the Donald Barr fight against China Donald Barr and others had started at early as 1949 to regain Indonesia was still on as had been gaining Hawaii. There are some points I learned from my father in his tellings. I had seen it but it meant more and registered more when my father spoke in port because he selected that among other things to point out. WWII (Ed Donegan here) could be the Second World War OR it could be The the War in the European Theater and also the War in the Pacific. There were two wars in in a different theater. They were not the same war and the surrenders came at separate times.

The Cold War applied to the Pacific War as well after WWII.

Barr served in the Office of Strategic Services (OSS) during World War II. Following the conflict, he returned to [the CIA connected Columbia University], where he earned an M.A. in English in 1950 and completed course requirements for a Ph.D. in the discipline while also teaching in the English department. During this period, he also taught "courses with field work in sociology and political science at the School of Engineering" and wrote "science and mathematics texts for elementary and junior high school students." He initiated the Columbia University Science Honors Program in 1958 and was its director (as an assistant dean at the School of Engineering) until 1964. From 1963 to 1964, he also administered the National Science Foundation Cooperative College-School Program.

The Manhattan Project was give that name because of something that confused me as child. I was born in Manhattan Beach California. But I kept telling my mother that was in New York, he the beach of Manhattan Island. That is true. Enrico Fermi working on the Manhattan Project Donald Barr was very close to overlook from Columbia Point NYC the island of Manhattan and Fermi chose the name from his high energy physics office The Manhattan Project.

In the JFK LBJ administration White House Donald Barr hold an experimental money just off an air foce plane and it is the monkey time of birth a birthday party November 22 1961 or so perhaps arriving from California and perhaps headed to Indonesia

LBJ had been working for this plan and JFK had been objecting to it.

William Barr worked for the CIA from 1971 to 1977 while attending graduate school and law school. He was first hired as a summer intern for two years. During his law school years he was an analyst in the Intelligence Directorate division from 1973 to 1975, and then transitioning to an assistant in the Office of Legislative Counsel and an agency liaison to Congress from 1975 to 1977. - Wikipedia

William Barr's State of Emergency The attorney general has long held an expansive view of presidential power. With multiple crises converging in the run-up to the 2020 election, he is busy putting his theories to work. New York Times Magazine

By Mattathias Schwartz

Donald Barr's 26-page O.S.S. file, obtained from the National Archives, gives a detailed account of his transition from the military to intelligence work. In 1944, he shipped off to Europe. He suffered from hay fever and 20/200 vision; much of his time overseas was spent hospitalized with allergies. The next year, he was assigned to the O.S.S. His interviewer found him to be “a quiet, unassuming person ... matured beyond his age.” In late 1945, he moved to Washington to begin work at the Interim Research and Intelligence Service, which would become the State Department’s in-house intelligence bureau.

William, the couple’s second son, was born in 1950. By age 8, he had taken up the bagpipes, which would become a lifelong hobby. He attended the Horace Mann School in New York, where his classmates remembered his conservatism, the delight he took in making an argument and his sense of humor. The yearbook praised him as an “incomparable master of facial contortions.”

Barr’s involvement with campus politics continued at Columbia. He joined the Majority Coalition, which organized against student occupiers who had taken over the campus to protest the Vietnam War. Columbia was known as a feeder school for the C.I.A.

Barr interned at the C.I.A. in the summers of 1971 and 1972. In 1973, after completing his graduate degree in government and Chinese studies, he married Christine Moynihan, whom he met at a fraternity party. The next day, the couple drove to Washington, and Barr began a permanent job at the C.I.A. the day after that. His mother’s memories of the Great Depression, he said, had instilled in him a desire for career stability, so he began taking law courses at night. By then, he had transferred to the C.I.A.’s Office of Legislative Counsel. “He was the ultimate straight arrow,” says John Rizzo, who worked down the hall from Barr in the general counsel’s office, where Rizzo would eventually rise to become the acting head. “Very serious. He was a nose-to-the-grindstone guy.”

The new job put Barr on the C.I.A.’s seventh floor, not far from the director's office and near the center of what was shaping up to be a historic fight with Congress. In the aftermath of World War II, the presidency was endowed with vast new powers - mass surveillance, covert operations, proxy wars and nuclear weapons. The young C.I.A., spurred on by the imperative to win the Cold War, abused its own new powers to an astonishing degree. Despite a statutory ban on its involvement in either "police" or "internal-security functions," the C.I.A. surveilled and surreptitiously engaged with countless American citizens. The agency reported to the president and often took action based on informal conversations, without ever committing much to paper. Secrecy around the agency's transgressions held until the 1970s, when antiwar sentiment began to peak. The scandals around the Pentagon Papers (1971) and the Watergate break-in (1972), culminating in the long-anticipated Vietnam defeat, convinced much of the public that the federal government should no longer be given the benefit of the doubt. In 1973, Richard Helms, the longtime C.I.A. director, ordered the destruction of internal C.I.A. documents regarding MK-Ultra, an experimental mind-control program. "The program was over," Helms later recalled. "We thought we would just get rid of the files as well, so anybody who had assisted us in the past would not be subject to follow-up, or questions, embarrassment, if you will. … We kept faith with the people who had helped us, and I see nothing wrong with that."

IT IS ALSO POINTED OUT THAT THE DISASTER SQUAD FROM THE IDENTIFICATION DIVISION ARRIVED IN CHICAGO SHORTLY AFTER THE DISASTER AND IN COOPERATION WITH UNITED AIRLINES, THE CHICAGO PD EFFECTED IDENTIFICATION OF THE DEAD PASSENGERS. THIS WAS A ROUTINE INVESTIGATION ON THE PART OF THE FBI AND HAD ABSOLUTELY NO CONNECTION WITH A POSSIBLE DAMV VIOLATION.

IT IS AGAIN REITERATED THERE WAS ABSOLUTELY NOTHING UNUSUAL OR UNTYPICAL IN THE FBI'S PARTICIPATION OF THIS CRASH. THE IN- VESTIGATION OF THE ACTUAL CRASH WAS TERMINATED WITHIN 2ø HOURS OF THE ACCIDENT AND ALL PERTINENT INFORMATION FURNISHED TO NTSB. END

But what has happened since? THE FBI proccess what was there from a chemicals perspective. But what was in people's minds that might have been factors in the crash?

J. Edgar Hoover had just died and I Ed Donegan and others suspect his worldwide espionage team of being planners of what JFK was trying to stop. Since that time E. Howard Hunt as confessed to the US Deep State CIA assassination of JKF as as Chauncey Holt both offering extensive details more documents available since then backup. Dorothy Hunt was looking for hush money and Nixon was as V.P. under Eisenhower with George H.W. Bush, Prescott Bush, and LBJ in regime change plans JFK was trying to stop, and all had been part of assassinating JFK. That story-line is not in the press yet but it is in credible sources that have an active rather than past interest in the history of the JFK assassination.

Page 42 of the PDF linked to above shows the FBI contempt for Conspiracy Theorist. FBI activity at the scene may be justified but in retrospect the facts since the crash now weigh in favor of support for the conspiracy theories.

To understand the air disasters of TWA Flight 800 and UAL 553 first consider this diagram of some of the connected people some connections known before and some just being described now.

Since 2014 some new things have happened. Chauncey Marvin Holt's book has been published (posthumously) as he awaited other deaths after his own for that book to be made public and in that book is an appendix full of documents scanned that corroborate the confession of E. Howard Hunt. And about 2014 I arrived in Texas a person connected to St. John Hunt via our parents and before I knew anything about this I said I had heard a plot to shoot down a plane I was considering boarding to go live with my mother who is comparable to and connected to Dorothy Hunt of UAL 533.

Fifty years ago, a jet fell from the sky into the Southwest Side neighborhood. Here’s what happened, in the words of those who were there.

By Mike Thomas

IN THE AIR

As United Flight 553 approached Chicago, fog, drizzle, and light snow had cut visibility to about a mile. The aircraft had taken off from Washington National Airport at 12:50 p.m. Central time, with Omaha, Nebraska, as its ultimate destination. It was scheduled for a 2:31 landing at Midway.

With 61 aboard - 55 passengers and a crew of three pilots and three flight attendants - the 94-seat plane was about three-fifths full. Among the passengers: George W. Collins, 47, a U.S. representative from Chicago who was returning home to help organize a Christmas party for kids; Michele Clark, 29, a newly minted CBS News national correspondent who grew up in Chicago and was coming back to visit her parents; and Dorothy Hunt, 52, the wife of Watergate ringleader E. Howard Hunt, who was facing trial the following month.

Anderson:The last words the pilot said to us were, “We are at 4,000 feet and everything is going well.”

But then a warning light came on in the cockpit. The flight data recorder had stopped working. “See what’s wrong with it, will ya?” Whitehouse told his second officer, Barry J. Elder. (The cockpit audio recorder was still functioning.)

What E. Howard Hunt and others who had worked for Nixon would be at trial risk for is breaking into DNC headquarters. Funded by reelection money redirectred (think Trump hush money) the burglars hoped to supress or discover or both any information the Kennedy DNC officials may have had about

Nixon, once a V.P. and his Watergate burglar team was also tied to assassinating JFK for protecting the Caribbean operations Phillip Twombly and others had setup for subversion and overthrows, the list is long, but included Guatamal and Indonesia and an attempt on Cuba.

The press mocked Nixon about many thing but in his own mind Richard Nixon was doing what the 1) The USA had to, and 2) What the USA also had to deny. Overthrow countries with illegal covert intervention and assassinations. That later included assasinating JFK and later RFK as they became a risk to Nixon and Nixon's (including George H.W. Bush, E. Howard Hunts, Chauncey Holt's, and LBJ's) secrets.

In 1971, Colson, who was then director of Nixon's Office of Public Liaison, hired Hunt, where he joined the White House Special Investigations Unit, specializing in political sabotage.

OTD 7/6/2024 In 1971: Charles Colson introduces E. Howard Hunt to John Ehrlichman. Colson needs Ehrlichman's permission to hire him. Hunt's first assignment for the White House was a covert operation to break into the Los Angeles office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, Lewis J. Fielding.[26] In July 1971, Fielding refused a request from the Federal Bureau of Investigation for psychiatric data on Ellsberg.[27] Hunt and Liddy cased the building in late August.[28] The burglary, on September 3, 1971, was not detected, but no Ellsberg files were found.[29]

In the summer of 1971, Colson authorized Hunt to travel to New England to seek potentially scandalous information on Senator Edward Kennedy related to Chappaquiddick incident and Kennedy's possible extramarital affairs.[23] Hunt sought and used CIA disguises and other equipment for the project.[30] The mission eventually proved unsuccessful, with little useful information uncovered by Hunt.[23]

In 1972, on Colson's orders, Hunt and G. Gordon Liddy were part of an assassination plot targeting journalist Jack Anderson.[33] Nixon disliked Anderson because Anderson published a 1960 election-eve story about a secret loan from Howard Hughes to Nixon's brother,[34] which Nixon believed was a factor in his election defeat to John F. Kennedy. Hunt and Liddy met with a CIA operative and discussed methods of assassinating Anderson, which included covering Anderson's car steering wheel with LSD to drug him and cause a fatal accident,[4] poisoning his aspirin bottle, and staging a fatal robbery. The assassination plot never materialized because Hunt and Liddy were arrested for their involvement in the Watergate scandal later that year.

On June 17, 1972, five men were arrested for breaking into the Democratic National Committee's offices at the Watergate complex in Washington DC. They were not typical burglars - they were dressed in suits and ties, and they had 39 rolls of film, bugging equipment, and about $5,400 in $100 bills (about $40,000 in 2022 dollars), along with keys to nearby rooms where even more cash was found. (The picture below shows what was found on one burglar - Bernard Barker aka Frank Carter - when arrested, including two $100 bills and other currency).

But that still did not answer the big question about where the money came from.

That took further work and quickly came out in newspaper articles and a report by the General Accounting Office (GAO), which does non-partisan research for Congress and executive agencies and is now known as the Government Accountability Office.

Most of the money that Barker withdrew matched precisely four checks that all appeared to come from a Mexican lawyer, Manual Ogarrio Daguerre.

Investigative Breakthroughs

The New York Times reported this on July 31, 1972, in an article by Walter Rugaber ("Cash in Capital Raid Traced to Mexico"). According to the article, Ogarrio was in "delicate" health and could not speak, but a family member denied any connection to the checks and denied knowing Bernard Barker.

That could have been the end of this investigative angle, except for Carl Bernstein's big scoop.

Bernstein had gone to Miami to talk to a prosecutor who was already looking into the burglars' Miami connections. Upon arriving, he saw Rugaber's article and thought about trying to fly to Mexico to learn more. No, editor Barry Sussman told him. See if you can find anything more from the prosecutor.

Bernstein dug in and eventually learned about one more check that had been deposited into Barker's bank account. This was what became known as the Dahlberg check, after Kenneth Dahlberg, to whom the $25,000 cashier's check (almost $200,000 in 2022 dollars) had been made out.

The Money Trail Deepens

Carl Bernstein passed this information to fellow reporter Bob Woodward, who managed to reach Dahlberg by phone.

Dahlberg admitted to Woodward that he had “accumulated some cash” “in the process of fundraising” and getting a cashier’s check made out to himself. He said that he gave the check-in in early April to one of two people who were high up in President Nixon’s re-election effort.

That’s as far as Woodward and Bernstein were able to get on July 31, 1972, but further investigation was able to follow the Dahlberg check and the Ogarrio checks even further back. Based on the press reports, the General Accounting Office opened its investigation and interviewed Dahlberg and other Nixon campaign officials.

On August 26, the GAO issued its report concluding that the Nixon re-election committee had failed to keep required records and referring the matter to the Department of Justice for possible prosecution.

Watergate scandal Main article: Watergate scandal Seymour Hersh reported in The New Yorker that the Nixon White House tapes show that, following the assassination attempt on George Wallace on May 15, 1972, Nixon and Colson agreed to send Hunt to the Milwaukee home of the gunman, Arthur Bremer, to place McGovern presidential campaign material there. The intention was to link Bremer with the Democrats. Hersh wrote that, in a taped conversation:

Hunt did not make the trip, however, because the FBI moved quickly to seal Bremer's apartment and place it under police guard.

the Democratic National Committee at the Watergate complex office building.[36] On June 18, 1972, five burglars were arrested by police at the Watergate. Hunt and Liddy were indicted on federal charges three months later. -Wikipedia Doroty Wetzel and Glorian Gainey each had differing OSS CIA backgrounds before they met their husbands. James Paul Donegan and E. Howard Hunt each had their own CIA OSS backgrounds and during those they me their future wives. St. John Hunt and Ed Donegan (myself) are telling the story of their parents, how they met, and how that relates to a Bush Nixon based Mafia hit on JFK and how it ties to our family especially around 1952 or so during the Korean War and Cold War at the CIA front base of operation Asia Tokyo Soviet Union Indonesia airbase. Jen More also tells the story of Glorian Donegan as she marries James Paul Donegan my father and that she carries a hidden identity with her that the most powerful elites in the world need to hide IF they are to conceal their own crimes including the assassination of JFK and RFK and others.

Some of it is clear through St. John Hunt and Roger Stone books, other sources like The Unauthorized Biography of George Bush and other works like that from those authors but the full details come in through the Donegan family far more than anything available to history so far.

We will have to view history as complex and in depth as it is and see it just as a series of images of time passing by and we will a bust of Richard Nixon's head as the scrubhead we will move around this time-line of imagery of history to understand it all.

Timeline (a of a movie being made and in the film editing software) scrubbing allows you to quickly see when timed elements appear and disappear on the slide stage without previewing the entire slide. Click and drag the playhead to view timing and animation. While scrubbing, you won't see layers and triggers on the slide stage.

According to Col Prouty it was a Nixon (who was president at the time trying to get re-elected) who had a an ally in the airline regulators and safety inspectors who helped cover-up the crash realitis of UAL 553. It is through Prouty as a common element (I knew Col Prouty) that my mother and St John Hunts mother meet in history through our fathers meeting in history.

Before his death E. Howard Hunt of the CIA warned his son St. John Hunt that the CIA had aready murdered his mother Dorothy Hunt and would do the same to him if he St. John knew too much or spoke too much.

We need to take Nixon's embodiment back to 1961. In November 1960 Vice President Richard Nixon (who served under Grand Old Party General Eisenhower) lost to Senator John F. Kennedy. JFK sworn in January 20 1961 JFK began to reverse regime change and overthrow plans the CIA had underway. In 1963 JFK was assassinated by Mr. George H.W. Bush of the CIA and with LBJ, Cord Meyers, William King Harvey, Murder Inc under Myers Lanskey with Charles Harrelson and others in on the job if all these identifiable credible first hand sources are believed in their combined stories.

Prior to his defeat in the race for President in 1960 Richard Nixon was Vice President under General Eisenhower. Prior to 1953 when he and Eisenhower were sworn in he was a Los Angeles area US Representative and the favorite of big money donors which he denied in his Checkers the Dog speach the small puppy his only gift not reported from any donor.

During the Los Angeles Representative era from 1946 on he helped anti-communist politics following WWII under William Averell Harriman, better known as Averell Harriman, the Rockefeller's, J. Edgar Hoover, the Walker family, the Bush family, and many others. In this plan organized and executed through groups like the Trilateral Commission, the Council on Foreign Relations, the National Security Council, and other CIA and DIA elements the overthrow plans were conducted as black opps and little or no budge accounting as a matter of policy and fact of financies since much of the money came from sources outside the USA and operational support that would have required significant budget from militarys and paramilitaries and revolutionary groups and NGOs from around the Post WII government whose accounting was not in US budgets to be tracked.

Novel Savages is a plan General Lansdale and CD Jackson had to use aligned savages as well as others from "good" groups to ally against a comon enemy in covert coordinated civil warfare interventions throughout the unstable Post WWII world were many former colonies were now independent with new governments and constitutions at just the time rocketry and jet flight made nearby nations a threat to any superpower if the nearby nation hosted foriegn abilities to strike at the mainland of a superpower.

It is likely Richard Nixon operatives were in the assassination of JFK, the Watergate Break-in to DNC operatives was an investigation as to what dirt the DNC had on Nixon as reforms were underway, and the assassinations done under VP Nixon were enabled by the plans US Representative Nixon put in place with Mutual Security ACt, etc.,

When reforms shutdown pay for Nobel Savages they had to be kept loyal and able to survive. As Chauncey Marvin Holt said there was no retirement for a CIA hit-man. That wasn't part of the contrat. Ray Ryan was assassinated and Dorothy Hunt was too.

What was concealed in the assassination of JFK was the plans for Indonesia and other locations that did involve Barrack Obama Jr as a CIA project and much of tied into JFK and Patrica Kennedy in Los Angeles and the Joseph Kennedy Sr story of the Packard Motors built engine for the P-51's and his role with Great Britain. My father and family were part of this and that will get into TWA flight 800 but first UAL 553.

UAL 553 is dealth with first in this chapter

It should be noted E. Howard Hunt the CIA agent confirmed this on his death bed and the son of E. Howard Hunt and Dorothy Hunt knew the internal oral and photographic history of Dorothy as Paymistress with hush money Nixon needed to pay out and so there are execellent sources on this. Further it adds to my info on other flights and subplots of the same and confirmabale theory elements.

You will see some regular names surface here. Among this is Stacy Keech listed as a actor and who starred in such entertainment as Crime Story of Chicago Major Crimes Squad 1950's atomic cafe with a Las Vegas atomic blast ending and deco everywhere. But before that he was a real detective in Chicago and new the Chicago Mob including Jack Ruby who according to Keech on Unsolved Mysteries had been promised a casino in Cuba in exchange for helpign overthrow Cuba.

This is getting easier to understand. The CREEP program was funneling syphoned campaign funds into hush money but only so much could be done and when the Watergate burglars were caught and tied to that hush money a new solution was needed. The oil and gas industry may have been a NEW source of hush money and a meeting about to occur.

Weisberg, an Office of Strategic Services officer during World War II, U.S. Senate staff member and investigative reporter, devoted 40 years of his life to researching and writing about the Kennedy and King assassinations. His first book, Whitewash: The Report on the Warren Report (1965), was the first critical study of the government's official version of what happened in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

Five months before the Watergate burglary, E. Howard Hunt had organized a Democratic Party headquarters break-in that later became known as Watergate. At the time of the crash, he was part of a conspiracy. According to Colson, as many as 11 other people were involved in the Watergate. For that reason, he gave $10,000 in cash and cash in Dorothy's luggage - a government sabotaged the Watergate investigation. Sherman Skolnick, a political researcher from Chicago, claimed that government meddling caused the disaster. Skolnick believed Hunt was carrying documents that Nixon's impeachment, and orchestrated the crash to silence Hunt. Skolnick also speculated that Dorothy Hunt's luggage, which Nixon, intended to silence her knowledge of the Watergate.

Colson may look like a nice guy who could sell water to a fish, but he is actually a powerful government assassination contributor who worked as an advisor to President Nixon.

Over time, Weisberg became recognized, both nationally and internationally, as the dean of writers critical of the official version of the JFK assassination known as the Warren Commission Report. Harold Weisberg donated the world's largest accessible private collection of government documents and public records relating to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy to Hood College and the Beneficial-Hodson Library at Hood College, which donated a copy to the National Security Internet Archive.

Steamshovel Press editor Kenn Thomas recently had the distinct pleasure of having dinner with legal researcher Sherman Skolnick at his usual haunt, the River Flame restaurant off Highway 94 outside of Chicago. Sherman Skolnick has been on the scene since his early courtroom victories regarding the corruption of Illinois state courts and congressional reapportionment in that state. His research has made him a perennial figure in national politics.

He helped expose the existence of a Chicago-area assassination plot against JFK involving a Lee Harvey Oswald. He demonstrated that sabotage was the probable reason for a United Airlines crash that killed the wife of E. Howard Hunt and eleven other Watergate figures. He surfaced a great deal of information regarding witnesses to events surrounding the Inslaw investigation. In fact, he continually exposes interesting and under-reported details about current political scandals on the hotline of his group, the Citizens Committee to Clean Up the Courts (312-731-1100), which also has helped many people with their struggles in bankruptcy court. Sherman also produces a Chicago public access cable television program that further documents the issues and cases he has brought to public scrutiny. Virtually dismissed entirely by the mainstream and often labeled a kook even by some in the conspiracy research community, Skolnick's work has nevertheless had a remarkable staying power and his successes in court and in the media have earned him much respect as a champion dirt-digger and exposer of hidden truth. This interview provided a rare opportunity to discuss history with him, his own as well as that of the people and events he has investigated over the years.

Q: How did you get in to this line of work, Sherman?

A: It's not a line of work. It's unpaid work if I ever saw it. I lived all my life with my parents. Since the age of six I have been a paraplegic from polio, similar to the late President Roosevelt, who was a hero when I was a child. In later years, I didn't consider him so much of a hero, I considered him one of the greatest counter-revolutionaries of American history in that he prevented a genuine upheaval against the ruling elite in this country which was overdue.

Wikipedia -Sherman H. Skolnick (July 13, 1930 - May 21, 2006) was a Chicago-based activist and conspiracy theorist.

Early life

Born in Chicago in 1930, at the age of six, Skolnick was paralyzed by polio, and he used a wheelchair for the rest of his life. His parents, a homemaker and a tailor, were Jewish European immigrants. Skolnick's father was from Russia.

Career

Skolnick was founder and chairman of the Citizens' Committee to Clean Up the Courts, which he started in 1963. He used the local press to distribute his reports, later establishing a telephone hotline-"Hotline News", a public-access television show on cable TV, and a web site.

Skolnick's investigations put Otto Kerner Jr. in prison for three years; and led to the resignation of two Illinois Supreme Court justices, Roy J. Solfisburg, Jr. and Ray Klingbiel, who, as Skolnick reported, had accepted bribes of stock from a defendant in a case on which they ruled. The scandal catapulted John Paul Stevens, special counsel to an investigating commission, to fame as a justice of the U.S. Supreme Court. In 2001, the story became the subject of a book, Illinois Justice, by Kenneth A. Manaster. His investigations also revealed corruption at the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI).

Skolnick's final written works include an 81-part series entitled "The Overthrow of the American Republic," and a 16-part series entitled

"Coca-Cola, the CIA, and the Courts."

Later life and death

Skolnick died of a heart attack on May 21, 2006.

Sherman H. Skolnick

Sherman H. Skolnick was born in 1933. A paraplegic invalid he became a campaigning author and journalist. In 1963 he established Citizen's Committee to Clean Up the Courts, a public interest group researching and disclosing certain instances of judicial bribery and political murders.

Skolnick began Hotline News in 1971. He also produced o Broadsides, a one hour weekly taped public access Cable TV Show in Chicago.

In 1973 Skolnick published The Secret History of Airplane Sabotage, a book dealing, among other things, the plane crash that killed Dorothy Hunt and Michelle Clark on 8th December, 1972.

Skolnick also revealled corruption at the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI). In a 1991 article in Spotlight he claimed that the BCCI bribed 25 per cent of both Houses of Congress, 108 Congressmen and 28 U.S. Senators.

In 2003 Skolnick published Ahead of the Parade, a collection of articles that include: The Murder of John F. Kennedy, The Murder of Martin Luther King and The Jesse Jackson Affair.

Sherman H. Skolnick died at his home on 21st May, 2006. Overthrow of the American Republic: The Writings of Sherman Skolnick was published in 2007.

> Upwards of twelve persons connected in one way or another with Watergate, boarded United Air Lines Flight 553 on the afternoon of December 8, 1972. They had something in common. That week there had been a gas pipeline lobbyists meeting as part of the American Bar Association meeting in Washngton, DC It was conducted by Roger Moreau. His secretary was Nancy Parker. Among those attending were Ralph Blodgett and James W. Krueger, both attorneys for the Northern Natural Gas Co., of Omaha, Nebraska. Associated with them were Lon Bayer, attorney for Kansas-Nebraska Natural Gas Co.; Wilbur Erickson, president, Federal Land Bank in Omaha. This was a belligerent group determined to blow the lid off the Watergate case. Reason Former US Attorney General, John Mitchell, and his friends running the Justice Department were putting the spear into Northern Natural Gas. Some officials of that firm and its subsidiaries were indicted on federal criminal charges, September 7, 1972, in Omaha, Chicago, and Hammond, Indiana. Charge bribery of local officials in Northwest Indiana to let the gas pipeline go through. To blackmail their way out of these charges, the Omaha firm had uncovered documents showing that Mitchell, while U.S. Attorney General in 1969, dropped anti-trust charges against a competitor of Northern Natural Gas - El Paso Gas Co. The dropping of the charges against El Paso was worth 300 million dollars. A spokesman for Mitchell belatedly claimed, in March, 1973, that Mitchell had "disqualified" himself in 1969, because Mitchell's law partner represented El Paso. The Justice Department under Mitchell, dropped the charges. Period. About the same time, Mitchell, through a law partner as nominee, got a stock interest in El Paso. Gas and oil interests, such as El Paso, Gulf Resources, and others contributed heavily to Nixon's spy fund, supervised by Mitchell.

Pipeline official Krueger was carrying the Mitchell-El Paso documents on the plane. He had told his wife that he had in his possession irreplaceable papers of a sensitive nature. For months after the crash, his widow demanded, to no avail, that United Air Lines turn over to her his briefcase. It later came out in the pipeline trial in Hammond, that Blodgett had been browbeating federal officials, to drop the criminal charges just prior to the crash. (Our investigation uncovered that most of the local officials, to be government witnesses against the pipeline, were murdered just prior to trial. In all, some five Northwest Indiana officials.)

Dorothy Hunt, Watergate pay-off woman, who offered executive clemency directly on behalf of Nixon to some of the Watergate defendants, was seeking to leave the US with over 2 million dollars in cash and negotiables that she had gotten from CREEP, Committee to Re-Elect the President. (She was so concerned about these valuables, she purchased a separate first class seat next to her on the plane for this luggage.) She and her husband, E. Howard Hunt, the Watergate conspirator, were a "C.I.A. couple", two agents "married" and living together. Early in December, 1972, both were threatening to blow the lid off the White House if (a) he wasn't freed of the criminal charges; (b) Nixon didn't pay heavy to suppress the documents they had showing he was implicated in the planning and carrying out, by the FBI and the CIA, of the political murder of President Kennedy; and (c) Dorothy and Howard Hunt didn't both get several million dollars. Some of these details are in the Memo of Watergate double-agent, James McCord, a CIA official in charge of the Agency's physical security; details before the Senator Ervin Committee. Hunt claimed, according to McCord, to have the data necessary to impeach Nixon. McCord said matters were coming to a head early in December, 1972. Mrs. Hunt was unhappy with her job of going all over the country to bribe defendants and witnesses in the bugging case. She wanted out.

Mrs. Hunt was on the way to arrange to take her money out of the country, possibly Costa Rica, to link up with international swindler Robert Vesco who was there at the time; through Harold C. Carlstead, whose wife was Mrs. Hunt's cousin. Carlstead reportedly did accounting and tax work for mobster-owned businesses in the Chicago area. He operated two Holiday Inn motels in Chicago's south suburbs - at 174th and Torrence, Lansing, Illinois and at 171st and Halsted, Harvey, Illinois. Carlstead's motel on Torrence was reportedly a favorite hang out for gangsters and dope traffickers such as apparently "Cool" Freddie Smith, Grover Barnes, and the late Chicago mobster Sam DeStefano (who aided the American CIA in bloody tricks and was snuffed out to silence him), to name a few. Mrs. Hunt had (a) Ten Thousand Dollars in untraceable cash; (b) Forty Thousand Dollars in so-called "Barker" bills, traceable to Watergate spy Bernard Barker; and (c) upwards of Two Million Dollars in American Express money orders, travelers checks, and postal money orders. (As shown by testimony before the National Transportation Safety Board, re-opened Watergate plane crash hearings, June 13-14, 1973. Hearings reopened as a result of my lawsuit claiming sabotage covered up by the N.T.S.B.) Carlstead issued a fake "cover" story that had (only) Ten Thousand Dollars with Mrs. Hunt. A story swallowed up by the Establishment Press.

Mrs. Hunt got on Flight 553 with Michele Clark, CBS Network newswoman, going to do an exclusive story on Watergate. Mrs. Hunt, Mitchell, Nixon - the story could have destroyed Nixon at the time. Ms Clark had lots of insight into the bugging and cover-up through her boyfriend, a CIA operative. In the summer of 1972, prior to any major revelations of Watergate, Ms Clark tried to pick the brains of Chicago Congressman George Collins, regarding the bugging of the Democratic headquarters. Ms Clark was sitting with Collins on the plane.

After the crash, Michele Clark's employer, CBS Network News, ordered and demanded that the body be cremated by the southside Chicago mortician handling the matter - possibly to cover up foul play. Later, the mortician was murdered in his business establishment, an unsolved crime. (We interviewed close confidants of her family who informed us of the details how CBS applied tremendous pressure and offered large sums for silence on the crash details and having her body cremated contrary to her family's wishes.)

Also on the plane were four or more people who knew about a labor union that had given a large "donation" to CREEP to head-off an criminal indictment of a Chicago labor union hoodlum (at the time of the book, 1973, actively investigated by us).

For many years, like clockwork, one Chicagoan went to Washington, D.C. on Monday and came back Friday afternoon on Flight 553 or its equivalent Lawrence T. O'Connor, Apt. 5-C, 999 North Lake Shore Drive, Chicago, Illinois. On Friday, December 8, 1972, he received a call from someone he knows in the White House, telling him not to take Flight 553 but to go instead to a special meeting.

My long-time friend, political activist Dick Gregory, informed me that there had been strenuous efforts to steer him that same afternoon onto United Air Lines Flight 553. Luckily, he had changed his mind.

Also getting on Flight 553 was a reputed "hit-man", pursuing Mrs. Hunt and others, and going under the "cover" of being a top Narcotics official with DALE (Drug Abuse Law Enforcement). He used the name Harold R. Metcalf. He is an unusual "narc"; he worked directly for Nixon. Metcalf told the pilot he was packing a gun, and so Metcalf was assigned seat B-17, near the stewardesses' jump seat and also near the food galley and the rear door of the plane. After the crash, he walked out of the cracked open fuselage of the pancaked plane wearing a jumpsuit. A former Military Intelligence investigator, who used his credentials to get into the crash site, identified the person posing as "Harold Metcalf" as an overseas CIA parachute spy. Metcalf evidently supervised certain foul play, possibly cyanide, directed at certain passengers, but he didn't know of the over all sabotage plan. One of our staff investigators confronted Metcalf about a week after the crash: (a) Metcalf, supposedly a government narcotics bigshot, knows nothings about dope. (b) in response to our question, "Did you know the plane was sabotaged?", he blurted out half a sentence, "It was not supposed to....", turning purple, he then left the room. Evidently, he was a double cut-out, an espionage term for an operative to be himself eliminated by someone else. His survival was an oversight.

(2) Sherman Skolnick, Ahead of the Parade (2003)

The murder of President John F. Kennedy, 1963: He was interfering with the Oil Cartel. He wanted to take away the IRS trick favoring them, the oil depletion allowance. He wanted real money, not toilet paper from the Federal Reserve, a private money ship masquerading as the U.S. Government central bank. A handful of ruling families own the Fed and profit from their issuance of Federal Reserve note "money" disguised as the "U.S. Dollar." Contrary to the U.S. Constitution, the Federal Reserve charges interest on their paper money issuance, benefiting certain ruling families.

Kennedy was the first Catholic President of the U.S. Although labeling himself as only nominally a Catholic, he was perceived as being under the thumb of the Vatican. He violated Church Canon Law, however, by going along with the attack upon another Catholic country, namely, Cuba. Some later explained JFK was tricked into the aborted invasion at the Bay of Pigs. Did his sin justify murder by the Church?

The Military Brass perceived him as soft on the Soviets, as a communist-sympathizer. Those who commit treason, so the logic goes, like JFK, are to be shot-right? Others now claim Kennedy was interfering with the future of the State of Israel, justifying them in snuffing him out. The book Final Judgment by Michael Collins Piper lays out a purported circumstantial case that Israel was implicated in the murder of JFK. The book rejects, out of hand, what others claim, however: that Nazi war criminals were involved (as documented by the late assassination researcher, Mae Brussell).

JFK wanted to stop the war in Southeast Asia, thus permitting, supposedly, the Soviet expansion to the Philippines and even to Australia, a former British prison colony. Kennedy was letting Dr. King rile up the country on racial issues. But overlooked: that JFK set loose in the U.S. that the era of the common man had arrived. A dangerous psychology, directly confronting the ruling families. And the ruling elite have a right, do they not, to assert their position by wiping out JFK? Fair is fair, right?

How to deal with JFK? Make an example of him. In front of numerous witnesses, blow out his brains in an open car. The media, on orders, will trumpet, a "lone assassin did it!" And then, the lone assassin is himself murdered. Thereafter, America will continue to "prosper" with the aid of the oil monopoly. Don't oil developers have a right to get rich? Old man Rockefeller, founder of the - infamous Standard Oil Trust, was allowed to murder competitors, right?

Would we listen carefully to spokespersons of these interests? Why and how it was necessary, for the "public good," to blow away JFK - so the U.S. could continue as a stable society?

… despite relaying all this Hunt concludes that the murder was a professional hit by someone looking to protect the Kennedy legacy, and had nothing to do with Cord Meyer, Angleton, Sturgis. Hunt writes in the book 'No one has ever made a deathbed confession about either crime' i.e. the murders of Mary Pinchot and JFK. But by that point Hunt apparently had made a deathbed confession about his involvement in the murder of JFK. So is this just the CIA editing his book before publication, as we know they did, or something more complex? Why would Hunt admit in 2003, on tape no less, to his involvement in the JFK assassination, only to then completely deny it in his autobiography several years later? Indeed, why did he make a confession at all, having always denied it? If this is a false confession - or even a real one that is then contradicted and denied, then what is the point, what's the reason? https://www.spyculture.com/disinfowars-24-howard-hunt-help-kill-jfk/

An on-tape confession, and a later retraction of the confession. It wasn't just a confession. E. Howard Hunt confessed on tape to his own involvement and the involvmenet of others and feared for his own life and the life of his son and suggested the CIA had killed his wire, Cord Meyer's wife and others including JFK. Does that sound like pressure on E. Howard Hunt to retract his confession and have CIA operatives been known to deny their activiities or lie about them.

E. Howard Hunt as said several different competing things. We have to rely on what others have said and the context of the total fabric of other confessions, other surviving documents and evidence, and then weigh what to believe from E. Howard Hunt. The emerging picture is the CIA did kill JFK and those connected to the assasination are silencing witnesses by intimidation, discredidation, or murder.

Dwight Chapin retrieved from Wikipedia and copied or modified to here

President Richard Nixon meeting with H.R. Haldeman, Dwight Chapin, John D. Ehrlichman in 1970

White House Appointments Secretary In office 1969-1973 President Richard Nixon

Born Dwight Lee Chapin December 2, 1940 (age 83) Wichita, Kansas, U.S Political party Republican Education University of Southern California (Bachelor of Arts)

Early life

Chapin was born in Wichita, Kansas. He got his first experience in California politics in 1958 at the American Legion's Boys State summer program, where he was elected the head of the Tory Party. His counterpart, the Whig Party leader, was Stacy Keach, who went into acting as a career. Chapin graduated in 1963 from the University of Southern California, where he was a member of Sigma Chi fraternity. At USC, he was a member of Trojans for Representative Government with future Watergate scandal participants Tim Elbourne, Donald Segretti, Gordon C. Strachan, Herbert Porter, and Ron Ziegler.

Early political career

When Nixon ran for California Governor in 1962, Chapin, then still at USC, was a paid Field Man (on-the-ground organizational leader for election campaigns) and worked with the volunteer organization. After the 1962 campaign, he was hired by H. R. Haldeman to work at the J. Walter Thompson Company, an advertising firm, in Los Angeles.

Chapin was part of Nixon's presidential campaign from 1967 to 1968, serving as Nixon's personal aide. Time described him as "young, athletic, religious, handsome, clean-cut, bright, ambitious, and tough."

Nixon's White House Staff

He was Special Assistant to the President (1969-1971), and then Deputy Assistant (1971-1973). He was the appointments secretary, responsible for scheduling presidential activities, appointments, and travel. In addition, Chapin was in charge of the White House television office. Chapin also oversaw the hiring and the supervising of presidential advance men, and headed that group to prepare for Nixon's second trip to the People's Republic of China (P.R.C.) in February 1972 (after the first trip to Japan in 1969). In 1973, Chapin was named one of the Ten Outstanding Young Men of the year by the United States Junior Chamber (Jaycees) for his work on the historic China trips (after Japan trips). Even Chinese government were both impressed with Chapin's skill at detail work, singling him out publicly in Beijing meetings: "You are an example of how we should utilize young men in government."

Watergate Scandal

It was during this time Chapin hired Donald Segretti, his former colleague from USC, to disrupt the campaigns of Democratic presidential hopefuls during the 1972 presidential primary season through acts of political "sabotage" - known as the "dirty tricks" campaign. Chapin was asked to find a "Dick Tuck" (a legendary Democratic political saboteur) type of prankster to perform the "dirty tricks" to work under H. R. Haldeman, Nixon's Chief of Staff, and the President.

Segretti later testified before a Watergate grand jury about the activities, including Chapin's supervisory role. Chapin denied any detailed knowledge of Segretti or actions that Segretti undertook during grand jury testimony. Segretti testified, "When Dwight hired me he made it clear he was hiring me because I was a lawyer and would know what was legal and what was not." Chapin was never indicted for any of Segretti's activities. Chapin resigned to work as an executive for United Airlines but was drawn back into the swirl of Watergate legal proceedings.

Imprisonment

In a 1974 jury trial, Chapin was convicted of making false material declarations before a grand jury and was imprisoned in the federal corrections camp at Lompoc, California (so-called "Camp Cupcake") from August 1975 to April 1976. Despite the relatively minor repercussions he remained indignant, initially vowing to appeal "all the way to the Supreme Court" (which he did) in a very hostile political climate. It was later revealed that he was earning $1,000 per week while in prison, on the payroll of W. Clement Stone Enterprises.

After Watergate Scandal and Nixon's resignation

After his release from prison, Chapin re-entered the private sector and worked at W. Clement Stone Enterprises in Chicago. From 1977 to 1984, he published a magazine called Success Unlimited. Chapin then worked for the international public relations firm Hill & Knowlton in Chicago. Later, Chapin had assignments in Geneva, Switzerland, Tokyo, Japan and Hong Kong, where he was managing director, Asia, for Hill & Knowlton.

In 1986, Chapin started Chapin Enterprises. The firm provided consulting services to many prestigious companies and associations. Chapin remained involved in politics and in 1980 worked for Ronald Reagan's election as president. In 1988, he held a position in the George H. W. Bush presidential campaign.

Chapin has maintained an active interest in politics and he is now a business consultant and mentor/coach in East Hampton, New York.[citation needed]. In 2022, he published a memoir titled The President's Man.

Donald Henry Segretti (born September 17, 1941, in San Marino, California) is an attorney best known for working as a political operative with then-U.S. President Richard Nixon's Committee to Re-elect the President during the early 1970s. Segretti served four and a half months in prison after investigations related to the Watergate scandal revealed his leading role in extensive political sabotage efforts ("ratfucking") against the Democrats.

Kriegsmarine) during World War I.

Captain Von Trap was an operator of such a sub an in torpodeo training he married the daugher of Robert Whitehead of Great Britain and I am just saying London for that. In 1925 after WWI in his Emperialism speech Prince Albert of York gives a poorly regarded speeach and he likely has a gene from Central Europe called FOXP2 he got from Mary of Teck, that same area.

As Agatha Whitehead dies Captai Von Trapp gets help from the Catholics in troublesome but likely noviciate Maria Kutchera, herself lacking family and being orphaned. A charismatic singer she is offered to the Von Trapp household to work with the children and will become their step mother as Captain Von Trapp and Maria Kutschera (neice of Franz Kutchera) mary. In 1936 they will move to the USA, the Von Trapp Barron and his biolgoial children and the new step-mother Maria.

By most suggestive information closes to when the events occured (inluding from Glorian Donegan and other relatives of mine) Maria Kutchera has left the convent because she was pregnant. In 1926 her children likely from the English royals and like Prince Edward of Wales (until 1936 or at least during 1936 King Edward VIII) leading to his abdication.

That is part of it. In Boston home of the Colonial Rebellion against England and later the Patota Famine immigration as the Republic of Ireland Roman Catholic farmers were starving to death the Boston Brahmin held finamcial and social power. And so did Harvard where a Roman Catholi was making a start from in Boston Joseph Kennedy Sr. He helped get (while working under FDR) the US Navy assistance to Captain Von Trapp and the now Whitehead children stuck in rising Nazi Central Europe.

By the 1950's the bastard children of those families where being asked to become sleeper or help make them. In 1961 in Los Angeles Barrack Obama Jr. was born and this was a long plan of the CIA who was closetly connected to Obama Sr. and Madelyn Payne Dunham. These 1950's were a time when the War State (Micheal Swanson) was interweiving CIA backed businesses and CIA projects for technology and covert access to locations around the world.

From Los Angeles Barrack Obama Jr. was placed into Trinit United Baptist Church for his very earl years but will spend some childhood in Indonesia in that CIA backed family. The Chicago piece of this story may have related to the Gary Caradori plane crash AND the Dorothy Hunt crash. My theory is that evidence might be in Chicago about some of this, and that the real birthday of Barrack Obama Jr. is (birth certificate created on) November 19, 1961 in Inglewood California Los Angeles County. I assert JFK was shot when Barrack Obama turned years old and the Hunt family may had information on the plans for Indonesia and the assassination of JFK as did "Mary" Cord Meyer's wife (and Cord Meyer per Hunt was part of the assassination) and Mary herself killed by someone from the CIA. This also pertains to Malcom X, since Barrack Obama had falsified origins he was laundered through fake backgrounds with possible story lines and Malcom X as a father and Marilyn Monroe as a possible mother asserted later in public. I think the real egg donor was Glorian Donegan and Malcom X the sperm donor. Dr Martin Luther King knew of this plot too, a plot launched with the support of Mr. George H.W. Bush of the CIA, LBJ, and others who resented far less the subversion tecniques the British were using.

WATERGATE PAYMISTRESS MURDERED

Or Who Killed Dorothy Hunt

The following article, by Cari Oglesby of the "Boston Phoenix," is an in-depth inquiry into the crash of United Airlines Flight 553, the plane crash on which Ms. E. Howard Hunt, and some ten other people who in one way or another represented a threat to the Nixon government, met their deaths. Since the article was first printed in the "Phoenix," several new facts substantiating the theory that the plane was sabotaged by those wishing to permanently silence Ms. Hunt and the others have come to light. The SUN has up-dated the article to include these facts. Most of the information came from Sherman Skolnick, a private investigator in Chicago, who testified at the National Transportation Board hearings on the crash in June of this year. Skolnick managed to obtain the government's records on the crash, and he testified to the hearing committee that those records show that there was sabotage, robbery and murder involved in Flight 553's fatal end. Skolnick has denounced the hearings and the safety board, saying, "the Board are Nixon's puppets - like the Warren Commission, they will ignore their own records in order to continue saying that the Watergate plane crash was an 'accident '."

The established national press have thus far shied away from reporting Skolnick 's findings, or from probing into the mysteries and contradictions that surround the crash of Flight 553. The SUN believes that the following article raises enough questions to warrant a full-scale review of the crash and the circumstances that brought it about. If Ms. Hunt and the others on the flight were, in fact, murdered, then no hearings into the crash or into the subterranean activities of the Waterbuggers can be concluded until those responsible for the murders and sabotage are exposed and made to answer for their crimes.

An explosive new aspect of the Watergate crisis is beginning to emerge from the United Airlines jetliner crash last December 8 outside Chicago's Midway Airport in I which Dorothy Hunt, E. Howard's wife, and others connected with Watergate met their deaths.

Mrs. Hunt was reported at the time to have been carrying $10,000 in cash. This was tacitly reckoned to be hush money paid her husband for pleading guilty in the Sirica trial and so keeping the lid on Watergate. It was said she was taking it to Chicago to buy a Holiday Inn franchise. It now appears she was carrying much more than I that.

The crash was said to have happened because United 553's pilot, Captain Wendell Whitehouse, stalled out his I equipment trying to pull up too rapidly when he suddenly found himself closing in the fog with another liner headed for the same runway.

No conclusive evidence could be presented for this view because both flight recorders (missing in the wreckage for two days), though designed and mounted specifically to survive such crashes with data intact, failed. And there was a confusing report from one of two conflicting coroners, Cook County and the FAA, that Whitehouse actually died before the crash, suddenly, as though from massive heart attack. And no explanation has been given as to why Flight 553 was scheduled into Chicago's Midway Airport, an airport described by the New York Times as "little used" and "almost deserted."

The overwhelming coincidence of Mrs. Hunt's presence disoriented the event and made it stick out. The accidental sudden death of public people at the most dramatic moment possible will have always a kind of charm for a kind of collector. It rivets everyone's attention. It seems wrong and unreal. It distresses the collective curiosity.

The accusation of sabotage is being made in earnest if not yet in desperation by a private investigator in Chicago, Sherman Skolnick, whom none of the mainline media press will take seriously. "Dwight Chapin," SkolInick told me in a lengthy phone interview last week, "is exercising his and United's heaviest kind of clout to make sure this story doesn't get into the media."

Chapín of course is the former White House and I Creep (Committee to Re-elect the President) official who appeared to leave Nixon last January to take a top executive job with United Airlines. Because he grumbled something when he left Washington about "blowing the whistle if he had to," people assumed there had been some struggle in which Chapin had either forced his way out or got ejected. On the contrary, the direction of Skolnick's idea is that Chapin was one of the Nixon Creeps more than ever when he went to United, that he was in fact sent to United by Nixon in order to assert Creep influence if not control over United's potentially dangerous in-house crash investigation.

Skolnick operates out of a wheelchair in a home office at 9800 South Oglesby Ave. 60617, through a group of investigative agents evidently skillful, trusty and brave. His group's name is Citizens' Committee to Clean Up the Courts. He is its founder and permanent chairman. No doubt his credibility suffers something from the tainted character of the private investigating profession, but on the other hand he is no hotel dick and his credentials are impressive as are the sometimes spectacular results he gets. Ex-superlib Otto Kerner, for example, nailed last year for bribery and extortion, would not have been nailed without Skolnick's persistence against disbelief, and half the Illinois Supreme Court would not have been busted for fraud two years before.

Beginning with the crash details and working outwards from fact to surmise to discovery, Skolnick reaches an over-all view of Watergate strikingly close to the view l've been exploring since my first McCord article in the April 3 Phoenix ("Three Versions of McCord") but which I arrived at by way of a general thesis about the structure of American political experience. Trimmings out, the thesis is that primary, traditional and contemporary conflict within our society is rooted in a struggle between two regional power centers, once South and North, later East and West, today Northeast and Southwest. Yankee and Cowboy.

Cowboy structure is apparent at a distance in Nixon's southern-rim strategy linking Miami, New Orleans, Dallas, Houston, Phoenix, Las Vegas, and Los Angeles conservative elites around such basic interests as southern oil and western wheat, textiles and defense.

Opposed to this is the Northeastern neo-New Dealism of the Kennedy group based politically on an urban coalition of working blacks and whites around a middle-class program of engineered social progress, more subtle forms of foreign intervention than the Bay of Pigs and the Vietnam War, and the integration of world capitalism under general American multicorporate leadership.

Skolnick and Watergate

Skolnick's path into the heart of Watergate through the Midway crash was indirect and even accidental, though the accident was wholly logical once it happened.

We pick up the thread in September 1971 when his ace man Alex Bottos and other staff members started looking quietly into a number of mysterious deaths connected with court actions pending against Northern Natural Gas Co. in Hammond, Ind., Chicago, and Omaha. This is the same Northern Natural whose lawyers Blodgett and Krueger, according to Skolnick, will bring the so-called Mitchell documents aboard United 553 two and a half years later.

In brief, the Mitchell documents implicate Northern Natural's competitor El Paso Gas in a 1969 deal in which Mitchell quashed Justice Department antitrust suits in return for El Paso contributions to the Creep fund.

The documents are accounted valuable tor their blackmail potential and were first flashed by Chicago Congressman Daniel Rostenkowski in 1971 in order to force Mitchell to back away from Kerner. Today Skolnick kicks himself for being the funnel through which Mitchell leaked information on Rostenkowski which discredited and silenced him and evidently forced him to hand over the documents. Skolnick says they do not show up again until two days after the Midway crash when their availability is reported on the underworld market at a price of $5 million. Skolnick thinks they have been snapped up by Nixon.

With the Northern Natural investigation simmering last summer (indictments came down against company officials last Sept 8, within a few days of which five more government witnesses died) Bottos drew a new and apparently disconnected assignment: to infiltrate the Joseph Sarelli mob.

The Sarelli mob is said to be a high-technology specialty group active for the last several years in the in-flight theft of major securities shipped by the airlines in secret compartments which they know about. Bottos was among them in time for their theft of $2.5 million in Brinks securities from a North-Central jetliner during its 20 minute flight from Chicago to Milwaukee last August 17. Bottos of course informed and the Justice Department began preparing a case around his testimony.

There being no need to surface, Bottos stayed inside the Sarelli mob. He was in it when the Midway crash occurred.

He did not surface until January when the mob was busted for the August robbery, about the same time that Chapin was going from Creep to United.

"In February 1973," writes Skolnick in his mid-April letter to Hunt in prison, "the Strike Force (i.e., Justice Department lawyers prosecuting Sarelli mobsters) found out that the same air robbery gang was involved in robbing important and sensitive documents from United flight 553 and in sabotaging the airplane to cover up the murders. The Strike Force, headquartered in Chicago and answerable only to Nixon, was perfectly willing to bring a criminal investigation against the Sarelli mob and arrest them, as long as it was limited only to the August crime. They were unwilling to allow the Sarelli prosecution to spread to the crimes committed in respect to United flight 553 because that involved the pipeline - Watergate."

On February 27 the FAA opened what it called "public" hearings on the 553 crash under Chairwoman Isabel Burgess, Board of Inquiry, US National Transportation Board. On March 1 Skolnick presented Burgess with a letter outlining his claims and requesting an opportunity to present his facts in a regular public hearing. Burgess rejected this request immediately without explanation or comment. On March 2 Skolnick filed a civil suit against her and denounced the hearings as "a sham and a pretense." Subsequently Skolnick was granted an appearance and did testify before the Board, though they have yet to act on his discoveries.

On March 3, as Skolnick wrote to Hunt, "Strike Force star witness, informant and confidential source Alex Bottos was spirited away by federal marshals for so-called 'mental observation' for 60 days to forever without written charges, without a trial or a hearing. The Sarelli mob has been quietly released on all charges.

Bottos was released in mid-April through the intervention of the Northwest Indiana Crime Commission, a watchdog agency. He had been held 40 days at the maximum security Federal Prison Hospital in Springfield, Mo.

Skolnick's Story

For Skolnick the most powerful proof of the involvement of the Sarelli mob in the robbery of 553 would be the word of his agent Bottos who was then working on the inside. But besides this Skolnick marshals a range of fragmentary detail around the crash sufficient for an argument that it must have been sabotaged, and from a speculation around these fragments the role of the Sarelli mob comes into focus as a logical and reasonable possibility.

1. We have already noted the two-day-long loss of 553's crashproof recorders in the nose and tail and their vastly improbable double failure.

2. The tower tape is said to show that the crash came suddenly, no warning, which is out of key with the theory that Whitehouse was trying to avoid a collision.

3. Skolnick's sources (he evidently has informants in the FAA) tell him there was a pinprick in the altimeter, making it malfunction.

4. Unaccountably to Midway tower people, Skolnick says, the electronic landing system on 553's runway (Midway has only one ILS runway) was turned off shortly before 553's arrival.

5. Chicago police whom he trusts told Skolnick. that immediately after the crash the vicinity was blocked off by dozens of what the police called "federal people." The nearest federal office was 15 miles from the crash scene.

William D. Ruckelshaus, acting Director of the FBI, admitted later in a letter to the National Transportation Safety Board, that it was a fact that 50 FBI agents were on the scene within 45 minutes of the crash. Ruckelshaus gave no explanation for the number or proximity of the FBI's operatives.

6. When plastic burns in a crash it gives off cyanide gas in potentially lethal doses, which toxkologists set at 1.0 g/ml. The FAA report to Burgess reads: "Civil Aeromedical Institute, Aviation Toxicology Laboratory, Oklahoma City, examined specimens from three aircraft occupants. Results were as follows (for cyanide): Capt. Whitehouse, 3.9 g/ml; Flight Officer Coble, none; first class passenger, none."

7. On December 9, the day after the crash, Egil Krogh was appointed Undersecretary of Transportation, supervising both the National Transportation Safety Board and the FAA, the two government agencies involved in the crash investigation. Krogh was a core member of the covert White House security force and was also involved in the break-in at Ellsberg's psychiatrist's office.

8. Ten days later, December 19, Nixon's deputy assistant and White House CIA liaison, Alexander P. Butterfield, was made head of the FAA.

AN INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATOR named Ann Koutso working with Skolnick from the East Coast phoned up the National Transport Safety Board in Washington last week and tried to check out the cyanide story. It seemed after all rather strange that only Captain Whitehouse among the three in the cockpit showed cyanide and startling that he should have shown so much. You can't get four times a lethal dose by breathing because a fourth of the way through you die and stop breathing. A 3.9 level implies ingestion or injection, and either of these implies foul play.

The first bureaucrat Ann talked to confessed that the cause of the crash was still undetermined, only to volunteer later that "sabotage has been ruled out."

"Who ever brought it up?" said Ann.

"It comes up."

"If you don't know why the aircraft crashed, how do you know it wasn't sabotage?"

"Because it has been ruled out."

When she got to cyanide a second bureaucrat had to rescue the first. This one asked to be called "the board."

"I'm the board. I'll answer all your questions."

"Why does Whitehouse show so much cyanide?"

"It's from the burning plastic."

"Four units?"

"it was only 0.21."

"Then you've been up-dated or l've got a faked FAA report, but I'm looking at 3.9."

The next day the board verified the 3.9 level, agreed that it was suggestive, but declined further comment because he could not speak as an expert. We need not be so dry. (If the 3.9 level is right, 553's pilot was poisoned.)

SKOLNICK's cardinal claims involve the Watergate figures who died on 553. He claims now to have identified ten passengers linked some way or another to Watergate. We will stay with four principals.

1. DOROTHY HUNT. Skolnick describes her as the Secret Creep paymaster who spoke in her sphere with the authority of Nixon, but who was disaffected from the task and her husband, to whom she was married "only technically." She emerges too in McCord's occasional memoranda as apparently troubled by the worsening criminality of the Nixon group. McCord shows her again saying her husband had enough on Nixon "to blow the White House out of the water."

Besides the $10,000 cash found in her purse, Skolnick's informants say she was carrying $40,000 in new hundreds traceable to the Barker fund, plus $2 million in American Express securities made out to cash. The Government Accounting Office says Creep spent $10 million in unreported funds. If this gives some indication of the size of the secret budget, then it makes sense to see the two million Mrs. Hunt was carrying as one of several probably scattered Creep accounts.

2 MICHELE CLARK. United says she was traveling coach while Mrs. Hunt was in the first-class cabin. But shades of Dorothy Killgalen who died on the verge of "blowing the JFK killing wide open," this bright CBS reporter was known to be in hot pursuit of a Watergate angle. Skolnick claims to have witnesses saying they saw her with Mrs. Hunt before and that the two boarded together.

3. & 4. RALPH BLODGETT AND JAMES KRUEGER, the two Northern Natural lawyers. They were among a group of nine pipeline lobbyists who somehow had come into possession of the Mitchell documents, important to their company in its court hassles as a means of blackmailing the Justice Department through Mitchell and Nixon, and they were trying to get them safely out of Washington.

Anonymously tipped they would not reach Chicago alive if they absconded with the precious papers, Blodgett and Krueger nevertheless boarded 553. To my mind strangely, Skolnick thinks their presence with Mrs. Hunt I was a coincidence. Both the securities in the amount of $2 million and the $50,000 cash she was carrying would quite logically be stashed in the same super-safe place Mitchell would keep his gamiest secrets in. What if she liberated these documents and laid them on Blodgett and Krueger?

Add a fifth passenger to this list - not connected to Watergate and actually one of the 15 survivors: HAROLD METCALF.

He is a Sarelli hit man, says Skolnick, a Mafia Ishmael whose unique contribution to the understanding of Midway is the detail that not his own but at least the following independent contracts were working in connection with United 553:

a. The cyanide murder of the specific Watergate figures, mainly Mrs. Hunt. This was Metcalf, freaked to discover that what had hired him to poison her had hired someone else to destroy the airplane as a whole, and thus himself. And who was therefore talkative.

b. Another cyanide hit on the pilot.

c. At least two acts of technical sabotage, the altimeter and the runway ILS, either of which could have caused the crash by itself.

d. The technically flashy theft of the securities and the Mitchell documents.

Reconstruction

I have been proposing that we regard McCord as an anti-Creep, anti-Nixon agent of a Yankee CIA who penetrated the secret group around Nixon in order to expose it, precisely as Skolnick says, by contriving the bust of the lot of them that night last June.

I mention this (a) because besides Martha Mitchell, Skolnick is the only other person who makes this claim, and (b) because it reverberates with me that McCord talks of Mrs. Hunt so much in his incredible memoranda and without ever saying anything directly suggests that she was disaffected from her husband, Creep and Nixon altogether, increasingly so in the agitated weeks before December 8 when she knew she would have to talk to the grand jury. McCord makes it clear they shared one another's anxieties. A week before the crash they again discussed the vastness of Nixon's predicament.

We can prove nothing from all this, of course; but I think we have sufficiently suggestive detail from Skolnick's work, from McCord's rich testimony, and from analysis of the unfolded event to support a speculation along the following line:

Dorothy Hunt was making a break from Creep on December 8. The "very high-priced lawyer" Skolnick says she was to meet in Chicago may very well have been some associate of McCord or Fensterwald, someone on the Yankee, anti-Nixon side.Her arrival in Chicago could have been shot like a Berlín Wall scene at the happy end of a dangerous escape, had she landed safely. Michele Clark would have established the story with the media, supplying the kind of security through visibility that UPl's Helen Thomas supplies for Martha Mitchell and the paparrazzi for Jackie Kennedy. Blodgett and Krueger would have safely stowed the Mitchell documents. And Mrs. Hunt would have been in from the cold.

She must have moved quickly when the time finally came to take what she needed for power and to find the way out. By the time inner Creep loyalists saw what was happening - which may have been quickly; maybe this whole thing was a chase - there may have been too little time to stop her except through the Sarelli mob, which had the unique organizational and technical resources needed to provide 100% certainty of kill on zero notice and would find $7 million an unrefusable offer.

https://aadl.org/node/195780 Watergate- Bringing It All Back Home in excerpted form

James W. McCord, Jr., is the missing link of the Watergate investigation, and his background and role differs significantly from the other Waterbuggers. McCord has no visible connections either with past narcotics enforcement or the right-wing Bay of Pigs exile Cuban community in Miami. McCord was in the FBI 1948-51 , then the CIA until 1970: at CIA he was an electronics expert, as Ulasewicz later called him, "the best wireman in the business." He had been involved in U-2 overflight surveillance meetings with Russia and had eventually worked his way up to chief of security at CIA Headquarters n Langley, Virginia. From there he went to the White House as a member of Nixon's special wartime contingency planning group, and he was one of the earliest men in CRP - its security chief, who hired bodyguards like Stephen King for Martha Mitchell, and who coordinated security for the GOP Miami Convention. (It was McCord's arrest which allegedly led Mrs. Mitchell to declaim about "all the dirty things that go on" in politics.) Unlike the rest of the Waterbuggers, McCord refused to plead guilty (like Liddy) and then (unlike Liddy) exposed the whole White House cover-up scheme in a letter to Judge Sirica. At the Ervin hearings, McCord was centered, calm, intelligent - and sang about the offers of executive clemency, the pay-offs Mrs. Hunt made to the defendants to plead guilty and shut up, and the other spy system run for Ehrlichman by Jack Caulfield.

McCord also testified (May 18) that he had joined the Liddy-Hunt Waterbuggers team because Liddy told him the Attorney General, John Mitchell, the top legal officer in the Justice Department, and John Dean III, the top legal officer in the White House, had approved the plan. At that point, Senate investigative sources told Newsweek (May 28, p. 30) that "a White House group led by former top aide John D. Ehrlichman has in fact been preparing to place responsibility for the Watergate bugging and cover-up on former counsel John Dean II and Mitchell himself. The Ehrlichman group charted this strategy, these sources said, when it was realized that Waterbugger James McCord was not going along with the cover-up 'game plan'." Thus McCord opened a whole new area of investigation - which leads without hesitation right back to more narcotics agents.

One year after the pulverized remains of TWA Flight 800 plunged into the sea, it's clearer than ever that the passengers on board were victims of a missile strike.

While most of the 154 missile-witness accounts taken by the FBI remain covered up, a few accounts are available to the public, such as the accounts of 5 pilots who were flying in the area when TWA 800 was suddenly annihilated:

FIVE PILOTS - FIVE MISSILE WITNESSES

PILOT 1: Colonel William Stratemeier, Jr.

AVIATION WEEK & SPACE TECHNOLOGY reported that Air National Guard C-130 pilot Colonel Stratemeier "said he had seen what appeared to be the trail of a shoulder-fired SAM ending in a flash on the 747." However, in the next issue of AVIATION WEEK Stratemeier re- cants, saying: "We did not see smoke trails [from a missile], any ignition source from the tail end of a rocket nor anything..."

Col. Stratemeier recanted and therefore was not hit with an FBI gag order, but the next two ANG pilots did not recant their accounts and therefore were hit with FBI gag orders.

AVIATION WEEK & SPACE TECHNOLOGY reports that right after the TWA 800 accident, ANG HH-60 helicopter co-pilot Captain Baur told federal officials: "Almost due south, there was a hard white light, like burning pyrotechnics, in level flight. I was trying to figure out what it was. It was the wrong color for flares. It struck an object coming from the right [TWA 800] and made it [TWA Flight 800] explode."

Please visit www.castlerockfuneralandcremation.com for more information and to share your memories.

At a press conference the day after the TWA 800 accident, ANG HH-60 helicopter pilot Major Meyer said: "I saw something that looked to me like a shooting star. Now you normally don't see a shooting star when the sun is up. It was still bright... Almost immediately thereafter, I saw, in rapid succession, a small explosion then a large explosion." Meyer said that the initial explosion "looked identical to the detonation of an antiaircraft shell."

PILOT 4: Vasilis Bakounis

And since I (Vasilis Bakounis) am not in the mood of being Don Quichote and fighting windmills I will stop here ...

And somebody please inform the following eyewitnesses, that what they saw was an illusion, a trick of the eye and that they need corrective lenses:

- David McClaine, Eastwird Airlines pilot (flying a B737 from Boston to Trenton, NJ that night):
He (McClaine) had been watching a strange yellow light gradually ascend from the direction of Kennedy Airport. The light was different, he said, not the bright white light that jetliners' landing lights give off. McClaine said he had never seen a similar light in his 30 years as a military and commercial pilot. He thought it might be flames but heard no radio traffic, saw no smoke and decided it wasn't fire. The object moved up past 10,000 feet, where pilots normally turn off the lights they use as aerial warning beacons, but this one kept burning.

- Suzanne McConnell
After being shown a slide created from the official CIA/ NTSB crash sequence, from her approximate vantage point, McConnell said that it did not include the object she saw travel nearly "straight up" and explode. When she called the FBI to report her observation, she said the FBI agent replied, "'that's pretty much what everyone else is telling us'"

- Roland Penney
"There were three or four of us standing on the dock and we saw basically what that women [Suzanne McConnell] had just said. We saw this stream of smoke go up...[and then] it disappeared for about a second and a half...and then we saw a big bright white light....The white light descended down about two seconds I guess and then there was another explosion and then we saw the red flames and we saw the plane break into two pieces

- Darrel Miron
..- testified that a streak rose to the west very quickly before Flight 800 exploded. Miron said, "I know missiles travel much faster than planes do. That was not a plane flying in any direction at that speed."

- William Gallagher
"...[A] major thing people should come out of this with today is the fact that seven hundred and some witnesses are being told to blast off...I've never seen a concerted effort to not have information come together."

Gallagher saw a strange flare rise upward, originating at a position consistent with the closest (2.9 nautical miles) surface vessel to the crash when it occurred. According to the FBI, this surface vessel "has not been identified."[8] Gallager testified that the flare exploded at its apex, followed by the descent of two flaming objects.

- Paul Angelides
The object was quite high in the sky (about 50-60 degrees) and was slightly to the west and off shore of my position. At first it appeared to be moving slowly, almost hanging and descending, and was leaving a white smoke trail. The smoke trail was short and the top of the smoke trail has a clockwise, parabolic shaped hook towards the shore. My first reaction was that I was looking at a marine distress flare which had been fired from a boat. I said to myself, someone must be in trouble. I quickly realized that the object was too large and then began moving too fast to be a distress flare. I followed the object as it moved out over the ocean in the direction of the horizon. I lost sight of the object, as it was about 10 degrees above the horizon. In the same area of the sky out over the ocean, I then saw a series of flashes, one in the sky and another closer to the horizon.

Further - the following eyewitnesses may be interested in your judgement (some of them are probably already listed above, but there is no way for me to know which number corresponds with wich person):

- Witness 73
While keeping her eyes on the aircraft, she observed a 'red streak' moving up from the ground toward the aircraft at an approximately a 45 degree angle.

- Witness 88
He glanced over to the southeast and observed what he thought was a firework ascending into the sky.

- Witness 150
She followed the object for approximately 2 or 3 seconds when she then noticed a large commercial airliner which appeared to be traveling at the same altitude, 'just stop' and begin to disintegrate.

- Witness 166
It ascended in a straight line at an angle of seven to ten degrees away from a vertical ninety degree...[He] believed it was from the water.

- Witness 675
noticed an orange flare ascending from the south, traveling in a WNW direction trailing white or light gray smoke. He then observed the flare strike what looked like an eastbound Cessna airplane on the port side.

- Witness 34
observed what he thought was a shooting star travelling west to east coming from the south shore...[it] moved faster than an airplane and had no arch to it...

- Witness 107
...[and] advised that the initial flare seemed to hit the object then shoot off to the west at an eighty (80) degree angle

- Witness 145
stated that she saw a plane and noticed an object spiraling towards the plane.

- Witness 640
At the same time, he saw, off to his right, a 'green flash' rising up, and going toward the plane.

- Witness 144
she first noticed a plane in the sky traveling right to left...She then saw an object angle to the right with a bright orange glow with a white streak behind it...

- Witness 550b

"[H]e saw a plane coming from west to east and then what looked like a 'smaller' plane coming from the northeast on a dead course heading toward the nose of the larger plane

- Witness 649
The projectile moved in a squiggly manner in a southwest direction. The projectile was airborne for six-seven seconds and then it met with a shiny object that produced white smoke.

- Witness 658
While piloting an Air National Guard Helicopter*, "Baur first noticed what he thought was a flare and said into the helicopter's radio, "Is that a pyro?" Baur's first thought was that two things had flown into each other." He also saw the falling debris and immediately flew to the area in a search and rescue effort. From NTSB interview, Appendix N: A "white-hot..pyrotechnic... device...[which] came from the left and went to the right. And it made the object on the right explode."*

- Witness 221
, but further east or in the same direction of where the aircraft flew, he saw a streak of light travel up from the water into the sky...[like] a rocket or like a shooting star only going upward..." then heard rumbling sound and saw flash of light.

- Witness 157
he noticed a red flare or firework trailing white smoke ascending over the tree line on the south side of the waterhole. The flare was angling east-southeast observed what appeared to him as two objects flying up, coming together and exploding....then a blue and dark purple flash. Then another part dropped off. The rest of the plane seemed to coast a little further."

- Witness 218

- Witness 233

she noticed a flare off in the distance, rising into the air [later describing the flare as rising "at a steady, remarkable pace"]...and straight up..

- Witness 261
saw a red navigator light from an airplane in the distance. He then saw an orange firework, with a tail, in the air southwest of him. The firework traveled up, then arched down before he lost sight of it.

- Witness 243
This flying object looked like it came up from land [later described as "ascending into the sky from an east to west direction"] in the Moriches area..

- Witness 185
"To the right of the star, a 'yellowy-orange" light, 'all glowing', was coming up, it arced, from the right of the star going left. It went in front of the star and then exploded like a big bright light...She saw the rising light originate, she thought...from the water...then one piece falling"

Private Pilot and Olympic Airlines engineer Vasilis Bakounis told the Greek publication ELEFTHEROTYPIA [5] that as he was heading toward Gabreski Airport on July 17, 1996, "Suddenly I saw in the fog to my left toward the ocean, a small flame rising quickly to- ward the sky. Before I realized it, I saw this flame become huge. My first thought was that it was a flare that had been launched from some boat... This flame then started to quickly lose altitude and a few seconds later there was... a second explosion."

PILOT 5: Sven Faret

Flying at 8,500 feet moments before the cataclysmic explosion of TWA 800, private pilot Sven Faret reported that a "short pin-flash of light appeared on the ground, perhaps water." [6] When asked if the flash of light rose upwards vertically from the earth, Sven confirmed that it did, stating that it was "like a rocket launch at a fireworks display" with a point-of-origin "near the shoreline or in the water."

Sven Faret BIRTH 19 Jan 1949 Norway DEATH 26 Oct 2012 (aged 63) Plainview, Nassau County, New York, USA BURIAL Cremated, Ashes given to family or friend

All 5 pilots witnessed a rapidly moving luminous and fiery object that was:

1. like a surface-to-air missile
2. like burning pyrotechnics
3. like a meteor yet not like a meteor
4. like a small flame rising quickly
5. like a rocket at a fireworks display

So there. I will not post in this thread any more. I bet you're happy now. A rapidly moving fiery object hit TWA 800 initiating the explosions that killed all on board. At least 2 of the pilots saw the object early enough in its trajectory to have seen it rise upwards from the Earth.

The accounts of the pilots in the air are corroborated by over 100 witnesses on the ground who also saw a fiery object shoot upwards and intercept TWA 800. Some of them said that the fiery object was:

* like a flare, * like a thin white line, * like Grucci fireworks, * like a skyrocket

Most witnesses, such as Naneen Levine on CNN [8], report that the fiery object followed a curving trajectory as it shot upwards toward TWA 800. There is simply no phenomena other than the firing of a missile that can explain all the details reported by the witnesses who saw that luminous object streak toward TWA 800.

When we also consider that TWA 800 wreck- age shows the signs of missile damage,[9] the real question is not was it a missile that hit TWA 800, but whose missile was it.

TERRORISTS OR THE U.S. NAVY?

While the number of "terrorist-missile theories" is greater than zero, the number of terrorists known to be in the area during the crash is zero. Military experts have shown that the probability that terrorists could even deploy the military hardware necessary to destroy TWA 800 with a missile is near zero. In sum, the terrorist-missile theory offers us a whole lot of nothing.

In contrast to the terrorist-missile theory, the U.S. Navy (a) could deploy the military hardware necessary to take out TWA 800, (b) did deploy assets to the area that were both below and above TWA 800 when it was hit, and (c) did activate warning zones near TWA 800 for military exercises and live-firings. TWA 800 even changed course to avoid an active naval-warning zone moments before it was hit. Unlike the terrorist theory, the Navy-missile theory is overflowing with evidence.

THE NAVY SHUFFLE

It is common for the guilty to try to deny the facts that place them at the scene of the crime or accident. The U.S. military tried to deny the fact that it was at the scene of the TWA 800 accident. On July 23, 1996, Department of Defense spokesman Kenneth Bacon told the press:

> I'm not aware [that] there were any military exercises in the area. I've been told by the Joint [Chiefs of] Staff that there were not.

Yet after eight months of such denials, the Navy finally admitted that naval exercises were taking place off Long Island at the time of the TWA 800 accident. [11] The Navy also admitted that they had three submarines off Long Island in the ocean below TWA 800.

We know that there were at least 8 military assets in the area of the TWA 800 accident:

1. NAVY: The ALBUQUERQUE, attack sub
2. NAVY: The TREPANG, attack sub
3. NAVY: The WYOMING, ICBM sub
4. NAVY: P-3 Orion aircraft
5. NAVY: The NORMANDY, missile cruiser
6. USCG: The ADAK, CG patrol boat

7. NYANG: HC-130 aircraft
8. NYANG: HH-60 helicopter

Every asset except the Adak has either (a) been denied to exist or (b) had its reported location at the time of the TWA 800 accident changed by the military. For example, while shuffling around crash-time locations for months, the military placed 4 of its assets in 11 locations:

The Navy-missile-cruiser Normandy was: 1. 180 miles away, 2. 185 miles away, 3. over 200 miles away [depending on citation source}

The Navy P-3 Orion aircraft was: 1. 15 miles to the south [14] 2. about 1 mile southwest [15] 3. 3,700 feet below TWA 800 [16] 4. 7,000 feet above TWA 800 [15] [depending on citation source]

The ANG C-130 aircraft was: 1. 10 miles offshore [17] 2. flying along the coast [18]

The ANG HH-60 helicopter was: 1. 10 miles offshore at 3,000 feet doing search and rescue practice.[1] 2. 3 miles inland at 100 feet doing practice landings. [19]

Are we to believe that with as many as nine military radar systems blanketing the area [20] it would take months for the military to figure out where it was? The pattern of location shifting has been to move military assets further away from the accident than initially reported or further than was eventually discovered, as in the case of the P-3, which tapes proved was more than 10x closer to TWA 800 than once claimed.

If the denial of evidenced proximity to the crime scene is evidence of culpability, then, since multiple instances of military proximity to TWA 800 have been denied by the military, the evidence that the mili- tary is culpable in the downing of TWA 800 is significant. The fact that not only assets but military exercises were denied, makes this evidence compelling.

CONNECTING THE DOTS

TWA 800 researcher Tom Shoemaker recently discovered documents showing that both the New York Air National Guard and the Navy were engaged in a large-scale exercise called "Global Yankee '96" taking place off shore between July 16 and 26, 1996.[20]

Shoemaker's findings confirm the claim of TWA 800 researcher James Sanders that the Navy and the ANG were working together at the time of the accident.

While the fact that ANG pilots reported what they saw would seem to contradict the possibility of their culpability, it is clear that the ANG is not being forth-right about the locations of ANG assets at crash time. [18,URL] It should also be noted that ANG co-pilot Baur never said what he saw when he had the chance to at a press conference after the crash; that Major Meyer suggested first and foremost that TWA 800 was hit by a meteorite; and that Stratemeier suggested it was hit by a terrorist-style missile, then suddenly claimed he saw nothing. If the Navy and/ or the ANG are guilty, then the ANG pilot responses would be predictable misleads.

One year after the fiery demise of TWA 800, the Navy-missile theory not only remains superior to all other TWA 800 theories, but is stronger than ever.

retrieved from https://www.nps.gov/articles/wild-bill-donovan-and-the-origins-of-the-oss.htm and copied or modified to here

Note: This article is excerpted from OSS Training in the National Parks and Service Abroad in World War II, by John Whiteclay Chambers II.

The origins of the Office of Strategic Services (OSS) lay in the dark early days of World War II in Europe. Employing a new, highly mobile form of warfare called Blitzkrieg ("lightning war"), Nazi Germany had quickly and brutally conquered Poland in 1939, then Denmark, Norway, Belgium, the Netherlands, and finally France by the middle of 1940. That summer German dictator Adolf Hitler launched a massive air offensive against Great Britain, and many believed that England would be the next to fall. Not until mid-September 1940 was it clear that the Luftwaffe had failed, and Britain would remain an island bastion against the Nazis' expanding empire.

Faced with the German onslaught against the western democracies, President Franklin D. Roosevelt committed the United States to their aid, and then, when Britain was left standing alone against Germany, to all-out assistance-short of war-to the British under their new prime minister, Winston Churchill. Like many others at the time, both Roosevelt and Churchill believed that Hitler's shockingly swift military victories were due not simply to prowess of the German Army and its Blitzkrieg tactics, but also by the effective use of demoralizing propaganda and internal subversion by Nazi sympathizers called "fifth columnists," who engaged in espionage and sabotage for the German military intelligence services.2 In the summer of 1940, one of the special envoys President Roosevelt sent to London to encourage the beleaguered British, to assess their ability to withstand the German onslaught, and to find out what London had learned and was doing about new methods of warfare, especially unconventional warfare, was a prominent New York lawyer and former war hero, William J. ("Wild Bill") Donovan.

Returning home from France in 1919, Donovan resumed his corporate law practice and became active in the new veterans' organization, the American Legion, and in the Republican Party. As a rising young Irish Catholic political star in the largely Anglo-Saxon Protestant Republican establishment, Donovan received appointments as U.S. Attorney in western New York and subsequently Assistant U.S. Attorney General in charge of the Anti-Trust Division under President Calvin Coolidge. Returning to private practice, he moved his firm from Buffalo to Wall Street, and soon had a list of corporate clients that was longer than before. He supported Herbert Hoover in 1928, but failed to receive an appointment as Attorney General of the United States as he had hoped.6 He ran unsuccessfully for governor of New York in 1932. Donovan supported the Republican Party's unsuccessful candidates against Democrat Franklin Roosevelt in the Presidential elections of 1932 and 1936.

Concomitant with his connections with Republican political, legal and financial figures, Donovan ran his Wall Street law firm and also continued an active interest in the military and in world affairs. He obtained overseas clients, including some of the London banks and some British politicians, including Winston Churchill. He traveled overseas frequently and obtained contacts around the world. During fascist Italy's invasion of Ethiopia, Donovan toured the battle lines there in 1935, and in 1936. Subsequently, in the Spanish Civil War, he studied the new modern weaponry and tactics being used by both sides. He reported his findings back to President Roosevelt. In the foreign policy debate in the United States between isolationists and interventionists in the late 1930s and early 1940s, Donovan was an active interventionist. In 1940, after the fall of France, he joined the Fight for Freedom organization, one of the new foreign policy pressure groups created to counter isolationists and to build support for vigorous assistance to Britain and other allies against Hitler.

Donovan gained a major supporter in the Roosevelt Administration in June 1940, when the President appointed Frank Knox, a Republican newspaper publisher and a friend and admirer of Donovan's, to be Secretary of the Navy. Knox encouraged the President to draw upon the international lawyer and war hero. Roosevelt would do so throughout the war, but although Donovan had personal access to the President, he was never a member of Roosevelt's inner circle.8 In the early summer of 1940, the British, under attack by the German Air Force and Navy, sent representatives of their secret services to see Donovan. The key contact was an old friend of Donovan's, William Stephenson, a Canadian air ace in World War I, who had become a wealthy steel magnate, and was in 1940 appointed the New York station chief for the British Secret Intelligence Service (SIS, also known as MI6). In June 1940, Churchill dispatched Stephenson (code named "Intrepid") to New York to encourage increased American military aid. At a meeting at the St. Regis Hotel, Stephenson invited his old acquaintance, Donovan, to visit Britain and personally evaluate its military and intelligence capabilities and assess its chances for surviving the German attack. Donovan went as Roosevelt's personal envoy in July 1940.

It was a fateful visit. Churchill understood the importance of Donovan's mission and sought to use it to persuade American leaders that Britain would not fall and that they should increase their aid for the island bastion against Hitler. To reinforce his position, he provided Donovan with extraordinary access to British military and intelligence secrets. Following meetings with Churchill and King George VI, Donovan was introduced to leading figures in British intelligence and special operations agencies, including Sir Stuart Graham Menzies, head of the civilian Secret Intelligence Service (SIS),10 and Admiral John H. Godfrey, director of the Royal Navy's intelligence service. Godfrey was especially attentive to Donovan, a kindred spirit. The President's envoy was shown the latest Spitfire fighter planes, the new radar warning system, and Britain's secret coastal defense arrangements. In fact, the only major secret Donovan was not shown was "Ultra," the new and evolving, super-secret process that was beginning to decipher radio transmissions encoded by the German military's Enigma coding machine. Donovan also gathered information about the role of propaganda and subversion in countries that had been conquered by the Wehrmacht.

Equally important, Donovan was briefed on the new Special Operations Executive (SOE), a commando agency formed in July 1940 at Churchill's personal insistence. The prime minister had been fascinated by the way the Wehrmacht had used specially trained units, paratroopers and others, to infiltrate behind enemy lines and sabotage and otherwise disrupt their enemy's lines of communication and supply, confusing and throwing off balance the defending forces. After the British Army was driven off the continent at Dunkirk, Churchill needed to demonstrate that Britain could still lash back at Germany. One way was a conventional strategic bombing campaign that the prime minister launched against Hitler's heartland. But Churchill also adopted a new form of warfare, an unconventional subversive effort in German-occupied countries designed in his words to "set Europe ablaze."

Setting German-occupied Europe ablaze with sabotage and guerrilla resistance was the mission that Churchill assigned to two different types of organizations. Commandos-new elite, highly trained, and independently acting units, such as the Royal Air Force's new Special Air Service, and similar units created in the British Army and the Royal Marines -would stage raids to cause havoc around the edges of Hitler's empire. Meanwhile, through a different organization, covert special operations teams, operating under the new Special Operations Executive (SOE), would be infiltrated into occupied Europe to help organize local anti-Nazi resistance groups, supply them with weapons, clothing, food, medical supplies and funds, and direct them in attacks against the German military's lines of communication and supply. Through subversion, sabotage, and the direction of local guerrilla forces, these SOE British agent teams had the mission of keeping the Germans off balance and impeding their military efforts, using primarily groups of young local men and women, like those of the French maquis, who actively resisted the German occupation of their country. It was optimistically hoped at the time that these efforts alone might help the conquered peoples of Europe overthrow the Nazi occupiers. Later, a more realistic appraisal redefined the mission to harassment designed to impede the effectiveness of occupiers and the Wehrmacht.

Back in the United States, Donovan asserted publicly both the desirability of American aid for Britain and the need for a new, centralized American strategic intelligence agency to be prepared to wage unconventional warfare against the German challenge. Donovan warned that Hitler's shocking military successes were not due solely to the German Army but to new forms of warfare exploited by the Nazis: systematic propaganda to undermine civilian and military morale and active treachery by "fifth columnists" including espionage and sabotage.14 The United States, he argued needed a national agency to coordinate its efforts to combat and to employ these new forms of warfare. He urged a centralized intelligence agency capable of gathering, analyzing and acting on intelligence, including the use of propaganda to undermine the will of America’s enemies and sabotage and guerrilla operations to impede their military capabilities.

Sizable American intelligence bureaucracies emerged only with the First World War, in which all the major powers conducted extensive intelligence and counterintelligence operations. In the period of American neutrality, 1914-1917, both Britain and Germany established extensive espionage and propaganda operations in the United States to aid their cause and hinder their enemy's. The British scored a major coup in early 1917 by decoding and revealing the infamous January 1917 telegram by German Foreign Minister Arthur Zimmermann seeking an alliance with Mexico against the United States. During American intervention in the war, 1917-1918, the United States expanded its own intelligence operations, at least temporarily. The Military Intelligence Division, for example, expanded from four to1,300 persons. Another precedent was set in 1917, when MID established a secret code and cipher unit (the Cipher Unit, nicknamed the "Black Chamber"). That marked the beginning of U.S. military signals intelligence to augment information obtained from human sources, including spies. Fearing German subversion, espionage and sabotage within the United States, the Army and Navy, for the first time, created domestic counterintelligence bureaus. In addition, the Justice Department established a General Intelligence Division headed by an ambitious, young lawyer, J. Edgar Hoover, in its Bureau of Investigation (which had been created in 1908). The State Department sought temporarily to centralize intelligence from its various geographical area desks in a unit known only as "U-1" because it was located in the office of the Undersecretary of State. But it consisted of only a few analysts. In another major departure, the United States began joint intelligence cooperation with Great Britain.

To help meet the challenges and as part of the increasing Anglo-American cooperation under Roosevelt and Churchill, American and British military staffs began holding joint meetings in January 1941. Eventually the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS), which included the chiefs of the Army, Navy, and Army Air Forces, as well as the military adviser to the President, and the Combined [American and British] Chiefs of Staff, worked out the broad concepts of Allied strategy. Priority was given to the defeat of Nazi Germany, seen as a greater threat because of its domination of the resources of Europe. The defeat of fascist Italy and imperialist Japan, while important, were viewed as secondary and, therefore, were allocated fewer resources than those against Hitler’s Germany. The Allied offensive plan envisioned obtaining naval control of the sea lanes, conducting strategic air bombardment of enemy industry, encouraging resistance movements to undermine the enemy's control in occupied countries, and finally launching massive ground campaigns to defeat the enemy armies.30 In August 1941, Churchill and Roosevelt met secretly on warships off Newfoundland, pledged greater cooperation, and committed themselves to an "Atlantic Charter," a statement of broad, idealistic postwar aims, including freedom of speech and religion, freedom from fear andwant, freedom of the seas, free trade, self-determination of peoples, and the disarmament of aggressor nations.

Amidst these rapidly unfolding international events and faced with the apparent inability of the traditional intelligence agencies to cooperate, Roosevelt finally directed his attention to creating coordinated intelligence. The groundwork had been laid over the past year, but in the spring or early summer of 1941, the President had asked a Cabinet committee consisting of Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Knox, and Attorney General Robert Jackson, who oversaw the FBI, to make a recommendation. According to Donovan his meeting with the committee led it to recommend his idea to the President.32 But it was not really that simple. There had been a flurry of activity before the final decision was reached. Donovan had submitted his first formal proposal to the President at the end of May 1941.

After Donovan discussed his proposal fully with Knox, a copy was sent to Stimson. A number of people, with whom Donovan discussed the idea, endorsed it. Among them were certainly Knox, Presidential speechwriter Robert Sherwood, and probably Felix Frankfurter, a Supreme Court Justice and Presidential confidant.34 Added to those pressing for it were two British intelligence officials, William Stephenson and Admiral John Godfrey, who had arrived in the United States on 25 May 1941 (accompanying Godfrey was his personal assistant, Commander Ian Fleming, later to become famous as the author of the James Bond novels, but who in late June 1941 wrote memoranda to Donovan on how to get his organization up and running by December).

Despite increasing American material support, the British felt frustrated by rivalries among the U.S. armed forces and various intelligence offices that hampered effective Anglo-American cooperation. Consequently, they joined in encouraging a centralized American intelligence agency. Godfrey met Donovan in New York and then journeyed to Washington, where the British admiral found the chiefs of the various intelligence agencies still unwilling to cooperate with each other. In desperation, Godfrey obtained an appointment with the President and on 10 June urged Roosevelt to create a centralized intelligence service. The President was typically loquacious, but Godfrey persevered, recalling, "At last I got a word in edgeways. I said it a second time, and a third time -- one intelligence security boss, not three or four."36 Given their good working relationship with Donovan, the British actively, if carefully, championed him to direct it.37 Meanwhile, Donovan on 10 June 1941 submitted directly to the President a slightly expanded version of his draft memorandum of late May. He had added two new paragraphs: one on the desirability of common, accurate economic information, and the other emphasizing the need for accurate foreign information in order to use radio most effectively as a weapon to demoralize the enemy.38 Roosevelt Agrees to a Coordinator of Information (COI)

The President made his decision on 18 June 1941. At 12:30 p.m. that day, Donovan, accompanied by his friend Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, met with Roosevelt and Ben Cohen, one of the President's most trusted legal advisers. It was a lengthy meeting and no minutes were taken, but it is clear afterward that Roosevelt had agreed to a new intelligence organization, and he had chosen Donovan to head it. At the meeting’s conclusion, the President scrawled his approval in a hand-written note on the cover sheet of Donovan's 10 June memorandum. America would have its first centralized intelligence agency, the Office of the Coordinator of Information (COI).

Back in New York that night, Donovan met with Stephenson and reported on what had happened. According to the Stephenson, Donovan said he had accepted appointment as Coordinator of Information

"after [a] long discussion wherein all points were agreed. He said the new agency would coordinate intelligence and would also conduct offensive special operations; Donovan would report directly to the President and would have the rank of major general." In a cable to London a week later, Stephenson was elated by the results that were so much to Britain's liking.

Patty Hearst Trial (1976): An Account

University of Missouri-Kansas city

The SLA released a communique in which it called the kidnapping the "serving of an arrest warrant on Patricia Campbell Hearst." The communique warned that any attempt to rescue Hearst would result in the prisoner being "executed." The statement ended with the capital letters: "DEATH TO THE FASCIST INSECT THAT PREYS UPON THE LIFE OF THE PEOPLE."

Eight days later, the SLA sent a audiotape to a local radio station, KPFA, tape recording from "General Field Marshall Cinque" demanding that Randolph Hearst fund a multi-million dollar food giveaway "as a good faith gesture." "Cinque" was actually Donald DeFreeze, who--following his escape from a California prison in March 1973--organized a group of Berkeley area activists that hoped to spur a revolution.

The SLA established as its goals closing prisons, ending monogamy, and eliminating "all other institutions that have made and sustained capitalism." The tape included the frightened voice of Patty Hearst. She is heard telling her parents: "Mom, Dad, I'm okay. I'm with a combat unit with automatic weapons. And these people aren't just a bunch of nuts....I want to get out of here but the only way I'm going to do it is if we do it their way. And I just hope that you'll do what they say, Dad, and do it quickly..." The package received by the radio station also included a photograph showing Hearst, brandishing a carbine and wearing a beret, in front of the SLA's seven-headed cobra symbol.

In response to the SLA demands, Randolph Hearst created the People in Need program and donated about $2 million. The food giveaway program was fraught with problems. In some distribution locations, rioting and fraud hampered efforts, On February 22 at a distribution site in West Oakland, rioting led to dozens of injuries and arrests. In a March audiotape released by the SLA, Patty criticized her father's food distribution efforts: "So far it sounds like you and your advisers managed to turn it into a real disaster."

The public heard the most shocking audiotape from the SLA in April, fifty-nine days after Patty's kidnapping. On the tape, Hearst says: "I have been given the choice of being released...or joining the forces of the Symbionese Liberation Army and fighting for my freedom and the freedom of all oppressed people. I have chosen to stay and fight." Hearst further announced that she had accepted the name "Tania," after a "comrade who fought alongside Che in Bolivia."

The Hibernia Bank robbery occurred shortly afterward, on April 15. The robbery, which netted the SLA $10,692, resulted in two bystanders being shot, one fatally. Security camera tapes of the robbery were played on television and closely analyzed by authorities. Different conclusions were drawn from the tapes as to whether Hearst seemed to be a completely willing participant.

> She can be seen announcing, "I am Tania" and ordering customers to the floor. "We are not fooling around," she warned. In an audiotape released by the SLA after the Hibernia robbery, Hearst says: "Greetings to the people, this is Tania. Our actions of April 15 forced the Corporate State to help finance the revolution. As for being brainwashed, the idea is ridiculous beyond belief. I am a soldier in the People's Army."

Mark Lane also believed that Kilgallen had been murdered. He said that "I would bet you a thousand-to-one that the CIA surrounded her (Kilgallen) as soon as she started writing those stories." According to Israel she met him in Carrara in June, 1964, during a press junket for journalists working in the film industry. The trip was paid for by Twentieth Century-Fox who used it to publicize three of its films: The Sound of Music, The Agony and the Ecstasy and Those Magnificent Men in Their Flying Machines. Israel claims that the "Out-of-Towner" went up to Kilgallen and asked her if she was Clare Booth Luce. This is in itself an interesting introduction. Kilgallen and Luce did not look like each other. Luce and her husband (Henry Luce) however were to play an important role in the events surrounding the assassination. Luce owned Life Magazine and arranged to buy up the Zapruder Film . Clare Booth Luce had also funded covert operations against Fidel Castro (1961-63). https://mychalfoley.wixsite.com/legacycases/services-1

Daly was born on February 20, 1914 in Johannesburg, South Africa to an American family. His parents were on a trip in Johannesburg when he was born. After his father died, Daly and his mother moved to Boston, Massachusetts. Daly studied at the Tilton School and at Boston College.

He was married to Margaret Griswell Neal from 1937 until they divorced in 1959 or 1960. They had three children. Then he was married to Virginia Warren from 1960 until his death in 1991. Virginia was the daughter of Chief Justice Earl Warren.

Daly died on February 24, 1991 in his home in Chevy Chase, Maryland from cardiac arrest, four days after his 77th birthday.

Daly won an Emmy Award in 1955, an Golden Globe Award in 1962, and three Peabody Award in 1954, 1956, and in 1957.

Reporting from Washington - In the 1950s and ‘60s, if Virginia Warren Daly came to your party, you had it made.

Effervescent, beautiful and popular with the opposite sex, the daughter of Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren was a staple of the society columns in Washington and New York. Daly died of cancer Feb. 19 at her Washington home. She was 80.

Daly was at all the best parties of the era. Her attendance and attire were meticulously recorded at all the gala events of the day, along with that of Austine "Bootsie" Hearst, wife of media owner William Randolph Hearst Jr.; Rep. Lindy Boggs (D-La.); and the ambassadorial couple of Robin and Angier Biddle Duke.

It has been suggested by John Simkin that Kilgallen suspected that "Out-of-Towner" was a CIA spy. She therefore told her friends this is what he said so that if anything happened to her, a future investigator would realize that he was a CIA agent with links to Clare Booth Luce.

Jet Pilot 1957

The XF-11 was powered by a pair of Pratt & Whitney R-4360-31 28-cylinder radial engines rated at 3,000 horsepower (2,200 kW) of takeoff power at sea level and 2,500 horsepower (1,900 kW) at 33,000 feet (10,000 m).[30] Contra-rotating propellers were originally a contract design requirement for both the XF-11 and XF-12. In the samet time frame North American Aviation had its prototype to be tested. Using a jet engine (the me 262 was the first jet plane but but did not perform well). At 53 minutes and about 30 seconds Mr. and Mr. Simpson need a room and there are none. They will share with Col Shannon and his new wife-to-be Olga. I suggest this is a hint ad Duke Edward and his wife Wallis Simpson.

Through a friend, Consuelo Thaw, Wallis met Consuelo's sister Thelma, Viscountess Furness, at the time the mistress of Edward, Prince of Wales. On January 10, 1931, Lady Furness introduced Wallis to Edward at Burrough Court, near Melton Mowbray. Edward was the eldest son of King George V and Queen Mary, and heir apparent to the British throne. Between 1931 and 1934, he met the Simpsons at various house parties, and Wallis was presented at court. Ernest was beginning to encounter financial difficulties, as the Simpsons were living beyond their means, and they had to fire a succession of staff.

On January 20, 1936, George V died at Sandringham and Edward ascended the throne as Edward VIII. The next day, he broke royal protocol by watching the proclamation of his accession from a window of St James's Palace, in the company of the still-married Wallis.[55] It was becoming apparent to court and government circles that the new king meant to marry her.[56] Edward's behaviour and his relationship with Wallis made him unpopular with the Conservative-led British government, as well as distressing his mother and his brother the Duke of York. The British and Dominion governments believed that a twice-divorced woman was politically, socially, and morally unsuitable as a prospective consort.[63] Wallis was perceived by many in the British Empire as a woman of "limitless ambition"[64] who was pursuing the King because of his wealth and position. Duke Edward would abdicated and mary her livign some inside the USA.

“Belcher and [Joe] Ball were partners, along with actors John Wayne and Fred MacMurray, in a luxurious house in Acapulco, next to Las Brisas. It was used almost like a time share for the men and their friends. Among the ‘friends’ were CIA contract agents and organized crime figures such as [Meyers] Lansky, [Peter] Licavoli, and [Doc} Stacher, who went there for meetings. I never did learn if Wayne and MacMurray were aware of the meetings taking place. It was an investment that paid off for all concerned, and they may not have been aware of anything more than the appreciation in the property's value prior to the partners' selling it."

Q. Who was Frank Belcher, Sr.? A. Frank Belcher, Sr. was one of the most powerful lawyers in California. He was, at one time, president of the California bar. He was related to J. A. Belcher, another of the CIA's properties. I have already alluded to his wife, Ruth, and his relationship to George Reynolds. More importantly, he was the de facto partner of Joe Ball, another powerful lawyer. Belcher and Ball very often represented co-defendants in trials. Since they were not actually partners they were able to avoid charges of conflict of interest. Belcher and Ball, along with John Wayne and Fred MacMurray owned a palatial house in Acapulco, which was used as a safe house for contract agents, card carrying agents and organized crime figures, such as Stacher, Lansky, Licavoli, Roselli, Giancana and others. Belcher was also a CIA asset. He and I maintained a joint back account at the Bank of America which served as a conduit for funds from many sources, legal and illegal.

Q. Did you withdraw large sums of cash from the joint bank account with Belcher to pay other contract agents? A. Yes. In fact I withdrew such large sums of cash that I was usually accompanied by Michael Harries, another contract agent and one of the most competent shooters and shooting instructors in the world, not only to receive his pay, in cash, but to serve as my bodyguard. Two guns are always better than one.

Compiled from Who Killed Bobby? The Unsolved Murder of Robert F. Kennedy O'Sullivan, Shane. Who Killed Bobby? : The Unsolved Murder of Robert F. Kennedy . Kindle Edition.

This has been a huge undertaking. In cross-referencing more than 70,000 pages of documents, I have made my best judgment, in good faith, on the evidence and witness statements. There was no room for a number of colorful characters who ultimately don't convince as possible accomplices. These include the late Jerry Owen, a preacher who told police he'd arranged to sell Sirhan a horse at the back of the Ambassador on the night of the shooting, providing a novel means of escape. I have focused instead on issues that I feel still have relevance if the case were to be reopened today. I hope this book will play a part in making that happen. As the remaining witnesses begin to pass away, it's now or never.

Author David Talbot notes that Bobby Kennedy became "America's first JFK assassination-conspiracy theorist" after his brother's death. In turn, the friends of Robert Kennedy have become some of the most vocal RFK assassination-conspiracy theorists. UAW official Paul Schrade, shot in the head while standing behind Kennedy in the pantry, has for nearly forty years led the campaign to get this case reopened. Attorney Frank Burns, off Kennedy's right shoulder, still insists that Sirhan could not have fired the fatal shot described in the autopsy report.

You will get a far more balanced view of the case here than the jurors did during the original trial, in large part due to the groundbreaking work of the authors before me in uncovering new evidence. I salute Robert Blair

Kaiser, Bill Turner, Jonn Christian, Philip Melanson, Dan Moldea, and William Klaber, and hope my work here builds on their legacy. What seemed, at first, an open-and-shut case, is, in truth, beguilingly complex. This book does not solve the case, but it does, I hope, provide a comprehensive and disturbing reminder of why it must be urgently reopened.

On election eve, Kennedy collapsed from exhaustion in the middle of his final campaign speech in San Diego, so today he slept late at film director John Frankenheimer's beach home in Santa Monica. Taken with Kennedy's idealism, Frankenheimer had jumped on board the campaign, filming speeches and campaign spots, his handheld cameras capturing the exuberant crowds and renewed hope that greeted the senator from New York. The country was in turmoil. Eight weeks before, Martin Luther King, Jr., had been assassinated, sparking waves of rioting in American cities. The Vietnam War had polarized the country, and the burgeoning antiwar movement and Black Panther Party had become lightning rods for student revolt, racial unrest, and disenchantment with society.

Two Sundays before the primary, Pierre Salinger had organized a "fun lunch" for Kennedy at Frankenheimer's home on a rare day off. Shirley MacLaine was there with her brother, Warren Beatty. So, too, were crooner Andy Williams, composer Burt Bacharach, actress Angie Dickinson, astronaut John Glenn, and French writer Romain Gary with his wife, actress Jean Seberg, who'd earlier hosted fundraisers for the Black Panthers. Bobby had been surfing and sat shirtless and cross-legged on the floor, holding a glass of orange juice. "You know, don't you, that somebody's going to try to kill you?" Gary asked. Kennedy looked up slowly. "That's the chance I have to take. You've just got to give yourself to the people and trust them. From then on, either luck is with you or it isn't.

At the house in Malibu, John Frankenheimer pulled out in his Rolls-Royce Silver Cloud and drove the senator to the Ambassador Hotel in downtown Los Angeles. They arrived at eight fifteen and went directly to the Kennedy suite on the fifth floor, their base for the last six weeks of the campaign.

Kennedy was summoned from his fifth-floor suite and led toward an elevator at the end of the hall, to descend to the lobby and wade onstage through his jubilant supporters. But it was late, he was tired, and he didn't want to fight the crowds. He asked whether there was another route, and Uno Timanson, the hotel's VP of banquet and sales, led him to a service elevator, so he could take the back way down through the kitchen. A live ABC video feed picked up his loose entourage as they stepped out of the elevator and paused in a hallway, waiting for their cue as Kennedy's brother-in-law Steve Smith wrapped up his introductions.

Ethel adjusted the white handkerchief in Kennedy's breast pocket, flanked by former Los Angeles Rams football tackle Rosey Grier and Olympic decathlon champion Rafer Johnson, friends of the family helping out with crowd control on the campaign.

Former FBI agent Bill Barry, Kennedy's unarmed bodyguard, made a final route check, then gave the senator his cue, and the party moved forward through the kitchen. Timanson and Barry led the way, clearing a path with Kennedy advance man Jack Gallivan and hotel assistant maître d' Eddie Minasian.

The senator signed a poster for memorabilia collector Michael Wayne [son of John Wayne who Chauncey Holt implicates as part of the Kennedy assasination with Frank Belcher, both of them part f wartime PsyOps], shook hands with kitchen workers, and held up his left hand to block the lights of the television cameras. As he passed through a narrow serving pantry, he shook the outstretched hand of a tall young busboy, Juan Romero. Ten feet behind the line of waiters, Sirhan waited, balanced on a tray stacker. The senator turned right through swinging double doors into a hallway at the back of the Embassy Ballroom. To the cheers of the waiting crowd[.]

He [RFK] saluted Cesar Chavez and Dolores Huerta for the support of the Mexican American community, loyal to Kennedy for his support during the grape pickers' strike in Delano. He also thanked his friends in the black community, whose action programs in Watts echoed his own regeneration programs in Bedford-Stuyvesant in New York. He saluted Rafer Johnson and gentle giant Rosey Grier, "who said he'd take care of anybody who didn't vote for me"; and Paul Schrade of the United Auto Workers "for the effort he's made on behalf of the working man here in the state of California."

In the northwest corner of the pantry, just inside the swinging doors, kitchen staff crowded around a TV monitor to listen to the speech. There were about twenty people in the narrow passageway, half hotel staff and half press and "outsiders." Sirhan balanced precariously on the outside edge of a tray stacker, over by the ice machines.

Michael Anthony Morrison (November 23, 1934 – April 2, 2003), better known by his stage name Michael Wayne, was an American film producer and actor. He was the eldest son of actor John Wayne and his first wife, Josephine Saenz.

Biography

Born in Los Angeles, California, Wayne graduated from Loyola University in California in 1956 with a Business degree and served in the U.S. Air Force Reserve.

Wayne began his film career as a production assistant on the set of the John Ford film The Quiet Man in 1951. He joined his father's film production company, Batjac Productions, for The Alamo (1960) and became line producer for McLintock! (1963) and producer on many other John Wayne vehicles including Big Jake (1971) and Cahill U.S. Marshal (1973).

Wayne, who developed the reputation of being a good businessman, served on the board of the Motion Picture & Television Fund and was The John Wayne Foundation's president and chairman of the board. He also was founder and chairman of the board of the John Wayne Cancer Institute at Saint John's Health Center.

Wayne and his wife, Gretchen, had five children, son Christopher, daughters Alicia, Josephine, Maria, and Teresa. He died at the age of 68 of heart failure as the result of complications from lupus erythematosus, just two months before his mother's death.

Sam Houston Johnson (January 31, 1914 December 11, 1978) was an American businessman. He was the younger brother of President Lyndon B. Johnson.

During World War II, Johnson worked on the staff of the War Production Board. In addition, he was employed as a member of his brother's Senate staff and worked on Lyndon Johnson's campaigns.

The WPB and the nation's factories effected a great turnaround. Military aircraft production, which totaled 6,000 in 1940, jumped to 85,000 in 1943. Factories that made silk ribbons now produced parachutes, automobile factories built tanks, typewriter companies converted to rifles, undergarment manufacturers sewed mosquito netting, and a rollercoaster manufacturer converted to the production of bomber repair platforms.[8] The WPB ensured that each factory received the materials it needed to produce the most war goods in the shortest time.

The national WPB's primary task was converting civilian industry to war production. The WPB assigned priorities and allocated scarce materials such as steel, aluminum, and rubber, prohibited nonessential industrial production such as that of nylons and refrigerators, controlled wages and prices, and mobilized the people through patriotic propaganda such as "give your scrap metal and help Oklahoma boys save our way of life".[8] It initiated events such as scrap metal drives, which were carried out locally to great success. For example, a national scrap metal drive in October 1942 resulted in an average of almost 82 pounds (37 kg) of scrap per American.

Building Engines for War: Air-Cooled Radial Aircraft Engine Production in Britain and America in World War II R-564

Dive into the heart of wartime innovation and manufacturing through this groundbreaking book, unveiling a riveting narrative of technological mastery and organizational ingenuity. This meticulously researched work challenges conventional views of wartime production, offering a fresh perspective on the incredible efforts that drove the Allies to victory.

Young’s insightful analyses illuminate the strategic collaboration between the aerospace and automotive industries, showcasing their collective adaptation that created the engines powering victory. Spanning continents, Young examines the transformation of aircraft engine manufacturing during World War II. Unearthing the operations of key players such as the Bristol Aeroplane Company, Pratt & Whitney, and Wright Aeronautical, he sheds light on the monumental shift from traditional batch production to revolutionary quantity production.

Readers will witness the birth of new factories, the development of advanced machine tools, and the innovation required to produce engines of unparalleled complexity and precision. Through Young's fresh perspective, the book unveils the intricate interplay of crisis techno-politics, engineering resilience, and the pivotal role of innovation in shaping the tides of history.

This book is not just a study of the past; it is a critical foundation for understanding the dynamics of wartime production that continue to influence our world today.

“Edward Young’s reconstruction and analysis of the Allies’ massive World War II aircraft engine programs is priceless, unique, thorough and critical all at once.”

The Heavy Press Program was motivated by experiences from World War II. Nazi Germany held the largest heavy die forging presses during the war, and translated this advantage into high performance jet fighters. Because of the shortage of aluminum, German aircraft manufacturers used forged magnesium structural components, formed to shape in closed-die hydraulic presses. After finding this, in 1944, the Federal Government asked Wyman-Gordon for assistance, and this program evolved into the Heavy Press Program. Work was started on an 18,000 ton press, built by Mesta Machinery, which was completed in 1946 at the Wyman-Gordon Grafton Plant. Post-war, the Soviet Union captured the largest German press to survive the war, with a capacity of 33,000 ton, and were suspected to have seized the designs for an even larger 55,000 ton press. The next two largest units were captured by the United States and brought across the Atlantic Ocean, but they were half the size at 16,500 ton. As Cold War fears developed, American strategists worried that this would give the Soviet Air Force a crucial advantage and designed the Heavy Press Program to help win the arms race.

Seventeen presses were originally planned with an expected cost of $389 million, but the project was scaled back to 10 presses in 1953 - Wikipedia

An often asked question is; “did Packard replicate the British thread system when they built Rolls-Royce Merlins under license during World War II?” The answer is yes; all threads that were used on the Merlin were accurately replicated by Packard. This would include BSW (British Standard Whitworth), BSF (British Standard Fine), BSP (British Standard Pipe) and BA (British Association). Having said that, however, Packard Merlins > used U.S. built Bendix injection carburetors; PD-16 for single stage engines and PD-18 for two stage engines, both of which used U.S. Unified threads. British built Merlins employed S.U. carburetors using Whitworth threads. The job facing Packard when they undertook manufacture of the Merlin was daunting to say the least. It’s bad enough having to build a complex product like the Merlin but exacerbating the situation was the fact no tool maker in the U.S. made Whitworth taps or dies. Therefore, Packard were forced into making their own. Although this created a significant hurdle to overcome, the effort was well worth it, Packard and Rolls-Royce components were interchangeable.

In 1903, at the behest of a group of investors, the Packard Automotive Company moved its headquarters from Warren, Ohio to Detroit. Then-president of the company, Henry Joy, looking for a fresh take on factory buildings, enlisted local architect Albert Kahn to design the company's complex. The first nine buildings on the site were built between 1903-1905. These followed the typical mill-style factory buildings of the time, with cramped rooms, wooden columns, floors, and ceilings, and very little natural light. Due to the large amount of wood used in construction, these buildings were fire hazards. By the tenth building, Packard #10, Kahn wanted to improve the design, by providing open spaces and large windows for lighting and ventilation, making workers comfortable and more productive. To create this new style, he sought help from his brother, Julius Kahn, a well-known engineer who was experimenting with new ways to reinforce concrete.

In 1904, Julius Kahn designed a trussed concrete steel re-bar reinforcement system, known as The Kahn Bar. This system features wings, bent at a 45 degree angle, along the length of steel re-bar which strengthened the concrete to prevent shearing at weak points. This design allowed for much larger loads to be carried on concrete, larger spans between support columns, and increased use of fire-safe materials. Utilizing his brother's Kahn Bar and the technical advantages it gave, Albert Kahn designed Packard #10 to be built using only reinforced concrete, allowing for the large open spaces and floor-to-ceiling windows that he wanted to provide for workers, along with much safer working conditions. The design for Packard #10 changed the way industrial buildings were designed and built. It was the first industrial building to use reinforced concrete for floors, ceilings, and columns. Through Albert Kahn's design for Packard #10, a new material and design concept were combined which changed the face of industrial buildings. https://www.docomomo-us.org/register/packard-motor-car-company-manufacturing-complex Prouthy: A letter from one of the most beautiful women in the world lies buried in a stack of mail on President Ford's desk. Written in Paris on July 24, 1975, by Dewi Sukarno, the former First Lady of Indonesia and widow of Dr. Achmed Sukarno, the charismatic Father of Indonesia, the letter is an appeal to President Ford for a complete explanation of the CIA-led and supported rebellions that took place in Indonesia in 1958 and 1965.

It is not well known in the United States that the 1958 rebellion led to a major Indonesian civil war. The CIA-inspired uprising in Indonesia, unlike the Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba, was a full-scale military operation. The Bay of Pigs invasion in 1961 was made by a thin brigade of about 1,500 Cuban exiles trained by the CIA in Guatemala. But the 1958 Indonesian action involved no less than 42,000 CIA-armed rebels supported by a fleet of bombers and vast numbers of four-engine transport aircraft as well as submarine assistance from the U.S. Navy.

It also involved a major training and logistical supporting effort on the part of the Philippines, Okinawa, Taiwan, and Singapore. But despite this massive armed force, the 1958 rebellion, like the Bay of Pigs invasion, was a total failure.

Sukarno's army drove the rebels on Sumatra and Celebes into the sea.

There are some who might call the 1965 uprising a success. At least the rebels were not driven into the sea. However, for the United States it was a fantastically costly endeavor. The rebellion ended in the most massive and ruthless bloodbath since World War II. While the headlines in the United States dealt with the slaughter in Vietnam, the press of the rest of the world heaped blame on the United States for the barbaric massacre in Indonesia. The victorious new government of General Suharto proceeded to assassinate nearly one million people. This terrible slaughter and the ensuing imprisonment of tens of thousands of Indonesians stirred Dewi Sukarno to seek President Ford's assistance in gaining the release of her countrymen from prison.

Dewi Sukarno has received no answer. But even without a reply she knows. The silence from Washington speaks for itself. A denial, if true, would have come without hesitation. The Indonesians know. The Latins had a phrase for it, "Is fecit cui prodest" -- the perpetrator of a crime is he who profits by it. Today, major U.S. enterprises are plundering the raw material wealth of Indonesia -- rubber, tin, and oil -- in a manner that is more vile than what is happening in Chile. And there is no one to stop them.

Achmed Sukarno was one of those rare men who rose during the hours of crisis to unite one hundred million people and lead them out of the ashes of World War II. Sukarno came to liberate his country from the Japanese, the Dutch, the Portuguese, and from all others who were ready to enslave his country once again. He established his government on the "Five Pillars": (l) belief in one supreme God (2) just and civilized humanity (3) unity of Indonesia (4) democracy (5) social justice. [End excerpt of V.P. RKO Howard Hughes staring John Wayne Janet Leigh USAF

The Oil Business and CIA front companies and propaganda including ghost written story telling includes Jet Pilot 1957 by Howard Hughes, RKO, and others. The movie plot is the Windsors get a "refresher course" from those involved how Fighter Control Radio working with ground based radar gave the air superiority Rolls-Royce motor powered fighters the ability to defeat the Luftwaffe. In the course of all this is also the fact the CIA operation in countries it was overthrowing was embedded into oil companies that bought surplus hardware and modified it for covert operations. Ray Ryan is described as a gambler but his money came from oil as most of the assassination team also did.

John Wayne and Frank Belcher

https://educationforum.ipbhost.com/topic/17691-david-ferrie-belcher-oil/

John Wayne and Frank Belcher of [Bud] Belcher OIL and heavily connected CIA family involved in the assassination of JFK. Wayne himself was a CIA. A patriotic cowboy figure taking on the Nazis by counter-propaganda.

Q [To Holt]. Who was Phillip Twombly? Can you elaborate on his background?

A. Twombly was one of the CIA's most important assets. He had been, at one time, executive vice president of Coca Cola in the Caribbean. He owned the controlling interest in the University Bank of Fullerton, the main conduit for contingency funds of the CIA. He was president of the so-called Blue Goose/Davis/Eadington Group, a huge conglomerate, all privately owned that owned over a hundred properties from Hawaii to Florida. He was a partner in over a hundred partnerships, including TED Leasing, a large firm owned by Twombly, Tom Eadington, an oil man, and the Davis brothers. This firm was used by contract agents of the CIA to acquire properties useful to the CIA's covert operations.

Q. Who was George Reynolds?

A. George Reynolds was another important CIA asset. He was related to Bob Reynolds, former chief of station at JM/Wave and by marriage of his sister, Ruth, to Frank Belcher. I know nothing about his background. I never, ever, inquired into anyone's background. Curiosity can kill more than the cat. I am sure that no one ever delved into my background. If they had they would have discovered that I was not really Jack Moon.

Q. Who was Frank Belcher, Sr.? A. Frank Belcher, Sr. was one of the most powerful lawyers in California. He was, at one time, president of the California bar. He was related to J. A. Belcher, another of the CIA's properties. I have already alluded to his wife, Ruth, and his relationship to George Reynolds. More importantly, he was the de facto partner of Joe Ball, another powerful lawyer. Belcher and Ball very often represented co-defendants in trials. Since they were not actually partners they were able to avoid charges of conflict of interest. Belcher and Ball, along with John Wayne and Fred MacMurray owned a palatial house in Acapulco, which was used as a safe house for contract agents, card carrying agents and organized crime figures, such as Stacher, Lansky, Licavoli, Roselli, Giancana and others. Belcher was also a CIA asset. He and I maintained a joint back account at the Bank of America which served as a conduit for funds from many sources, legal and illegal.

Q. In Dec. 1963, did somebody come looking for you in Beverly Hills? A. Yes. Q. Did you suspect that this visit was in connection with your activities in Dallas? A. Yes, that is the first thing that came to mind. Q. What did you do as a result of this visit? A. Since the two men who questioned my father in law knew a great deal about me; the license number of the car I was driving, the registration number of my plane etc., I realized that these items should be disposed of. I drove my new Cadillac, with Arizona plates, over to Frank Belcher's house and hid it in one of his garages. I then approached George Henzie, Frank's nephew, and made him an offer on the Cadillac he couldn't refuse. At Frank's suggestion, George Henzie, Bud Belcher and I went down to Long Beach to talk to Joe Ball, Frank's def acto law partner. I told Ball's partner Hunt what happened in Dallas but insisted that I had nothing to do with the assassination. Hunt assured me that there would be no problem. Ball had been appointed to a blue ribbon commission formed to "prove Oswald was the lone gunman."

Q. What happened next? A. We went back to Frank Belcher's office and I told him what happened. I then gave him my power of attorney and told him to sell my airplane for me. Belcher was always a hard negotiator and later, he sold the plane at a profit. Q. Did you then go some place to hide out for awhile until things cooled down? A. Yes, Bud Belcher and Adrian Cole, another contract agent, and I flew to Acapulco where Belcher, Ball, John Wayne and Fred MacMurray owned a palatial house that was used as a "safe house" by contract agents, card carrying agents and high level mobsters such as Licavoli, Lansky, Roselli, Stacher and Giancana.

Propaganda artist churning out war movies. John Wayne starred in Jet Pilot.

Holt will also discuss some of the CIA covert operations such as the assassination of Rafael Leonida Trujillo, one of the most vicious butchers ever to operate in the Caribbean. Aspects of the Kennedy assassination are discussed. At the time of the murder, Holt was working for KG & Co. The "K" stood f or former California Governor Goodwin Knight. The "G" stood for Alfred Gitelson, a sitting Los Angeles County Superior Court Judge.

Among the many partners in the company were Frank Belcher, Joe Ball, and Doc Stacher. The combination of political clout from the named partners, and the money of the organized crime relatively silent partners, led to tremendous profits, often at the expense of the taxpayers. The conduit for all CIA operations in California and Arizona was Phillip Twombly, former executive vice president of Coca Cola, the eyes and ears of the CIA in the Caribbean, who owned the University Bank of Fullerton, California.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Joseph_Stacher

Joseph Stacher (c. 1902 – 1977) (alias Doc Stacher, Joseph Rosen, Doc Harris el al) was a Jewish syndicate leader who helped bring together the Jewish and Italian Mafia into a national organized crime syndicate.

Early life

Joseph Stacher was born Gdale Oistaczer (commonly pronounced Gedalia) in Letychiv, Ukraine around 1902. He emigrated with his family to the United States in 1912. As a teenager living in Newark, New Jersey, he became friends with Meyer Lansky and Abner Zwillman. He attained United States citizenship in May 1930, but his naturalization was later revoked.

Career

By the 1920s Stacher was running much of Zwillman's gambling operations. In 1931, Stacher helped Meyer Lansky organize a conference of Jewish organized crime leaders at the Franconia Hotel, which later would see the alleged merging of the Jewish and Italian Mafia into a national crime syndicate. Running West Coast and Caribbean gambling operations for Lansky during the 1930s, as well as becoming a silent partner of movie studio Columbia Pictures in the late 1930s, Stacher would later supervise gambling in Las Vegas, Nevada, particularly the Sands and Fremont Casinos.

Stacher continued running Mafia gambling operations until 1964, when Federal authorities arrested him for tax evasion. While the US government was in favor of deporting him to his native Ukraine, federal law prohibited deporting anyone to a communist-controlled country. However, because of the "Law of Return", Stacher was allowed citizenship in Israel and successfully immigrated there in 1965.

While living in Israel he served as the primary source of Israeli journalists Dennis Eisenberg, Uri Dan, and Eli Landau for a biography of Meyer Lansky. Stacher continued living in Israel until his death.

Death

Stacher died, according to some reports in a Munich, West Germany, hotel room on February 28, 1977. His death was reported as a heart attack and his body shipped back to Israel. He was buried secretly and the nameplate of his grave was altered to hide his burial site. Only eight men were at the funeral, so the family had to ask a reporter and photographer to join the ceremony in order to attain a minyan.

Joseph Douglas Ball was born in San Antonio to Elizabeth Hart (née Lawler; 1868–1922) and Frank Xavier Ball (1868–1937), a rich farm owner later turned general store owner, as the second of eight children. Joseph Ball's brother, Raymond Ball, was the first mayor of Elmendorf, Texas.

After serving on the frontlines in Europe during World War I, Ball started his career as a bootlegger, providing illegal liquor to those who could pay for it. After the end of Prohibition, he opened a saloon called the Sociable Inn in Elmendorf, Texas. He built a pond that contained five alligators and charged people to view them, especially during feeding time; the food consisted mostly of live cats and dogs.

Murders

After a while, women in the area were reported missing, including barmaids. When two Bexar County deputy sheriffs went to question him in 1938, Ball pulled a handgun from his cash register and killed himself with a bullet through the heart (as noted on his death certificate by the coroner, but some sources report that he shot himself in the head). https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Joe_Ball

Through Twombly, we met and controlled many bank officials, particularly the Bank of America, whose key offcers cooperated blindly in whatever schemes were being perpetrated.

Chauncey Marvin Holt, discussing the violent end of the Kennedy administration, which will be covered in the book states: "In early 1963, our Los Angeles documentation mill was the Los Angeles Stamp and Stationery Company (LASSCO). Tony Materna, a MIT graduate (for real) and formerly a close associate of Howard Hughes, was the general manager who supervised the day to day operation of the legal side of the business [See Robert Mahue as well] . I was in charge of the covert section, supervising the graphic artists responsible for turning out some of the best documents in the country for the CIA and organized crime.

"It was in April of 1963 that we were informed that a major project was contemplated for the fall of that year. Later we were instructed that an incident would be created during visits by President Kennedy to either Chicago, Miami, or some other large city.

The incidents were to be viewed as the work of pro- Castro Cubans so that the CIA could regain interest in ridding the nation of Castro. (Oddly, at this time John Kennedy was subtly trying to bring Castro into a more positive relationship with the United States while his brother, Robert, was working on ways to assassinate him.)

"For this project, the covert section of LASSCO was asked to be prepared to forge identity documents for several agencies. The work, to be done on short notice, included documents and Japel recognition plns for the Secret Service.

"In August of 1963, acting on instructions of George Reynolds, who operated the Atchafalaya Labor Camp in Morgan City, Louisiana, Bud Belcher and I flew to New Orleans. Bud was the son of Frank Belcher, owner of Belcher Aircraft, a CIA proprietary interest. Bud and I were to give Lee Harvey Oswald material to distribute in his role with "Fair Play for Cuba." The pamphlets we printed at LASSCO were passed to Guy Bannister, but there was a well- publicized arrest of Oswald at this time and, to the best of my knowledge, the material was never distributed.

"In November I went to Dallas as instructed with forged documents for Homer Echevarria, as well as two men identified to me as Richard Montoya and Charles Harrelson. J was instructed to remain in Dealey Plaza 'in a support position' until after the motorcade and the planned demonstrations were turned over to Gordon Shanklin, FBI agent in charge.

He released us almost immediately, not bothering to record our detainment. The closest to a record is a photograph that was taken of us as the 'three tramps' whose identities have been incorrectly speculated.

"Suddenly after the release of the movie JFK and the resulting publicity, including lengthy articles in Newsweek and elsewhere, the Dallas Police came up with what purports to be arrest records of the three tramps. However, there are no pictures or fingerprints of these three individuals, even though the Dallas Police Department now claims that they were held for four days for vagrancy and for theft. The finger has been pointed all these years at the Dallas Police Department and the FederalBureau of Investigation who, allegedly were well aware of documentary evidence that would blunt the criticisms of negligence if, in fact, it was in existence and not fabricated solely for the purpose of discrediting other individuals, including myself.

"Still, to this day, no one, to my knowledge, has produced a single extant photograph of these three tramps that could be compared with those taken on that date.

"My photograph, as well as the photographs of Charles Rogers (aka Richard Montoya) and Charles Harrelson, have been compared and authenticated by Lois Gibson, forensic artist of the Houston Police Department, one of the foremost experts in America. Ms. Gibson has indicated she would stake her reputation on it.

The finger has been pointed all these years at the Dallas Police Department and the Federal Bureau of Investigation who, allegedly were well aware of documentary evidence that would blunt the criticisms of negligence if, in fact, it was in existence and not fabricated solely for the purpose of discrediting other individuals, including myself.

"Still, to this day, no one, to my knowledge, has produced a single extant photograph of these three tramps that could be compared with those taken on that date. "My photograph, as well as the photographs of Charles Rogers (aka Richard Montoya) and Charles Harrelson, have been compared and authenticated by Lois Gibson, forensic artist of the Houston Police Department, one of the foremost experts in America. Ms. Gibson has indicated she would stake her reputation on the fact that I am the tramp now claimed to be Gus Abrams, deceased.

"Shortly thereafter James Canty and I flew from Red Bird Airport in a private plane furnished by George Reynolds which, we believe, was flown into Red Bird and left by David Ferrie. Ferrie was an associate of Carlos Marcello, the syndicate boss of New Orleans, Dallas, and Houston, who was a close friend and associate of Peter Licavoli (who had converted Grace Ranch from horse racing to a CIA airbase facility as the CIA recruited the mob and its holdings and personnel)."

Much of Holt's post-Bay of Pigs work for the CIA was in California where his job included establishing proprietary interests for the company. He took strong recommendations from his close associates Meyer Lansky and Peter Licavoli in order to be able to begin associating with powerful Californians.

These included Frank Belcher, Joseph A. Ball who was later a senior counsel for the Warren Commission, as well as Goodwin Knight, Alfred Gitelson, and other influential partners in KG & Co.

"I operated five different proprietary interests including a documentation mill, two fixed based operations for aircraft, a weapons modification plant, and a business management firm which disbursed contingency funds to contract agents and carried out money laundering operations. Frank Belcher and I had a joint bank account at the Bank of America in Burbank, California, that was used to launder contingency funds, pay contract agents, and receive funds from those clients of the CIA fronts that availed themselves of our services. Belcher was a relative of J.A. Belcher of Belcher Oil Company, another firm closely connected to the CIA.

He was married to Ruth Reynolds, who was related to George Reynolds of Morgan City, Louisiana, another asset, and Bob Reynolds, who was chief of station of JM/ Wave, the huge CIA complex located on the campus of the University of Miami. "Belcher and Ball were partners, along with actors John Wayne and Fred MacMurray, in a luxurious house in Acapulco, next to Las Brisas. It was used almost like a time share for the men and their friends. Among the 'friends' were CIA contract agents and organized crime figures such as Lansky, Licavoli, and Stacher, who went there for meetings. I never did learn if Wayne and MacMurray were aware of the meetings taking place. It was an investment that paid off for all concerned, and they may not have been aware of anything more than the appreciation in the property's value prior to the partners' selling it."

Some considered John Wayne a draft dodger who was able to get a deferment and act instead in movies such as the Flying Tigers (1942), the US Army Air Force in combat over China. https://www.military.com/history/why-john-wayne-was-labeled-draft-dodger-during-world-war-ii.html

James P. Donegan (my father), then 86, of Lincoln, Calif., originally from Dorchester, Mass., died Oct. 13, from injuries following an accident. Jim leaves his wife, Sue Ann of Lincoln; two sons from his first marriage, Thomas of Provincetown, Mass., and Edward of Arlington, Va. He also leaves a sister, Mary "Betty" Connolly of Atlantic Beach, Fla.; and a brother, Robert of Marshfield, Mass. He served in the 8th US Army Air Force in Europe during World War II and later flew many combat missions as an Air Force fighter pilot over North Korea. Following the war, Jim joined TWA and spent the next 35 years as a pilot captain. His career took him over many of their domestic and international routes. Upon retirement, he met and married his adored wife Sue Ann and together they settled into an idyllic outdoor lifestyle, dividing their time between their Walnut Creek, Calif., condo, and hiking and skiing at their home in the High Sierra town of Truckee. A celebration of Jim's life is planned later this month in Lincoln for his friends and family. - https://www.legacy.com/us/obituaries/southofboston-ledger/name/james-donegan-obituary?id=20341454

He told me (his son) as we walked through the National Aerospace Museums (there are actually two of them sine most cities don't keep things the size of the Space Shuttle downtown) the ME 262 was no match for the P-51 D. He had flown in those battles in the 8th Air Force of the US Army Air Corp. The ME was an incredible looking plane and had jet engines but the P-51 could still defeat it. In retrospect that is not so hard to believe. Piston engines can reach about 200 miles per hour, Warp 2 in Star Treck enterprise versions history. Turboprops those that in addition to the "gas charges" placed in the combustion chambers to push the cylinder head as though a canon ball created high PSI air charges added in too. This allowed enough oxygen for combustion at the high altitude bombers flew at those bombers hoping to avoid ground anti-aircraft fire. Each plan though like the ME 262 jet engine fighter and the P-51D were approaching the speed of sound and air-frames of conventional designs could not break through the hard as cement walls of air forming in front of these high speed planes. He explained to me over the course of his lie Supersonic flight and getting through the barrier as part of aviation history. He may also have have been talking about the P-40 as well as I remember back and read more about those planes.

The P-51 with its Merlin engine (Birds of Prey see the statue in M's office, James Bond Casino Royale) were Supermarine Dive planes that could fly to and dive down from high altitude like Merlins. The Packard Motor company could and did build V-12 engine blocks and Packard Motor company took the two stage supercharger Rolls Royce was using for its Spitfire Merline engine and built for the P-51 and possibly even for Spitfires to add in more production planes. The Battle to Wichita Kansas that built the B-29 was a battle of industrial capacity to churn out state of the art capable bombers Inglewood California Los Angeles County and Packard Motors Los Angles County Paul Schrade was a union rep for turned out these war machines.

Patricia Helen Kennedy (not in Jet Pilot nor other movies referenced here) was born in Brookline, Massachusetts. She attended Roehampton Sacred Heart Convent School (now Woldingham School) in London, and Maplehurst Sacred Heart Convent School in Bronxville, New York. In 1945, she received a bachelor of arts degree from Rosemont College, where she was active in both directing and acting in theatrical productions.

Patricia Kennedy sister of JFK and RFK was considered the most sophisticated, yet also the most introverted, of her parents' five daughters. Since childhood she had a fascination with travel and Hollywood. In time, she would become a world traveler, so much so that, as a young girl, she was given assignments by the independent and foreign press to write of her travels. Her ongoing fascination with Hollywood was fueled by her father's stories and adventures there as a movie mogul heading RKO Pictures. After graduating from Rosemont College, she moved to Hollywood, in hopes of becoming a movie producer and director like her father. Spouse Peter Lawford (m. 1954; div. 1966) and I Ed Donegan suspect as the Kennedy family under Joseph Kennedy Sr was re-enacting the story of the Battle of Britain she met Peter Lawford perhaps at the Desert Inn or in Los Angeles County Santa Monica City where they would resdide and be close friends with Marilyn Monroe and the Rat Pack.

One point about mass media to remember is it is often a holy-land of propagandists seeking to influence the public.

I have long thought Norma Jean was in fact a Joseph Kennedy Sr. rescuee from Austria when Maria Kutschera became pregnant. The exact and complete genalogy of a series of people is still hidden but her (Norma Jean) and Glorian Donegan (Gainey) were placed I think by Joseph Kennedy Sr. and Dean Rusk, respectively. I have also thought that the sister of my mother my father met and did not express interest back romantically was Norma Jean but he did truly love my mother nearly at first sight for a light and intellect in her from the outset.

Marilyn Monroe RFK and JFK Happy Birthday and Thanks for the Memories

On This Date In 1962: A gala celebration of JFK's forty-fifth birthday is held in Madison Square Garden to raise funds for the Democratic Party. Marilyn Monroe sings her famous rendition of "Happy Birthday" to JFK. JFK apparently never sees Monroe again... #JFKassassinationboard

In fact it is much like the fundraiser held about a year before in Los Angeles County and involving Peter Lawford friends at a Black Tie dinner. Was there a birthday at that event too? November 18 November 19 1961 DNC Fundraiser?

Other events were happening too. World Expo in Seatle was going on with RFK and JFK and the Windsor family. At that time Malcomn X was publishing his picture of Barrack Obama Jr beign held by Stanley Ann Dunham. Jet Pilot filming had run from 1949 or so up until its release in 1957.

These are insiders to MK-UTLRA and secret over-throw plans involving Castro and others. I think this is linked to my birth at that time JFK was in the area of and events at Mc Martin Preschool the CIA was very secretly active at.

I believe now that Happy Birthday Mister President with the Thanks For THe Memories piece added into it was the story of Joseph Kennedy Sr., Senator John F. Kennedy, and others re-enacting the Battle of Britain in Jet Pilot, the filming location in Palm Springs and maybe Grace Ranch the secret CIA aibrabse and where The Misfits was set could all tie together. How is that her memories? Part of that was Duke Edward of Wales, the abdicated King who was part of both the WWI and WWII stories of American Industrialism. The Boston Harbor fed ships into the Atlantic Ocean in WWI under FDR with Kennedy Sr asking negotiations-at-the-margin to cease so labor and management could build ships harmoniously, unfettered by internal controversies for WWI. In WWII as part of Lend Lease (the official policy of FDR and thus Joseph Kennedy Sr.) was that the USA effectively subsidized England's war effort in the hopes the USA (if England won) would not need to enter the war. Building the Packard Merlin engine for the Spitfire and P-51's for England was part of Lend Lease. As the USA entered the war it then kept the planes for its own war effort. On August 4 the planned fake birthday of Barrack Obama Jr. being one year old a fake staged birthay party with glitter is held at Norma Jeans home I think staging possible motherhood of the child having a birthday but she is found dead and for some reason stopped cooperationg. ALL of this tied to Inglewood and that history of WWII.

It is easy to watch Tom Cruise in an aviator leather jacket. As these planes flew higher and higher up avoiding ground flack and atmospheric resistance these planes also became inhospitable without warm clothes and oxygen masks. This is a key time in aviation and it was all acted out in the film.

Malcomx X and I think through J. Edgar Hoover and the FBI and the CIA was closely watching the story of Barrack Obama's birth and in this February 23, 1961 photo from his own magazine it is left a possibility he is really the father. Stanley Ann Dunhum holds up the baby as he seems to look on. If fertilization was Feb 20, 1961 and nine months later November 18 1961 Obama is born in Los Angeles County Inglewood just as I am then they are celebrating he lived. Mixed race pregnancy in history is common but Chimera the artificial mixing of species but here merely using IVF raised question as to length of survival. Often artificial genetics or perhaps immunology or infections in these novel IVF procedures like raised the question of the baby would live a year past birth.

The House Committee on Un-American Activities (HCUA), popularly the House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC), was an investigative committee of the United States House of Representatives, created in 1938 to investigate alleged disloyalty and subversive activities on the part of private citizens, public employees, and those organizations suspected of having communist ties. It became a standing (permanent) committee in 1946, and from 1969 onwards it was known as the House Committee on Internal Security. When the House abolished the committee in 1975, its functions were transferred to the House Judiciary Committee.

The committee's anti-communist investigations are often associated with McCarthyism, although Joseph McCarthy himself (as a U.S. Senator) had no direct involvement with the House committee. McCarthy was the chairman of the Government Operations Committee and its Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations of the U.S. Senate, not the House.

Jeanette Helen Morrison (July 6, 1927 - October 3, 2004), known professionally as Janet Leigh was born on July 6, 1927, in Merced, California, the only child of Helen Lita (née Westergaard) and Frederick Robert Morrison. Her maternal grandparents were immigrants from Denmark, and her father had Scots-Irish and German ancestry. Shortly after Leigh's birth, the family relocated to Stockton, where she spent her early life. She was brought up in poverty, as her father struggled to support the family with his factory employment, and he took various additional jobs after the Great Depression.

Leigh was raised Presbyterian and sang in the local church choir throughout her childhood. In 1941, when her paternal grandfather became terminally ill, the family relocated to Merced, where they moved into her grandparents' home. She attended Weber Grammar School in Stockton, and later Stockton High School. Leigh excelled in academics and graduated from high school at age sixteen.

In February 1946, actress Norma Shearer was vacationing at Sugar Bowl, a ski resort in the Sierra Nevada mountains where Leigh's parents were working at the time. In the resort lobby, Shearer noticed a photograph of Leigh taken by her father over the Christmas holiday, which he had printed and placed in a photo album available for guests to browse.

Leigh appeared in a number of films in 1949, including the thriller, Act of Violence (1949), with Van Heflin and Robert Ryan, directed by Fred Zinnemann. Though a financial failure, it was well received by critics. She also had a significant hit with MGM's version of Little Women, based on the novel by Louisa May Alcott, in which she portrayed Meg March, alongside June Allyson and Elizabeth Taylor. The film was generally well received by critics. Also in 1949, Leigh appeared as a nun in the anti-communist drama The Red Danube, which earned her critical acclaim, followed by a role as Glenn Ford's love interest in The Doctor and the Girl. Other credits from 1949 include as June Forsyte in That Forsyte Woman (1949) opposite Greer Garson and Errol Flynn, and as Robert Mitchum's leading co-star in the RKO-produced Holiday Affair (1949). That December, she started work on Josef von Sternberg's adventure-drama film Jet Pilot, in which she starred as the female lead opposite John Wayne. Producer Howard Hughes' constant re-editing would cause the film to be delayed almost eight years before being released.

At MGM she appeared in Strictly Dishonorable (1951), a comedy with Ezio Pinza, based on a play by Preston Sturges. The film received mild critical acclaim. Leigh then appeared in the baseball-themed fantasy farce Angels in the Outfield (1951), which was a significant commercial success. The same year, RKO borrowed Leigh to appear in the musical Two Tickets to Broadway (1951), which was a box-office success. She was one of many stars in the anthology film It's a Big Country: An American Anthology (1952) and appeared in a romantic comedy with Peter Lawford, Just This Once (1952).

In addition to her work as an actress, Leigh also wrote four books between 1984 and 2002, two of which were novels. Leigh had two brief marriages as a teenager (one of which was annulled) before marrying actor Tony Curtis in 1951. The pair's highly publicized union ended in divorce in 1962, and after starring in The Manchurian Candidate that same year, Leigh remarried and scaled back her career. She died in 2004 at age 77, following a year-long battle with vasculitis.

The 303 Squadron. A legendary outfit made up mainly from Polish aces in exile. Initially frowned upon by the British as undisciplined and lacking skill, the Poles took to their Hawker Hurricanes and became heroes during the battle of Britain. Mirosław Ferić kept a diary of the squadron's exploits, victories and losses. While it's difficult to estimate the exact contribution of every unit into such huge battles as the Battle of Britain. Beyond all question, 303 Squadron was one of the most impactful units of the RAF. Initial wartime reports mention 126 victories by 303 Squadron during the Battle. According to the most recent research they are credited with over 58 verified victories, which still makes them the most efficient aerial unit in the Battle.

Regular combat operations by the VIII Bomber Command began on 17 August 1942, when the 97th Bombardment Group flew twelve Boeing B-17E Flying Fortresses on the first VIII Bomber Command heavy bomber mission of the war from RAF Grafton Underwood, attacking the Rouen-Sotteville marshalling yards in France. Colonel Frank A. Armstrong may have been the commander of the 97th, but at the time of the raid, not yet left seat qualified. On this mission, he sat in the co-pilot's seat of the lead B-17, Butcher Shop[8][self-published source] The pilot in command and leader of this historic mission was Paul Tibbets, who on 6 August 1945, dropped the first Atomic Bomb, Little Boy, on Hiroshima from the Boeing B-29 Superfortress, Enola Gay.

Central to the 8th Air Force being along the White Cliffs of Dover is being airborne earley enough because of RADAR and fast enough and high flying enough with the Rolls Royce Engines made by Packard Motors to defeat inbound attacks on England. The North American P-51 Mustang[c] first entered squadron service in Europe with the British in early 1942; having much success with the RAF, although it found the Allison V-1710-engined aircraft's performance inadequate at higher altitudes. In mid-42 Rolls-Royce engineers rapidly realized that equipping the Mustang with a Rolls-Royce Merlin engine with its two speed, two stage supercharger would substantially improve performance. Also, by using a four-bladed propeller, rather than the three-bladed one used on the P-51A, the performance was greatly improved[d].

The USAAF now finally had an aircraft that could compete on equal terms with the Focke-Wulf Fw 190 and the later models of the Messerschmitt Bf 109. The USAAF was finally fully sold on the Mustang, and a letter contract for 2,200 P-51Bs was issued. The engine was to be the Packard V-1650-3, based on the Rolls-Royce Merlin Mk68.

In late 1943, the P-51B Mustang was introduced to the European Theater by the USAAF. It could fly as far on its internal fuel tanks as the P-47 could with drop tanks. However, the P-51B was introduced as a tactical fighter, so the first deliveries of the P-51B in November 1943 were assigned to three groups in the tactical Ninth Air Force at the expense of VIII Bomber Command, whose need for a long range escort fighter was critical. The first escort mission for the bombers was not flown until 5 December.

As the new commander of the Eighth Air Force since January 1944, Major General Jimmy Doolittle's major influence on the European air war occurred early that year when he made a critical change to the policy requiring escorting fighters to remain with the bombers at all times. With Doolittle's permission, American fighter pilots on bomber defense missions would primarily be flying far ahead of the bombers' combat box formations in air supremacy mode, literally "clearing the skies" of any Luftwaffe fighter opposition heading towards the target. This strategy fatally disabled the twin-engined Zerstörergeschwader heavy fighter wings and their replacement, single-engined Sturmgruppen of heavily armed Fw 190As, clearing each force of bomber destroyers in their turn from Germany's skies throughout most of 1944. As part of this game-changing strategy, especially after the bombers had hit their targets, the USAAF's fighters were then free to strafe German airfields and transport while returning to base, contributing significantly to the achievement of air superiority by Allied air forces over Europe.

The effect of the Mustangs, fully operating as an air supremacy fighter force, on the Luftwaffe defenders was arguably swift and decisive. The result was that the Luftwaffe was notable by its absence over the skies of Europe after D-Day and the Allies were starting to achieve air superiority over the continent. Although the Luftwaffe could, and did, mount effective attacks on the ever-larger formations of Allied heavy bombers, the sheer numbers of B-17s and B-24s attacking enemy targets was overwhelming the German fighter force, which simply could not sustain the losses the Eighth Air Force bombers and fighters were inflicting on it. In order to quickly assemble these formations, specially outfitted assembly ships were created from older bombers.

By mid-1944, Eighth Air Force had reached a total strength of more than 200,000 people (it is estimated that more than 350,000 Americans served in Eighth Air Force during the war in Europe). At peak strength, Eighth Air Force had forty heavy bomber groups, fifteen fighter groups, and four specialized support groups. It could, and often did, dispatch more than 2,000 four-engine bombers and more than 1,000 fighters on a single mission to multiple targets.

By 1945, all but one of the Eighth Air Force fighter groups were equipped with the P-51D.

Partial Obsorbance and Partial Reflection shows radio wave hitting a metal conductor in combination reflected and absorbed. Radio and RADAR are closely connected and were part of FIGHTER CONTROL RADIO from a ground based Strategic Air Command to airborne fighter pilots.

A wave experiences partial transmittance and partial reflectance when the medium through which it travels suddenly changes. The reflection coefficient determines the ratio of the reflected wave amplitude to the incident wave amplitude.

Innovation at Cambridge RADAR and Microwave Ovens retrieved from https://historycambridge.org/innovation/Microwaves.html and copied or modified to here

In 1922, two former Tufts University students, Lawrence K. Marshall and Vannevar Bush, along with Harvard physicist Charles G. Smith, founded the American Appliance Company in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Initially interested in refrigeration technology, they soon shifted their attention to electronics and had their breakthrough with a helium rectifier. This innovation essentially eliminated the need for expensive, short-lived batteries. The application for this was quickly transferred to radios, a market facing rapidly increasing consumer demand in the 1920s. The tube that made this all possible was named Raytheon, meaning “god of life” in Greek, and this company was renamed the Raytheon Manufacturing Company in 1925 after the success of this first product. As the company grew they diversified and within a decade were involved in the manufacture of electron tubes and switches, transformers, power equipment, electronic automobile parts, and vacuum tubes.

Diversification in products and in investments with other companies kept Raytheon successful during the 1930s. As the 1940s dawned President Franklin Delano Roosevelt authorized the development of radar technologies through the joint efforts of American and British scientists. MIT's Radiation Laboratory pioneered innovation of radar technology and chose Raytheon to develop the top secret cavity magnetron, the vacuum tube that made microwave radar a possibility. In 1941, the potential of radar was realized as Raytheon was awarded the contract for 100 radar systems for Allied naval ships. By the end of the war, Raytheon magnetrons accounted for 80 percent of the radar magnetrons produced during the war.

While the MIT Rad Lab continued work on theoretical applications of microwave technology with Raytheon's products, at Raytheon headquarters, as the story has it, an innovation developed by accident revolutionized life across the entire globe. Raytheon scientist, Percy Spencer, working on microwaves noticed that a chocolate bar in his pocket melted while he was in the laboratory. Intrigued, he brought in popcorn kernels and was astounded to watch them pop. Whether this tale indeed took place, or is just an nice anecdote, it is certain that Spencer and others set to work on the application of microwave technology for cooking and heating food. In 1947, Raytheon introduced the Radarange microwave for commercial use-a technology which hinted at a change to the notion of cooking forever.

By Edward Curtin Review of Greg Poulgrain's book "The Incubus of Intervention: Conflicting Indonesian Strategies of John F. Kennedy and Allen Dulles"

This is the central question addressed by Greg Poulgrain in his extraordinarily important book, The Incubus of Intervention: Conflicting Indonesian Strategies of John F. Kennedy and Allen Dulles.

Two days before President John Kennedy's assassination on November 22, 1963, he had accepted an invitation from Indonesian President Sukarno to visit that country the following spring. The aim of the visit was to end the conflict (Konfrontasi) between Indonesia and Malaysia and to continue Kennedy's efforts to support post-colonial Indonesia with economic and developmental aid, not military. It was part of his larger strategy of ending conflict throughout Southeast Asia and assisting the growth of democracy in newly liberated post-colonial countries worldwide.

He had forecast his position in a dramatic speech in 1957 when, as a Massachusetts Senator, he told the Senate that he supported the Algerian liberation movement and opposed colonial imperialism worldwide. The speech caused an international uproar and Kennedy was harshly attacked by Eisenhower, Nixon, John Foster Dulles, and even liberals such as Adlai Stevenson. But he was praised throughout the third world.

Of course JFK never went to Indonesia in 1964, and his peaceful strategy to bring Indonesia to America's side and to ease tensions in the Cold War was never realized, thanks to Allen Dulles. And Kennedy's proposed withdrawal from Vietnam, which was premised on success in Indonesia, was quickly reversed by Lyndon Johnson after JFK's murder. Soon both countries would experience mass slaughter engineered by Kennedy's opponents in the CIA and Pentagon. Millions would die. Subsequently, starting in December 1975, American installed Indonesian dictator, Suharto, would slaughter hundreds of thousands East-Timorese with American weapons after meeting with Henry Kissinger and President Ford and receiving their approval.

Dulles's Secret

What JFK didn't know was that his plans were threatening a covert long-standing conspiracy engineered by Allen Dulles to effect regime change in Indonesia through bloody means. The primary goal behind this plan was to gain unimpeded access to the vast load of natural resources that Dulles had kept secret from Kennedy, who thought Indonesia was lacking in natural resources. But Dulles knew that if Kennedy, who was very popular in Indonesia, visited Sukarno, it would deal a death blow to his plan to oust Sukarno, install a CIA replacement (Suharto), exterminate alleged communists, and secure the archipelago for Rockefeller controlled oil and mining interests, for whom he had fronted since the 1920s.

Dr. Poulgrain, who teaches Indonesian History, Politics and Society at the University of Sunshine Coast in Australia, explores in very great detail historical issues that have critical significance for today. Based on almost three decades of interviews and research around the world, he has produced a very densely argued book that reads like a detective novel with fascinating sub- plots.

George Gordon Battle Liddy (November 30, 1930 - March 30, 2021) was an American lawyer, criminal and FBI agent who was convicted of conspiracy, burglary, and illegal wiretapping for his role in the Watergate scandal during the Nixon administration.

Working alongside E. Howard Hunt, Liddy organized and directed the burglary of the Democratic National Committee headquarters in the Watergate building in May and June 1972. After five of Liddy's operatives were arrested inside the DNC offices on June 17, 1972, subsequent investigations of the Watergate scandal led to Nixon's resignation in 1974. Liddy was convicted of burglary, conspiracy, and refusing to testify to the Senate committee investigating Watergate. He served nearly 52 months in federal prisons.

At age 29, Liddy became the youngest[11] bureau supervisor at FBI headquarters in Washington, D.C.. Under the mentorship of deputy director Cartha DeLoach, Liddy secured a position on director J. Edgar Hoover's personal staff, even acting as Hoover's ghostwriter. Despite his achievements, Liddy was also known for his reckless behavior among his fellow agents, highlighted by two particular incidents.[14]

The first incident took place in Kansas City, Missouri, during a covert operation. He was arrested but was subsequently released after contacting Clarence M. Kelley, former FBI agent and the then-chief of the Kansas City Police. The second incident involved an FBI background check that Liddy conducted on his future wife before they got married in 1957. Liddy later claimed this action was a routine precautionary measure.

He would also ghost write for CIA backed productions anonymyzing CIA FBI story-lines still classified.

The Paul Schrade online detail is thin but the Spitfire V-16 motor that was licensed to Packard Motors to be built and used in the North American Airframe P-51 that was undderpowered to fight at high altitude over the English Channel is where Schrade worked at least for a while thus the autoworker machinist union. It is my opinion Sirhan Sirhan was riled up on purpose over RFK, LBJ, and other Democrats supporting Isreal with Phantom F4 fighters (did James Paul Donegan fly one?) and thus was the fall guy. Chaney Holt indicates he and the CIA in Los Angeles were working on very good silencors Donovan demostrated at the White House as part of MKULTRA and it is suggested a secret CIA shot hit RFK from behind while the encrouaged terrorsist shot from the front and might have missed thus neccesitating the CIA coup de gras from behind RFK.

Born Dec. 17, 1924, Schrade was raised in Saratoga Springs, N.Y., and briefly attended Yale before heading west for a job at North American Aviation in Los Angeles and then rising up the ranks of the United Automobile Workers Union. He struck up a friendship with Kennedy when the future senator’s brother was on his way to becoming president.

I have put together a string of excerpts I think of characters based on Jim Donegan and Glorian Gainey. While demonstrating the air superiority of WWII and the Cold War he meets Glorian daughter fo a Kutcherea and a Windsor who had speech flow problems. During that ghost written storyline he is blackmailed to cooperate with the CIA if his wife's hidden identity is to remain secret. That was being blackmailed into Eugenics test births that occurred cooindicend with my own birth in Inglewood California.

In 1965, he joined Chavez and Huerta in the farmworkers’ struggles and twice arranged for Kennedy to travel to Delano to support striking farmworkers. The connection between the New England-bred politician and the charismatic Chavez may well have helped propel Kennedy to victory in California.

Paul Schrade soaked up the excitement as the crowd roared and Robert Kennedy smiled and leaned into the microphone:

“So my thanks to all of you, and on to Chicago and let’s win there.”

Kennedy had just won the 1968 Democratic presidential primary in California, and there was a palpable sense inside the old Ambassador Hotel that the young New York senator had seized enough momentum to carry his suddenly super-charged campaign through to the convention in Chicago.

And then everything went to hell.

An auto workers union leader who had introduced Kennedy to powerful labor figures such as Cesar Chavez and Dolores Huerta, Schrade was walking a pace or two behind Kennedy when the first shot was fired.

“I got hit by the first shot,” Schrade told The Times. “I was right behind Bobby. It was meant for him and got me. I thought I had been electrocuted. I was shaking violently on the floor and saw flashes.”

When he looked up, Schrade saw Kennedy slumped on the ground, a young busboy cradling the dying senator’s head in his hands. By the following day, Kennedy was dead and a young Jordanian immigrant named Sirhan Sirhan was behind bars, accused of killing the senator.

Kennedy’s death hung over the nation for decades, altering the course of American politics and forming a dismal closing chapter to a turbulent decade. To some, it marked a farewell to a generation’s innocence.

Schrade slid into depression, lost reelection to his union leadership post and returned to the auto assembly line. He also became convinced that there was more than one gunman in the hotel ballroom that June night and that Sirhan - who has repeatedly been denied parole over the last half century - did not fire the shot that killed Kennedy.

An authority on the Kennedy assassination who testified on Sirhan's behalf at parole hearings, Schrade died early Wednesday after a brief illness at his home in Los Angeles, according to his brother-in-law, Martin Weil. Schrade was 97.

A white-haired Paul Schrade holds photos of a gun.

Paul Schrade holds photos of Sirhan Sirhan's revolver. Schrade became an authority on the assassination and testified on Sirhan's behalf at parole hearings. While he believed police and prosecutors had bungled the assassination probe and had failed to earnestly look for a second shooter, he spent the bulk of his energy chasing the causes Kennedy had embraced - ending the war in Vietnam, fighting for the marginalized, dampening the racism that still flared in plain view.

Schrade also helped lead the effort to transform the Ambassador Hotel into a school complex, upending Donald Trump's plan to build what the future president pledged would be the tallest building in the country. The library at Robert F. Kennedy Communities Schools is now named in Schrade's honor.

Born Dec. 17, 1924, Schrade was raised in Saratoga Springs, N.Y., and briefly attended Yale before heading west for a job at North American Aviation in Los Angeles and then rising up the ranks of the United Automobile Workers Union. He struck up a friendship with Kennedy when the future senator's brother was on his way to becoming president.

In 1965, he joined Chavez and Huerta in the farmworkers' struggles and twice arranged for Kennedy to travel to Delano to support striking farmworkers. The connection between the New England-bred politician and the charismatic Chavez may well have helped propel Kennedy to victory in California.

Many of America's darkest moments, the assassinations of President John F. Kennedy and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. among them, spawned mysteries and conspiracy theories. And so it was with the death of Robert Kennedy. How could it be, skeptics asked, that Kennedy was shot from behind while Sirhan was standing in front of him? Sirhan's revolver held eight bullets, but some insisted more shots had been fired and that ballistics evidence pointed to a second gun.

Los Angeles police grudgingly reinvestigated the shooting in the 1970s and again concluded that Sirhan was the lone gunman.

For his own part, Sirhan was little help. He testified that he had been at a firing range earlier that day, had come to the Ambassador to attend a party and had briefly left the hotel and then returned after deciding he was too drunk to drive. The rest of the night was enveloped in fog, he said.

Sirhan offered contrition at his parole hearings, but always stopped short of taking full blame.

"Sen. Kennedy was the hope of the world and I injured, and I harmed all of them and it pains me to experience that, the knowledge for such a horrible deed, if I did in fact do that," he testified after being recommended for parole in 2021.

To Schrade, none of it added up. The police investigation felt rushed and sloppy, and key pieces of evidence had been ignored, he said. The closer he looked, the more convinced he was that Sirhan did not shoot Kennedy.

"Yes, he did shoot me. Yes, he shot four other people and aimed at Kennedy," Schrade told the Washington Post. "The important thing is he did not shoot Robert Kennedy. Why didn't they go after the second gunman? They knew about him right away. They didn't want to know who it was. They wanted a quickie."

In 2016, Schrade testified on Sirhan's behalf but the parole board, as it had before and would again, denied him parole.

“Sirhan, I’m so sorry this is happening to you,” Schrade shouted as Sirhan was led away in handcuffs.

When Gov. Gavin Newsom rejected parole for Sirhan in January 2022, marking the 16th time he’d been denied freedom, Schrade was saddened, but hardly surprised.

“He did not shoot Robert Kennedy and should have been released long ago,” he said.

Schrade is survived by a sister, Louise “Weezie” Stone Duff. His wife, Monica Weil, died in 2019. https://www.latimes.com/california/story/2022-11-09/paul-schrade-dies-union-leader-survived-bullet-to-the-head-when-robert-f-kennedy-was-killed

In The Americanization of Emily Emily is a woman who views sloth and cowardice with disgust but falls in love with just such a figure from the USA. Despite being a coward Charlie is forced into the spotlight of war hero by gunshots from behind of his own units. Once in the spotlight he wishes to renounce himself and his role and tell the truth publicly but is pressured not to. Instead he will fulfill US Propaganda needs for a war hero who will say how he himself won the war.

In Jet Pilot 1957 Col Shannon is asked to do the same thing. Explain Strategic Air Command (that Col. Prouty was ordered to create in actual USAAF history) when inbound radar signals in Oahu and elsewhere were of little value for when the battle begun it was too late to defend against the bombers overhead and battles were lost.

The foundation of Strategic Air Command in Great Britain that tracked planes on a global bases as troop and land based war resources had been tracked before was the start of (Don't get into Donald Trump here) Strategic Command Centers that saw military movements from recon and planned for threats based on enemy movements.

Jet Pilot is the Refresher Course on how the US Army Air Crop created this command during WWII along with Great Britain. The documents were written by Col Robert F. Kennedy a possible hidden part of Kennedy family CIA history.

The Americanization of Emily is a 1964 American black-and-white black comedy anti-war film. Set during World War II, the film follows a United States Navy adjutant who is roped into a reckless interservice rivalry-fueled stunt by his superiors, becoming a war hero by being the first American sailor killed on D-Day.

In 1944 during World War II, U.S. Navy Lt. Commander Charlie Madison is a cynical and highly efficient adjutant to Rear Admiral William Jessup in London. Charlie's job is to keep his boss and similar serving officers supplied with everything they need, including luxury goods and amiable women. He falls in love with Emily Barham, a British driver from the motor pool who has lost her husband, brother and father in the war. Charlie's pleasure-seeking "American" lifestyle amid wartime rationing both fascinates and disgusts Emily, but she does not want to lose another loved one to war and finds the "practicing coward" Charlie irresistible.

Rear Admiral William Jessup in London (Perhaps Admiral Halsey in real life) obsesses over the U.S. Army and its Air Force overshadowing the Navy in the forthcoming D-Day invasion, and decides that "the first dead man on Omaha Beach must be a sailor". A combat film will document the death, and the casualty will be buried in a "Tomb of the Unknown Sailor". He orders Charlie to get the film made.

His sexual fling Emily Barham, a British driver from the motor pool who has lost her husband, brother and father in the war. Charlie's pleasure-seeking "American" lifestyle amid wartime rationing both fascinates and disgusts Emily, but she does not want to lose another loved one to war and finds the "practicing coward" Charlie irresistible.

Despite his best efforts to avoid the assignment, Charlie and his now gung-ho friend, Commander "Bus" Cummings, find themselves and a makeshift two-man film crew aboard a ship with the combat engineers, who will be the first sailors ashore on D-Day. When they land, Charlie tries to retreat, but Admiral Cummings shoots him in the leg with his M1911 pistol; shortly after, a German artillery shell lands near the limping-running Charlie, making him the first American casualty on Omaha Beach. Hundreds of newspapers and magazine covers reprint a photograph of Charlie running on the beach alone, making him a war hero.

Then comes unexpected news: Charlie is alive and now at the Allied 6th Relocation Center in Southampton, England. A relieved Jessup plans to show him off during his Senate testimony as the "first man on Omaha Beach", a sailor. Limping from his injury and angry about his senseless near-death, Charlie plans to act nobly by telling the world the truth about what really happened, even if it means being imprisoned for cowardice while facing the enemy. However, by recounting to him what he had said to her previously, Emily is able to persuade Charlie to choose happiness with her instead, and to keep quiet and accept his new, unwanted role as a hero.

was a wartime speech delivered to the House of Commons of the United Kingdom by British prime minister Winston Churchill on 20 August 1940. The name stems from the specific line in the speech, "Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few", referring to the ongoing efforts of the Royal Air Force and other Allied aircrew who were fighting in the Battle of Britain, the pivotal air battle with the German Luftwaffe.

The speech came amidst German plans for an invasion. At the end of June 1940, the Luftwaffe had a large numerical superiority over the Royal Air Force, with around 2,550 planes compared to the only 750 planes of the RAF. Pilots who fought in the Battle of Britain have been known as "the Few" ever since, at times being specifically commemorated for Battle of Britain Day, on 15 September. The speech has become one of Churchill's most famous, along with "we shall fight on the beaches", "their finest hour", and "blood, toil, tears, and sweat".

At 60 minutes and 40 seconds the Polish traing crew will be remprimanded for joining into combat with England over the channel, then with a sour face made combat fighters the cheers of the foriegn contributors, I see that at One hour and Zero minutes.

At the completion of the film a long string of nations who contributed pilots are list, the USA had contributed 7 pilots I believe my father was one of them.

We had seen the Messerschmidt 109 in a museum and he talked about how good looking the plane was visually but the P-51 was superior and its match and then some in battle.

Bf-109 - The Messerschmidt Bf-109 fighters used in the movie were actually Spanish-built Buchons, built under license by the Spanish and being very similar to the Me-109 (Bf-109). The main difference was that a Merlin engine was used instead of the Daimler-Benz engine used in the German WWII fighters. In order for the aircraft to better represent a 1940 Bf-109E fake cannon barrels were added to the wings and fake machine guns were added to the upper engine cowling. Tailplane struts were also added, and the rounded wingtips were removed. The movie production company was fortunate in that as they started their search for available German fighters the Spanish air force had just retired their entire fleet of Buchons. A large pile of scrapped Buchons was purchased at auction, and 19 aircraft were reconstructed from the salvage to be used in the movie.

Many of the Spitfires that fought around the bombers against the Messerscmidt 109s were NOrth American Aviation and Hewlett Packard building the P-51 Mustang from Spitfire blue prints and US

Georg von Trapp had seven children at the time of the death of his first wife, Agathe Whitehead, and in 1927 he married Maria Kutschera, who was twenty-five years his junior, and had three more children with her. Maria wrote an account of the singing family The Story of the Trapp Family Singers which was published in 1949 and was the inspiration for the 1956 West German film The Trapp Family, which in turn inspired Rodgers and Hammerstein's 1959 Broadway musical The Sound of Music and then its 1965 film adaptation starring Julie Andrews and Christopher Plummer, which held the title of highest-grossing film of all-time for five years

Starting in Boston Massachusetts Cape Cod The Bush Family and Kennedy families will enter lethal Montague Hatfield warfare, the Kennedy's losing, most even in the families not fully aware of the entirety.

My father appeared to fly in this group which also matched his mug and stories.

It delivered the atomic bombs to Japan using p-51s my father flew escorting protecting and being the eyes for B-29 Bombers and Barrack Obama's white mother was married to a B-29 plant worker.

The exact military groups across time I do not know but it ties to the Von Trapp family and his future wife Glorian Gainey.

- 1902 to 1911: Great Britain - GB resumes active imperialism but also has a genetic defect from Central Europe. Albert of York and Edward of Wales two future kings of England (one very briefly) are fro this family and Albert shows the defect.

- 1925 to 1936 Windsor -Kutschera family - Probably Albert by maybe Edward is fooling around with Maria Kutschera following The Kings Speech of 1925. In early 1926 Maria Kutschera in a convent in Salzburg Austria gets pregnant and re-assigned to the widowed Capt Von Trapp in his villa formerly his home with Agatha Whitehead and the Whitehead VonTrapp children. During this time the uncle Franz Kutschera will get a favor back. The kids will sing Nazi songs but in 1936 the Von Trapps with Maria Kutschera (then Baroness Maria Von Trap, her step children and her husband leave for North Carolina and world tour for trhe Allies.

- 1926 USA Windsor - Kutschera USA. Norma Jean is likely out of wedlock and the Vatican is moving these Roman Catholics into the USA. The Jesuits most likely and from the Salzburg Convent and the Boston Roman Catholic Jospeh Kennedy Sr adn that faily line with future Admiral Halsey helping

- 1936 to 1951 Maria Kutschera Von Trapp timeline - The Singing Von Trapp children of Agatha Whitehead and Captain Von Trapp with stepmother Maria Kutschera sing for the allies and it all looks good. Whe WWII ends the crimes of Franz Kutschera and Henrich Himmler are discovered and these Barron Von Trapp children were part of singing Hitler Youth before the left Austria in 1936. The dark ties to Franz Kutschera are burried but start to emerge here there.

- 1951. King George V is dying, his wife probably introduced the gene. Albert of York has it and he is second in line to replace Geroge V. Edward of Wales is first in line but quickly falls of the throne with Nazi ties and marries Wallis Simpso (former wifre of a british aristocrat) and the live in the USA as the Duke and Dutchess. One of King George's children is Princess Elizibeith borb in 1925. She becomes queen in 1952.

- In 1952 to 1962 USA OSS CIA - life is progressing for the Windsor-Kutshera children. Glorian Gainey has met and married James Donegan Roman Catholic fro Boston tied to the Kennedy family. There is pressure on him to conceal the entire story since he is a war hero of the P-51 and atomic testing and two atomic bombs. Since the Donegan DNA is part of atomic testing more tests are conducted with Glorian DNA and I think Barrack Obama Jr is planned by the CIA with a changin set of potential parents he could be placed with. An Indonesian family and CIA tied official in Kenya are part of the complex CIA picture as other children remotely connected to these familes now in the USA andn elsewhere proliferate in orphanges and elsewhere but the CIA still needs to silence them and this includes the assasintion of JFK who opposed the CIA plans under VP Nixon with the Rockefeller fund, Office of Policy Coordination, etc. that Averell Harriman, Sullivan and Crowell, Allen Dulles, and others including Donald barr and Robert Mueller of Dupont arranged for.

Several movies deal with an American Aviator of some type with a wife who has a problem in her family. Often he is in a green shirt as the Americanization of Emily.

Seattle Washington State was where Marilyn Monroe was in 1952 or so. That is where the Air Defense Command was operating during the radar instructions on the intercept over Los Angeles.

Janet Leigh and Glorian might have been present Jim Donegan meeting both as Lee Harvey Oswald is radar operator.

They Olga and Jim seem to to first meet in work from Alaska intercepting siberia and that is where Olga's Cold War USSR defection flight originates from. The real story though may be about how in a Refresher Course given to Olga Jim Shannon shows her how it was the Allies who won WWII by the use of radar to intercept inbound planes as ground radar sent out on Fighter Control Radio instructions on the flight path to the radar blips. Jim Shannon was a RECON pilot to identify inbounds and conduct reconnaissance over enemy or even marriage between Jim Shannon and Olga that the CIA and FBI warn of as some names I think tied to Maria Kutschera. Jim will marry defector Olga but she faces an espionage investigation and charges. So they go a a couple to the USSR where they meet (I think Mom of Olga Maria Kutschera) and before they left Mr and Mrs Simpson share a bungalow with the couple I think Duke Edward and Wallis Spencer Simpson, the Spencer ex wife Duke Edward married. This would be the parent or uncle of Olga on the Windsor side. One of these had a thick southern accent perhaps North Carolina.

Olga is being shown the Battle of Britain and the P-51 history staged of Inglewood, home of the P-51 but the reenactment uses F-86 the jet age replacement to the P-51. Jim Shanon tricked? She seemed hidden identity given away to Jim Shannon at the refesher course on Battle of Britain but then it turns out FBI and CIA says she has ties that shoudl worry poor Jim Shannon. I think those ties were Franz Kutcshera Olga's uncle.

One possibility. Jospehk Kennedy Sr and others have let Jim Shannon know Olga is the daugher of King Edwar VIII. One problem. He wants to mary her and is a war hero but he finds out she also has Nazi ties. That was NOT told to him. THE FBI and CIA DO tell him along with Duke Edward though.

A lot of interesting potential numerology all through. Some humorous times as they defect INTO Russian and initially are in a prison camp. Maria is an inmate. Wasn't she the famous sniper who fought Nazis? Yes Olga responds. But she started shooting Russians too when she got back. Maria Kutschera the mother of Olga fits that description.

The film by Howard Hughes and thus Robert Mahue and Joseph Kennedy SR of RKO was to showcase air superiority and that was in the p-51 and f86 of American Aviation.

In Jet Pilot 1957 (film and one year before 1958 Indonesia strategy) John Wayne is a recon pilot who meets Olga a "defector" who had done nothing wrong in her country and did not want to talk against it but needed the freedom of the USA. At the Finest Hour one hour mark it seems the Mr. and Mrs Simpson arrive and share space with Jim and Olga. It seems Olga will now use the name Anna and Jin and Anna will marry. It may have been the Duke of Windsor and Wallis Simpson as Mr. and Mrs Simpson. What is being recreated at the "refresher course" on radar and how inbound planes can be detected and fighters dispatched to intercept them could be Battle of Britain and the Finest Hour. I assert that Jim Donegan and Lee Harvey Oswald were part of this propaganda movie.

I think this is how Jim and Glorian Met. But the FBI have bad news for the soon to be married couple. Olga has a secret and the FBI and CIA are on to her. THis places Jim and Olga in a tough situation as he pursued by the WASPS who pressure him over the marriage. I think this is the Kutschera reality was told to Jim Donegan during the refresher course on the Battle of Britain.

foreshadowed in it and I think a RADAR Range (from the use of areospace radar in the kitchen) 1959 debate.

53 Minutes Mr. (Duke) and Mrs Mary Lou Simpson (Wallis) will share a room with Jim and Anna. Wallis, Duchess of Windsor, was an American socialite and wife of former king Edward VIII. Jim Shanon tricked? She seemed hidden identity given away to Jim Shannon at the refresher course on Battle of Britain but then it turns out FBI and CIA says she has ties that should worry poor Jim Shannon. I think those ties were Franz Kutcshera Olga's uncle.

One possibility. Joseph Kennedy Sr and others have let Jim Shannon know Olga is the daughter of King Edwar VIII. One problem. He wants to mary her and is a war hero but he finds out she also has Nazi ties. That was NOT told to him. THE FBI and CIA DO tell him along with Duke Edward though.

A lot of interesting potential numerology all through. Some humorous times as they defect INTO Russian and initially are in a prison camp. Maria is an inmate. Wasn't she the famous sniper who fought Nazis? Yes Olga responds. But she started shooting Russians too when she got back. Maria Kutschera the mother of Olga fits that description.

"Fat Man" was the codename for the type of nuclear weapon the United States detonated over the Japanese city of Nagasaki on 9 August 1945. It was the second of the only two nuclear weapons ever used in warfare, the first being Little Boy, and its detonation marked the third nuclear explosion in history. Wikipedia Designer: Los Alamos Laboratory. Jim Donegan aka Col Shannon was at the blast.

In this scene also from 1:19 Jim Shannon will have a fat man to look after him. He resonds what does he want with a fat man? Earlier the punishment of Russia might be working in a Uranium mine.

1:24 Jim is ambivalent between Anna and Olga in love Anna but terrified of Olga and dissapointed in that aspect of her. 1:31:50 looks like possible writing on the wall watercolor effect mixed into the paint. At 1:32 they may end up against the same wall.

SUBJECT: Two Years of Fighter Control from England.

TO : Major General William E. Kepner,
Commanding General, Eighth Air Force.

1. Most military commanders in ancient times left no suitable records of their operations. Many present-day commanders have prepared only meager accounts of their activities -- often so meager that those coming after them, lacking example, will have to guess about many matters.

2. This booklet follows our previously published air/-sea rescue report, "Shepherd of the Seas", and attempts to complete the story of fighter control in the strategic air force as we experienced it and helped to develop it.

3. Our fighter control center at Saffron Walden was the first one to become active in the Eighth Air Force, in July 1943, and the last one to close down at the end of hostilities almost two years later. It was the first thoroughly specialized offensive strategic control in AAF history.

4. The voices of its controllers, as "Colgate", "Warmsun", "Morelight" and others, undoubtedly have been heard at one time or another by practically all the pilots of the Eighth's bombers and fighters. Throughout the two years, during every minute of every day when any operational aircraft of the Eighth were airborne, someone on duty in the Saffron Ops room had a responsibility for their safe return.

5. This report assembles data and ideas of all who were concerned with our control, and is written by Lt. Col. R. F. Kennedy, Wing A-2.

Saffron Walden, Essex

This was Headquarters for the 65th Fighter Wing during the war against Germany, 1943-45. The control room was in the gymnasium, a separate building just to the rear.

Plots on the ops table:
F - Fighter
B - Bomber
R - Recce
H - Hostile
X - Unknown

his forces. The very efficient clerking staff in each control room, which collected most of this information was designated "Ops "B" in RAF terminology.

This same commander was given control of the related defenses, i.e., anti-aircraft artillery, searchlights, balloon barrages; he also had the responsibility of informing the civil defenses, such as the air raid warning system and ARP services.

The entire system was interconnected with what was probably the most complex net of communications yet devised anywhere. It was imperative in England that information and orders pass instantaneously. The Germans were only across the channel, 22 miles away at the nearest point.

This is not intended to be a rehash of the great story

And it is worth recording here that all this was entirely according to plan. When the time came for building the defenses, the British had the blueprints. The RAF "Battle Orders", published previously, described so accurately what must be done that scarcely any of it had to be altered in the doing.

America drew copiously on the RAF well of experience when it came time to establish air defense organizations in the AAF. The interceptor commands which were set up to guard the U. S. coastline and some of the territories copied the ideas that had proved sound in Britain.

They sited secret radar stations (they were called "derax" stations in those days) at high places along the shores. They developed a large ground observer corps, divided into "filter areas" to facilitate evaluation of the plots before they were relayed to the main regional ops boards.

Everyone who lived in any of the coastal states will remember the great campaign to get women volunteers to operate the aircraft warning system. Volunteers did all the telling and plotting and operated most of the communications, to keep the information centers working. And these centers became the training grounds for most of the key control personnel who have since served the AAF so well throughout the world.

Also from the RAF came the help and guidance of experienced controllers and signal officers, who taught in the AAF School of Applied Tactics at Orlando, a school originally established by a cadre from the old Second Interceptor Command at Seattle.

The change from interceptor commands to air defense wings was a logical development, and about the time the wings started going overseas to take up controlling in real earnest, they were again changed to the present form of fighter wings.

It must again be emphasized that in all this development the thinking was pretty much along defensive and tactical lines. It would have been a bold thinker indeed who could have visualized a fighter controller sitting in England, communicating with his formations over Berlin. Yet such was to be the case.

It was just before the Pearl Harbor attack in 1941 that the first American control systems were ready to function. In fact the reader will remember that an SCR-270 (radar) actually picked up the formation of Jap aircraft as they approached Oahu, but there was no machinery operating to take cognizance of the report, evaluate it and act upon it.

The very night before that attack, the USS "Tasker H.

HOW AN AIRPLANE IS FIXED BY RADIO

THE VHF RADIO

This photograph of the control box of an SCR-522 is introduced at this point so that all readers may understand what is meant by "channel A" or "channel D".

The very-high-frequency radio carried in all fighter airplanes (as well as in most bombers, in the air/sea rescue launches and anywhere else where control contact is necessary) has this button-box instal l where the user can conveniently use it to select e frequency on which he wishes to talk.

In the Eighth Air Force fighters, the buttons were used as follows:

Button A -- Operational frequency or "channel" for the individual group, for use in combat, for control and for local homing to the group's own base.

Button B -- Emergency air/sea rescue channel, common to all bombers and fighters.

Button C -- Fighter-bomber intercom channel, either 8 AF common or air division common. Also used for emergency homing to alternate airfields.

Button D -- Fixing channel, common to all fight-

The rock on which Goering stubbed his toe. Here, ground-controlled, rose the fighters -- in Hurricanes and later in Spits -- who beat back the Luftwaffe.

The thing for the reader of this booklet to appreciate, in thinking of "strategic" or offensive control, is this: The Americans in England were free to concentrate on long range development, to experiment and to work out the many details, with virtually no interference by the Jerries; and this was possible because the RAF relieved the USAAF of defensive control responsibility. We owe a great deal to our British cousins who were always so eager to leap upon the Hun whenever he stuck his black nose over the horizon.

enemy tough and aggressive. In fact the wily Hun had given some of the boys a pretty rough time when the Thunderbolts first stuck their stub noses in over the Continental coast line. And both sides ere now had drawn first blood.

On these missions the fighters were being controlled by the RAF Debden sector staff. This arrangement provided an element of continuity which permitted the Americans to make rapid headway right from the start. Here was a place to work; here were communications, and people to act as tutors and "interpreters" to the British way of doing things.

Some 60 of the key ops room people of the RAF stayed on for a month or more with the Americans to help out

There was not in fact too much "interpreting" to do, because prior to this time the American and British air forces had agreed on a standard code of procedure in the control of aircraft. This had been taught at the controllers' school at Orlando, and the Americans found themselves on reasonably familiar ground.

as possible to the enemy, for greater range.

The first hastily established stations fringing the coastline were by no means a permanent arrangement, and in fact there was hardly a month in the whole two years of control at Saffron that did not see some change in the layout. But the first networks as shown in the accompanying map did work, and work well, thanks to the night-&-day efforts of members of the 52nd Fighter Control Squadron and the careful planning of the Wing and VIII Fighter Command signal sections.

By the time all this new wiring had been led into the ops room, and the room itself had been redesigned with ten new group controllers' positions, old Debden control room had been through what might be termed a first-class face-lifting.

The general plan was that the 65th Fighter Wing should provide all the American control at the beginning, and serve as an orientation unit for other controls; that as more fighter groups arrived the 66 and 67th Fighter Wings should the chief controller in the ops room, where their activities with respect to any particular aircraft could be instantly coordinated.

The D/F station operator lines up his antenna on an aircraft broadcast, and takes a reading of the bearing.

Each fighter group was provided with one exclusive operational frequency (channel A) to give the pilots uninterrupted intercom during combat, and to permit (a) individual controlling of that particular group and (b) flying control and homing services at the group's home base.

In the ops room at Saffron a position was provided for a controller for each group. It was his job to watch the radar plots, keep track of his own group and warn the group leader of the approach of other formations, both friendly and enemy. His work was supervised and could be monitored by the chief controller.

"Instead of Waafs on the plotting rods there were GI's".

Fighters were operated by VIII Fighter Command with headquarters at Ajax, prior to 15 September 1944. On that date fighter ops moved to Eighth AF Headquarters, and everything was handled direct from Pinetree thereafter.

Dunham Payne and Obama families answer questions about Kenya

Barrack Obama Jr. and his grandfather Stanley Dunham

CIA Agent Satnley Dunham (George Bush Sr's cousin) LOOK IT UP!

(From some twitter account I have lost the source of the image) but can confirm its content.

I have explained some of the Donegan and Hunt family this way as I and St John Hunt are the children of differing Mr. and Mrs. Smith parents. The parents of ours met in spooking activities each having separate spook backgrounds that then intersected into a common path for the two of them and then a common path for the four of the parents.

Expanding on Wayne Madsen book The Making Of A President by adding specific names and specific locations

In his diagrams of the Obama plan by the CIA the CIA shows in a bubble visio figure with lines to other connected organizations or people. It should also be known this being planned when Richard Nixon was heading the CIA through the NSC and per COl Prouty had begun plans for Indonesia in 1958. It should also be known Allen Dulles was the CIA director at this time with Richard Bissle Jr as a key subordinate official and these were the people fired by JFK before his death. Dr. Greg Poulgrain believes as I do this was the dispute between the CIA and JFK.

This can be found in Jen Moore's telling to the Donegan OSS CIA Vatican assassination of JFK and the Allen Dulles connections. I can confirm the hidden-identities of the Donegan family she asserted and some photographic records help corroborate as well.

Washington D.C., where Prouty was meeting with Allen Dulles and working with General Lansdale on the regime change plans made by the CIA included JM/WAVE in Florida, a CIA station. Kenya was part of the global operations in several ways including the CIA (or other intelligence agency)backing of Barrack Obama Sr. and where the CIA clumsily placed a birth certificate in the city of Mombassa. FBI Director (and world globalist free mason) J. Edgar Hoover was working with Malcom X of Nebraska towards some project, Malcom X very interested in the birth of Barrack Obama Jr.

Hawaii is where Madelyn Payne Dunham worked for the CIA and part of the story of the first few years of Barrack Obama Jr. life.

Los Angeles County and the CIA in that area is the not yet known piece and that is where the theory I offer ties a conspiracy to Peter Lawford of England the the Donegan's then living in Los Angeles County were forced into the plot. The records not there are more important other records including faked records that exist elsewhere. I assert the SSN birth certificate 022-46-3234 was the real SSN for Barrack Obama Jr. born in that Count but with Donegan ties to Massachusetts. 022 is a MA record number and were a Dorchester Massachusetts connections to the Kennedy's and Los Angeles County connections to the Kennedy's.

On the maternal side this true of Barrack Obama Jr. too. His mother (of record) was the child of two CIA connected people. His father was a CIA project in Kenya. Obama Jr.s life veered towards Indonesia and the USA as Obama Sr returned to Kenya and the Dunham family remained in the USA then left for Indonesia with Barrack Obama Jr for a few years. I think the CIA left the door open for Kenya but hid the trail of that later and kept the door open for Indonesia but a Rockefeller died in covert work in Indonesia in the reange of November 18 1961 a time I think is the real birth of Barrack Obama Jr. in Los Angeles County California.

The Mombassa Keny Birth Certificate did cross check with soemthing, it should have been a Candadian likely a spy for England in the Anglican Church Birth.

So that in a serialized certificate way explaine the phoney Mombassa birth certificate (with Fen 20 stamped on it) further Ed Donegan has a birth certiciate missiong from his family 022-46-3234 in between Tom Donegan and Ed Donegan 3233 and 3235

From Isreali Insider with a leak: The source continues: "There is no evidence Ann Dunham had even met Obama Senior in or around November 1960, the alleged time of conception, indeed it is not even clear Obama was in Honolulu at that time, although he may have been. Ann Dunham was only 17 and although she might have been in Honolulu the timing is tight." "More to the point, she was in neither of the medical centers put forward by the Obama campaign (question: why do they not know in which hospital he was born?) on August 4th, nor are there medical records to back up the claimed birth, nor has an attending physician been named. I've heard of births with the father absent, births with the mother absent a bit trickier."

"There are said to be photos of Ann Dunham on Waikiki Beach taken in or about July 1961, when she is supposed to have been in her third trimester, in a bikini, taken by a fellow female student. AD is clearly not pregnant. Media have not yet talked to fellow students, but it can't be long. There are bound to be other photos of AD in existence taken during the alleged 2nd and 3rd trimesters. Obama campaign are terrified some one will press for her medical records, which have been accessed by CIA."

"Moving to Indonesia the Obama campaign are also suppressing the Indonesian immigration and passport records, which I believe show him as a Kenyan citizen, and the naturalisation records. They have not denied Internet claims he was naturalised in Indonesia. If he was a US citizen there should be a visa record to back that up."

"Obama Senior was murdered in Kenya in 1982 to silence him. Interesting story re his sister Auma as well -- she appears to be a full sister, not a halfsister as he is claiming, i.e. they share the same mother. She was ordered back to Kenya in 2007 to prevent DNA testing .... CIA did a DNA test on the grandparents, using saliva from glasses, which conclusively rules out any relationship between Obama and the Dunhams."

Said to be biological Grandparents

Stanley Armour Dunham (Boeing, CIA) and Madelyn Payne Dunham (Bank of Hawaii CIA)

CIA Cover Story Barack Obama Grandparents Stanley Armour Dunham (March 23, 1918 - February 8, 1992) was the maternal grandfather of the 44th U.S. President Barack Obama. He and his wife Madelyn Payne Dunham raised Obama from the age of 10 in Honolulu, Hawaii.

Leanne Caret is an American businesswoman, an executive vice president of Boeing, president and CEO of Boeing Defense, Space n and Security, and serves on the United Service Organizations board of governors. Wikipedia Born: November 18, 1966 (age 53 years)Caret is a second-generation Boeing employee; her parents worked at the firm and met at a facility outside New Orleans where they were building the Saturn V rocket that would take astronauts to the moon. Connected?

Is Obama the secret son of Malcolm X?

"Obama Senior was murdered in Kenya in 1982 to silence him. Interesting story re his sister Auma as well - she appears to be a full sister, not a half-sister as he is claiming, i.e. they share the same mother. She was ordered back to Kenya in 2007 to prevent DNA testing …. CIA did a DNA test on the grandparents, using saliva from glasses, which conclusively rules out any relationship between Obama and the Dunhams."

"The source said that the Dunham family became involved because Stanley Dunham, Sr. was suspected of espionage. Boeing, he said, has "a 1944 security file on Stanley Dunham in connection with suspected sabotage of B-17G aircraft at their Wichita Kansas plant and the theft of B-29 blueprints, a full set of which were passed to the German Abwehr via Lisbon by June 1944. Ann Dunham appears to have been chosen as the surrogate mother in 1963 because of the family connection to German Intelligence. German assets in the US, including Rezko, who is connected to the Syrian Mukhabarat and the German DVD, sponsored his career.

"Effectively," the source concludes, "Obama is a German sleeper agent."

Madelyn Lee Payne Dunham (/ˈdʌnəm/ DUN-əm; October 26, 1922[1] - November 2, 2008) was the American maternal grandmother of Barack Obama, the 44th President of the United States. She and her husband Stanley Armour Dunham raised Obama from age ten in their Honolulu, Hawaii, apartment, where on November 2, 2008, she died[2] two days before her grandson was elected President.

Their daugher, Stanly Ann Dunham (alleged white mother of Barack Obama)

The Story of Obama: All in The Company (Part I)

by Wayne Madsen

In 1967, Obama and his mother joined her husband in Jakarta. In 1965, Lolo Soetoro had been called back from Hawaii by General Suharto to serve as an officer in the Indonesian military to help launch a bloody CIA-backed genocide of Indonesian Communists and Indonesian Chinese throughout the expansive country. Suharto consolidated his power in 1966, the same year that Barack Obama, Sr.'s friend, Mboya, had helped to rally pro-U.S. pan-African support for the CIA's overthrow of Nkrumah in Ghana in 1966.

President Obama's own work in 1983 for Business International Corporation, a CIA front that conducted seminars with the world's most powerful leaders and used journalists as agents abroad, dovetails with CIA espionage activities conducted by his mother, Stanley Ann Dunham in 1960s post-coup Indonesia on behalf of a number of CIA front operations, including the East-West Center at the University of Hawaii, the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID), and the Ford Foundation. Dunham met and married Lolo Soetoro, Obama's stepfather, at the East-West Center in 1965. Soetoro was recalled to Indonesia in 1965 to serve as a senior army officer and assist General Suharto and the CIA in the bloody overthrow of President Sukarno.

Barack Obama, Sr., who met Dunham in 1959 in a Russian language class at the University of Hawaii, had been part of what was described as an airlift of 280 East African students to the United States to attend various colleges - merely "aided" by a grant from the Joseph P. Kennedy Foundation, according to a September 12, 1960, Reuters report from London. The airlift was a CIA operation to train and indoctrinate future agents of influence in Africa, which was becoming a battleground between the United States and the Soviet Union and China for influence among newly-independent and soon-to-be independent countries on the continent.

The airlift was condemned by the deputy leader of the opposition Kenyan African Democratic Union (KADU) as favoring certain tribes - the majority Kikuyus and minority Luos - over other tribes to favor the Kenyan African National Union (KANU), whose leader was Tom Mboya, the Kenyan nationalist and labor leader who selected Obama, Sr. for a scholarship at the University of Hawaii. Obama, Sr., who was already married with an infant son and pregnant wife in Kenya, married Dunham on Maui on February 2, 1961 and was also the university's first African student. Dunham was three month's pregnant with Barack Obama, Jr. at the time of her marriage to Obama, Sr.

KADU deputy leader Masinda Muliro, according to Reuters, said KADU would send a delegation to the United States to investigate Kenyan students who received "gifts" from the Americans and "ensure that further gifts to Kenyan students are administered by people genuinely interested in Kenya's development.'"

The CIA allegedly recruited Tom M'Boya in a heavily funded "selective liberation" programme to isolate Kenya's founding President Jomo Kenyatta, whom the American spy agency labelled as "unsafe." Mboya received a $100,000 grant for the airlift from the Kennedy Foundation after he turned down the same offer from the U.S. State Department, obviously concerned that direct U.S. assistance would look suspicious to pro-Communist Kenyan politicians who suspected Mboya of having CIA ties. The Airlift Africa project was underwritten by the Kennedy Foundation and the African-American Students Foundation. Obama, Sr. was not on the first airlift but a subsequent one. The airlift, organized by Mboya in 1959, included students from Kenya, Uganda, Tanganyika, Zanzibar, Northern Rhodesia, Southern Rhodesia, and Nyasaland.

Reuters also reported that Muliro charged that Africans were "disturbed and embittered" by the airlift of the selected students. Muliro "stated that "preferences were shown to two major tribes [Kikuyu and Luo] and many U.S.-bound students had failed preliminary and common entrance examinations, while some of those left behind held first-class certificates."

CIA-airlifted to Hawaii, Barack Obama Sr., with leis, stands with Stanley Dunham, President Obama's grandfather, on his right. Obama, Sr. was a friend of Mboya and a fellow Luo. After Mboya was assassinated in 1969, Obama, Sr. testified at the trial of his alleged assassin. Obama, Sr. claimed he was the target of a hit-and-run assassination attempt after his testimony.

Obama, Sr., who left Hawaii for Harvard in 1962, divorced Dunham in 1964. Obama, Sr. married a fellow Harvard student, Ruth Niedesand, a Jewish-American woman, who moved with him to Kenya and had two sons. They were later divorced. Obama, Sr. worked for the Kenyan Finance and Transport ministries as well as an oil firm. Obama, Sr. died in a 1982 car crash and his funeral was attended by leading Kenyan politicians, including future Foreign Minister Robert Ouko, who was murdered in 1990.

CIA files indicate that Mboya was an important agent-of-influence for the CIA, not only in Kenya but in all of Africa. A formerly Secret CIA Current Intelligence Weekly Summary, dated November 19, 1959, states that Mboya served as a check on extremists at the second All-African People's Conference (AAPC) in Tunis. The report states that "serious friction developed between Ghana's Prime Minister Kwame Nkrumah and Kenyan nationalist Tom Mboya who cooperated effectively last December to check extremists at the AAPC's first meeting in Accra." The term "cooperated effectively" appears to indicate that Mboya was cooperating with the CIA, which filed the report from field operatives in Accra and Tunis. While "cooperating" with the CIA in Accra and Tunis, Mboya selected the father of the president of the United States to receive a scholarship and be airlifted to the University of Hawaii where he met and married President Obama's mother.

An earlier CIA Current Intelligence Weekly Summary, secret, and dated April 3, 1958, states that Mboya "still appears to be the most promising of the African leaders." Another CIA weekly summary, secret and dated December 18, 1958, calls Mboya the Kenyan nationalist an "able and dynamic young chairman" of the People's Convention party who was viewed as an opponent of "extremists" like Nkrumah, supported by "Sino-Soviet representatives."

In a formerly Secret CIA report on the All-Africa Peoples Conference in 1961, dated November 1, 1961, Mboya's conservatism, along with that of Taleb Slim of Tunisia, are contrasted to the leftist policies of Nkrumah and others. Pro-communists who were elected to the AAPC's steering committee at the March 1961 Cairo conference, attended by Mboya, are identified in the report as Abdoulaye Diallo, AAPC Secretary General, of Senegal; Ahmed Bourmendjel of Algeria; Mario de Andrade of Angola; Ntau Mokhele of Basutoland; Kingue Abel of Cameroun; Antoine Kiwewa of Congo (Leopoldville); Kojo Botsio of Ghana; Ismail Toure of Guinea; T. O. Dosomu Johnson of Liberia; Modibo Diallo of Mali; Mahjoub Ben Seddik of Morocco; Djibo Bakari of Niger; Tunji Otegbeya of Nigeria; Kanyama Chiume of Nyasaland; Ali Abdullahi of Somalia; Tennyson Makiwane of South Africa, and Mohamed Fouad Galal of the United Arab Republic.

AD is clearly not pregnant. Media have not yet talked to fellow students, but it can't be long. There are bound to be other photos of AD in existence taken during the alleged 2nd and 3rd trimesters. "Moving to Indonesia the Obama campaign are also suppressing the Indonesian immigration and passport records, which I believe show him as a Kenyan citizen, and the naturalisation records. She was ordered back to Kenya in 2007 to prevent DNA testing …. CIA did a DNA test on the grandparents, using saliva from glasses, which conclusively rules out any relationship between Obama and the Dunhams."

"The source said that the Dunham family became involved because Stanley Dunham, Sr. was suspected of espionage. Ann Dunham appears to have been chosen as the surrogate mother in 1963 because of the family connection to German Intelligence.

German assets in the US, including Rezko, who is connected to the Syrian Mukhabarat and the German DVD, sponsored his career.

Well, this is a lot to take in, and on first reading it struck me that the source had been reading too many Le Carre novels or Bond movies. I mean, really: "The Manchurian Candidate" meets "The Boy from Mombassa Kenya"?

It seemed completely preposterous, and indeed I initially dismissed it as preposterous. Obama a "German sleeper agent"? Of course, in those days the East Germans were a Soviet satellite, and the DDR was perhaps the most feared and ideological of the communist states, with more than a sprinkling of rehabilitated Nazis uncured of their genetic fantasies andexperiments. 1961-1963 were the peak years of the Cold War, with Berlin playing a central role in East-West hostilities.

Alleged white Seattle mother of Barack Obama (CIA, USAID, Peace Corps, East West foundation activities)

Said to be Obama white mother Stanley Ann Dunham (November 29, 1942 November 7, 1995) was an American anthropologist who specialized in the economic anthropology and rural development of Indonesia.[1] She was the mother of Barack Obama, the 44th President of the United States. Dunham was known as Stanley Ann Dunham through high school, then as Ann Dunham, Ann Obama, Ann Soetoro, Ann Sutoro and finally after her second divorce as Ann Dunham.[2]

Born in Wichita, Kansas (where Boeing Bombers were built for WWII), Dunham studied at the East-West Center and at the University of Hawaii (all MKULTRA) at Mano in Honolulu, where she attained a bachelor of arts degree in anthropology (1967), and later received master of arts (1974) and PhD (1992) degrees, also in anthropology. She also attended University of Washington at Seattle in 1961-1962 (and had Barrack Obama Jr with her when JFK visited and the 21st Century Expo was held with the Windors family visiting April 1962.) Interested in craftsmanship, weaving, and the role of women in cottage industries, Dunham's research focused on women's work on the island of Java and blacksmithing in Indonesia.

To address the problem of poverty in rural villages, she created microcredit programs while working as a consultant for the United States Agency for International Development (USAID).

Dunham was also employed by the Ford Foundation in Jakarta and she consulted with the Asian Development Bank in Gujranwala, Pakistan. Towards the latter part of her life, she worked with Bank Rakyat Indonesia, where she helped apply her research to the largest microfinance program in the world.[4]

Dr Martin Luther King and RFK assasinated. What did they know?

In his cluttered office, McKinney, now 67 and still the pastor of Mount Zion, recently reminisced about the invitation, the resulting controversy, King's brief stay in November 1961 and its long-term impact on the city and its African-American community.

At the time the city was caught up in preparations for the Seattle World's Fair, which opened the spring of the following year. The old War Memorial Auditorium, which would have been the preferred choice, was being converted into a concert-convention hall.

ON THURSDAY, WHEN MCKINNEY went to pick up King at the Olympic Hotel (now the Four Seasons Olympic) to take him to the University of Washington, King was on the phone talking to Robert Kennedy.

"The Kennedy's had not initially been involved in the black struggle, but once Kennedy became president he tried to co-opt it, and so there was a little struggle there," McKinney said. "It was a friendly conversation, but there was a slight edge."

Occidental College was founded on April 20, 1887, by a group of Presbyterian clergy, missionaries, and laymen, including James George Bell, Lyman Stewart, and Thomas Bard.

During World War II, many students left Occidental to fight in the war. In July 1943, the U.S. Navy established a Navy V-12[15] officer training program on campus that produced hundreds of graduates before it was disbanded in 1945 at the end of the war. Occidental President Remsen Bird worked behind the scenes to help Oxy students of Japanese descent continue their education despite mandatory evacuation orders; his letters are included in the Japanese American Relocation Collection in Clapp Library.

After having its first Rhodes Scholar, Clarence Spaulding, named in 1908, Oxy seniors John Paden and Aaron Segal were awarded Rhodes Scholarships in 1958; the first and only time Occidental has produced two Rhodes Scholars in a single year.[17] Rhodes scholars Aaron Segal and John Paden were among the 10 Occidental students who participated in Crossroads Africa (forerunner to the Peace Corp) that year, a forerunner to the Peace Corps that later became a national program.

Barack Obama Sr., father of the 43rd President of the United States, was born in the Rachuonyo District, in the then British colony of Kenya, on June 18, 1936, to Onyango Obama and Habiba Akumu Nyanjango. He was raised in the Nyang'oma Kogelo village, Siaya District of the Nyanza Province. Obama converted from Islam to Anglicanism at the age of six while attending a Christian missionary school and changed his name from Baraka to Barak. His parents separated when he was nine years old, and he was raised by his stepmother, Sarah Ogwel. He attended Gendia Primary School, Ng'iya Intermediate school, and later Maseno National School, an exclusive Anglican boarding school. Later in life he became an atheist and believed that religion was just superstition.

Obama married his first wife Kezia Aoko in 1954, and the couple had two children, Malik and Auma. In 1959 he was selected for a special academic program and traveled to the United States to enroll as the first African foreign student to study at the University of Hawaii at Manoa in Honolulu. He graduated in 1963 with a BA in Economics and while there was inducted into the Phi Beta Kappa Honor Society. Also, while in Honolulu he met and married 18-year-old Stanley Ann Dunham in 1961. The couple had one child together, future U.S. President Barack Hussein Obama Jr. They divorced three years later in 1964.

In June of 1962, Obama left Hawaii, and moved to Cambridge, Massachusetts, to attend Harvard University, where he met Ruth Beatrice Baker. After graduation in 1964, Obama returned to Kenya, with Baker in tow, and they married later that year. The couple had two sons, Mark and David, and divorced in 1973.

Obama began to work for an oil company as an economist in Kenya. He was promoted to the economist for the Kenyan Ministry of Transport, and eventually senior economist in the Kenyan Ministry of Finance. He also reunited with his first wife Kezia and had two additional children, Abo and Bernard. Obama wrote an entry for the East Africa Journal which appeared in July 1965 titled "Problems Facing Our Socialism," that set his at odds with then Kenyan President Jomo Kenyatta and much of the nation's political establishment. When Tom Mboya, Minister of Economic Planning and Development, was assassinated in 1969, Obama came under suspicion. He believed he was now a target of the government. He was fired and blacklisted in Kenya and found it difficult to find and hold down a job.

In 1970 Obama was hit by a car in 1970, an incident that left him in the hospital for almost a year. Obama then traveled back to Hawaii and stayed for the month of December in 1971. It was then that he visited his son Barack, who was ten years old, giving him a basketball and taking him to a jazz concert. The two never saw each other again.

Upon his return to Kenya, Obama was involved in a second car accident that claimed both of his legs. He met Jael Otinyo, with who he had a son named George. The couple never married but just six months after the child’s birth, Obama was in a third car accident in Nairobi on November 24, 1982 and died of his injuries at the age of 46.

The CIA's Insertion of Barack H. Obama, Jr. into the White House This book covers Barack H. Obama, Jr's rapid rise in American politics and the role that the CIA played in propelling him into the White House. Research is based on formerly classified CIA and State Department files, personal interviews, and international investigations. Obama's birth certificate has never been the issue. The real issue, which affects his eligibility to serve as President of the United States, is his past and likely current Indonesian citizenship. The reader will be taken through the labyrinth of covert CIA operations in Africa, Southeast Asia, South Asia, and other regions. The real history of President Obama, his family, and the CIA quickly emerges as the reader wades into the murky waters of America's covert foreign operations. -Wayne Madsen

Key witness in passport fraud case fatally shot

A key witness in a federal probe into passport information stolen from the State Department was fatally shot in front of a District church, the Metropolitan Police Department said yesterday.

Lt. Quarles Harris Jr., 24, who had been cooperating with a federal investigators, was found late Thursday night slumped dead inside a car, in front of the Judah House Praise Baptist Church in Northeast, said Cmdr. Michael Anzallo, head of the department’s Criminal Investigations Division.

A State Department spokeswoman yesterday declined to comment, saying the investigation into the passport fraud is ongoing.

The Washington Times reported April 5 that contractors for the State Department had improperly accessed passport information for presidential candidates Sens. Hillary Rodham Clinton, Barack Obama and John McCain, which resulted in a series of firings that reached into the agency's top ranks.

One agency employee, who was not identified in documents filed in U.S. District Court, was implicated in a credit-card fraud scheme after Lt. Harris told federal authorities he obtained "passport information from a co-conspirator who works for the U.S. Department of State."

Perhaps Brennan was cleaning up Obama's records. He must have also been the one responsible for accessing Hillary's and McCain's records to get law enforcement off their tracks.

From The American Thinker

Back in March 2008, the State Department launched an investigation of improper computer access to the passport records of Barack Hussein Obama, and days later those of Hillary Clinton and John McCain.

The investigation centered on one employee: a contract worker for a company that was headed by John O. Brennan, a key Obama campaign adviser who later became assistant to the president and deputy national security adviser for Homeland Security and Counter terrorism.

Then, a month later, on Apr. 19, 2008, the key witness, in this case, was murdered. Lieutenant (sic) Quarles Harris, Jr., 24, was shot in the head in his car, in front of Judah House Praise Baptist Church.

It has been thought by many that John Brennan cleaned up Obama's passport records and then accessed McCain's and Hillary's also to cover the crime. The only witness died in a hail of bullets.

NOTE: Chicago's head of Criminal Investigation Division on the unsolved slaying and bullet to the head has been quiet. There has never been a formal investigation for Donald Young, Choir Master at Trinity United Church of Christ in Chicago. Young was a gay friend of Obama's.

That brings us to Journalist Michael Hastings. At the time of his death in a suspicious car accident, he was in the process of investigating John Brennan.

Do these two deaths tie together? No one knows for sure.

I Edward Paul Donegan am NOT prospering as I write about the CIA and POTUS families of both parties including William J. Burns of the CIA.

The Richard Nixon and Hearst Family anti-communist J.P Morgan Globalism continues to be the ongoing orbit of war criminals and deep state terror downing commercial airliners, bring civil wars, assassinations, and international lawless terror including against the USA.

Indirect Rule is a Nobility system Aristocracies of Nation-States use to co-rule the world. One Crown perhaps Great Britain may be the superior crown to Australia and demand Australian satellite actions or Crowns (and Sovereigns of Nation States) may work by treaty.

In the years following WWII many key parts of Great Britain were lost to independence. Guatemala and Indonesia the GI of ATSUGI were the Nixon Hearst Bush family Allen Dulles, James Jesus Angleton, and LBJ families working on the a different program.

Indirect Gruel takes a nation with natural resources like gold and spices in Indonesia and promises the riches to a Banana Republic dictator who will subdue the nation and kill journalists, etc., but under the repressive regime the satellite nation will remain in the column of the world power who covertly installed the repressive dictator.

The proximity of teetering Post WWII Indonesia was as great a concern for Australia is Cuba and Castro were for the USA.

This group of Regime Change killed JFK and then began the Watergate Break-ins and other crimes as the old money systems of backing dictators was continued despite JFK and RFK trying to put the criminals to a stop.

What many do not realize is Peter Lawford led the USAID and Peace Corp effort in the Los Angeles County area out of his mansion. As RFK is shot in that area later the woman in the Polka Dot dress is eager to get to Australia and the police of LAPD are part of the USAID Peace Corp CIA effort and confess to that later.

In WWI the War Industry Board was started to fund business to sell weapons the military. In the Cold War the CIA started businesses like Zapata Oil to be among these cover action companies. Col Prouty when he was providing the CIA assets to attack Cuba with notes Operation Zapata fits Zapata Oil and some of the ships that were requested from Prouty at the Pentagon were to be named the Houston where Zapata Petroleum funded by the CIA was hardhearted and the Barbara the name of George H.W. Bush's wife.

It was of these orbit of people, Nixon, Twombly of Coca Cola Nixon was on the board of, and others that were the CIA presence assassinating JFK with their E. Howard Hunt and Murder Inc., allies from the train-yard.

The Indonesia piece is part of the CIA Obama family story. There are several fake certificates (people flock to the Hawaii one although the USA Document is a fraud) and run from the equally fake Mombasa Kenya one. I assert the real truth is in Los Angeles county and make the case in this book.

The Kennedy and Donegan families and anti mafia RFK allowing a country to be bled dry and left in poverty (such as during the Great Potato Famine) was unacceptable foreign policy and JFK was going to end it and end the CIA.

Suharto (8 June 1921 – 27 January 2008) was an Indonesian military officer and the second President of Indonesia. Widely regarded as a military dictator by international observers, Suharto led Indonesia as an authoritarian regime from 1967 until his resignation in 1998 following nationwide unrest. His 31-year dictatorship is considered one of the most brutal and corrupt of the 20th century: he was central to the perpetration of mass killings against alleged communists and subsequent persecution of ethnic Chinese, irreligious people, and trade unionists.

Suharto was born in Kemusuk, near the city of Yogyakarta, during the Dutch colonial era. He grew up in humble circumstances. His Javanese Muslim parents divorced not long after his birth, and he lived with foster parents for much of his childhood. During the Japanese occupation, Suharto served in the Japanese-organized Indonesian security forces. During Indonesia's independence struggle, he joined the newly formed Indonesian Army and rose to the rank of major general some time after full Indonesian independence was achieved. An attempted coup on 30 September and 1 October 1965 was countered by Suharto-led troops. The army subsequently led a nationwide violent anti-communist purge and Suharto wrested power from Indonesia's founding president, Sukarno. He was appointed acting president in 1967 and elected president the following year. He then mounted a social campaign known as "de-Sukarnoization" to reduce the former president's influence. Suharto ordered an invasion of East Timor in 1975, followed by a deadly 23-year occupation of the country and genocide. By the 1990s, the New Order's increasing authoritarianism and widespread corruption were a source of discontent and, following the 1997 Asian financial crisis which led to widespread unrest, he resigned in May 1998.

Under his "New Order" administration, Suharto constructed a strong, centralised and military-dominated government. What started as an oligarchic military dictatorship evolved into a personalistic authoritarian regime centred around him. An ability to maintain stability over a sprawling and diverse Indonesia and an avowedly anti-communist stance won him the economic and diplomatic support of the West during the Cold War. For most of his presidency, Indonesia experienced significant industrialisation, economic growth, and improved levels of education. As a result, he was given the title "Father of Development." According to Transparency International, Suharto was one of the most corrupt leaders in modern history, having embezzled an alleged US$15–35 billion during his rule. Suharto died in January 2008.

Suharto remains a controversial and divisive figure within the Indonesian general public. Many Indonesians have praised his 31-year regime for its economic development, rapid industrialisation, and perceived political stability, while others have denounced his dictatorial rule, extensive human rights violations and corruption. Plans to award the status of National Hero to Suharto are being considered by the Indonesian government and have been debated vigorously.

Oswald was workign with the CIA including Chauncey Marvin Holt and made a patsy. He was in fact a sort of double non agent. He was a double agent as a defector, seeming loyal to Russia but with a deeper loyalty to the USA as he acted like a dangerous Cuban sympathizer inside the USA giving Cuban sympatizers a bad name. But he knew of the CIA plans related to North Carlonia and was going to explain it all when the CIA had him killed.

The Story of Obama: All in The Company (Part I) by Wayne Madsen focuses on the CIA in Kenya hoping to counter rising communism in the world. "The first part (Part 1)of his report highlights the connections between Barack Obama, Sr. and the CIA-sponsored operations in Kenya to counter rising Soviet and Chinese influence among student circles and, beyond, to create conditions obstructing the emergence of independent African leaders."

In Part I of Obama's family history Wayne Madsen reports resultant from his CIA sponsored activities in Kenya Obama Sr is sent on a Ford Foundation (funnel of CIA activities) grant to the East West Center in Hawaii recently opened up by the the US Government in the newly created State of Hawaii. Lyndon B. Johnson as Senate Majority Leader in the Congress and Eisenhower and Richard Nixon get the legislation through that began as an idea in 1959 or so at least publicly. Both Richard Nixon and LBJ had served in Indonesia in WWII. During WWII many Asian Islands were freed from Dutch (until Suharto) or other colonialism and following the surrender of the Japanese the CIA worked under the plans of Averall Harriman and others on the ASTUGI plan really setup on 1949 to be operated on the unconditionally surrendered lands of Japan. The Asia Tokyo Soveit Union Guatemala Indonesia focused in the China influence area of Asia, Tokyo as threatened by China, Guatemala and its independent government the US was overthrowing in 1954, and the covert war in Indonesia in the 1950s the CIA was fighting and that during the course of Allen Pope a USAF pilot was captured in but returned quietly to the US Government though had intervened in Indonesia through secret CIA activities operating under fronts as well.

Col Fletcher PRouty used the name Iron Curtain as others do about the seperation of USSR and Europe, in the Pacific Ocean it was the Bamboo Curtain concept per Prouty and the same Marshall Plan activities were underway.

The Dutch wanted Indonesia back as a colony. JFK and RFK backed Sukarno, the CIA backed Suharto. This would be a key dispute. Howard P. Jones of the East West Center and Ambassodor to Indonesia in the era has written about this and submitted an oral interview available at taken at the JFK Library.

As mentioned earlier the CIA activities in Kenya led Barrack Obama Jr to the East West Center where he met Anne Dunham who was the daughter of Madely Payne a CIA employee at a Hawaii bank whos husband Stanley Dunham had been caught stealing Boeing Bomber plans to give to the Nazis while working at the Witchita, Kansas plant and owed the CIA a favor.

A key point studied by many is that on Feb 2, 1961 it is alleged Barrack Obama Jr married. It is also alleged she was three moths pregnant. I Ed Donegan show on my birthc certificate it looks like a Feb 2 impregnation but for me it would have been Feb 20, 1961 a time JFK was on the phone in a key photo and I was born November 18. I assert the real birthay for Barrack Omama Jr was the same date and the CIA was interminglihg family lines for a CIA backed sleeper agent.

To repeat and emphasize "President Obama's own work in 1983 for Business International Corporation, a CIA front that conducted seminars with the world's most powerful leaders and used journalists as agents abroad, dovetails with CIA espionage activities conducted by his mother, Stanley Ann Dunham in 1960s post-coup Indonesia on behalf of a number of CIA front operations, including the East-West Center at the University of Hawaii, the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID), and the Ford Foundation. Dunham met and married Lolo Soetoro, Obama's stepfather, at the East-West Center in 1965. Soetoro was recalled to Indonesia in 1965 to serve as a senior army officer and assist General Suharto and the CIA in the bloody overthrow of President Sukarno."

Barack Obama, Sr., who met Dunham in 1959 in a Russian language class at the University of Hawaii, had been part of what was described as an airlift of 280 East African students to the United States to attend various colleges - merely “aided” by a grant from the Joseph P. Kennedy Foundation, according to a September 12, 1960, Reuters report from London. The airlift was a CIA operation to train and indoctrinate future agents of influence in Africa, which was becoming a battleground between the United States and the Soviet Union and China for influence among newly-independent and soon-to-be independent countries on the continent. The airlift was condemned by the deputy leader of the opposition Kenyan African Democratic Union (KADU) as favoring certain tribes - the majority Kikuyus and minority Luos - over other tribes to favor the Kenyan African National Union (KANU), whose leader was Tom Mboya, the Kenyan nationalist and labor leader who selected Obama, Sr. for a scholarship at the University of Hawaii. Obama, Sr., who was already married with an infant son and pregnant wife in Kenya, married Dunham on Maui on February 2, 1961 and was also the university’s first African student. Dunham was three month’s pregnant with Barack Obama, Jr. at the time of her marriage to Obama, Sr. Obama, Sr., who left Hawaii for Harvard in 1962, divorced Dunham in 1964. Obama, Sr. married a fellow Harvard student, Ruth Niedesand, a Jewish-American woman, who moved with him to Kenya and had two sons. (Wayne Madses)

Ann Dunham [later] met Soetoro at the East-West Center at the University of Hawaii. The center had long been affiliated with CIA activities in the Asia-Pacific region. In 1965, the year that Dunham met and married Soetoro, the center saw a new chancellor take over. He was Howard P. Jones who served a record seven years, from 1958 to 1965, as U.S. ambassador to Indonesia. Jones was present in Jakarta as Suharto and his CIA-backed military officers planned the 1965 overthrow of Sukarno, who was seen, along with the Indonesian Communist Party (PKI), as allies of China.

When Jones was chancellor of the East-West Center, he wrote an article for the Washington Post, dated October 10, 1965, in which he defended Suharto’s overthrow of Sukarno. Jones was “invited” by the Post to comment on the Suharto coup, described as a “counter-coup” against the Communists. Jones charged that Suharto was merely responding to an earlier attempted Communist-led coup against Sukarno launched by Lt. Col. Untung, “a relatively unknown battalion commander in the palace guard.”

Dunham Soetoro worked for the elitist Ford Foundation, World Bank, Asian Development Bank, Bank Rakyat (the majority government-owned People’s Bank of Indonesia), and the CIA-linked USAID while she lived in Indonesia and later, Pakistan.

Jones’s article, which mirrored CIA situation reports from the U.S. embassy in Jakarta, continued by stating that the alleged leftist coup on September 30 ”came within an inch of succeeding through the assassination of six of the top military command. It might well have succeeded had not Defense Minister Nasution and a number of other senior generals also maked for assassination acted fast in a dramatic counter-coup.” Of course, what Jones did not inform the Post’s readers was that the Suharto “counter-coup” had been assisted with the strong help of the CIA.

Ann Dunham dropped out of the University of Hawaii in 1960 while pregnant with Barack Obama. Barack Obama Sr. left Hawaii in 1962 to study at Harvard. Dunham and Obama divorced in 1964. In the fall of 1961, Dunham enrolled at the University of Washington while caring for her infant son. Dunham was re-enrolled at the University of Hawaii from 1963 to 1966. Lolo Soetoro, who Dunham married in March 1965, departed Hawaii for Indonesia on July 20, 1965, some three months prior to the CIA’s coup against Sukarno. Soetoro, who served Suharto as an Army colonel, was clearly called back from the CIA-connected East-West Center to assist in the coup against Sukarno, one that would eventually cost the lives of some one million Indonesian citizens. It is a history that President Obama would like the press to ignore, which it certainly did during the 2008 primary and general election.

In 1967, after arriving in Indonesia with Obama, Jr., Dunham began teaching English at the American embassy in Jakarta, which also housed one of the largest CIA stations in Asia and had significant satellite stations in Surabaya in eastern Java and Medan on Sumatra. Jones left as East-West Center chancellor in 1968. Wayne Madsen

On August 21, 1959 Hawaii became a US State. In 1960 under President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon LBJ

The Center was established in Hawaiʻi based on the conclusions reached by Congress and the US Department of State that Hawaiʻi offered special advantages for a national institution with an Asia Pacific focus that could not be duplicated anywhere else in the country. In early 1959, as Hawaiʻi's statehood was approaching, John A. Burns, Hawaiʻi's Territorial Delegate to Congress, and the then- Senate Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson, both agreed that the East-West Center was an idea whose time had come. Senator Johnson first publicly suggested the concept of an international center during a speech at the American Society of Newspaper Editors in Washington, DC on April 16, 1959. He proposed that the nation establish an international university in Hawaiʻi "as a meeting place for intellectuals of the East and West." In order to implement this concept, on June 9, 1959 Senator Johnson introduced a bill in the Senate to establish "a Center for Cultural and Technical Interchange Between East and West in Hawaii." An identical bill was introduced into the House of Representatives on behalf of John Burns. Congress then passed P.L. 86-108 on July 24, 1959, which included an amendment calling for the Secretary of State to prepare a plan for the establishment of the Center.

Barrack Obama Sr/ married his first wife Kezia Aoko in 1954, and the couple had two children, Malik and Auma. In 1959 he was selected for a special academic program and traveled to the United States to enroll as the first African foreign student to study at the University of Hawaii at Manoa in Honolulu. He graduated in 1963 with a BA in Economics and while there was inducted into the Phi Beta Kappa Honor Society. Also, while in Honolulu he met and married 18-year-old Stanley Ann Dunham in 1961. The couple had one child together, future U.S. President Barack Hussein Obama Jr. They divorced three years later in 1964.

In June of 1962, Obama left Hawaii, and moved to Cambridge, Massachusetts, to attend Harvard University, where he met Ruth Beatrice Baker. After graduation in 1964, Obama returned to Kenya, with Baker in tow, and they married later that year. The couple had two sons, Mark and David, and divorced in 1973.

President Obama's own work in 1983 for Business International Corporation, a CIA front that conducted seminars with the world's most powerful leaders and used journalists as agents abroad, dovetails with CIA espionage activities conducted by his mother, Stanley Ann Dunham in 1960s post-coup Indonesia on behalf of a number of CIA front operations, including the East-West Center at the University of Hawaii, the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID), and the Ford Foundation. During World War II, Madelyn Dunham worked the night shift on a Boeing B-29 assembly line in Wichita and Stanley Dunham enlisted in the Army. Her brother Charlie Payne was part of the 89th Infantry Division, which liberated the Nazi concentration camp at Ohrdruf, a subcamp of Buchenwald,[6] a fact Barack Obama has referred to in speeches.[7] Madelyn Dunham gave birth to their only child, a daughter named Stanley Ann Dunham, who was later known as Ann, at St. Francis Hospital in Wichita on November 29, 1942.

Brief Life History of Madelyn Lee Madelyn Lee Payne was born in Peru Kansas in 1922. She was a child of a depression, the daughter of a school teacher, and a bookkeeper at a small refinery, themselves, the children at farmers and homesteaders. These were sensible people who work hard, went to church, pay their bills, and remain suspicious of bombast, public displays of emotion, or foolishness of any sort. https://ancestors.familysearch.org/en/LCQ7-ZVY/madelyn-lee-payne-1922-2008

Real and also imaginary historic marker birthdays?

It's why the King has two birthdays It's basically every child's dream come true. On November 14, the actual day of his birth, King Charles III celebrates privately, but tomorrow, on June 15, he will mark his "official" birthday publicly with a parade. It all comes down to the weather. (Can you think of a more British reason?) Summer is the only time for a proper parade-even when there's rain in the forecast. - https://www.townandcountrymag.com/society/tradition/a44189146/why-does-king-charles-have-two-birthdays/

It is alleged Standard Oil subsidiary ARABCO funded the Manchurian Plot conspiracy of Barrack Obama Jr. who like Malcom X might have been placed by the CIA in Saudi Arabia. In any case it was a Rockefeller plot and this was tied to Rockefeller Standard Oil. Oil and Gold existed in Indonesia as well, and it was close to Australia and thus a target to be covertly ruled by planted US backed leaders like Suharto who would overthrow Sukarno

King Saud and JFK

In this chapter The Ford Foundation, Rockefeller Oil, the CIA, and others like the Joseph Kennedy Jr Foundation collectively work with the CIA , Malcolm X, Glorian Donegan, the British later at Seattle Worlds Expo to paint an Octopus picture of USA CIA Devils Chessboard world playground, and in this I weave together the the FBI, CIA, Rockefellers likely wanted tighter Saudi relations with the USA, its big neighbor and that explains reports the Saudis also funded Barrack Obama Sr at Harvard and in a fake child scheme of a CIA created Manchurian Candidate loyal to Monarchs including House of Saud, Rothschilds, Rockefellers, and the Cecil Rhodes Secret Society game.

Saudi Arabia-United States relations retrieved from Wikipedia and copied or modified to here

Oil for protection of the Saudi Governments sovereignty from attack at least from attack external to Saudi Arabia.

The House of Saud has had three phases: the Emirate of Diriyah, the First Saudi State (1727-1818), marked by the expansion of Salafism; the Emirate of Nejd, the Second Saudi State (1824-1891), marked with continuous infighting; and the Third Saudi State (1902-present), which evolved into the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia in 1932 and now wields considerable influence in the Middle East. The family has had conflicts with the Ottoman Empire, the Sharif of Mecca, the Al Rashid family of Ha'il and their vassal houses in Najd, numerous Islamist groups both inside and outside Saudi Arabia and Shia minority in Saudi Arabia.

The British and USA support of the Third Royal Phase of House of Saud has meant a steady ally in Saudi Arabia for world wide business and world wide and Middle East foreign policy.

This book asserts military and economic relationships can be negotiated with alien forms of State on the premise of liberalization over time of the ally state.

The relationship between Saudi Arabia and the United States of America was economically strengthened in 1933, when Standard Oil of California was given a concession to explore the Saudi Arabian lands for oil. The subsidiary of this company, regarded as California Arabian Standard Oil Company CASOC, later dubbed Saudi Aramco carried out a fruitful exploration in 1938.

Saudi Arabian Oil Company (formerly Arabian-American Oil Company and formerly CASOC), is a Saudi Arabian public petroleum and natural gas company based in Dhahran. As of 2020, it is one of the largest companies in the world by revenue. Saudi Aramco has both the world's second-largest proven crude oil reserves, at more than 270 billion barrels (43 billion cubic metres), and largest daily oil production of all oil-producing companies. It is the single greatest contributor to global carbon emissions of any company in the world since 1965. On May 11, 2022, Saudi Aramco became the largest company in the world by market cap, surpassing Apple Inc.

Saudi Aramco operates the world's largest single hydrocarbon network, the Master Gas System. In 2013 crude oil production total was 3.4 billion barrels (540 million cubic metres), and it manages over one hundred oil and gas fields in Saudi Arabia, including 288.4 trillion standard cubic feet (scf) of natural gas reserves. Saudi Aramco operates the Ghawar Field, the world's largest onshore oil field, and the Safaniya Field, the world's largest offshore oil field.

Bilateral relations between Saudi Arabia and the United States began in 1933 when full diplomatic relations were established and became formalized in the 1951 Mutual Defense Assistance Agreement. Despite the differences between the two countries-an Islamic absolute monarchy, and a secular constitutional republic-the two countries have been allies ever since. The core logic underpinning the relationship is that the United States provides military protection of Saudi Arabia in exchange for a reliable oil supply from the Saudis, pricing of oil in US dollars, and Saudi support for US foreign policy operations across the world.

King Saud and John Kennedy meet at the king's mansion in Palm Beach, Florida in 1962

CASOC struck oil near Dhahran, but production over the next several years remained low-only about 42.5 million barrels between 1941 and 1945; less than 1% of the output in the United States over the same time period. CASOC was later renamed the Arabian-American Oil Company (Aramco).

However, as World War II progressed, the United States began to believe that Saudi oil was of strategic importance. As a result, in the interest of national security, the U.S. began to push for greater control over the CASOC concession. On February 16, 1943, President Franklin D. Roosevelt declared that "the defense of Saudi Arabia is vital to the defense of the United States", thereby making possible the extension of the Lend-Lease program to the kingdom. Later that year, the president approved the creation of the state-owned Petroleum Reserves Corporation, with the intent that it purchase all the stock of CASOC and thus gain control of Saudi oil reserves in the region. However, the plan was met with opposition and ultimately failed. Roosevelt continued to court the government, however-on February 14, 1945, he met with King Ibn Saud aboard the USS Quincy, discussing topics such as the countries' security relationship and the creation of a Jewish country in the Mandate of Palestine.

Bin Saud approved the U.S.'s request to allow the U.S. air force to fly over and construct airfields in Saudi Arabia. The oil installations were rebuilt and protected by the U.S.,[15] the pilgrims' routes were protected,[14] and the U.S. gained a much needed direct route for military aircraft heading to Iran and the Soviet Union.[15] The first American consulate was opened in Dhahran in 1944.

Foundation of Aramco

The United States of America and Saudi Arabian trade relationship has long revolved around two central concepts: security and oil. Throughout the next two decades, the 50s and 60s, relations between the two nations grew significantly stronger. In 1950, Aramco and Saudi Arabia agreed on a 50/50 profit distribution of the oil discovered in Saudi Arabia. In 1951 the Mutual Defense Assistance Agreement was put into action, which allowed for the U.S. arms trade to Saudi Arabia, along with a United States military training mission to be centered in Saudi Arabia.

King Saud comes to power (1953)

King Saud and John Kennedy meet at the king's mansion in Palm Beach, Florida in 1962 In the late 1950s, King Saud, the eldest son of Ibn Saud, came to power after his father's death. During King Saud's time U.S.-Saudi relations faced many obstacles concerning the anti-communism strategy. President Dwight D. Eisenhower's new anti-Soviet alliance combined most of "the kingdom's regional rivals and foes", which heightened Saudi suspicions.[15] For this reason, in October 1955, Saud had joined the pro-Soviet strategy with Egyptian president Gamal Abdel Nasser.[18] Furthermore, Saud dismissed the U.S. forces and replaced them by Egyptian forces. Thus, this act had sparked and innovated a new and a large conflict in the relationship. But in 1956, during the Suez crisis, Saud began to cooperate with the U.S. again after Eisenhower forced the reversal of the Israeli, British, and French invasion to seize the canal. King Saud had admired the act and decided to start cooperating with the U.S.[18] As a result, Egyptian power greatly declined while U.S.-Saudi relations were simultaneously improving.

Cold War and Soviet containment

In 1957, Saud decided to renew the U.S. base in Dhahran. In less than a year, after the Egyptian-Syrian unification in 1958, Egypt's pro-Soviet strategy had returned to power. Saud had once again joined their alliance, which declined the U.S.-Saudi relationship to a fairly low point especially after he announced in 1961 that he changed his mind on renewing the U.S. base.[21] In 1962, however, Egypt attacked Saudi Arabia from bases in Yemen during the 1962 Yemeni revolution because of Saudi Arabia's Anti-revolution propaganda, which made Saud seek the U.S. support. President John F. Kennedy immediately responded to Saud's request by sending U.S. warplanes in July 1963 to the war zone to stop the attack which was putting U.S. interests at risk.

[18] At the end of the war, shortly before Prince Faisal became king, the relationship rebuilt itself to become healthy again.

As the United Kingdom withdrew from the Persian Gulf region in the late 1960s and early 1970s, the U.S. was reluctant to take on new security commitments. Instead, the Nixon administration sought to rely on local allies to "police" American interests (see Nixon Doctrine). In the Persian Gulf region, this meant relying on Saudi Arabia and Iran as "twin pillars" of regional security. Whereas in 1970 the U.S. provided less than $16 million to Saudi Arabia in military aid, that number increased to $312 million by 1972.[22]: 22 As part of the "twin pillars" strategy, the U.S. also attempted to improve relations between the Saudis and the Iranians, such as by persuading Iran to remove its territorial claim to Bahrain.[22]: 21

President John F. Kennedy visits Saud bin Abdul-Aziz Al Saud, King of Saudi Arabia at the residence of Jean Flagler Gonzalez, where King Saud stayed following a surgery in the United States. King Saud’s daughter, Princess Dalal, stands at center. Palm Beach, Florida.

King Abdulaziz Al Saud, Ibn Saud as an appellation, the founder of Saudi Arabia, developed close ties with the United States. After unifying his country in 1928, he set about gaining international recognition. Great Britain was the first country to recognize Saudi Arabia as an independent state, as the British had provided protection of Saudi territories from the Turks for many years. In May 1931 the U.S. officially recognized Saudi Arabia by extending full diplomatic recognition. At the same time Ibn Saud granted a concession to the U.S. company, Standard Oil of California, allowing them to explore for oil in the country's Eastern Province, al-Hasa.[16] The company gave the Saudi government £35,000 and also paid assorted rental fees and royalty payments.

In November 1931, a treaty was signed by both nations which included favored nation status. The relationship was still weak, however, as America did not have an interest in establishing missions in Saudi Arabia: at the time, Saudi affairs were handled by the U.S. delegation in Cairo, Egypt; The U.S. finally sent a resident ambassador in 1943.

The relationship between Saudi Arabia and the United States of America was economically strengthened in 1933, when Standard Oil of California was given a concession to explore the Saudi Arabian lands for oil. The subsidiary of this company, regarded as California Arabian Standard Oil Company, later dubbed Saudi Aramco carried out a fruitful exploration in 1938, finding oil for the first time. The relationship between the two nations strengthened throughout the next decade, establishing a full diplomatic relationship through a symbolic acceptance of an American envoy in Saudi Arabia.

World War II

As the U.S.-Saudi relationship was growing slowly, World War II was beginning its first phase, with Saudi Arabia remaining neutral. The U.S. was deeply involved in World War II, and as a result, U.S.-Saudi relations were put on the 'back burner'. This negligence left Saudi Arabia vulnerable to attack. Italy, an Axis power, bombed a CASOC oil installation in Dhahran crippling Saudi Arabia's oil production.[15] This attack left Bin Saud scrambling for to find an external power that would protect the country, fearing further attacks that would most likely cease the country's oil production and the flow of pilgrims coming into Mecca to perform Hajj, the base of the Saudi power and economy at that time.

CASOC struck oil near Dhahran, but production over the next several years remained low-only about 42.5 million barrels between 1941 and 1945; less than 1% of the output in the United States over the same time period. CASOC was later renamed the Arabian-American Oil Company (Aramco).

It is at this time 1958 the Col Prouty writes Richard Nixon begins under the NSC plans for Indonesia. I will point out that Donald Barr and Nelson Rockefeller are a part of that plan too. Most likely Goerge H.W. Bush, Prescoot Bush, and William Randolph Hearst are too.

Prouty under NSC 5412 headed by Vice President Nixon and carried carried out by General Charles Cabell and Edward Lansdale were with Nelson Rockefeller against Harry Truamn's (Democrat repalced FDR and regretted the CIA) was tryint to plan the overthrow of Indonesia. Not only was ROckefeller's son killed on NOvember 19, 1961, and the experimental monkey of Donald Barr flown back to the Whitehosue for a birthday on November 23 arriving there and then headed to Indonesia I assert that this is tied to my birth November 18, 1961 and the birth certifacate 022-46-3233 and that all of this two years later is what JFK is assasinated over with Nixon, Twombly, Allen Dulles, Cabell, all in on the assasination over the plot LBJ eas also a participant in.

I believe the real birth of Barrack Obama Jr was Los Angeles County in INglewood.

In the 1960 General Election it almost was Nelson Rockefeller as the GOP candidate (not Vice President Nixon) who would challenge Senator JFK for the US Presidency, and in 1961 the Rockefeller were active in Indonesia and the US V.P. Nixon NSC plans for Indonesia Prouty was supporting under V.P. Nixon.

The Dump Nixon 1956 movement talbot identifies

Previous operations under Vice President Nixon and the CIA expected Nixon would continue as President if he defeated JFK for President included Indonesia planned since 1958 and earlier and Cuba. In the Bay of Pigs Kennedy inherited over 1,400 paramilitaries, divided into five infantry battalions and one paratrooper battalion, assembled and launched from Guatemala and Nicaragua by boat on 17 April 1961. Two days earlier, eight CIA-supplied B-26 bombers had attacked Cuban airfields and then returned to the U.S. On the night of 17 April, the main invasion force landed on the beach at Playa Girón in the Bay of Pigs, where it overwhelmed a local revolutionary militia.

As to Cuba the failed invasion severely embarrassed the Kennedy administration and made Castro wary of future U.S. intervention in Cuba. On 21 April, in a State Department press conference, Kennedy said: "There's an old saying that victory has a hundred fathers and defeat is an orphan... Further statements, detailed discussions, are not to conceal responsibility because I'm the responsible officer of the Government...

Would JFK next stop the next oepration underway - Indonesia?

In autumn 1961, following the Bay of Pigs incident and the Algiers putsch against Charles de Gaulle, Dulles and his entourage, including Deputy Director for Plans Richard M.

Bissell Jr. and Deputy Director Charles Cabell, were forced to resign.

On November 28, 1961, Kennedy presented Dulles with the National Security Medal at the CIA Headquarters in Langley, Virginia. The next day, November 29, the White House released a resignation letter signed by Dulles. He was replaced by John McCone.

Ed Donegan (myself and others) assert JFK wished to abort the Indonesia plan. Heads had already rolled over Cuba. But following the November 22, 1961 White House meeting with a newborn held by Donald Barr I think the plans to replace Dulles and end the Indonesia plan was the motive for firing Dulles (as does Jen Moore.)

The best I can tell my family happened into the JFK Lawford House Party knowning jFK would be there and on an excuse, were let in, and saw perhaps a second new-born and the same personell tied to his own family, my family, that were part of the same birth hospital and surrogate. The CIA already was part of the Obama Jr. family with Madelyn Payne Dunham and Obams Sr., and the Obama Jr. birth in Inglewood under SSN 022-46-3233 may have been in a camoflouged identity.

Speckial to the New York Times Aug. 22 -- Roaring Republicans unanimously renominated President Eisenhower and Vice President Richard M. Nixon tonight.

A "dump Nixon" movement collapsed completely with the unconditional surrender of its leader, Harold E. Stassen. Mr. Stassen had tried in vain to get Gov. Christian A. Herter of Massachusetts to oppose Mr. Nixon.

General Eisenhower summoned a special, nationally televised press conference to announce that Mr. Stassen's campaign had ended and that all barriers to Mr. Nixon's renomination had been removed. Mr. Stassen later seconded Mr. Nixon's nomination.

Mr. Nixon's victory was made unanimous and complete when a Nebraska delegate, Terry Carpenter, capitulated. On the first roll-call Mr. Carpenter had passed because the convention chairman, Representative Joseph W. Martin Jr. of Massachusetts, had ignored his joking attempt to place in nomination the name of "Joe Smith." Just before the vote was announced, Mr. Carpenter gave in, and the Nixon total climbed to 1,322 votes.

Convention is Jubilant

It was a moment of triumph and tragedy for the Vice President. He was at the bedside of his critically ill father, Francis A. Nixon, at La Habra, near Los Angeles, when he convention made him its choice for a second term. The elder Nixon is 77.

The nominating processes gave the confident delegates something to cheer and demonstrate about as they sent the victorious team of 1952 back into battle against a Democratic slate again headed by Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois. Mr. Stevenson's new running mate, picked in an open floor fight at Chicago last week, is Senator Estes Kefauver.

In 1930, Herter was first elected to the Massachusetts House of Representatives and served for 12 years. In 1942, he sought the Massachusetts 10th district seat in the US House of Representatives, held by George H. Tinkham, whose isolationist views made him vulnerable during World War II. Once Herter entered the contest, Tinkham withdrew and so opened the way for Herter to be elected. Although he was critical of Franklin D. Roosevelt's liberal New Deal, Herter distinguished himself from 1943 to 1953 primarily for his stand on foreign affairs, especially in the so-called Herter Committee[3] in 1947; its report initiated proposals that led to Harry Truman's Marshall Plan.

In those years, he refused to support the permanence of the House Un-American Activities Committee. In 1947, Herter founded the Middle East Institute with Middle East scholar George Camp Keiser and then served on the board of trustees of the World Peace Foundation. He led bipartisan support for President Truman's Point Four Program giving technological help to poor countries.

Herter served five terms in Congress. In 1952, he ran successfully for governor of Massachusetts, narrowly defeating incumbent Governor Paul A. Dever.

Herter was re-elected governor in 1954, defeating Massachusetts House Minority Leader Robert F. Murphy. He chose not to seek a third term in 1956.

On February 21, 1957, Herter was appointed Under Secretary of State for the second term of the Eisenhower administration; later, when John Foster Dulles became seriously ill, he was appointed Secretary of State, April 22, 1959. Dulles died a month later. Herter himself suffered from severe arthritis, forcing him to use crutches when walking.

Herter's main diplomatic challenges included escalating crises over the status of West Berlin in the Cold War; difficult negotiations with Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev, especially regarding the Soviet downing of the U-2 spy plane; the collapse of the Paris Summit conference; and the early stages of American efforts to divert Fidel Castro's Cuban revolution away from communism. There were smaller crises around the world including a Civil War in the Congo. Herter's careful, cautious approach matched Eisenhower's preferences, emphasizing negotiation in response to bellicosity from the Kremlin. Despite the soft language, Herter supported strong policies against Cuba, and a refusal to compromise on Berlin. During his visit to West Berlin in July 1959, Herter was enthusiastically celebrated by over 100,000 people in the streets.[5]

After leaving office he chaired a blue ribbon committee on State Department personnel, and was one of President John F. Kennedy's representatives for trade negotiations.[6]

As an unemployed "elder statesman" after the election of 1960, Herter served on various councils and commissions, and was a special representative for trade negotiations, working for both John F. Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson until his death.

Secretary Herter was also an active Freemason. He was a member of the Grand Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Christian Herter's lifetime reputation was as an internationalist, especially interested in improving political and economic relations with Europe.

Following his military service, Michael Clark Rockefeller went on an expedition for Harvard's Peabody Museum of Archaeology and Ethnology to study the Dani tribe of western Dutch New Guinea. On November 17, 1961, Rockefeller and Dutch anthropologist René Wassing were in a 40-foot (12 m) dugout canoe about 3 nautical miles (6 km; 3 mi) from shore when their double pontoon boat was swamped and overturned.[4] Their two local guides swam for help, but it was slow in coming.[5] After drifting for some time, early on November 19,[1] Rockefeller said to Wassing: "I think I can make it." He then swam for shore. The boat was an estimated 12 nmi (22 km; 14 mi) from the shore when Rockefeller made the attempt to swim to safety, supporting the theory that he died from exposure, exhaustion or drowning.[5]

Wassing was rescued the next day, but Rockefeller was never seen again despite an intensive and lengthy search effort. At the time, his disappearance was major international news. His body was never found,[6] and he was declared legally dead in 1964

In 1963 at Dealy Plaza with Coca-Cola officials Nixon looking at the Demcorat ticket that defeated him (and Ed Donegan myself thinks Nixon was an aware middle man) predicts LBJ by 1963 that makes him a threat to JFK and in fact I think even JFK a threat to LBJ in that JFK opposed the LBJ plan for Indonesia. By 1963 the WindsorCon in Seatle 1962 was over and Marilyn Monroe was killed to protect the secrets of MK-ULTRA.

On how Rockefeller's disappearance affected the Dutch, who were fighting to keep their colony

Michael's disappearance came at the worst possible time for the Dutch. At the very same time that he disappeared, the Dutch were engaged in this complex political struggle in the United Nations to retain [their] colony. And when he disappeared, the search and rescue was a great opportunity to show the world how committed the Dutch were and how effective and efficient they were.

When rumors surfaced that Michael had in fact not just disappeared at sea, but had been possibly murdered and cannibalized by the residents of [the] colony, it was the worst thing possible. It complicated the Dutch efforts and they didn't want any part of it and brushed it under the rug. https://www.wbur.org/npr/291140637/cannibals-and-colonialism-solving-the-mystery-of-michael-rockefeller

I Edward Paul Donegan assert Jet Pilot (1957) and The Rocky Horrot Picture Show (1975) in an anonymous way and perhaps in a favorable story line covertly tell of similar CIA events the what some call The Cabal do know about.

What has not been fictionalized or analyzed here is JFK on November 19, 1961 in Santa Monica at Peter and Patricia Lawford's home, Peter Lawford whose permanently disabled right arm kept him from serving in India as his father had done. Nine months earlier JFK met with Thorkill Kristensen and George Ball and others by speaker-phone. I assert they were formulation a plan to get good and cultivated leadership into Indonesia and elsewhere including placing adoptees or faked birth certificate identities into families of influence that could operate for the CIA in later decades.

Some interesting history in The Devil's Chessboard. The Dulles cluth were meegting in Dulles's home leading into the asssination. Founder of Dealy Plaza had a son who was a newspaperman ad hated JFK. The Talbot notes lead to here.

" . . . . Members of the Texas Crusade for Freedom would become a who's who of Texans connected to the events surrounding the assassination of John F. Kennedy. In addition to Neil Mallon, members included [Paul] Raigorodsky, Lewis W. MacNaughton, Everette De Golyer, and Dallas mayor Earle Cabell, brother of Charles Cabell, who was Allen Dulles's deputy CIA director [fired by JFK for his conduct in the Bay of Pigs operation along with Dulles himself]. Another member was D. Harold Byrd, who owned the building in downtown Dallas that would become known as the Texas School Book Depository. Another member was E.M. "Ted" Dealey, publisher of The Dallas Morning News, who was a harsh critic of Kennedy. . . ."

Some of the most important Republicans on the national stage not only were essential parts of the CFF/Nazi GOP nexus but also figure into the investigation into the JFK assassination.

- CFF godfather Allen Dulles was the principal member of the Warren Commission and appears to have been an architect of the assassination itself.

- Richard Nixon was in Dallas on 11/22/1963, flew out about an hour and a half before the fatal shots were fired and then lied about it to the FBI.

- Ronald Reagan was on the Rockefeller Commission that found (incorrectly) that the CIA was not involved in the assassination. He also refused to honor Jim Garrison's request to extradite Edgar Eugene Bradley from California.

- George H.W. Bush was in Dallas on 11/22/1963 and says he can't remember where he was when Kennedy was killed.

"We can annihilate Russia and should make that clear to the Soviet government," Dealey lectured Kennedy. "The general opinion of the grassroots thinking in this country is that you and your administration are weak sisters. We need a man on a horseback to lead this nation, and many people in Texas and the Southwest think that you are riding [your daughter] Caroline's tricycle."

The cool-tempered Kennedy did not let his anger flash in public gatherings. But he fixed Dealey-the man whose family name was on the plaza where he would die-with a hard look. "The difference between you and me, Mr. Dealey," replied Kennedy in his chilliest Boston staccato, "is that I was elected president of this country and you were not. I have the responsibility for the lives of 180 million Americans, which you have not.... Wars are easier to talk about than they are to fight. I'm just as tough as you are-and I didn't get elected president by arriving at soft judgments."

The Texas oil crowd was also furious at Kennedy for moving to close their tax loopholes, particularly the oil depletion allowance, which threatened to cost the oilmen millions-perhaps billions-of dollars a year. This kind of government mischief would have been unthinkable during the Eisenhower-Dulles years. As vice president, Lyndon Johnson-Texas's native son-was supposed to make sure that the man in the White House didn't mess with their wealth. But by the fall of 1963, the once-powerful LBJ- former Senate majority leader and master of the backroom deal-was a fading figure in Washington, unable to take care of the oil tycoons who had paved his way to power. "He had promised to protect them," said petroleum industry lawyer Ed Clark, "and he couldn't deliver. He couldn't deliver!" https://spitfirelist.com/news/the-crusade-for-freedom-and-the-assassination-of-president-kennedy/

On November 13, 1963, when Kennedy convened his first important strategy meeting for the '64 race at the White House, neither Johnson nor any of his staff were invited. The increasingly panicked vice president took it as one more sign that the Kennedys were maneuvering to dump him from the upcoming Democratic ticket. prepared to visit Johnson's home state in November.

On November 14, the day after the White House strategy session on the 1964 campaign, the president privately confirmed that Johnson would not be on the ticket, while conversing with his secretary, Evelyn Lincoln. JFK told her that he was planning major government reforms during his second term, and to accomplish this ambitious agenda he needed a vice president "who believes as I do." Kennedy told Lincoln that he was leaning toward Terry Sanford, the young, moderate governor of swing state North Carolina, "But it will not be Lyndon," he said. -Talbot, DC

James Terry Sanford (similar to the stories of James and Glorian Donega) was born on August 20, 1917, in Laurinburg, North Carolina, United States. He was the second of five children of Elizabeth Terry (née Martin) and Cecil Leroy Sanford.[1] His father ran a hardware store[2] while his mother worked as a teacher.[3] The Sanfords enjoyed a middle class standard of living. During the Great Depression, Cecil's hardware store was forced to close and the family was unable to pay rent, but the company which owned their house allowed them to stay.[4] Cecil struggled to find steady work and performed temporary jobs while Elizabeth returned to full-time teaching. Despite the family's economic troubles, the Sanfords never went hungry and Terry later reflected that he never thought of his family as poor.[4] He and his brother worked odd jobs to make money in their youth, including raising chickens and pigs, selling vegetables, picking cotton, planting tobacco, and delivering newspapers. - Wikipedia

Ed Donegan asserts Oil Barrell Politics were a front for land-grab politics and hopes to control Saudi Arabia for oil and Kenya for navigable chanlles for shipping into Africa and missle silo sites close to super-powers were the real issue. Malcom X was being groomed as possibel father of Obama Jr. and possible father raising him in Saudi Arabia or visiting there.

As Richard Nixon Vice President ran the National Security Council tasked with assassination actions LBJ inherited it. During the time of the JFK presidency JFK was trying to control the CIA operation out of the NSC and thus he put his brother Robert F. Kennedy into an Augmented over-sight role rather than just LBJ as the NSC Chair.

Donald Barr like his son William Barr were CIA operatives. The plan was to get control of independent nations before they turned to the Soviet Union.

How this aligned with Mr. George H.W. Bush, Zapata Oil, Senator Prescott Bush, Congressman Bush, Senator LBJ and the oil business should all be kept in mind. Under Vice President Richard Nixon in 1958 the plans for Indonesia were being created and the defeat of Vice President Richard Nixon by JFK in November 1960 put that plan at risk.

Cuba and Bay of Pigs past was over but Indonesia was barely started and the CIA wanted to continue that plan and other plans. In Figure 1, 2, and 3 you will seen an impregnation likely Eva Ban as a surrogate mother on February 20, 1961, in Figure 2 the Birth at Inglewood S. 9 Months earlier shortly after JFK was sworn in is a meeting Feb 20. The will meet again (after a pregnant pause inserted into the text) at about 11, 9 months later, and at the Lawfords near Inglewood California where I was born.

There is lots of that other than 8:03 birth and 8:04 birth moved from 11 (November er.) Inside the pregnant pause is an web language internal element duplicating the for of what is seen via source code and in the source code that creates the pregnant pause is 11/18/61 backwards that this inside the February 20, 1961 meeting notes that after the pregnant pause they will meet at about 11.

Here it is in detail. There are THREE paragraphs. One "secret" one that follows the last word of the first paragraph. The after the secret paragraph the third paragraph "in the Oval Office."

the Secret Paragraph says WHEN they will meet in the Oval Office if you revers the code. into 11 (normal first paragraph) 18 61 (secret paragraph) in the oval office (third paragraph.

Using the word 'pregnant' as 'full of meaning' goes back to the 15th Century. A pregnant pause is a silence full of potential in the way a pregnant body is full of a new human being. A pregnant pause leaves the listener full of anticipation, just like a pregnancy is full of excitement about the forthcoming baby. - Google answer

THE PEOPLE. In Figure 3 Donald Barr of the OSS CIA and Regime Change will be in D.C. with JFK and an experimental monkey bound for Indonesia. Seen in Figure 2 is Thorkil Kristensen from the Kingdom of Denmark was a financial minister in the 1950's whose ideas included better brains - literally - in under-developed worlds where effective leaders had not been developed or had not emerged.

Thorkil Kristensen was elected to the Danish Parliament 1945 and became finance minister under Knud Kristiansen (1945-1947) and Erik Eriksen (1950-1953). Throughout his life he worked with difficult economic problems. Among people of his own party and opposing parties, he enjoyed great respect because of his broad knowledge of economics.

He came to disagree on economic policy with his party, Venstre, and left the party in 1960.

After his exit from politics, he was secretary general of the OECD from 1960-1969. The Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) is an intergovernmental organisation with 38 member countries, founded in 1961 to stimulate economic progress and world trade. It is in the Whitehouse photo archive of JFK. A man with an experimental monkey that monkey having a birthday party. A newborn. And the man holding the monkey is a real person. And I assert that JFK was president but LBJ and the East West Center were more underneath events, the foundation of them. LBJ is thought to have participate in the assassination of the president, JFK, and I think to keep this plan alive.

Michael Clark Rockefeller (May 18, 1938; disappeared November 19, 1961) was a member of the Rockefeller family. He was the son of New York Governor and later U.S. Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, a grandson of American financier John D. Rockefeller Jr. and a great-grandson of Standard Oil co-founder John D. Rockefeller Sr. Rockefeller disappeared during an expedition in the Asmat region of southwestern Dutch New Guinea, which is now a part of the Indonesian province of South Papua. On February 20, 1957, in a city of concrete and steel 6,000 times bigger than the largest hamlet in Asmat, Nelson Rockefeller introduced the world to a new kind of seeing. He was 49 years old, square-jawed and ambitious, the grandson of Standard Oil founder John D. Rockefeller. At the time of Nelson's birth, which was announced on the front page of the New York Times, John D. was the richest man on earth, with a fortune estimated at $900 million. In two years, Nelson would become the governor of New York. In 1960, he would run for the presidency. In 1974, he would become vice president of the United States. Michael made a scouting trip there (Asmat Indonesia Guinea area] during a mid-May break in filming. Only in the mid-1950s had a few Dutch missionaries and government officials begun pacifying the Asmat, but even by 1961 many had never seen a Westerner, and inter-village warfare and headhunting remained common.

Nelson Aldrich Rockefeller (July 8, 1908 January 26, 1979), sometimes referred to by his nickname Rocky, was an American businessman and politician who served as the 41st vice president of the United States from 1974 to 1977 under President Gerald Ford. A member of the Republican Party and the wealthy Rockefeller family, he previously served as the 49th governor of New York from 1959 to 1973. Rockefeller also served as assistant secretary of State for American Republic Affairs for Presidents Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman (1944 1945) as well as under secretary of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) under Dwight D. Eisenhower from 1953 to 1954. A son of John D. Rockefeller Jr. and Abby Aldrich Rockefeller as well as a grandson of Standard Oil co-founder John D. Rockefeller.

Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs (CIAA)

In 1940, after he expressed his concern to President Franklin D. Roosevelt over Nazi influence in Latin America, the President appointed Rockfeller to the new position of Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs (CIAA) in the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs (OCIAA). Rockefeller was charged with overseeing a program of U.S. cooperation with the nations of Latin America to help raise the standard of living, to achieve better relations among the nations of the western hemisphere, and to counter rising Nazi influence in the region. He facilitated this form of cultural diplomacy by collaborating with the director of Latin American Relations at the CBS radio network Edmund A. Chester.

The Roosevelt administration encouraged Hollywood to produce films to encourage positive relations with Latin America. Rockefeller required changes in the movie Down Argentine Way (1940) because it was considered offensive to Argentines. It was much more popular in the United States than in Latin America. Charlie Chaplin's satirical The Great Dictator (1940) was banned in several countries.

In the spring of 1943, Rockefeller supported extensive negotiations and mission of North American members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce to Latin America as Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs of the US State Department, establishing the Junior Chamber International after its first Inter-American Congress in December 1944 at Mexico City. After coming back from the Inter-American Congress, Rockefeller convinced his father, John D. Rockefeller Jr., to donate the land to the city of New York to build the foundations of what would later become the United Nations Headquarters.

Assistant Secretary of State for American Republic Affairs

In 1944, President Roosevelt appointed Rockefeller Assistant Secretary of State for American Republic

Affairs. As assistant secretary of state, he initiated the Inter-American Conference on Problems of War and Peace in 1945. The conference produced the Act of Chapultepec, which provided the framework for economic, social and defense cooperation among the nations of the Americas and set the principle that an attack on one of these nations would be regarded as an attack on all and jointly resisted. Rockefeller signed the Act on behalf of the United States.

Rockefeller was a member of the U.S. delegation at the United Nations Conference on International Organization at San Francisco in 1945; this gathering marked the UN's founding. At the Conference there was considerable opposition to the idea of permitting, within the UN charter, the formation of regional pacts such as the Act of Chapultepec. Rockefeller, who believed that the inclusion was essential, especially to U.S. policy in Latin America, successfully urged the need for regional pacts within the framework of the UN. Rockefeller was also instrumental in persuading the UN to establish its headquarters in New York City.

President Harry Truman fired Rockefeller, reversed his policies, and shut down the OCIAA. Reich says that in official Washington, Rockefeller had become "a discredited figure, a pariah." He returned to New York.

International Basic Economy Corporation (IBEC)

Rockefeller formed the International Basic Economy Corporation (IBEC) in 1947 to jointly continue the work he had begun as Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs. He intermittently served as president through 1958. IBEC was a for-profit business that established companies that would stimulate underdeveloped economies of certain countries. It was hoped that the success of these companies would encourage investors in those countries to set up competing or supporting businesses and further stimulate the local economy. Rockefeller established model farms in Venezuela, Ecuador, and Brazil. He maintained a home at Monte Sacro, the farm in Venezuela.

Chairman of the International Development Advisory Board

Rockefeller returned to public service in 1950 when President Harry S. Truman appointed him chairman of the International Development Advisory Board. The Board was charged with developing a plan for implementing the President's Point IV program of providing foreign technical assistance. In 1952 President-Elect Dwight D. Eisenhower asked Rockefeller to chair the President's Advisory Committee on Government Organization to recommend ways of improving efficiency and effectiveness of the executive branch of the federal government. Rockefeller recommended thirteen reorganization plans, all of which were implemented. The plans implemented organizational changes in the Department of Defense, the Office of Defense Mobilization and the Department of Agriculture. His recommendations also led to the creation of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Rockefeller was appointed Under-Secretary of this new department in 1953. Rockefeller was active in HEW's legislative program and implemented measures that added ten million people under the Social Security program.

Special assistant to the president for foreign affairs

In 1954, he was appointed special assistant to the president for foreign affairs (sometimes referred to as special assistant to the president for psychological warfare). He was tasked with providing the president with advice and assistance in developing programs by which the various departments of the government could counter Soviet foreign policy challenges. As part of this responsibility, he was named as the president's representative on the Operations Coordinating Board, a committee of the National Security Council. The other members were the Undersecretary of State, the Deputy Secretary of Defense, the director of the Foreign Operations Administration, and the Central Intelligence Agency director. The OCB's purpose was to oversee coordinated execution of security policy and plans, including clandestine operations.

Rockefeller broadly interpreted his directive and became an advocate for foreign economic aid as indispensable to national security. Most of Rockefeller's initiatives were blocked by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and his Under Secretary, Herbert Hoover Jr., both traditionalists who resented what they perceived as outside interference from Rockefeller, and by Treasury Secretary George M. Humphrey for financial reasons. However, in June 1955 Rockefeller convened a week-long meeting of experts from various disciplines to assess the U.S. position in the psychological aspects of the Cold War and develop proposals that could give the U.S. the initiative at the upcoming Summit Conference in Geneva. The meeting was held at the Marine Corps school at Quantico, Virginia, and became known as the Quantico Study. The Quantico panel developed a proposal called "open skies" wherein the U.S. and the Soviet Union would exchange blueprints of military installations and agree to mutual aerial reconnaissance. Thus, military buildups would be revealed, and the danger of surprise attacks minimized. It was a counter proposal to the Soviet proposal of universal disarmament. The feeling was that the Soviets could not refuse the proposal if they were serious about disarmament.

NSC 5412/2 Special Group https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/NSC_5412/2_Special_Group

In March 1955, Rockefeller proposed the creation of the Planning Coordination Group, a small high-level group that would plan and develop national security operations, both overt and covert. The group consisted of the Undersecretary of State, the Deputy Secretary of Defense, the director the CIA, and special assistant Rockefeller as chairman. The group's purpose was to oversee CIA operation and other anti-communist actions. However, State Department officials and CIA Director Allen Dulles refused to cooperate with the group and its initiatives were stymied or ignored. In September Rockefeller recommended the abolishment of the PCG, and in December he resigned as special assistant to the president.

In 1956, he created the Special Studies Project, a major seven-panel planning group directed by Henry Kissinger and funded by the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, of which he was then president. It was an ambitious study created to define the central problems and opportunities facing the U.S. in the future, and to clarify national purposes and objectives. The reports were published individually as they were released and were republished together in 1961 as Prospect for America: The Rockefeller Panel Reports.

The Special Studies Project came into national prominence with the early release of its military subpanel's report, whose principal recommendation was a massive military buildup to counter a then-perceived military superiority threat posed by the USSR. The report was released two months after the October 1957 launch of Sputnik, and its recommendations were fully endorsed by Eisenhower in his January 1958 State of the Union address.

This initial contact with Kissinger was to develop into a lifelong relationship; Kissinger was later to be described as his closest intellectual associate. From this period Rockefeller employed Kissinger as a personally funded part-time consultant, principally on foreign policy issues, until the appointment to his staff became full-time in late 1968. In 1969, when Kissinger entered Richard Nixon's administration, Rockefeller paid him $50,000 as a severance payment.

Governor of New York (1959 1973)

Rockefeller resigned from the federal government in 1956 to focus on New York State and on national politics. From September 1956 to April 1958, he chaired the Temporary State Commission on the Constitutional Convention. That was followed by his chairmanship of the Special Legislative Committee on the Revision and Simplification of the Constitution. In the state election of 1958, he was elected governor of New York by over 570,000 votes, defeating incumbent W. Averell Harriman, even though 1958 was a banner year for Democrats elsewhere in the nation. Rockefeller was re-elected in the three subsequent elections in 1962, 1966 and 1970, increasing the state's role in education, environmental protection, transportation, housing, welfare, medical aid, civil rights, and the arts. To pay for the increased government spending, Rockefeller increased taxation for example, a sales tax was introduced in New York in 1965. He resigned three years into his fourth term and began to work at the Commission on Critical Choices for Americans.

As V.P. to JFK and probably helped long to that spot by Joseph Kennedy Sr. JFK had inherited a plan started by Donald Barr of the OSS CIA, Vatican, and others under Vice President Nixon for Indonesia. It involved US military AND also a covert component. Sukarno would be overthrow, Suharto would be a US backed military strong-man, then Barrack Obama Jr. might rise in a democratic election. 17. ...And Then He Played The Fall Guy

https://www.factinate.com/people/peter-lawford

16. He Played The Middle Man We're not saying Sinatra and the Rat Pack only liked Peter Lawford for his Kennedy connections...but they were a pretty sweet perk. Peter Lawford even arranged for his brother-in-law President John F. Kennedy to stay with his buddy Frank during a 1962 West Coast trip. Sinatra built his hopes up high-not to mention a helipad outside his house for JFK's arrival. But it ended in disaster.

17. …And Then He Played The Fall Guy Peter Lawford landed in some hot water when, days before the visit, Kennedy pulled out of the plan. Apparently, rumors about Sinatra's dealings with mobsters weren't a good look for the prez, so he opted to crash with Bing Crosby instead. Sinatra was seeing red-and, after promptly trashing his new helipad, he turned that fiery gaze onto Lawford.

It will be Truman who setup the CIA and these mobsters and Truman will reget when JFK is shot.

MEETING WITH FORMER PRESIDENT HARRY S. TRUMAN (HST), 9:53AM with Dave Powers, same guy as was in Santa Monica with Peter Laword and Patricia Kennedy November 18 to November 19 at least for the fundrasier.

The Washington Post - The Sinatra files carry only one reference, buried in a 76-page summary:

"A Bureau memo, 2/26/62, regarding 'John Roselli' stated that a review of the telephone calls of Judith E. Campbell, an associate of Roselli, revealed four calls in Dec., 1961, to the Palm Springs, Cal., residence of Frank Sinatra (purpose of the calls not stated)."

Seldom has a bombshell been cloaked in greater understatement.

The reference arose from the FBI's check of phone records for Giancana; Roselli, a gangster associate of Giancana's; and Campbell. The FBI found that the 25-year-old Campbell had one of the most interesting little phone books in history: She was contemporaneously in contact with Giancana, Roselli, Sinatra and Evelyn Lincoln, John F. Kennedy's personal secretary at the White House. It didn't take the bureau long to add two and two and arrive at four: Campbell was a link to Sinatra, Roselli, Giancana and the president.

She had been JFK's girlfriend for two years. Sinatra had introduced Campbell to JFK on February 7, 1960, when Kennedy caught the Rat Pack show at the Sands's Copa Room in Las Vegas. Sinatra had introduced her to Giancana the following month, at the Fontainebleau Hotel in Miami Beach, which had become a sort of clubhouse for the singer and the mob.

Now it was catching up with Kennedy. The day after the bureau memo noting Judith Campbell's calls to Sinatra, Hoover sent a memo of his own - to Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, the president's brother, detailing the results of the FBI's investigation. Soon after that, the president backed away from Sinatra.

The episode became legendary: JFK, who was already scheduled to visit Palm Springs that March, switched his stay from Sinatra's house to that of Bing Crosby, a Republican.

Investigative journalist Seymour M. Hersh and others have reported that Campbell was not merely a friend to both JFK and Giancana, but also a courier between them, ferrying messages about a secret plot to kill Castro. Hersh reported in The Dark Side of Camelot that Giancana mobilized the mob to help get Kennedy elected in 1960. Sinatra reportedly was the conduit to Giancana. On some of the FBI's wiretaps of Giancana, there was discussion among mobsters of getting the singer to ask the Kennedys to lay off Giancana

None of that is in the Sinatra files.

Hoover's report to Robert Kennedy is not in the Sinatra files, nor are any of the now-famous wiretap transcripts in which mobsters talked about leaning on Sinatra to influence the Kennedys (including the one in which Giancana henchman Johnny Formosa suggested that Giancana "hit" Sinatra for not producing). Both the report and the transcripts came to light during congressional committee hearings in the 1970s.

Sinatra himself was never the target of an FBI wiretap. Beyond the cryptic reference to Campbell, there is only a brief aside about the Sinatra/Kennedy/Giancana relationship in a memo from 1964: "Giancana's disappointment in Sinatra's inability to get the administration to tone down its efforts in the Anti-Racketeering field," it says, "constitutes the most significant information developed." Whether Sinatra actually sought the Kennedys' help for the mobsters, the files never say.

In the fall of 1962, the renovated Villa Venice Supper Club reopened for business. The Villa Venice was in Wheeling, Ill., a city not renowned as an entertainment mecca. On the bill for its grand reopening were Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Sammy Davis Jr. and Eddie Fisher.

The FBI was paying close attention. The Villa Venice was reportedly owned by Giancana, and the Rat Pack was appearing in "what can only be termed a command performance," according to the FBI, while illegal gambling took place in a Quonset hut nearby. Informants also told the bureau that Giancana had a secret interest in the Cal-Neva Lodge, a casino Sinatra owned in Lake Tahoe. At the time, Giancana was one of 11 gangsters listed in the Nevada Gaming Control Board's "black book" - banned from even setting foot in a Nevada casino.

Sinatra seemed to be closer than ever to the mob. The FBI soon learned that Sinatra was seeking a $5 million loan from the Teamsters pension fund to expand the Cal-Neva. The FBI was investigating Teamsters President Jimmy Hoffa and allegations that the mob was using cheap Teamsters loans to fund its operations in Las Vegas. On January 16, 1963, FBI agents interviewed Sinatra.

The interview - the only one detailed in the files - took place in Los Angeles. Sinatra's lawyer Mickey Rudin was present. Rudin said the proposed loan was his idea. He said he got it after reading a Los Angeles Times exposé about Teamsters loans to Nevada casinos. "Both Rudin and Sinatra advised they wished to go on record that there were no under-the-table payments of any kind involved," says an FBI memo.

The issue became moot five months later: The FBI learned that the Teamsters had rejected Sinatra's application.

At this point, Frank Sinatra was the Chairman of the Board, the leader of the Rat Pack, a commercial and critical powerhouse as both a singer and an actor, a man with his own jet and his own record company. With tunes like "Luck Be a Lady" and "Come Rain or Come Shine" and albums like "Come Dance With Me" and "Ring-a-Ding-Ding," he had weathered the rock-and-roll challenge of Elvis Presley. With films as diverse as "Ocean's Eleven" and "The Manchurian Candidate," he was entrenched as a screen icon. There appeared to be nothing that he could not achieve.

But the mob allegations and the associations with Giancana finally reached critical mass in an age in which Robert Kennedy's Justice Department had declared war on the mob.

On April 24, 1963, the special agent in charge of the Los Angeles office offered a suggestion to Hoover.

"A review of information that has accrued during the years ... has shown a constant association of SINATRA with some of the more infamous individuals of modern times, i.e., during the late 40's with LUCKY LUCIANO," went the SAC's windup. " ... [A] confidential source, if established in Palm Springs concerning SINATRA would undoubtedly develop information of extremely valuable intelligence nature."

And then came the pitch: "Authority is requested to conduct a preliminary survey to determine the feasibility of a misur [microphone surveillance] installation at SINATRA's residence in Palm Springs."

A bug. The SAC wanted to bug Sinatra's house. The house that JFK and Giancana had slept in.

Five days later, Hoover denied the request. "You are reminded that all misurs must be completely justified," FBI headquarters told L.A.

Three months later, Giancana was staying at the Cal-Neva, visiting his girlfriend, the singer Phyllis McGuire. Within days, news of Giancana's stay exploded into the newspapers. For allowing a banned mobster into his casino, Sinatra would be forced to relinquish his gambling license and his interests in the Cal-Neva and the Sands Hotel.

Simultaneously, the feds made their most serious attempt to go after him.

On August 27, 1963, Dougald D. MacMillan, a lawyer with the Justice Department's Organized Crime and Racketeering Section, convened a most unusual meeting of the FBI, the IRS and the U.S. attorney's office in Los Angeles. MacMillan had been assigned to do a "review of all pertinent information in an effort to determine whether prosecution could be initiated against Sinatra."

MacMillan was a hard-charging prosecutor, one of the hounds Robert Kennedy had unleashed on the mob. He'd been building a file on Sinatra for a long time from IRS and FBI reports. An IRS investigation was already underway, and MacMillan had zeroed in on the nexus of Sinatra, Giancana and the Fontainebleau.

MacMillan had arrived in L.A. with the authority to interview Dean Martin, Sammy Davis Jr., Dinah Shore and Eddie Fisher. Before embarking on what would have been the most star-studded investigation in American history, MacMillan wanted to "solicit suggestions and organize a starting point" for the interviews.

The Sinatra files reveal what a feeble idea this was. A prosecutor present told MacMillan to nail down the documents before starting on interviews. An FBI man present reported that MacMillan did not appear to have an organized plan or clear goal.

Three days later, Hoover instructed his agents to "take no action whatever which could be interpreted as investigation of Frank Sinatra" without his specific authorization. "MacMillan is a boy on a man's errand," Hoover scrawled on a memo.

MacMillan held off on the celebrity interviews. FBI agents reviewed documents to see what they could turn up. After two months, the only thing they found was a possibly false statement Sinatra had made to the IRS in 1959, when he had denied that Giancana had been present at a party Sinatra held at the Claridge Hotel in Atlantic City. An FBI informant, identified only as a professional chorus-line dancer, said she had seen Giancana at the party. In October 1963, a federal prosecutor in L.A. determined that Sinatra's response was "an apparent, though minor violation" of law, but not enough to prosecute.

It would be the last time the FBI went after Frank Sinatra.

What really did happen that fateful night after the DNC Fundraiser at the rich wierdo's house? retrieved from view-source:https://favourbrook.com/blogs/journal/style-files-the-rat-who-was-thrown-out-of-the-pack and copied or modified to here

In 1954, Lawford married socialite Patricia Kennedy, JFK's younger sister. Having been the arch womaniser for the best part of his life, the decision to marry into one of the most powerful families in the world was met with some degree of cynicism but from the outside the marriage seemed genuine in so far as they had four children together. Here was a true star of film, in cahoots with the most famous entertainers in the world and married into the most powerful family on the planet. A charmed life, until it isn't.

[image]

Lawford campaigned voraciously for JFK, and the Rat Pack too were vocal about their Democratic support. Sinatra famously called him "Brother-in-Lawford" and used Peter's political connections to further his own agenda, which would ultimately be Lawford's downfall. Lawford had assured Sinatra that while JFK was in Palm Springs, he would stay at Frank's house. Everything was setup, and Sinatra had gone to great pains to build a helipad in the grounds of his property. However, at a proverbial minute to midnight, JFK pulled out having been advised that Sinatra's well-publicised links to the Mob would be severely detrimental to his campaign. He opted to instead stay with Bing Crosby. Sinatra was apoplectic. He destroyed the helipad in a fit of rage, blamed Lawford entirely and cut him out of the Rat Pack, refusing to talk to him ever again (it was only when Frank Sinatra Jr. was kidnapped on 8 December 1963 that he picked up the phone to Lawford, but only to ask for the help of Lawford's brother-in-law Robert F. Kennedy, then attorney general). While Lawford still made movies after that, his career was never quite the same. He and Patricia divorced in 1966, a few years after JFK's assassination, and after years of becoming numbed to Lawford's infidelities, drinking and drug abuse.

Drink, drugs and Marilyn

Another Kennedy connection was Marilyn Monroe. Lawford was the last person to ever speak to Monroe, having called her the night of her death. He knew her well, obviously moving in the same circles, but also through their mutual relationships with the Kennedys. Monroe reputedly had clandestine affairs with both Jack and Bobby Kennedy and it's said that it was actually Lawford who introduced Jack to Monroe. Ever the pawn in the middle, Lawford would find himself at Monroe's apartment after she had died, making sure that there was no evidence that would give away her relationship with JFK.

[image]

Soon cast out by the Kennedys and with a career in freefall, Lawford turned to the only three friends who would listen to him - drink, drugs and women. His second marriage lasted two years, while his third lasted no more than two months. Lawford eventually married a fourth time in 1984, but died only a short time after. Fast living had eventually caught up with him, and so had his creditors. He died of kidney and liver failure and was cremated, but due to the fact that no one would stump up the fee for it, his ashes were removed from the cemetery and scattered into the Pacific Ocean by his widow. The boat was paid for by the tabloid rag the National Enquirer so they could get the scoop on it.

Lawford's tale is a cautionary one, a charmed life beset by self-destruction. His disjointed upbringing can certainly shoulder some blame, but ultimately Lawford fell victim to his own delusional place in the world. He wasn't the only member of the Rat Pack to die on their sword, but he'll always be remembered as the one rat who went from the highest echelons to the lowest of gutters and from there, never could climb out.

The exact use of this imagery of ghost written stories of the CIA might be selective unmasking, at some future date referring back to them and saying the CIA could not use exact names at the time but an anonmized record was left at the time for the future.

I assert the plan was among many George H.W. Bush, Nixon, Dulles, Sidney Gotleib, and others had underway but JFK attempted to cancel. The DNA for Barrack Obama Jr I assert was from Glorian Donegan atomic testing egg donation, a family secretly under testing under hidden identities but bastard Windsors connected. The public side of creating a Barrack Obama Jr. of such public appeal was a mother like Marilyn Monroe, Malcolm X, or Stanley Ann Dunham who helped with George Ball and Thorkill Kristen develop under developed economies. The plan was secret and over time JFK wanted out but the Nixon and LBJ built CIA tied to Great Britain bastard children Australia and thus England really needed. RFK was left out like JFK was left out fo other things, RFK knew some and was about to find out more, who the real parents of the CIA backed family was and how that tied to Jet Pilot 1957 and The Manchurian Candidate 1962 and Marilyn Monroe who he did not kill. LBJ I assert is fictionalized as Riff Raff.

To understand some of possible dinner conversation and behind the scenes activities December 13 1957 with John F. Kennedy with the Duke and Duchess of Windsor at the Waldorf Astoria in NYC in 1957 it is important to understand some of the other figures that positioned these figures together and why JFK tried to break away from. LBJ and CIA Station Chief Franklin Anderson were committed to it and in the Senate LBJ, Prescott Bush, and others ushered in the East-West-Center (EWC) in conjuction with the conversion of the status of Hawai to the 50th State.

The Territory of Hawaii or Hawaii Territory (Hawaiian: Panalāʻau o Hawaiʻi) was an organized incorporated territory of the United States that existed from April 30, 1900, until August 21, 1959, when most of its territory, excluding Palmyra Island, was admitted to the United States as the 50th U.S. state, the State of Hawaii. The Hawaii Admission Act specified that the State of Hawaii would not include Palmyra Island, the Midway Islands, Kingman Reef, and Johnston Atoll, which includes Johnston (or Kalama) Island and Sand Island.

On July 4, 1898, the United States Congress passed the Newlands Resolution authorizing the U.S. annexation of the Republic of Hawaii, and five weeks later, on August 12, Hawaii became a U.S. territory. In April 1900 Congress approved the Hawaiian Organic Act which organized the territory. United States Public Law 103-150 adopted in 1993, (informally known as the Apology Resolution), acknowledged that "the overthrow of the Kingdom of Hawaii occurred with the active participation of agents and citizens of the United States" and also "that the Native Hawaiian people never directly relinquished to the United States their claims to their inherent sovereignty as a people over their national lands, either through the Kingdom of Hawaii or through a plebiscite or referendum".

Hawaii's territorial history includes a period from 1941 to 1944, during World War II, when the islands were placed under martial law. Civilian government was dissolved and a military governor was appointed. -Wikipedia

Rockefeller Republicans including George H.W. Bush are more long term tough love for peaceful ends than they appear. Their willingness to create and support Banana Republic strong-men dictators was not for the profits of oil, gold, diamonds, tea, spices, coffee, or even opium the British had wanted long before. It was world conquest to gain a corporate equivalent to the United Nations of an NWO that would foresee and prevent wars by eroding enemies rather than nuclear wars.

It is more likely they oppose union leaders and the march away from Capitalism they lead than the union man himself. Keeping socialists from gaining Hawaii and other nations was a Sidney Gottlieb goal and the goal of many others in the CIA and for a while gained the sympathies of JKF who fought in the pacific, a theater few truly understand or even understood in WWII much less in later decades for the importance and size of the remote islands war. I do remember my father talk about at the WWII Memorial that is dived between the European and Pacific theaters.

Richard Mervin Bissell Jr. was an American Central Intelligence Agency officer responsible for major projects such as the U-2 spy plane and the Bay of Pigs Invasion. He is seen as one of the most important spymasters in CIA history. - Wikipedia. Note the the Recon role and Planning Role are interlinked as enemy positions are analyzed and threats posed to the Western Hemisphere are taken into consideration for actionability.

In July 1947, Bissell was recruited by W. Averell Harriman to run a committee to lobby for an economic recovery plan for Europe. The following year he was appointed as an administrator of the Marshall Plan in Germany and eventually became head of the Economic Cooperation Administration (ECA). Bissell worked with the Office of Policy Coordination (OPC) in diverting counterpart funds of the ECA to OPC operations in Europe.

John Foster Dulles and Allen Dulles were long term influencers in various roles. Richard Bissell Jr. and Allen Dulles would be fired from the CIA (Allen Dulles as Director of Central Intelligence and Richard Bissell Jr. the Deputy Director for Planning) along with USAF General Charles Cabell. Charles Cabell had a brother Earl Cabell who was the Mayor of Dallas and hated JFK. Prouty was in thick with all of these figures and suspected all of these figures and General Lansdale of the USAF in the assassination of JFK and the cover-up. It is no coincidence it was this group of people that Col Fletcher Prouty was working with in the Pentagon Office of Special Operations that was the regime change group that included assassinations. This team had the wherewithal and assets to conduct the assassination of JFK while JFK was in Dallas. It remained Col Prouty's suspicion that George H.W. Bush was part of the assassination as was and the namesaked of Operation Zapata and the ship Barbara in that operation. It was Col Prouty's confirmed sure belief that General Lansdale was there at the scene leading the Hobos of Murder Inc. (Chauncey Marvin Holt and others) at the Train-yard while they were disguised as Hobos. This is widely and credibly confirmed and more so as more information comes out over time.

March 29 1961 JFK with Richard Bissell Jr., Allen Dulles. Operation Mongoose. Indonesia or Cuba or Asia Soviet Union Tokyo Indonesia? All ATSUGI threatened. It was only Communists reaching Imperial Japan from SU tha forced Japanese surrender and they were nearing again.

When the Mafia of George H.W. Bush Jimmy Hoffa and others (Murder Inc) were too far out o control JFK was going to reign them in but they assassinated him instead.

To understand the picture below it is necessary to understand Joseph Kennedy Sr. In WWI he helped 1) Get Undersecretary of the Navy FDR the shipbuilding the war effort needed. During that time and afterward he helped get at least one and possibly several bastared Windsor children had with Maria Kutschera into the USA as Nazism was rising in Austria.

Jospeh Kennedy Sr. and social, political, and historical, and intermarriages with England increased when President FDR rewarded him with Ambassador to England. As England was taking heavy bombing from the Luftwaffe that had already helped the Nazi war machine conquer Continental Europe easily cross over the English Channel and while having a near crush on Queen Elizabeth's intellect, Joseph Kennedy Sr. returned to the USA appearing to have been fired during USA neutrality but actually getting Packard Motors to mass produce the engines of the Merlin Super-marine Spitfire made by Rolls Royce that would increase the Royal Air Force and US Army Air Force response to German aggression and change the course of the war.

This is my sketch of the assassination. It follows the work of Greg Poulgrain JFK v Dulles Indonesia, Wayne Madsesn on Obama Jr. #Birther and my own Von Trapp Whitehead theory.

In this photo of 1957 JFK and Duke Edward (formerly Prince Edward of Wales and King Edward VIII) meet in New York. A Kutschera set of descendants will operation in a Catholic mission in Indonesia And a Catholic president of Vietnam possibly too. A Duke in feudalism is similar to a minister without portfolio in cabinet level political administrations.

I want to explain further that diagram of Wayne Madsen and Barrack Obama Jr. being planned for Indonesia. The reason for this is to show that you see TWO assassins of John F. Kennedy in the Diagram. One is Mr. George H.W Bush of the CIA. The Second is Lyndon Baines Johnson. When Prescott Bush and LBJ were US Senators and working hand in hand with oil barons and other robber barons they created the CIA plan and it was LBJ whose legislation created the East-West-Center at University of Hawaii for MKULTRA activities. That was overthrow though they would not admit like International Rescue Comittee and the Ford Foundation this was all the USA and Great Britian in post-war planning together.

These are the well established long running plans that JFK began to abandon and just when the Troubles were getting underway again in the Republic of Ireland.

Hawaii was becoming a US state and getting back Indonesia from independence was one of the Indo-China goals of the CIA, and LBJ in WWII served in Indonesia.

After the paternity claims, Brown made other allegations suggesting that there was a conspiracy to assassinate Kennedy, including the charge that Johnson had foreknowledge of a plot. In 1988, she briefly appeared in investigative columnist Jack Anderson's syndicated program, American Expose: Who Murdered JFK, and said: "In the fall of 1963 I was in the Carousel Club with other advertising people, and Jack Ruby was saying that Lee Harvey Oswald had been in the club and he had been bragging that he had taken a shot at Major General Edwin Walker". Interviews with Brown implicating Johnson also appeared in an episode of A Current Affair in February 1992, and in a 2003 episode of Nigel Turner's documentary The Men Who Killed Kennedy, titled "The Guilty Men."

Brown claimed to have been present at a party in Clint Murchison, Sr.'s Dallas home on the evening prior to the assassination of John F. Kennedy that was attended by

Johnson as well as other famous, wealthy, and powerful individuals including, J. Edgar Hoover, Richard Nixon, H. L. Hunt, George Brown, and John McCloy. According to Brown, Johnson had a meeting with several of the men after which he told her: "After tomorrow, those goddamn Kennedys will never embarrass me again. That's no threat. That's a promise."

Brown said that on New Year's Eve 1963, she met with Lyndon Johnson at the Driskill Hotel in Austin, Texas, and that Johnson confirmed the conspiracy to kill Kennedy, insisting that "Texas oil and ... renegade intelligence bastards in Washington" had been responsible. Brown alleged that Johnson did not attempt to stop the assassination because he hated Kennedy and had an intense desire to be President. Brown also said that she witnessed Oswald meeting with Ruby in the Carousel Club prior to the assassination, but did not specify how long before the assassination this meeting had occurred.

In the years following Brown's allegations, her story has received national attention and several conspiracy authors have cited her claims as evidence of a conspiracy in the case of the JFK assassination.

Allegations challenged: In November 2012, The Dallas Morning News published an article by Hugh Aynesworth describing David Perry's efforts to disprove Brown's allegations.[4] Perry, a former insurance investigator turned conspiracy debunker, had placed his investigation of her claims on his website in an article entitled "Texas in the Imagination" the previous month.[4][19] -https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Madeleine_Duncan_Brown

In early 1959, as Hawai‘i’s statehood was approaching, John A. Burns, Hawai‘i’s Territorial Delegate to Congress, and the then- Senate Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson, both agreed that the East-West Center was an idea whose time had come. Senator Johnson first publicly suggested the concept of an international center during a speech at the American Society of Newspaper Editors in Washington, DC on April 16, 1959. He proposed that the nation establish an international university in Hawai‘i “as a meeting place for intellectuals of the East and West.” In order to implement this concept, on June 9, 1959 Senator Johnson introduced a bill in the Senate to establish “a Center for Cultural and Technical Interchange Between East and West in Hawaii.” An identical bill was introduced into the House of Representatives on behalf of John Burns. Congress then passed P.L. 86-108 on July 24, 1959, which included an amendment calling for the Secretary of State to prepare a plan for the establishment of the Center.

The East-West Center was established by the United States Congress in 1960 as a national educational institution to foster better relations and understanding among the peoples of the United States, Asia, and the Pacific islands through programs of cooperative study, training, and research. https://www.eastwestcenter.org/about-ewc/origins

With the US Senate and House of Representatives passing the legislation sought to created various aid groups and peace initiatives their usage becomes part of CIA plans in independent nations the USA and Great Britain wish to subvert and overthrow.

Listen to the full documentary Jo Chandler tells the story of how The Sound of Music found its way to remote Papua New Guinea. An album with photos of Maria Agatha Franziska Gobertina von Trapp in Papua New Guinea. Papua New Guineans are enthusiastic worshippers and love to sing. Their choirs are full-throttle and often fabulous. But this one was something else.

We have been taught to (and I used to) disbelieve "birther" and so this topic is difficult to introduce and thus I usually now after my research and rethinking this only ask others to rethink it after first hand accounts and CIA accounts and looking back at publicly reported and known facts of history and realizing the deeper theory includes a fake birth certificate in Kenya (should the CIA have wished a Kenya future for the son of Obama Sr. rather than a US life and future.

My ConspiracyTheory includes Birther. My verion of it is that in 1926 Maria Kutchera delived biological children of hers and Albert of York or Edward of Wales into the USA. Much later in Indonesia she awaited her grand-child Barrack Obama Jr. born w Glorian DNA and a November 18, 1961 birth. Lots of fake identifications were created contemporary with is birth in that year with various said birth lineages, in Kenay and Obama Sr. that the British wanted since 1902, Indonesia since WWII especially and planned for in 1957 and 1958, and with Malcom X writing of Obama Jr being born and an open question if Obama Jr might be alleged as his son going into Mecca Saudi Arabia, or Marlin Monroe might be his mother if the CIA asked and he would become a Hollywood star. What did or would the CIA want of him and where? His family was all CIA connected.

Jospeh Kennedy Sr (a Kingmaker closely connected to joint Anglo-American and Supreme Allied planning for the post WII Cold War is said to have participate in this manner to help gain Indonesia back via an Agent of Influence who would grow up there.

Col Prouty

In 1950 he transferred to Colorado Springs to build Air Defense Command. From 1952 to 1954 he was assigned to Korean War duties in Japan, where he served as Military Manager for Tokyo International Airport (Haneda) during the post-war U.S. occupation.

In 1955 he was assigned to the coordination of operations between the fledgling U.S. Air Force and the CIA.[1] As a result of a CIA commendation for this work he was awarded the Legion of Merit by the U.S. Air Force, promoted to colonel, and assigned to the Office of the Secretary of Defense.[citation needed]

Following the creation of the Defense Intelligence Agency and termination of the OSO by Secretary Robert McNamara, Prouty was transferred to the Office of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and charged with the creation a similar organization on a global scale.

From 1962 to 1963 he served as Chief of Special Operations with the Joint Staff. In an chance encounter with Edward Lansdale in the hallways of the Pentagon, a “month or two before” the assassination (as Prouty tells it), Lansdale informed Prouty he had arranged for him [Prouty] to accompany a group of VIPs to the South Pole from November 10 to 23, in the capacity of Military Escort officer.

The ostensible purpose of the trip was the activation of a nuclear power plant at the United States Navy Base at McMurdo Sound, Antarctica, to provide heat, light, and sea water desalination.[citation needed] Prouty later described his confusion at the unusual assignment, but he expected the job to be a “paid vacation” and accepted the task.

Prouty retired in 1964 as a colonel in the U.S. Air Force. As recognition of his long and distinguished career in the service of his country, he was awarded one of the first three Joint Service Commendation Medals by General Maxwell D. Taylor, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff

Charles Pearre Cabell (October 11, 1903 - May 25, 1971) was a United States Air Force general and Deputy Director of the Central Intelligence Agency (1953-1962) and likely also knew

James Paul Donegan my father more on James Paul Donegan and he kennedys and Prouty much later.

Charles P. Cabell was born in Dallas, Texas on October 11, 1903, the son of Ben E. (son of Confederate general William L. Cabell) and Sadie E. (Pearre) Cabell.[1][2] He attended Oak Cliff High School in Dallas, Texas, and graduated from West Point in 1925.[2][3] He was initially commissioned as an artillery lieutenant and served in the field artillery until 1931, when he went to flying school, and was transferred to the Air Corps.

In February 1942, Cabell was assigned as assistant executive for technical planning and coordination in the Office of the Chief of the Air Corps, and promoted to colonel. During the summer of 1943, he attended the first course of the Army and Navy Staff College. In late 1943, he was transferred to the Eighth Air Force and assumed command of the 45th Combat Bombardment Wing. In April 1944, he became director of plans for the U.S. Strategic Air Force in Europe, and later that year, having achieved the rank of brigadier general, became director of operations and intelligence for the Mediterranean Air Forces. During the war he served both at air force headquarters at the Pentagon and in the European Theater.

In May 1945, he was assigned to Air Force headquarters as chief of the Strategy and Policy Division. In December 1945, he was detailed to the United Nations Military Staff Committee, where he held roles as deputy and chief U.S. Air Force delegate to the committee. In August 1947, he was promoted major general and returned to Air Force headquarters, serving in planning and intelligence roles, and became director of Air Force Intelligence in May 1948. In 1949, Cabell set up Project Grudge to “make a study reviewing the UFO situation for AF HQ.” However, Grudge quickly became all but moribund, while simultaneously reporting that all UFO cases were being closely investigated. When Cabell learned of this, he ordered Grudge dissolved and ordered that the “open minded”[4] Project Blue Book be created.

He held this director of Air Force Intelligence post until 1951, before being made director of the staff for the Joint Chiefs of Staff from November 1951 to 1953. During this time, he was promoted to lieutenant general.[citation needed] In 1952, he was an enthusiastic promoter of the U-2 spy plane, along with Allen Welsh Dulles and John Foster Dulles.

CIA career

On April 23, 1953, while still an active air force officer, he was appointed Deputy Director of the CIA under Allen Dulles. In 1956, along with the CIA's Richard Bissell, he flew to Bonn, to brief the West German Chancellor, Konrad Adenauer, on the ultra-secret U-2 spy plane. Cabell personally negotiated with Chancellor Adenauer for permission to station the U-2 in Wiesbaden and from there to fly over the Soviet Union illegally. It was the U-2 program that allowed CIA chief Allen Dulles to sabotage the peace summit between Khrushchev and Eisenhower.

Cabell was promoted to full general in 1958[6] and retired from active duty effective January 31, 1962.

Cabell was forced to resign as deputy director by President Kennedy on January 31, 1962, following the failure of the Bay of Pigs Invasion.[8] Cabell's brother, Earle Cabell, was Mayor of Dallas when Kennedy visited that city and was assassinated, on November 22, 1963.

JFK assassination

One hypothesis regarding the assassination of U.S. President John F. Kennedy implicates Cabell and several other CIA officials, including James Jesus Angleton and William King Harvey, as well as the "three tramps", and Cabell's brother Earle Cabell.

Recalling Again Lisa Pease on the murder of RFK

A LIE TOO BIG TO FAIL - The Real History of the Assassination of ROBERT F. KENNEDY retrieved from Amazon Kindle Edition and copied or modified to here

By Lisa Pease (a Bernie Sanders nutjob in r/l but first tier of 5 people JFK RFK researcher)

The morning of the primary, June 4, 1968, Robert Kennedy slept in. The day before, Kennedy had campaigned in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Long Beach, Watts, San Diego, and Los Angeles again. He had covered 1,200 miles in 12 hours before spending the night at the Malibu beachfront home of John Frankenheimer.

The choice of Frankenheimer would prove ironic. Frankenheimer had directed the film The Manchurian Candidate (1962 film release based on the 1959 novel by Robert Condon), in which a U.S. soldier is captured in Manchuria, hypnotized by Communists, and sent back to the U.S. to be used as a mind-controlled assassin. Before the next 24 hours were over, a consultant to that film would suggest on the radio that Robert Kennedy's assailant had been hypnotically programmed. Shortly before his death, that consultant would also claim to have been the assailant's hypnotist.

In Suite 511 of the Ambassador Hotel, Kennedy and his aides strategized. Senator George McGovern called from South Dakota to give Kennedy an update on the primary results there. McGovern told him that Kennedy had received more votes than Humphrey and McCarthy combined. He had won both the Native Americans' and the farmers votes.

Down the hall, in Suite 516, Pete Hamill, Jack Newfield, Budd Schulberg, Jimmy Breslin, John Frankenheimer and another 25 or so members of the press gathered. "There were no laptops, or cell phones, or BlackBerrys, or cable-television news either. So telephones rang insistently in the suite, were picked up, and names were called in stage whispers," Hamill recalled. Hamill talked for a while to Frankenheimer about his film The Manchurian Candidate.

"Do you think it could happen in what is laughingly called 'real life'?" Hamill asked.

Frankenheimer smiled nervously as he glanced at the suite' door. "Yeah."

In 1956, when President Sukarno of Indonesia came to visit the United States, Scott McLeod of the State Department contacted Maheu and asked him to vet hookers for Sukarno from a security standpoint under the CIA's Project Harpstar. Maheu said this was done to "please" Sukarno, but no doubt this was also an attempt to compromise him with photographs and other material for potential blackmail. The problem was, Sukarno's appetite for women was part of his appeal to a segment of the public in Indonesia. A little over a year later, according to Maheu, he got a call from Sheffield Edwards at CIA, the security offcer who oversaw the Bluebird and ARTICHOKE CIA mind control programs. Edwards wanted Maheu to perform another operation relative to Sukarno. Evidently, the Soviets supplied Sukarno with prostitutes too, but one of them was a KGB agent. Edwards was initially asked to contact Maheu by the CIA's Far East Division.

On June 15 , Jack Hooper told Meier "that he was speaking with Bob Maheu and I was never to mention his name or Bel Air Patrol!" What was so sensitive about the Bel Air Patrol?

The answer came not from Meier's diary but from something Carl McNabb, a former CIA operative, had told me long ago. McNabb had told me that he had learned there was some association prior to the assassination between Maheu and Thane Cesar from the time when Cesar had worked for Maheu at Bel Air Patrol. I could never confirm this, as Bel Air Patrol refused to share its records. But a CIA document (discussing the granting of QKENCHANT clearance to Maheu's son Peter) confirms that Maheu was, in fact, one of the owners of Bel Air Patrol.

Given that he and Hooper owned a number of security firms together, it seemed likely that Hooper too shared the ownership. If there had been a prior connection between Thane Cesar, Hooper and Maheu through Bel Air Patrol, that would have connected the dots for serious researchers very quickly.

It makes sense, then, that Meier would be scared into silence with threats from both Maheu and Hooper. It also might explain why on my first trip to see Meier, Maheu called Meier out of the blue and asked if he needed anything. Meier thought it was so odd that Maheu would have called that day, after not having talked to him for ten years.

On that trip, Meier told me that J. Edgar Hoover had said he knew that Robert Maheu was behind the assassination of Robert Kennedy. In the years after that first trip, I had come to believe Maheu, due to his connections listed earlier, was a credible candidate for the assassination plot's mastermind.

Meier was not the only person to assert that Maheu was behind the assassination. Researcher Steve Gaal gave me another source. His father, a WWII veteran, had been an electrician for the City of Los Angeles, working often at the "Glass House," the nickname for the LAPD's

Parker Center. "Sometime between 1977 and 1979," Gaal wrote me:

"Dad and I were talking about the Vietnam War at our house in Highland Park. I said that if RFK had been elected history would have been different. Dad said maybe that was so. Dad then said that he had talked to the detectives at the Glass House and that they had told him Maheu had done it. Dad was a big gossip with hard right wing views. That the detectives talked to Dad is for myself very believable."

Thane Cesar It's hard to overstate the significance of finding a current or future CIA contract agent holding Kennedy's right arm at the moment of the shooting. Recall how one witness felt someone was "holding" Kennedy in place while someone else shot him in the head. But if that was Cesar's only role, why did he, by his own admission, draw his gun?

He claimed he didn't fire it, but he did admit to drawing it. The more reasonable supposition is that Cesar held Kennedy long enough for someone to get off a shot or two to his head, while Cesar fired three shots into Kennedy from behind and to the right-the very position where Cesar was standing.

It makes much less sense that Cesar fired all four or five shots into Kennedy. He would have been much more exposed for a head shot. Cesar's body, however, could have hidden his gun from anyone not looking in that exact spot at the moment while Sirhan was quite obviously pulling focus. Another source for a connection between Thane Cesar and the security arm of the Hughes organization can be found in the book The Assassination Chain. Sybil Leek, one of the authors, saw Cesar in Las Vegas in the company of a "hit man for a Florida group".

[The hit man] always seemed to be near a sturdy, well-> built and quite interesting-looking man, but they never spoke. So I asked my Las Vegas friend who this other man was. "He's a professional bodyguard," he replied; and I remarked that I was looking for a bodyguard myself, he would fit the bill perfectly. "You are too late," said my friend. "He is owned by Howard Hughes and his name is Thane Cesar and he is as tough as they Cesar was apparently not the bodyguard for the hit man, however, as Cesar left the room first and the hit man followed. Perhaps he was simply hanging out with a coworker.

I Edward Donegan will show in the chapter Indonesia Kenya Obama's 1958 that under V.P. Nixon and Bissle Jr., Lansdale, and others operations for Kenya were already underway before JFK become president but while he was a US Sentator and aware of Joseph Kennedy Sr.'s plans with Great Britain.

https://justiceforrfk.com/the-investigation.html

As the shooting began, security guard Thane Eugene Cesar was standing behind and slightly to the right of Kennedy, in the exact firing position described by the autopsy. Several witnesses observed Cesar drawing his weapon and one witness saw him fire. He was interviewed within hours by the LAPD but they never checked his gun. Cesar claimed he was carrying a .38 caliber revolver that night but he also owned a .22 caliber revolver at the time. Cesar later lied saying he had sold the .22 four months prior to the assassination but the sales receipt proved he actually sold it three months afterwards. He also told the buyer it had been involved in a "police shooting."

Thane Eugene Cesar held extreme right-wing views, supported George Wallace for President and openly admitted hating the Kennedys. At that time, he was working at Lockheed, home of the U-2 spy plane, with a high-level security clearance from the Department of Defense. A week before the assassination, he took a part-time job working evenings as a security guard for Ace Guard Service. Kennedy was assassinated on Cesar's second assignment.

ClandesTime 252 - Robert Maheu: The CIA's Fixer In Hollywood - Spy Culture. The Mafia. Hollywood starlets. Foreign leaders. Fake sex tapes. Illegal surveillance. Watergate. The CIA. And Howard Hughes. Robert Maheu's life had it all. In this episode we take a look at the life and times of a CIA contract agent who touches on many important 20th century events, and provided the inspiration for one of the world's most well known TV shows.

Bob was born on October 30th 1917 in Maine, to parents of French Canadian descent, hence the surname Maheu. He studied at the Jesuit College of the Holy Cross before moving on to Georgetown to study law. At this point, in 1941, he was hired by the FBI to work in counter-intelligence, hunting Nazis and so on. He left the FBI in 1947 and founded a company called Dairy Dream Products, presumably selling ice cream. This resulted in bankruptcy in 1952, and so he re-entered government work with the Small Business Administration. In 1954 he was forced to resign from the SBA due to political reasons, which a CIA biography of Maheu says were 'determined to be the result of backing the wrong political party in the election.'

He responded to this setback by setting up his own private detective firm, Robert A Maheu and Associates, in Washington DC. His first steady client was the CIA, whose documents refer to the firm by the acronym RAMA. They used Maheu and others as a cut-outs - contract agents used to make contact with people and carry out missions that the CIA proper cannot be caught talking to or doing. They were stupid enough to write a lot of this down, but many of those documents only became available in recent years via CREST and the JFK disclosures.

Frank Wisner, OPC's first Director, planned a counter demonstration. He had gathered his own roster of intellectuals, artists and writers, all anti- communists. OPC would need funding for the plan and Wisner knew just where to get it.

Frank Wisner is forced out then commits suicide. Richard Bisslr Jr. is moved into Deputy Director of Plans for CIA but will be fired by JFK over MK-ULTRA overthrow plans along with Allen Dulles and Allen Dulles and Charles Cabell.

Now more about the CIA. Wisner began his intelligence career in the Office of Strategic Services in World War II. After the war, he headed the Office of POSS olicy Coordination (OPC), one of the successor organizations, from 1948 to 1950. In 1950, the OPC was placed under the Central Intelligence Agency and renamed the Directorate of Plans. First headed by Allen Dulles, Wisner succeeded Dulles in 1951 when Dulles was named Director of Central Intelligence. Wisner remained as Deputy Director of Plans (DDP) until September 1958, playing an important role in the early history of the CIA. He suffered a breakdown in 1958, and retired from the Agency in 1962. He committed suicide in 1965. [According to Col Fletcher Prouty many at the time questioned the firing of Frank Wisner.]

Col Fletcher Prouy's first paragraph following his reprint to the letter to Ford from Mrs. Sukarno of Indonesia

> A letter from one of the most beautiful women in the world lies buried in a stack of mail on President Ford's desk. Written in Paris on July 24, 1975, by Dewi Sukarno, the former First Lady of Indonesia and widow of Dr. Achmed Sukarno, the charismatic Father of Indonesia, the letter is an appeal to President Ford for a complete explanation of the CIA-led and supported rebellions that took place in Indonesia in 1958 and 1965.

It is not well known in the United States that the 1958 rebellion led to a major Indonesian civil war. The CIA-inspired uprising in Indonesia, unlike the Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba, was a full-scale military operation. The Bay of Pigs invasion in 1961 was made by a thin brigade of about 1,500 Cuban exiles trained by the CIA in Guatemala. But the 1958 Indonesian action involved no less than 42,000 CIA-armed rebels supported by a fleet of bombers and vast numbers of four-engine transport aircraft as well as submarine assistance from the U.S. Navy. It also involved a major training and logistical supporting effort on the part of the Philippines, Okinawa, Taiwan, and Singapore. But despite this massive armed force, the 1958 rebellion, like the Bay of Pigs invasion, was a total failure. Sukarno's army drove the rebels on Sumatra and Celebes into the sea.

There are some who might call the 1965 uprising a success. At least the rebels were not driven into the sea. However, for the United States it was a fantastically costly endeavor. The rebellion ended in the most massive and ruthless bloodbath since World War II. While the headlines in the United States dealt with the slaughter in Vietnam, the press of the rest of the world heaped blame on the United States for the barbaric massacre in Indonesia. The victorious new government of General Suharto proceeded to assassinate nearly one million people. This terrible slaughter and the ensuing imprisonment of tens of thousands of Indonesians stirred Dewi Sukarno to seek President Ford's assistance in gaining the release of her countrymen from prison.

Dewi Sukarno has received no answer. But even without a reply she knows. The silence from > Washington speaks for itself. A denial, if true, would have come without hesitation. The Indonesians know. The Latins had a phrase for it, "Is fecit cui prodest" -- the perpetrator of a crime is he who profits by it. Today, major U.S. enterprises are plundering the raw material wealth of Indonesia -- rubber, tin, and oil -- in a manner that is more vile than what is happening in Chile. And there is no one to stop them.

>
> Achmed Sukarno was one of those rare men who rose during the hours of crisis to unite one hundred million people and lead them out of the ashes of World War II. Sukarno came to liberate his country from the Japanese, the Dutch, the Portuguese, and from all others who were ready to enslave his country once again. He established his government on the "Five Pillars": (l) belief in one supreme God (2) just and civilized humanity (3) unity of Indonesia (4) democracy (5) social justice.

In Greater Details as I quote Prouty (a Donegan family friend I knew) in detail from his published works on the CIA assasianting JFK

What is not generally known about the complex Indonesian struggle is the role that was played by the then Vice President of the United States, Richard M. Nixon, and the bitter aftermath that involved the sudden ouster of Allen Dulles' protege, Frank Wisner, who at that time was the head of the clandestine arm of the CIA.

After Watergate, when Anthony Lukas wrote in his book Nightmare, about the growing mistrust between Nixon and the Director of Central Intelligence, Richard Helms, he could have added that since the 1958 Indonesian rebellion there were many in the CIA who made a career of hating Nixon because of what he had done to Frank Wisner, among others.

The Indonesian campaign began rather casually as so many CIA ventures do. Few if any ever originate at the top.

During an unguarded conversation in Washington the Indonesian military attache mentioned earlier made it known to certain U.S. military acquaintances that there were many prominent and strong people in Indonesia who would be ready to rise against Sukarno if they were given a little support and encouragement from the United States. It happened that one of those U.S. military friends he talked to was not a military man at all, but a member of the CIA. The provocative words got back to Frank Wisner, then the Deputy Director of Plans. He was in charge of the CIA's clandestine activity and he authorized agents to follow up on that first conversation.

The Indonesian attache was wined and dined and encouraged to talk more. Reasons for the attache's return to Indonesia on official business were successfully arranged. He was accompanied by CIA agents traveling under the cover of "U.S. military" personnel. During this visit they spoke with rebel leaders. They learned enough about the potential strength of this opposition to encourage the CIA to set in motion its biggest operation up to that date.

In the Philippines there was a strong nucleus of military men, chief among them a Colonel Valeriano, who had been President Magsaysay's military assistant. He had also worked on paramilitary exercises with the CIA during the Magsaysay campaign against the leftist rebel Huk movement. This military group had gained considerable power during the Magsaysay tenure. Many of these special warfare experts from the Philippines had volunteered for duty in South Vietnam in 1955 when the CIA was deeply involved in providing undercover support for the new and uncertain regime of President Ngo Dinh Diem.

By early 1958 these Filipinos and their CIA counterparts were prepared to involve the Philippines in the rebellion against Sukarno by setting up special warfare "Green Beret" training bases and by providing the Indonesian revolutionary council with clandestine air bases. One of those bases was on Palawan, the most western island of the Philippine archipelago, in the vicinity of the airfield at Puerto Princessa on Honda Bay. The other base was on the big southern island of Mindanao, near Davao Gulf.

Concurrently, in Washington, operations were being organized. Frank Wisner took over direct command of the everyday operations of the Indonesian project. A large staff under Desmond Fitzgerald of the Far East Division was set up. The most active element of this special staff came from the CIA's clandestine Air Division which at that time was under the control of Dick Helms. As the plans expanded for this major undertaking, requirements for military equipment, people, aircraft, weapons, bases, submarines, and communications skyrocketed.

In the Pentagon there are thousands of nondescript offices in which all sorts of tasks are done. One of these unobtrusive offices was an Air Force Plans Division office. One day in 1958 two men from the CIA entered that office. After being identified they were permitted entrance to an interior office that was the "Focal Point" office for all U.S. Air Force Support of the clandestine operations of the CIA. I had established that office in 1955 on orders from Gen. Thomas D. White, then Chief of Staff of the Air Force. This came about after several meetings with Allen W. Dulles, the Director of Central Intelligence, and others. When the CIA men entered that office in 1958, I was still in charge.

The agents outlined the Indonesian Plan, the Philippine support and training program, and told me about their own special operations staff that had been put together specifically for this vast project. Then they urgently requested light bombardment aircraft and long-range transport aircraft. We decided to take a number of twin engine B-26 aircraft out of mothball storage, put them through a retrofit line, and modify them so that they could be armed with a special 50-caliber machine gun package of eight guns, in the nose of the plane.

This would give the B-26 more firepower than it ever had during the Korean War or World War II. The project was given top priority and covered in deep secrecy. Programs for pilot training and the recruitment of “mercenaries” were established.

Concurrent with our work the CIA was putting together a “wartime” operational staff. Lt. Gen. Earl Barnes, who had been a senior air commander during World War II under Gen. Douglas MacArthur, was brought in to run all clandestine air activities.

At that time Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer was Commander in Chief of the Ryukyu Command on Okinawa. One day he received a call from General David M. Shoup, the U.S. Marine Commander on Okinawa, asking if the Army could spare 14,000 rifles for a Marine requirement. Surprised at the Marine request for such a large order of guns, Lemnitzer acquiesced nonetheless and ordered the transfer of these weapons on the condition that they would be quickly replaced.

High on the ridge line of central Okinawa overlooking the city of Naha there was a modest size “Army” installation that hustled with considerable activity. This was the main CIA operational base in the Far East. It was under the direction of Ted Shannon, one of the Agency’s most powerful agents. It was Shannon’s office that had actually requested 42,000 rifles from General Shoup and since the order was so large Shoup had been unable to supply them, and had therefore borrowed 14,000 from the Army.

On nearby Taiwan, the CIA had another large facility - a “Navy” base known as the Naval Auxiliary Communication Center (NACC). This “Comm Center” controlled a large and very active air base a few miles south of Taiwan’s capital, Taipei, and the huge Air America facilities near Taipei and the city of Tainan.

The B-26 bombers were ready to fly and a special ferrying arrangement was made with the Air Force to fly them across the Pacific to the Philippines and Menado.

Rebel Indonesians, trained and equipped in the Philippines, were returned to Sumatra. Some were air-dropped and others landed on the beach from submarines that the U.S. Navy was operating, in support of the CIA, in the oceans south of Indonesia near the Christmas Islands.

The war was on.

On Feb. 9, 1958, rebel Colonel Maluddin Simbolon issued an ultimatum in the name of a provincial government, the Central Sumatran Revolutionary Council, calling for the formation of a new central government. Sukarno refused and called upon his loyal army commander, General Abdul Haris Nasution, to destroy the rebel forces. By Feb. 21 loyal forces had been airlifted to Sumatra and had begun the attack. The rebel headquarters was in the southern coastal city of Padang. Rebel strongholds stretched all the way to Medan, near the northern end of the island and not far from Malaysia.

This was important administratively because by that time Frank Wisner, the CIA Deputy Director of Plans, had set up his forward headquarters in Singapore and at the direction of the 5412 Committee of the National Security Council, headed by Nixon, Wisner occupied that faraway headquarters himself. (It should be noted that in 1958 Allen Dulles was the head of the CIA, his brother John Foster Dulles was the Secretary of State, Eisenhower was President, and Nixon, as Vice President, chaired the clandestine affairs committee, then known as the "Special Group 5412/2." In other words nothing was done in Indonesia that was not directed by Nixon. If an action had not been directed by the NSC, then it was done unlawfully by the CIA.)

In 1958 Allen Dulles would have brought such a major operation to the attention of the Special Group and he would operate with its approval. This was an essential step in national policy because it then empowered the Department of Defense to provide the necessary support requested by the CIA. Much of this fell within the area of my responsibility at Air Force Headquarters, and I was kept informed on a regular basis of approved action and of Nixon's keen interest in this project.

The rebellion flared sporadically from one end of Indonesia to the other.

While the CIA was supporting up to 100,000 rebels, the State Department professed innocence. The U.S. ambassador, Howard P. Jones, maintained that the United States had nothing to do with the rebellion and he protested the capture of the American oil properties. On the other hand, Sukarno had asked for more arms aid from the United States. He must have had strong suspicions about the source of rebel support. The vast number of guns, the bombers and heavy air transport aircraft dropping hundreds of tons of arms and equipment, as well as submarines supporting beach operations were just too sophisticated to be anything but major power ploys. Thus, his appeal for U.S. arms aid had the ring of gamesmanship.

Playing along with the game, John Foster Dulles issued a statement saying that the United States would not provide arms to either side. And while he was publishing that falsehood, the United States furnished and piloted B-26 bombers, and these were bombing shipping in the Makassar Straits. Some had even flown as far south as the Java Sea. Almost immediately all insurance rates on shipping to and from Indonesia went on a wartime scale and costs became so prohibitive that most shipping actually ceased. The bombing attacks, kept so quiet in the United States that they hardly made the news, were being viewed with great alarm by the rest of the world. What was "Top Secret" in Washington was barroom gossip in the capitals of the world.

While Wisner communicated with Washington clandestinely, anyone in the bar at the Raffles Hotel in Singapore, in the Peninsula Hotel in Kowloon, or even on the streets of Istanbul, could learn all about the "American CIA attack" on Sukarno.

The CIA was demanding so much support for its far-flung operations that a top-level committee was established in the Pentagon. Its purpose was to keep track of how much war equipment was being requested and sent to Indonesia. Not unlike the Lemnitzer-Shoup rifle problem, there were problems in the Pentagon because of the way the CIA requested equipment through phony “military” cover channels.

Early in this operation I had put some men from my office into the air-combat section in the Philippines, and the Air Force was reasonably well aware of what was going on. But that was not so for the other services. At the time, Admiral Arleigh Burke was the Chief of Naval Operations. He went one step further than we did. At the height of the rebel operations, Burke sent his Chief of Naval Intelligence, Admiral Luther Frost, to Jakarta, Indonesia’s capital, where he stayed for several months carrying on a delicate relationship with the American ambassador and with the Indonesian naval chiefs. This, while U.S. Navy submarines were aiding the rebels south of Sumatra. It turned out to have been a masterful gambit because later, when the rebellion collapsed, the U.S. Navy was able to declare innocence. The Air Force was not so fortunate.

The pretense that the U.S. Government was in no way involved in this massive civil war against Sukarno was wearing thin. It was a reasonable cover as long as the United States could plausibly deny its role in the action. But one day, a lone B-26 out of the rebel CIA base at Menado, flying low over the Straits of Makassar, came upon an Indonesian ship - an ideal target. The pilot banked to take a good run at the ship and began strafing it with those eight lethal .50-caliber machine guns. He was committed to the attack before he found out that the freighter was armed. The B-26 was hit and it ditched near the ship. The pilot, an American named Allan Lawrence Pope, was picked up. Pope was identified as a former U.S. Air Force pilot. The cork was out of the bottle. Sukarno had his proof of U.S. involvement and he played his ace card for an international audience. That one plane and that one pilot cost the U.S. Government tens of millions of dollars in ransom and tribute during the next several years.

After the capture of Pope the rebellion rapidly fell apart. Loyal forces captured Donggala in central Celebes. And on far away Halmahera, government forces captured Jailolo. That ended all opposition except for the CIA-rebel air base at Menado. With the rebellion all but crushed, except for the continued existence of the main CIA force, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles ended the embargo of arms to Sukarno and agreed to send aid to the government of Indonesia! What wondrous duplicity! And Sukarno was not fooled. His forces had been fighting a major civil war inspired and clandestinely supported by the United States, while concurrently the overt branches of the U.S. Government acted as though nothing at all had happened.

By the end of June 1958 it was all over. Then a very strange and rare (rare in terms of normal bureaucracy) thing happened. During the months of this operation it had been my custom to visit the CIA special operations center.

One morning I caught the unmarked, dull-green CIA shuttle bus at the Pentagon and rode to the operations center. I went in. Not a soul was there. The place had been cleaned out. Office after office was absolutely bare. Finally I found one secretary. She was sitting in a straight-back chair and her telephone was on the floor. There were tears in her eyes. She took a call from time to time and gave guarded answers about the former members of that huge staff. The entire section had been scattered to the four corners of the world. A large number of top-level, experienced, clandestine agents and operators had vanished. It took our Air Force office, skilled as we were in the ways of the CIA, months to find some of them again.

Then we began to piece together what had happened. With the collapse of such a major effort and with the inability of the Government to deny plausibly before the world its role in the whole sordid affair, blame had to be placed somewhere. In an unprecedented action, Nixon had summarily fired Frank Wisner, along with some others. But Frank Wisner, a longtime OSS and CIA man, was a key intelligence officer. Few knew enough about his career to realize that he was senior, by far, to Helms and Colby. Clearly, he was Allen Dulles' heir apparent.

When the OSS had been deactivated after World War II by President Truman, it was Wisner who had kept a tight-knit band of professionals together. This small cadre kept valuable OSS records and, more importantly, they had maintained the delicate lines of communication with agents, spies, and underground personnel in Eastern Europe, Russia, and Germany. They held this fragile web together. Without them hundreds of people might have been killed and priceless assets destroyed. And Frank Wisner suddenly, almost whimsically, had been fired.

To a man, the Agency was aroused by this action. Rightly or wrongly, they hated Nixon for this. I remember being at meetings during which the name of Nixon would be mentioned and I have seen CIA men bristle and redden as though someone had let a poisonous snake loose in the room. Some vowed he would never become President.

Meanwhile the Agency moved to pull itself together. That one deft bloodbath appeared to end things. There was no Board of Inquiry as there was after the Bay of Pigs. And, remarkably, there was no public outcry as there would be a few years later after the U-2 scandal. The agency was busy sweeping things under the rug.

Meanwhile those special B-26s were all flown back to the States and based at Elgin Air Force Base in Flonda. That was late in 1958. By 1959 they began to stir again. A man named Castro had come to power in Cuba. During those fateful days in April 1961 it was those same B-26s that the CIA used to attack Cuba.

The Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. Foundation is a non-profit foundation founded by Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy Sr. in 1946 in memory of his son Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. The foundation was led by his youngest brother, U.S. Senator Edward M. Kennedy, until his death in 2009. Wikipedia

The Ford Foundation is one of the most important “private foundations” collaborating with the CIA over a significant span of time in major projects in the cultural Cold War.

“At times it seemed as if the Ford Foundation was simply an extension of government in the area of international cultural propaganda. The foundation had a record of close involvement in covert actions in Europe, working closely with Marshall Plan and CIA officials on specific projects”

Frances Stonor Saunders, a noted scholar of the Cold War writes: “At times it seemed as if the Ford Foundation was simply an extension of government in the area of international cultural propaganda. The foundation had a record of close involvement in covert actions in Europe, working closely with Marshall Plan and CIA officials on specific projects”.

The leaders of the Foundation were in total agreement with Washington’s post-WWII projection of world domination, and they had over 3 billion in assets, a lot of money in 1950.

This is graphically illustrated by the naming of Richard Bissell as President of the Foundation in 1952. In his two years in office Bissell met often with the head of the CIA, Allen Dulles, and other CIA officials in a “mutual search” for new ideas. In 1954 Bissell left Ford to become a special assistant to Allen Dulles in January 1954. https://wikispooks.com/wiki/The_Ford_Foundation and https://www.voltairenet.org/article166741.html

An earlier CIA Current Intelligence Weekly Summary, secret, and dated April 3, 1958, states that Mboya [of Kenya] “still appears to be the most promising of the African leaders.” Another CIA weekly summary, secret and dated December 18, 1958, calls Mboya the Kenyan nationalist an “able and dynamic young chairman” of the People’s Convention party who was viewed as an opponent of “extremists” like Nkrumah, supported by “Sino-Soviet representatives.”

The CIA allegedly recruited Tom M’Boya in a heavily funded "selective liberation" programme to isolate Kenya’s founding President Jomo Kenyatta, whom the American spy agency labelled as "unsafe."

CIA files indicate that Mboya was an important agent-of-influence for the CIA, not only in Kenya but in all of Africa. A formerly Secret CIA Current Intelligence Weekly Summary, dated November 19, 1959, states that Mboya served as a check on extremists at the second All-African People’s Conference (AAPC) in Tunis. The report states that “serious friction developed between Ghana’s Prime Minister Kwame Nkrumah and Kenyan nationalist Tom Mboya who cooperated effectively last December to check extremists at the AAPC’s first meeting in Accra.” The term “cooperated effectively” appears to indicate that Mboya was cooperating with the CIA, which filed the report from field operatives in Accra and Tunis. While “cooperating” with the CIA in Accra and Tunis, Mboya selected the father of the president of the United States to receive a scholarship and be airlifted to the University of Hawaii where he met and married President Obama’s mother.

Mboya received a $100,000 grant for the airlift from the Kennedy Foundation after he turned down the same offer from the U.S. State Department, obviously concerned that direct U.S. assistance would look suspicious to pro-Communist Kenyan politicians who suspected Mboya of having CIA ties. The Airlift Africa project was underwritten by the Kennedy Foundation and the African-American Students Foundation. Obama, Sr. was not on the first airlift but a subsequent one. The airlift, organized by Mboya in 1959, included students from Kenya, Uganda, Tanganyika, Zanzibar, Northern Rhodesia, Southern Rhodesia, and Nyasaland.

Howard Palfrey Jones (January 2, 1899 – September 1973) was a United States diplomat whose career was focused on Southeast and East Asia. Between March 1958 and April 1965, Jones served as the United States Ambassador to Indonesia during the last years of the Sukarno presidency. He was known for his warm friendship and good rapport with President Sukarno, the first President of Indonesia and the country's premier nationalist leader.

Biography

After graduating from the University of Wisconsin he became a newspaper editor in Evansville, Indiana. There, despite threats to Jones from the KKK grand eagle, the newspaper ran an article on KKK-run criminal activities and their control over local police.

Howard Jones served as a colonel in the United States Army during World War II and later worked for the Economic Cooperation Administration after the War. He briefly worked as a journalist before joining the United States Agency for International Development (USAID). Between July 1954 and July 1955, he served in the dual role as the director of the USAID program in Indonesia and the embassy's economic counsellor at the US Embassy in Jakarta. From February 1956 to April 1957, he served as the Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Bureau of Far Eastern Economic Affairs at the State Department's headquarters in Washington, D.C. In addition, Jones also held the position of Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Far Eastern Affairs between May 1957 and February 1958.

In March 1958, Howard Jones was appointed as United States Ambassador to Indonesia, a position which he would hold for the next seven years. Jones played an important role in repairing the damaged caused to United States-Indonesian relations by the Eisenhower Administration's covert support for the failed PRRI/ Permesta regional uprisings in Sumatra and the Celebes. Following the capture of an American pilot Allen Lawrence Pope who was participating in a Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) black op in support of the Permesta rebels, Jones portrayed Pope as an American "paid soldier of fortune" and expressed his regret at the involvement of an American. According to the political scientists and Indonesia experts Audrey Kahin and George McTurnan Kahin, Pope's capture exposed United States support for the PRRI-Permesta rebels and embarrassed the Eisenhower Administration. Ambassador Jones praised the Indonesian government for not seeking to make political capital out of the Popes affair. However, Jones privately expressed anger at his Government for causing the deaths of 700 civilians. The Popes affair contributed to a left-ward drift in Indonesian politics which helped the Indonesian Communist Party (PKI).

Pope on trial in Jakarta, December 1959

Allen Lawrence Pope (October 20, 1928 – April 4, 2020) was an American military and paramilitary aviator. He rose to international attention as the subject of a diplomatic dispute between the United States and Indonesia after the B-26 Invader[a] aircraft he was piloting in a Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) covert operation was shot down over Ambon on May 18, 1958, during the "Indonesian Crisis".

Pope's aviation career began with the United States Air Force, serving with distinction flying bombing missions in the Korean War. He transferred to the CIA in 1954, which he also served with distinction flying transport missions in the First Indochina War.

In the Permesta rebellion in Indonesia in 1958, Pope again flew bombing missions for the CIA. Shot down by government forces, he was captured and held under house arrest for just over four years. In 1960, an Indonesian court condemned him to death, but considerable back-channel negotiations led to his release by President Sukarno in 1962. Pope returned to the United States and subsequently flew CIA covert missions in other theaters.

Biography

Pope was born in Miami, Florida on October 20, 1928. He graduated from the University of Florida, After university, Pope entered the U.S. Air Force and served as a first lieutenant in the Korean War. He flew a Douglas B-26 Invader in combat, receiving three Air Medals and a Distinguished Flying Cross. After the war, the U.S. Air Force returned Pope to the United States as an Air Force instructor.

Điện Biên Phủ

In March 1954, Pope left the U.S. Air Force and joined a CIA front organization, Civil Air Transport (CAT), flying one of its Fairchild C-119 Flying Boxcars to supply French forces besieged in the Battle of Điện Biên Phủ in French Indochina. On March 13, Việt Minh artillery disabled Điện Biên Phủ's airstrip, forcing the French garrison there to be supplied by air drop. CAT pilots flew hundreds of sorties from Cat Bi to Điện Biên Phủ. On May 6, 1954, the day before the French force surrendered, Pope was co-pilot of the lead aircraft in a group of six C-119s that made the last air drop to the besieged garrison. Pope remained with CAT at the end of the First Indochina War that August, initially making civilian charter flights from Taiwan, later from Saigon.

Indonesian crisis

In April 1958, CAT recalled Pope from Saigon to Taiwan and sent him to Clark Air Base in the Philippines, where he was assigned a B-26 Invader that had been painted black and had its markings obscured. His destination was Indonesia, to participate in a covert operation intended to overthrow Communist-leaning president Sukarno and topple his Guided Democracy in Indonesia regime. There he was to link up with Permesta rebels, insurgents led by dissident local army officers.

On April 27, 1958, Pope landed his bomber at Mapanget, a rebel-held Indonesian Air Force base on the Minahassa Peninsula of northern Sulawesi. He joined fellow CAT pilot and former U.S. Air Force officer, William H. Beale, who had been flying a B-26 Invader for Permesta's Angkatan Udara Revolusioner ("Revolutionary Air Force", or AUREV) since April 19.

Pope flew his first AUREV mission on April 27, attacking the government-held island of Morotai in the hours before a Permesta amphibious force successfully landed and took the island. The CIA instructed CAT pilots to target commercial shipping in order to frighten foreign merchant ships away from Indonesian waters, thereby weakening the Indonesian economy and undermining Sukarno's government. On April 28, Pope attacked the government-held province of Central Sulawesi. One source asserts that off the port of Donggala, he bombed and sank three merchant ships: SS Aquila (Italian), SS Armonia (Greek) and SS Flying Lark (registered in Panama). Pope continued the sortie by attacking Palu, the provincial capital city, destroying 22 vehicles in a truck park. Aquila was certainly bombed and sunk by an AUREV aircraft. However, a wreck off Ambon Island, more than 500 miles (800 km) east of Donggala, has now been identified as Aquila. Another source suggests that Aquila was bombed not on April 28 but on May 1 or 2.

On April 29, Pope attacked the government-held province of South East Sulawesi. He struck the Indonesian Air Force base at Kendari, the provincial capital, with 500 lb (230 kg) bombs and machine-gun fire. He then strafed an Indonesian Navy patrol boat, KRI Intana, killing five crew and wounding another 23. On April 30, Pope again attacked Palu and Donggala; sinking a ship, destroying a warehouse and demolishing a bridge. On May 1, Pope attacked the city of Ambon, the provincial capital of Maluku. His four 500 lb bombs missed his waterfront targets and fell in the sea. He then tried a strafing run, but his starboard engine suffered an explosion. Pope aborted the attack and returned to Mapanget.

It took several days for the B-26 to be given a replacement starboard engine. Pope's next sortie was on May 7, when he again attacked the government airbase at Ambon. He seriously damaged a Douglas C-47

Skytrain and a North American P-51 Mustang and caused other damage on the airbase. On May 8, he attacked the Palu area in the morning and Ambon in the afternoon. On Ambon, he bombed and machine-gunned the government-held Liang airbase in the northeast of the island, damaging the runway and destroying a Consolidated PBY Catalina. He then continued to Ambon city where he attacked an Indonesian Navy gunboat at anchor. His bomb missed, but he then attacked with machine-guns, wounding two crew and damaging the gunboat. Since May 1, Beale and his B-26 had been resting at Clark Air Base, leaving Pope's aircraft as AUREV's only active bomber. On May 9, Beale returned to Mapanget, releasing Pope who then took his turn to fly to Clark for several days' leave.

On May 15, Pope attacked a small transport ship, the Naiko, in Ambon Bay. She was a merchant ship that the Indonesian Government had pressed into military service, and was bringing a company of Ambonese troops home from East Java. Pope's bomb hit the Naiko's engine room, killing one crew member and 16 infantrymen and setting the ship on fire. He then attacked Ambon city, aiming for the barracks. His first bomb missed and exploded in a market-place next door. His next landed in the barracks compound, but bounced and exploded near an ice factory. He then returned to Mapanget to find that in his absence, the Indonesian Air Force had bombed the rebel air base, destroying a CIA/AUREV PBY Catalina and damaging a CIA/AUREV P-51 Mustang.

The Indonesian government alleged that Pope's bombing of a marketplace in Ambon city had killed a large number of civilians. This later turned out to be untrue,[citation needed] but in the meantime the U.S. Embassy in Jakarta protested to the United States Department of State, which then warned the CIA team in Manado. The CIA tightened its AUREV pilots' rules of engagement to attacking only airfields and boats. Even military buildings were prohibited.

Capture

By mid-May, Indonesian government forces were planning amphibious counter-attacks on the islands of Morotai and Halmahera that Permesta had captured toward the end of April. This involved assembling a naval and transport fleet in Ambon bay, where ships started to arrive from Java on May 16. At 0300 on May 18, Pope took off from Mapanget to attack Ambon again. He first attacked the airfield, destroying the C-47 and P-51 that he had damaged on May 7. A short distance west of Ambon Bay, he found the invasion fleet, which included two 7,000-ton merchant ships being used as troop transports. One of the transports, the Sawega, was trying to take evasive maneuvers as Pope attacked it; his bomb fell in the sea 40 metres (130 ft) short of its target.

The Indonesian Air Force had one serviceable P-51 Mustang on Ambon, at Liang airbase. When Pope attacked Ambon airfield on May 18, the P-51 flown by Ignatius Dewanto at Liang was scrambled to repel him. Dewanto closed on the B-26 just as Pope was attacking the Sawega. The convoy took both aircraft to be AUREV and fired on both of them. Dewanto also hit the B-26, damaging its starboard wing and the bomber caught fire. Pope and his Permesta radio operator, Jan Harry Rantung, bailed out. As they jumped, the B-26 was entering a sharp dive and the slipstream threw Pope against the tail fin, fracturing his right leg. They landed on the coast of Pulau Hatala, a small island west of Ambon, where a small Indonesian Navy landing party from one of the invasion fleet's minesweepers was put ashore and captured them.

Some 20 other AUREV insurgent aircraft were reported to have been seen with Nationalist Chinese markings obscured by hasty coats of paint. Their pilots were Nationalist Chinese and Americans from CAT.

Trial, conviction and release

U.S. Ambassador Howard P. Jones portrayed Pope as an American "paid soldier of fortune" and expressed his regret at the involvement of an American. However, when he was captured Pope was carrying about 30 incriminating documents, including his flight log, that substantially added to the embarrassment of the Eisenhower administration in the U.S.A.

Pope admitted to flying only one or two missions, but his flight log recorded eight and another source states that he flew a total of 12. Pope "spent the early hours of Sunday, May 18, over Ambon City in eastern Indonesia, sinking a navy ship, bombing a market, and destroying a church. The official death toll was six civilians and seventeen military officers". When Pope was shot down by anti-aircraft fire, he was pursuing a ship carrying one thousand Indonesian troops. "His last bomb missed the troopship by about forty feet, sparing hundreds of lives".

After fracturing his right thigh when bailing out, Pope was held not in prison but under house arrest at the small mountain resort of Kaliurang, where his injury was given "excellent medical attention". He said he felt he was fighting international communism. An Indonesian four-man military court rejected Pope's plea to be considered a prisoner of war. On April 29, 1960, it found him guilty of killing 17 members of Indonesia's armed forces and six civilians and sentenced him to death.

The execution was not carried out, but Pope remained under house arrest. He was used as a bargaining chip in Indonesian negotiations with the United States for arms. He was eventually exchanged with 10 Lockheed C-130

Hercules transport planes. In February 1962, U.S. Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy paid President Sukarno a goodwill visit and pleaded for Pope's release. Sukarno also received a visit from Pope's wife, mother and sister, who all tearfully pleaded for his pardon. On July 2, 1962, Pope was quietly driven to the airport and put on a U.S. plane out of Indonesia. Sukarno told Pope:

> I want no propaganda about it. Now go. Lose yourself in the USA secretly. Don't show yourself publicly. Don't give out news stories. Don't issue statements. Just go home, hide yourself, get lost, and we'll forget the whole thing.

Southern Air Transport

After his release from Indonesian imprisonment in 1962 Pope returned to Miami, where he joined Southern Air Transport (SAT). Like CAT, SAT was a CIA front organization flying covert missions in regions including southeast Asia.

Recognition

On February 24, 2005, France's ambassador to the US, Jean-David Levitte, made the then 76-year-old Pope and six other CAT pilots Chevaliers de la Légion d'Honneur for their service in the Battle of Điện Biên Phủ. In 2005, Pope said of his Vietnam service:

> I'm a communist fighter. I was born and raised to be against the communists.

Of his Indonesian experience in 1958 he had elsewhere observed:

> I enjoyed killing Communists… They said Indonesia was a failure [Al Pope reflected bitterly], but we knocked the shit out of them. We killed thousands of Communists, even though half of them probably didn't even know what Communism meant.

Death

Pope died on April 4, 2020, at the age of 91. He was buried at Arlington National Cemetery.

Following the resignation of John Foster Dulles as Secretary of State in 1959, Howard Jones and his allies gained greater support for their accommodationist policies towards Indonesia in the United States Government. This trend was accelerated during the John F. Kennedy presidency (1961–1963). The Kennedy Administration repaired Washington's relations with Indonesia by helping to broker a peaceful settlement to the West New Guinea dispute in August 1962. In addition, Sukarno cultivated a warm personal relationship with Howard Jones and regarded him as friendly and trustworthy. However, Sukarno still disliked the CIA and believed that the intelligence agency was plotting to overthrow him – a belief that would later be revealed to be well founded. According to another former US diplomat and colleague Edward E. Masters, Howard Jones genuinely believed that Sukarno was a moderate who was not hostile towards the United States but was instead misled by ill-intentioned advisers like the-then Indonesian Foreign Minister Subandrio. This optimistic view was not shared by other American diplomats including Masters and Francis Joseph Galbraith, the Deputy Chief of Mission. Despite these differences, Jones was remembered by his colleagues at the US Embassy in Jakarta as a kind, gentle man who harbored no bitterness.

According to George Kahin, Howard Jones was critical of the CIA's interference in Indonesian politics. The CIA disliked Jones for his conciliatory approach towards President Sukarno and sought to have him replaced by undermining his reputation on charges of being soft on the Indonesian Communists. Jones was also critical of British policies towards the creation of Malaysia; particularly the reluctance of the British authorities to consult their Indonesian and Philippines counterparts and the joint decision of the Malayan Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman and the British Colonial Secretary Duncan Sandys to proceed with the creation of Malaysia on September 16, 1963 without waiting for the United Nations Ascertainment Mission in Sarawak and Sabah to produce their results. However, Jones' criticisms of the British was overruled by the Lyndon B. Johnson Administration, which was unsympathetic to Sukarno's policy of Confrontation with Malaysia.

Ultimately, Howard Jones' efforts to induce a pro-American shift in Indonesian foreign policy failed due to Sukarno's increasing hostility to the West and his rapprochement with the People's Republic of China. On May 24, 1965, Howard Jones returned to the United States and was succeeded by Marshall Green, who abandoned Jones' conciliatory policy towards Sukarno and was present during the Transition to the New Order. In April 1971, Jones published a memoir of his experiences working in Indonesia, called Indonesia: The Possible Dream.

CIA Family Connection-Ann Dunham

Obama's record as president should not have been surprising given his family background.

His mother, Ann Dunham, worked for U.S. government agencies and allied NGOs-the Ford Foundation, Asia Foundation, Development Alternatives Inc., and United States Agency for International Development (USAID)-in Indonesia in the 1960s and 1970s as well as Ghana, Nepal, Bangladesh, Pakistan, India, and Thailand.

Ann had training in the Russian language which, with everything combined, made her a "CIA recruiter's wet dream."[8]

The microfinancing projects that she worked on to help turn traditional craft industries into sustainable businesses were designed to "tether third world masses to the mentality of finance capitalism," as Obama's unauthorized biographer put it.

Dunham's boss at USAID in Indonesia, Dr. Donald Gordon Jr., author of Credit for Small Farmers in Developing Countries for USAID (1976), was identified in Julius Mader's 1968 book, Who Who's in the CIA, as a CIA agent.[9]

Another boss, Peter Geithner, was future Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner's father.

Ann obtained her Bachelor's and Master's degree in anthropology at the University of Hawaii, writing a thesis which argued that Indonesian villagers were dynamic and could produce greater wealth if they had access to market incentives and capital.

Ann went to Indonesia in the mid 1960s at the time that the CIA supported a military coup led by General Suharto against the left-wing regime of Sukarno.

Over two million suspected members of the Indonesian Communist Party (PKI) were rounded up and massacred in its aftermath and thousands more were imprisoned-many for decades.

Much of Ann's anthropological and consulting field work was carried out in East and Central Java, which provided a hotbed of support for the PKI-including among members of the Javanese women's association and labor federation.

The CIA at this time employed anthropologists and development workers as undercover agents to gather information on villagers' political affiliations, in which Ann, according to her thesis adviser, Alice Dewey, had taken an interest.

After her arrival in Indonesia, Dunham taught English at the American Embassy in Jakarta, which also housed one of the largest CIA stations in Asia and had significant satellite stations in Surabaya in eastern Java and Medan on Sumatra.

Dunham also worked for the Indonesian-American Friendship Institute in Jakarta, a suspected CIA front. One of her closest colleagues, Adi Sasono, had been the leader of the Muslim students during the overthrow of Sukarno.

While Ann's recruitment as a CIA agent has never been openly acknowledged, she was among the few U.S. government employees with the language skills and access to fulfill this role effectively. Development projects in the region were explicitly designed to pry villagers away from the PKI orbit, and Ann's work would have contributed to this.

In March 1965, Ann married an Indonesian Lieutenant Colonel, Lolo Soetoro, whom she met at the University of Hawaii's East-West Center, a "kinder, gentler version of the School of the Americas," according to one writer, and "cover for a training program in which Southeast Asians were brought to Hawaii and trained to go back to create agent nets," as U.S. Information Service (USIS) Director Frank Scotten described it.

The head of the East-West Center in 1965 was Howard P. Jones, U.S. ambassador to Indonesia from 1958 to 1965.[10]

Jones was present in Jakarta as Suharto and his CIA-backed military officers planned the 1965 overthrow of Sukarno, who was seen, along with the PKI as an ally of China.

Jones later defended the coup in The Washington Post, writing that Suharto was merely responding to a communist coup against Sukarno led by Colonel Untung-which was actually set up by the CIA.[11]

A friend of Ann's told her biographer that the marriage to Lolo was arranged, suggesting that Ann may have acted as a female "honeypot" for the CIA whose job was to recruit assets and help them obtain U.S. citizenship.

Hailing from an aristocratic family which lost out in Sukarno's land reform, Soetoro was recalled to active duty in July 1965 before General Suharto's right-wing coup and worked as an army geographer in Java and Papua New Guinea, where the Indonesian army brutally suppressed popular revolts.

Soetoro went on to become an executive at Mobil Oil and its liaison to Suharto, whose economic policies Dunham praised.

On October 1, 1943, future president Ricahard Nixon was promoted to lieutenant. Nixon commanded the SCAT forward detachments at Vella Lavella, Bougainville, and finally at Nissan Island.

In October 1942, he was given his first assignment as aide to the commander of the Naval Air Station Ottumwa in Wapello County, Iowa, until May 1943. Seeking more excitement, he requested sea duty; on July 2, 1943, he was assigned to Marine Aircraft Group 25 and the South Pacific Combat Air Transport Command (SCAT), where he supported the logistics of operations in the South Pacific theater during World War II. Ronald M. Walker (Lives in The United Kingdom)

Originally Answered: In World War II, what led to the complaint about the first American troops arriving in England, "overpaid, over sexed, and over here"?

Mistaken premise (very common on Quora!) the complaint about overpaid Americans was first made by the Australians, not by the British. American military leaders in Australia had behaved arrogantly - and sometimes incompetantly - leading to some very bad feeling between Australian and American troops (even to the extent of exchanges of gunfire between them.) One of the nastiest fights in the Pacific Theatre took place on the Kokoda Trail in Papua NewGuinea, to reach which troops needed to climb for miles - and hours - up a narrow track - at forty five degrees - in a continual tropical downpour, carrying with them all they'd need to fight. Kind of like running a marathon in full kit while someone plays a fire-hose on you. Unsurprisingly, they reached the top of the track totally exhausted, and hardly in a condition to fight. Or, as McArthur suggested, They just weren't trying hard enough. Coming from McArthur… no wonder there was resentment at the Johnny-come-latelys.

The Kokoda Track or Trail is a single-file foot thoroughfare that runs 96 kilometres (60 mi) overland - 60 kilometres (37 mi) in a straight line - through the Owen Stanley Range in Papua New Guinea (PNG). The track was the location of the 1942 World War II battle between Japanese and Allied - primarily Australian - forces in what was then the Australian territory of Papua.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Kokoda_Track_campaign

The Kokoda Track campaign or Kokoda Trail campaign was part of the Pacific War of World War II. The campaign consisted of a series of battles fought between July and November 1942 in what was then the Australian Territory of Papua. It was primarily a land battle, between the Japanese South Seas Detachment under Major General Tomitarō Horii and Australian and Papuan land forces under command of New Guinea Force. The Japanese objective was to seize Port Moresby by an overland advance from the north coast, following the Kokoda Track over the mountains of the Owen Stanley Range, as part of a strategy to isolate Australia from the United States.

Japanese forces landed and established beachheads near Gona and Buna on 21 July 1942. Opposed by Maroubra Force, then consisting of four platoons of the 39th Battalion and elements of the Papuan Infantry Battalion, they quickly advanced and captured Kokoda and its strategically vital airfield on 29 July. Despite reinforcement, the Australian forces were continually pushed back. The veteran Second Australian Imperial Force (AIF) 21st Brigade narrowly avoided capture in the Battle of Mission Ridge - Brigade Hill from 6 to 8 September. In the Battle of Ioribaiwa from 13 to 16 September, the 25th Brigade under Brigadier Kenneth Eather fought the Japanese to a halt but ceded the field to the Japanese, withdrawing to Imita Ridge.

The Japanese advanced to within sight of Port Moresby but withdrew on 26 September. They had outrun their supply line and had been ordered to withdraw in consequence of reverses suffered at Guadalcanal. The Australian pursuit encountered strong opposition from well-prepared positions around Templeton's Crossing and Eora Village from 11 to 28 October. Following the unopposed recapture of Kokoda, a major battle was fought around Oivi and Gorari from 4 to 11 November, resulting in a victory for the Australians. By 16 November, two brigades of the Australian 7th Division had crossed the Kumusi River at Wairopi, and advanced on the Japanese beachheads in a joint Australian and United States operation. The Japanese forces at Buna-Gona held out until 22 January 1943.

Australian reinforcement was hampered by the logistical problems of supporting a force in isolated, mountainous, jungle terrain. There were few planes available for aerial resupply, and techniques for it were still primitive. Australian command considered that the Vickers machine gun and medium mortars were too heavy to carry and would be ineffective in the jungle terrain. Without artillery, mortars or medium machine guns, the Australians faced an opponent equipped with mountain guns and light howitzers that had been carried into the mountains and proved to be a decisive advantage. Australian forces were unprepared to conduct a campaign in the jungle environment of New Guinea. The lessons learned during the course of this campaign and the subsequent battle of Buna-Gona led to widespread changes in doctrine, training, equipment and structure, with a legacy that remains until the present day.

In consequence of the rapid Japanese advance and the perceived failure to quickly counterattack, a "crisis of command" resulted, in which manoeuvring by General Douglas MacArthur, Supreme Commander of Allied Forces in the South West Pacific Area, and General Sir Thomas Blamey, commander of Allied Land Forces, resulted in the sackings of three high-ranking Australian officers. The generalship of MacArthur and Blamey has been criticised for unreasonable and unrealistic perceptions of the terrain and conditions under which the campaign was fought-to the detriment of the troops committed to the fighting. The Kokoda Track campaign has been mythologised as Australia's Thermopylae and incorporated into the Anzac legend even though the

https://www.history.com/news/hawaii-50th-state-1959In 1956, after John Burns was elected as Hawaii's Democratic delegate in a Democrat-controlled Congress, he succeeded in winning the support of southern congressmen, particularly Senate Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson and House Speaker Sam Rayburn. That proved crucial, since many so-called Dixiecrats still supported segregation and viewed Hawaii's multi-ethnic population as incompatible with their racially homogenous vision of America.

For some, though, Hawaii's large Asian population was seen not as an impediment. Instead, they were potentially critical intermediaries for America's growing trade and military interests in the Far East-particularly during the Cold War, asserts historian Roger Bell, author of Last Among Equals: Hawaiian Statehood and American Politics.

On January 3, 1959, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed the bill into law admitting Alaska as the 49th state. Later that same year, the Hawaii bill, ultimately helped by being uncoupled from Alaska's bid, passed in the House by a 323 to 89 vote and in the Senate by a 76 to 15 margin. At last, 18 years after Pearl Harbor, Hawaii's people were officially American citizens. Hawaii voters ratified statehood by an overwhelming margin of 17 to 1. https://www.history.com/news/hawaii-50th-state-1959

Secretary Rusk, ladies and gentlemen:

I welcome the chance to share with you this morning a few reflections on American foreign policy, as I have shared my thoughts in recent weeks with representatives of labor and business, and with other leaders of our society.

During the past weekend at Camp David--where I met and talked with America's good friend, Prime Minister Harold Holt of Australia--I thought of the General Assembly debate of the Middle East that opens today in New York.

But I thought also of the events of the past year in other continents in the world. I thought of the future--both in the Middle East, and in other areas of American interest in the world and in places that concern all of us.

So this morning I want to give you my estimate of the prospects for peace, and the hopes for progress, in these various regions of the world.

I shall speak first of our own hemisphere, then of Europe, the Soviet Union, Africa and Asia, and lastly of the two areas that concern us most at this hour--Vietnam and the Middle East.

Let me begin with the Americas.

Last April I met with my fellow American Presidents in Punta del Este. It was an encouraging experience for me, as I believe it was for the other leaders of Latin America. For they made, there at Punta del Este, the historic decision to move toward the economic integration of Latin America.

In my judgment, their decision is 'as important as any that they have taken since they became independent more than a century and a half ago.

The men I met with know that the needs of their 220 million people require them to modernize their economies and expand their trade. I promised that I would ask our people to cooperate in those efforts, and in giving new force to our great common enterprise, which we take great pride in, the Alliance for Progress.

One meeting of chiefs of state, of course, cannot transform a continent. But where leaders are willing to face their problems candidly, and where they are ready to join in meeting them responsibly, there can be only hope for the future.

The nations of the developed world-and I am speaking now principally of the Atlantic Alliance and Japan--have in this past year, I think, made good progress in meeting their common problems and their common responsibilities.

I have met with a number of statesmen-Prime Minister Lester Pearson in Canada just a few days ago, and the leaders of Europe in Bonn shortly before that. We discussed many of the issues that we face together.

We are consulting to good effect on how to limit the spread of nuclear weapons.

We have completed the Kennedy Round of tariff negotiations, in a healthy spirit of partnership, and we are examining together the vital question of monetary reform.

We have reorganized the integrated NATO defense, with its new headquarters in Belgium.

We have reached agreement on the crucial question of maintaining allied military strength in Germany.

Finally, we have worked together-although not yet with sufficient resources-to help the less developed countries deal with their problems of hunger and overpopulation.

We have not, by any means, settled all the issues that face us, either among ourselves or with other nations. But there is less cause to lament what has not been done than to take heart from what has been done.

You know of my personal interest in improving relations between the Western World and the nations of Eastern Europe. I believe the patient course we are pursuing toward those nations is vital to the security of our Nation.

Through cultural exchanges and civil air agreements--through consular and outer space treaties--through what we hope will soon become a treaty for the nonproliferation of nuclear weapons, and also, if they will join us, an agreement on antiballistic missiles, we have tried hard to enlarge, and have made great progress in improving, the arena of common action with the Soviet Union.

Our purpose is to narrow our differences where they can be narrowed, and thus to help secure peace in the world for the future generations. It will be a long, slow task, we realize. There will be setbacks and discouragements. But it is, we think, the only rational policy for them and for us.

In Africa, as in Asia, we have encouraged the nations of the region in their efforts to join in cooperative attacks on the problems that each of them faces: economic stagnation, poverty, hunger, disease, and ignorance. Under Secretary Nicholas Katzenbach just reported to me last week on his recent extended trip throughout Africa. He described to me the many problems and the many opportunities that exist in that continent.

Africa is moving rapidly from the colonial past toward freedom and dignity. She is in the long and difficult travail of building nations. Her proud people are determined to make a new Africa, according to their own lights.

They are now creating institutions for .political and economic cooperation. They have set great tasks for themselves--whose accomplishments will require years of struggle and sacrifice.

We very much want that struggle to succeed, and we want to be responsive to the efforts that they are making on their own behalf.

I can give personal testimony to the new spirit that is abroad in Africa, from Under Secretary Katzenbach's report, and then in Asia, from my own travels and experience there. In Asia my experience demonstrated to me a new spirit of confidence in that area of the world. Everywhere I traveled last autumn, from the conference in Manila to other countries of the region, I found the conviction that Asians can work with Asians to create better conditions of life in every country. Fear has now given way to hope in millions of hearts.

Asia's immense human problems remain, of course. Not all countries have moved ahead as rapidly as Thailand, Korea, and the Republic of China. But most of them are now on a promising track, and Japan is taking a welcome role in helping her fellow Asians toward much more rapid development.

A free Indonesia--the world's fifth largest nation, a land of more than 100 million people--is now struggling to rebuild, to reconstruct and reform its national life. This will require the understanding and the support of the entire international community.

We maintain our dialogue with the authorities in Peking, in preparation for the day when they will be ready to live at peace with the rest of the world.

I regret that this morning I cannot report any major progress toward peace in Vietnam.

I can promise you that we have tried every possible way to bring about either discussions between the opposing sides, or a practical deescalation of the violence itself.

Thus far there has been no serious response from the other side.

We are ready--and we have long been ready--to engage in a mutual deescalation of the fighting. But we cannot stop only half the war, nor can we abandon our commitment to the people of South Vietnam as long as the enemy attacks and fights on. And so long as North Vietnam attempts to seize South Vietnam by force, we must, and we will, block its efforts--so that the people of South Vietnam can determine their own future in peace.

We would very much like to see the day come--and come soon--when we can cooperate with all the nations of the region, including North Vietnam, in healing the wounds of a war that has continued, we think, for far too long. When the aggression ends, then that day will follow.

Now, finally, let me turn to the Middle East--and to the tumultuous events of the past months.

Those events have proved the wisdom of five great principles of peace in the region.

The first and the greatest principle is that every nation in the area has a fundamental right to live, and to have this right respected by its neighbors.

For the people of the Middle East, the path to hope does not lie in threats to end the life of any nation. Such threats have become a burden to the peace, not only of that region but a burden to the peace of the entire world.

In the same way, no nation would be true to the United Nations Charter, or to its own true interests, if it should permit military success to blind it to the fact that its neighbors have rights and its neighbors have interests of their own. Each nation, therefore, must accept the right of others to live.

Second, this last month, I think, shows us another basic requirement for settlement. It is a human requirement: justice for the refugees.

A new conflict has brought new homelessness. The nations of the Middle East must at last address themselves to the plight of those who have been displaced by wars. In the past, both sides have resisted the best efforts of outside mediators to restore the victims of conflict to their homes, or to find them other proper places to live and work. There will be no peace for any party in the Middle East unless this problem is attacked with new energy by all, and certainly, primarily by those who are immediately concerned.

A third lesson from this last month is that maritime rights must be respected. Our Nation has long been committed to free maritime passage through international waterways, and we, along with other nations, were taking the necessary steps to implement this principle when hostilities exploded. If a single act of folly was more responsible for this explosion than any other, I think it was the arbitrary and dangerous announced decision that the Straits of Titan would be closed. The right of innocent maritime passage must be preserved for all nations.

Fourth, this last conflict has demonstrated the danger of the Middle Eastern arms race of the last 12 years. Here the responsibility must rest not only on those in the area--but upon the larger states outside the area. We believe that scarce resources could be used much better for technical and economic development. We have always opposed this arms race, and our own military shipments to the area have consequently been severely limited.

Now the waste and futility of the arms race must be apparent to all the peoples of the world. And now there is another moment of choice. The United States of America, for its part, will use every resource of diplomacy, and every counsel of reason and prudence, to try to find a better course.

As a beginning, I should like to propose that the United Nations immediately call upon all of its members to report all shipments of all military arms into this area, and to keep those shipments on file for all the peoples of the world to observe.

Fifth, the crisis underlines the importance of respect for political independence and territorial integrity of all the states of the area. We reaffirmed that principle at the height of this crisis. We reaffirm it again today on behalf of all.

This principle can be effective in the Middle East only on the basis of peace between the parties. The nations of the region have had only fragile and violated truce lines for 20 years. What they now need are recognized boundaries and other arrangements that will give them security against terror, destruction, and war. Further, there just must be adequate recognition of the special interest of three great religions in the holy places of Jerusalem.

These five principles are not new, but we do think they are fundamental. Taken together, they point the way from uncertain armistice to durable peace. We believe there must be progress toward all of them if there is to be progress toward any.

There are some who have urged, as a single, simple solution, an immediate return to the situation as it was on June 4. As our distinguished and able Ambassador, Mr. Arthur Goldberg, has already said, this is not a prescription for peace, but for renewed hostilities.

Certainly troops must be withdrawn, but there must also be recognized rights of national life, progress in solving the refugee problem, freedom of innocent maritime passage, limitation of the arms race, and respect for political independence and territorial integrity.

But who will make this peace where all others have failed for 20 years or more?

Clearly the parties to the conflict must be the parties to the peace. Sooner or later it is they who must make a settlement in the area. It is hard to see how it is possible for nations to live together in peace if they cannot learn to reason together.

But we must still ask, who can help them? Some say it should be the United Nations; some call for the use of other parties. We have been first in our support of effective peacekeeping in the United Nations, and we also recognize the great values to come from mediation.

We are ready this morning to see any method tried, and we believe that none should be excluded altogether. Perhaps all of them will be useful and all will be needed.

So, I issue an appeal to all to adopt no rigid view on these matters. I offer assurance to all that this Government of ours, the Government of the United States, will do its part for peace in every forum, at every level, at every hour.

Yet there is no escape from this fact: The main responsibility for the peace of the region depends upon its own peoples and its own leaders of that region. What will be truly decisive in the Middle East will be what is said and what is done by those who live in the Middle East.

They can seek another arms race, if they have not profited from the experience of this one, if they want to. But they will seek it at a terrible cost to their own people-and to their very long-neglected human needs. They can live on a diet of hate-though only at the cost of hatred in return. Or they can move toward peace with one another.

The world this morning is watching, watching for the peace of the world, because that is really what is at stake. It will look for patience and justice, it will look for humility and moral courage. It will look for signs of movement from prejudice and the emotional chaos of conflict to the gradual, slow shaping steps that lead to learning to live together and learning to help mold and shape peace in the area and in the world.

The Middle East is rich in history, rich in its people and its resources. It has no need to live in permanent civil war. It has the power to build its own life, as one of the prosperous regions of the world in which we live.

If the nations of the Middle East will turn toward the works of peace, they can count with confidence upon the friendship, and the help, of all the people of the United States of America.

In a climate of peace, we here will do our full share to help with a solution for the refugees. We here will do our full share in support of regional cooperation. We here will do our share, and do more, to see that the peaceful promise of nuclear energy is applied to the critical problems of desalting water and helping to make the deserts bloom.

Our country is committed--and we here reiterate that commitment today--to a peace that is based on five principles:

--first, the recognized right of national life;

--second, justice for the refugees;

--third, innocent maritime passage;

--fourth, limits on the wasteful and destructive arms race; and

--fifth, political independence and territorial integrity for all.

This is a time not for malice, but for magnanimity; not for propaganda, but for patience; not for vituperation, but for vision.

On the basis of peace, we offer our help to the people of the Middle East. That land, known to every one of us since childhood as the birthplace of great religions and learning, can flourish once again in our time. We here in the United States shall do all in our power to help make it so.

Thank you and good morning.

Note: The President spoke at 9:31 a.m. in the West Auditorium at the Department of State building in Washington. In his opening words he referred to Dean Rusk, Secretary of State.

On June 28, 1967, the White House issued a statement on the status of Jerusalem, the text of which follows:

The President said on June 19 that in our view "there must be adequate recognition of the special interest of three great religions in the holy places of Jerusalem." On this principle he assumes that before any unilateral action is taken on the status of Jerusalem there will be appropriate consultation with religious leaders and others who are deeply concerned. Jerusalem is holy to Christians, to Jews, and to Moslems. It is one of the great continuing tragedies of history that a city which is so much the center of man's highest values has also been, over and over, a center of conflict. Repeatedly the passionate beliefs of one element have led to exclusion or unfairness for others. It has been so, unfortunately, in the last 20 years. Men of all religions will agree that we must now do better. The world must find an answer that is fair and recognized to be fair. That could not be achieved by hasty unilateral action, and the President is confident that the wisdom and good judgment of those now in control of Jerusalem will prevent any such action.

Lyndon B. Johnson's tenure as the 36th president of the United States began on November 22, 1963, upon the assassination of president John F. Kennedy, and ended on January 20, 1969. He had been vice president for 1,036 days when he succeeded to the presidency. Johnson, a Democrat from Texas, ran for and won a full four-year term in the 1964 presidential election, in which he defeated Republican nominee Barry Goldwater in a landslide. Johnson did not run for a second full term in the 1968 presidential election because of his low popularity. He was succeeded by Republican Richard Nixon. His presidency marked the high tide of modern liberalism in the 20th century United States. - So says Wikipedia

This must be viewed in the context of Nixon Indonesia 1958

The National Security Council under Eisenhowere was run by Richard Nixon who was then V.P. and they had set in motion (along with Great Britain) the Marshall Plan for the Post WWII world. In that plan-making was Joseph Kennedy Sr. who cooperated with the Ford Foundation, East-West-Center and others in CIA front group activities that would support the plan for Indonesia. Cuba and other countries had succeeded or would be attempted (Guatamla, Iran, Cuba,) but Indonesia was a area of focus too.

The war was on.

On Feb. 9, 1958, rebel Colonel Maluddin Simbolon issued an ultimatum in the name of a provincial government, the Central Sumatran Revolutionary Council, calling for the formation of a new central government. Sukarno refused and called upon his loyal army commander, General Abdul Haris Nasution, to destroy the rebel forces. By Feb. 21 loyal forces had been airlifted to Sumatra and had begun the attack. The rebel headquarters was in the southern coastal city of Padang. Rebel strongholds stretched all the way to Medan, near the northern end of the island and not far from Malaysia.

This was important administratively because by that time Frank Wisner, the CIA Deputy Director of Plans, had set up his forward headquarters in Singapore and at the direction of the 5412 Committee of the National Security Council, headed by Nixon, Wisner occupied that faraway headquarters himself. (It should be noted that in 1958 Allen Dulles was the head of the CIA, his brother John Foster Dulles was the Secretary of State, Eisenhower was President, and Nixon, as Vice President, chaired the clandestine affairs committee, then known as the "Special Group 5412/2." In other words nothing was done in Indonesia that was not directed by Nixon. If an action had not been directed by the NSC, then it was done unlawfully by the CIA.)

In 1958 Allen Dulles would have brought such a major operation to the attention of the Special Group and he would operate with its approval. This was an essential step in national policy because it then empowered the Department of Defense to provide the necessary support requested by the CIA. Much of this fell within the area of my responsibility at Air Force Headquarters, and I was kept informed on a regular basis of approved action and of Nixon's keen interest in this project.

The rebellion flared sporadically from one end of Indonesia to the other.

While the CIA was supporting up to 100,000 rebels, the State Department professed innocence. The U.S. ambassador, Howard P. Jones, maintained that the United States had nothing to do with the rebellion and he protested the capture of the American oil properties. On the other hand, Sukarno had asked for more arms aid from the United States. He must have had strong suspicions about the source of rebel support. The vast number of guns, the bombers and heavy air transport aircraft dropping hundreds of tons of arms and equipment, as well as submarines supporting beach operations were just too sophisticated to be anything but major power ploys. Thus, his appeal for U.S. arms aid had the ring of gamesmanship.

Playing along with the game, John Foster Dulles issued a statement saying that the United States would not provide arms to either side. And while he was publishing that falsehood, the United States furnished and piloted B-26 bombers, and these were bombing shipping in the Makassar Straits. Some had even flown as far south as the Java Sea. Almost immediately all insurance rates on shipping to and from Indonesia went on a wartime scale and costs became so prohibitive that most shipping actually ceased. The bombing attacks, kept so quiet in the United States that they hardly made the news, were being viewed with great alarm by the rest of the world. What was "Top Secret" in Washington was barroom gossip in the capitals of the world.

While Wisner communicated with Washington clandestinely, anyone in the bar at the Raffles Hotel in Singapore, in the Peninsula Hotel in Kowloon, or even on the streets of Istanbul, could learn all about the "American CIA attack" on Sukarno.

The CIA was demanding so much support for its far-flung operations that a top-level committee was established in the Pentagon. Its purpose was to keep track of how much war equipment was being requested and sent to Indonesia. Not unlike the Lemnitzer-Shoup rifle problem, there were problems in the Pentagon because of the way the CIA requested equipment through phony "military" cover channels.

Early in this operation I had put some men from my office into the air-combat section in the Philippines, and the Air Force was reasonably well aware of what was going on. But that was not so for the other services. At the time, Admiral Arleigh Burke was the Chief of Naval Operations. He went one step further than we did. At the height of the rebel operations, Burke sent his Chief of Naval Intelligence, Admiral Luther Frost, to Jakarta, Indonesia's capital, where he stayed for several months carrying on a delicate relationship with the American ambassador and with the Indonesian naval chiefs. This, while U.S. Navy submarines were aiding the rebels south of Sumatra. It turned out to have been a masterful gambit because later, when the rebellion collapsed, the U.S. Navy was able to declare innocence. The Air Force was not so fortunate.

The pretense that the U.S. Government was in no way involved in this massive civil war against Sukarno was wearing thin. It was a reasonable cover as long as the United States could plausibly deny its role in the action. But one day, a lone

B-26 out of the rebel CIA base at Menado, flying low over the Straits of Makassar, came upon an Indonesian ship - an ideal target. The pilot banked to take a good run at the ship and began strafing it with those eight lethal .50-caliber machine guns. He was committed to the attack before he found out that the freighter was armed. The B-26 was hit and it ditched near the ship. The pilot, an American named Allan Lawrence Pope, was picked up. Pope was identified as a former U.S. Air Force pilot. The cork was out of the bottle. Sukarno had his proof of U.S. involvement and he played his ace card for an international audience. That one plane and that one pilot cost the U.S. Government tens of millions of dollars in ransom and tribute during the next several years.

After the capture of Pope the rebellion rapidly fell apart. Loyal forces captured Donggala in central Celebes. And on far away Halmahera, government forces captured Jailolo. That ended all opposition except for the CIA-rebel air base at Menado. With the rebellion all but crushed, except for the continued existence of the main CIA force, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles ended the embargo of arms to Sukarno and agreed to send aid to the government of Indonesia! What wondrous duplicity! And Sukarno was not fooled. His forces had been fighting a major civil war inspired and clandestinely supported by the United States, while concurrently the overt branches of the U.S. Government acted as though nothing at all had happened.

By the end of June 1958 it was all over. Then a very strange and rare (rare in terms of normal bureaucracy) thing happened. During the months of this operation it had been my custom to visit the CIA special operations center.

One morning I caught the unmarked, dull-green CIA shuttle bus at the Pentagon and rode to the operations center. I went in. Not a soul was there. The place had been cleaned out. Office after office was absolutely bare. Finally I found one secretary. She was sitting in a straight-back chair and her telephone was on the floor. There were tears in her eyes. She took a call from time to time and gave guarded answers about the former members of that huge staff. The entire section had been scattered to the four corners of the world. A large number of top-level, experienced, clandestine agents and operators had vanished. It took our Air Force office, skilled as we were in the ways of the CIA, months to find some of them again.

Then we began to piece together what had happened. With the collapse of such a major effort and with the inability of the Government to deny plausibly before the world its role in the whole sordid affair, blame had to be placed somewhere. In an unprecedented action, Nixon had summarily fired Frank Wisner, along with some others. But Frank Wisner, a longtime OSS and CIA man, was a key intelligence officer. Few knew enough about his career to realize that he was senior, by far, to Helms and Colby. Clearly, he was Allen Dulles' heir apparent.

When the OSS had been deactivated after World War II by President Truman, it was Wisner who had kept a tight-knit band of professionals together. This small cadre kept valuable OSS records and, more importantly, they had maintained the delicate lines of communication with agents, spies, and underground personnel in Eastern Europe, Russia, and Germany. They held this fragile web together. Without them hundreds of people might have been killed and priceless assets destroyed. And Frank Wisner suddenly, almost whimsically, had been fired.

To a man, the Agency was aroused by this action. Rightly or wrongly, they hated Nixon for this. I remember being at meetings during which the name of Nixon would be mentioned and I have seen CIA men bristle and redden as though someone had let a poisonous snake loose in the room. Some vowed he would never become President.

Meanwhile the Agency moved to pull itself together. That one deft bloodbath appeared to end things. There was no Board of Inquiry as there was after the Bay of Pigs. And, remarkably, there was no public outcry as there would be a few years later after the U-2 scandal. The agency was busy sweeping things under the rug.

Meanwhile those special B-26s were all flown back to the States and based at Elgin Air Force Base in Flonda. That was late in 1958. By 1959 they began to stir again. A man named Castro had come to power in Cuba. During those fateful days in April 1961 it was those same B-26s that the CIA used to attack Cuba.

Much of the CIA planning setup by the military industrial complex that included United Fruit Company, the Ford Foundation, the East-West-Center of Hawaii, various banks and diplotic groups, were underway. JFK had campaigned against Robber Barron exploitation of under-developed countries and chided Nixon for what was summarized as a Nixon secret plan to win the war. When JFK became president and inherited that secret plan he was going to reveal it to the public.

What few realized is that the over-powerful position in the Executive Branch what wielded the swamp oF CIA owned companies and illegal activities was the Vice President presiding over the National Security Council to which the espionage agencies and cover operations took instructions from. When Joseph Kennedy Sr. saw his son JFK rise to the presidency he might have had a role in selecting Senator Lyndon Baines Johnson as the JFK V.P. LBJ as the new NSC Chair would continue the programs that JFK resented including in Indonesia. The assassination of JFK continued LBJ and his plans for Vietnam, Indonesia, and other countries back into action and when Robert F. Kennedy was assassinate and Richard Nixon was elected that entire MK-Ultra plan had continuity except for the short period from 1962 to 1963 JFK began to oppose it while also fearing assassination for doing so.

It is my belief the OSS CIA plans of Donald Barr and others including a falsified backstory of the origins of Barrack Obama Jr. and interviewed into this story and Los Angeles and Inglewood were likely an un-found birth certificate was at one time, one possible one for use like the one in Indonesia now either not found or found to be false. The one I suspect is 022-46-3234 which would be right next to my own birth in time and place.

I am moving on to read yet again Roger Stone book The Case Against LBJ.

The first inauguration of Lyndon B. Johnson as the 36th president of the United States was held on Friday, November 22, 1963, aboard Air Force One at Dallas Love Field, following the assassination of President John F. Kennedy earlier that day.

In the 1960s Lyndon Johnson was president in the aftermath of the Kennedy Assassination. He is largely remembered for his support of the Civil Rights movement domestically, and his initiation of the Vietnam War in the history of the Cold War.

As a result, other areas of Lyndon Johnson's foreign policy as American president during the Cold War have largely gone ignored. One area is Indonesia. Indonesia in the 50s and 60s had a socialist anti-colonial government under the leadership of Sukarno. The United States had tense relations with him and these tensions were exacerbated in the context of the Vietnam War.

In 1965 the army, under the leadership of General Suharto initiated a takeover of Indonesia, and in the process initiated a process that has become known as the 1965 tragedy in Indonesia. Under the guise of targeting suspected communists, up to 500,000 people were killed in an act that is now recognized as genocide in many circles. The United States's role in this included the U.S embassy in Jakarta providing lists of suspected communists(5000), the CIA engaging in what was called "black propaganda operations" by using radio broadcasts to amplify Suharto's propaganda around the killings as well as a systematic cover-up in media reporting at this time.

His administration has received a lot of critical scrutiny over it's role in Vietnam, but yet this aspect of the Cold War and the U.S's role has largely gone ignored despite it being listed as one of the worst mass killings of the 20th century.

Johnson as a lieutenant commander in the U.S. Naval Reserve in March 1942

Active military duty (1941-1942)

For the Indonesian region, see Western New Guinea. For the Nicaraguan municipality, see Nueva Guinea. For other uses, see Guinea (disambiguation).

Johnson was appointed a lieutenant commander in the U.S. Naval Reserve on June 21, 1940. While serving as a U.S. representative, he was called to active duty three days after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor in December 1941. His first orders were to report to the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations in Washington, D.C., for instruction and training. Following his training, Johnson asked Undersecretary of the Navy James Forrestal for a job in Washington, D.C. He was instead sent to inspect shipyard facilities in Texas and on the West Coast. In the spring of 1942, President Roosevelt decided he needed better information on conditions in the Southwest Pacific, and wanted a trusted political ally to obtain it. Forrestal suggested Johnson. Roosevelt assigned Johnson to a three-man survey team covering the Southwest Pacific.

Johnson reported to General Douglas MacArthur in Australia. Johnson and two U.S. Army officers went to the 22nd Bomb Group base, which was assigned the high-risk mission of bombing the Japanese airbase at Lae in New Guinea. On June 9, 1942, Johnson volunteered as an observer for an airstrike on New Guinea. Reports vary on what happened to the aircraft carrying Johnson during that mission. MacArthur recommended Johnson for the Silver Star for gallantry in action; the citation indicated that the mission came under attack and Johnson's aircraft experienced mechanical problems, forcing it to turn back before reaching its objective. Others claim that the aircraft turned back because of generator trouble before encountering enemy aircraft and never came under fire, an account that is supported by the aircraft's official flight records. Other airplanes that continued came under fire near the target about the same time Johnson's plane was recorded as having landed back at the original airbase. Johnson's biographer Robert Caro was quoted as saying "I think that the weight of the evidence at this moment is that the plane was attacked by Zeroes and that he was cool under fire", but also "The fact is, LBJ never got within sight of Japanese forces. His combat experience was a myth."

Johnson used a movie camera to record conditions, and reported to Roosevelt, Navy leaders, and Congress that conditions were deplorable and unacceptable. Some historians have suggested this was in exchange for MacArthur's recommendation to award the Silver Star. He argued that the southwest Pacific urgently needed a higher priority and a larger share of war supplies. Warplanes that were sent there were "far inferior" to Japanese planes, and U.S. Navy morale there was poor. Johnson told Forrestal that the Pacific Fleet had a "critical" need for 6,800 additional experienced men. Johnson prepared a twelve-point program to upgrade the effort in the region, stressing "greater cooperation and coordination within the various commands and between the different war theaters". Congress responded by making Johnson chairman of a high-powered subcommittee of the Naval Affairs Committee, with a mission similar to that of the Truman Committee in the Senate. He probed the peacetime "business as usual" inefficiencies that permeated the naval war and demanded that admirals get the job done. Johnson went too far when he proposed a bill that would crack down on the draft exemptions of shipyard workers if they were absent from work too often; organized labor blocked the bill and denounced him. Johnson's biographer Robert Dallek concludes, "The mission was a temporary exposure to danger calculated to satisfy Johnson's personal and political wishes, but it also represented a genuine effort on his part, however misplaced, to improve the lot of America's fighting men."

In addition to the Silver Star, Johnson received the American Campaign Medal, Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal, and the World War II Victory Medal. He was discharged from active duty on July 17, 1942, but remained in the Navy Reserve, where he was promoted to commander on October 19, 1949, effective June 2, 1948. He resigned from the Navy Reserve effective January 18, 1964.

The Kennedy Assassination: what really happened: The Oswald letter, JFK archive releases, and a deathbed confession implicating President Johnson in the murder

Jerome A. Kroth (Author)

Professor Kroth decodes a mysterious letter written to a "Mr. Hunt" by Lee Harvey Oswald sixteen days before Oswald was murdered. Oswald's dyslexia provides a final clue to the actual events surrounding the assassination.. This leads us to Howard Hunt and his dramatic deathbed confession implicating LBJ in the murder. In addition Trump's dramatic disclosure of over 50,000 secret JFK files in 2017-18, plus more documents disclosed in 2021, changes our understanding of virtually everything. In late 2022, 13,000 more documents were let go, and these too have been sifted and sorted here. All of the releases together are absolutely revelatory.

Publisher reviews follow: "These documents, as he says, over 80 of them, blew me away. I'll never believe the Warren Commission was anything but a whitewash. Johnson did it through the CIA and the Mafia. No doubt in my mind it was a coup d'etat." -M.S. Forrest, Ph.D

The Man Who Killed Kennedy: The Case Against LBJ

Stone, Roger J. On Kindle

From the mind of legendary political insider Roger Stone, here is the sensational New York Times bestseller that reveals the truth about who was behind the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

From the mind of consummate political insider Roger Stone, unofficial adviser to Donald Trump and subject of the documentary Get Me Roger Stone, comes a compelling case that Lyndon Baines Johnson had the motive, means, and opportunity to orchestrate the murder of JFK.

Stone maps out the case that LBJ blackmailed his way on the ticket in 1960 and was being dumped in 1964 to face prosecution for corruption at the hands of his nemesis attorney Robert Kennedy. Stone uses fingerprint evidence and testimony to prove JFK was shot by a long-time LBJ hit man-not Lee Harvey Oswald.

President Johnson would use power from his personal connections in Texas, from the criminal underworld, and from the United States government to escape an untimely end in politics and to seize even greater power. President Johnson, the thirty-sixth president of the United States, was the driving force behind a conspiracy to murder President Kennedy on November 22, 1963. In The Man Who Killed Kennedy, you will find out how and why he did it.

Legendary political operative and strategist Roger Stone has gathered documents and uses his firsthand knowledge to construct the ultimate tome to prove that LBJ was not only involved in JFK's assassination, but was in fact the mastermind.

The War State: The Cold War Origins Of The Military-Industrial Complex And The Power Elite, 1945-1963

Today when you factor in the interest on the national debt from past wars and total defense expenditures the United States spends almost 40% of its federal budget on the military. It accounts for over 46% of total world arms spending. Before World War II it spent almost nothing on defense and hardly anyone paid any income taxes. You can't have big wars without big government. Such big expenditures are now threatening to harm the national economy. How did this situation come to be?

In this book you'll learn how in the critical twenty years after World War II the United States changed from being a continental democratic republic to a global imperial superpower. Since then nothing has ever been the same again. In this book you will discover this secret history of the United States that formed the basis of the world we live in today.

By buying this book you will discover:

- How the end of European colonialism created a power vacuum that the United States used to create a new type of world empire backed by the most powerful military force in human history.

- Why the Central Intelligence Agency was created and used to interfere in the internal affairs of other nations when the United States Constitution had no mechanism for such imperial activities.

- [Ed Donegan's book series adds my own family history and collected information available LBJ assassinated JFK to keep an Indoensia plot involving Barrack Obama Jr. under a faslified identity in progress before JFK revealed it.]

Would the military really go so far as to overthrow a president of the United States? On the surface, that seems like a far-fetched notion, but you have to remember this was the height of the Cold War.

In 1962 a best-selling book came out titled Seven Days in May that postulated just such a scenario. Kennedy read it, and when asked if it could happen, he replied,

> "It's possible, but the conditions would have to be just right. If the country had a young President, and he had hay of Pigs, there would be a certain uneasiness. Maybe the military would do a little criticizing behind his back. Then if there were another Bay of Pigs, the reaction of the country would be, 'Is he too young and inexperienced?' The military would almost feel that it was their patriotic obligation to stand ready to preserve the integrity of the nation and only God knows just what segment of Democracy they would be defending. Then if there were a third Bay of Pigs itcould happen. It won't happen on my watch."

After the meeting, Kennedy met with his brother and some of his closest associates to go over the discussion he had just had with Ike. He said he was amazed at how calm Eisenhower seemed as he talked about nuclear war. He thought there was almost something frightening about it.

Kennedy himself was scared of nuclear war and worried over the possibility that one could start due to a miscalculation on the part of the Soviet Union or the United States. The new president would soon recommend to some of his advisers that they read the best-selling Barbara Tuchman book The Guns of August that chronicled the beginning of World War I. It described the start of that war as an almost automatic process in which once one switch was triggered, the war could not be stopped.

In talks with people, Kennedy would recall a passage from the book in which two German leaders talked about the war: "How did it all happen?" one asked. The other answered, "Ah, if one only knew." Now an accidental war or one sparked by some crazy incident could mean the end of life as we know it. Kennedy had the book placed in every single Officers' Club

Several members of the Joint Chiefs of Staffthought that Kennedy actually dropped the ball on the Cuban Missile Crisis. According to Daniel Ellsberg, who served in a working staff for the EXCOMM group under Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara, "after Khrushchev had agreed to remove the missiles, President Kennedy invited the Chiefs to the White House so that he could thank them for their support during the crisis, and there was one hell of a scene.

LeMay (chief of staff of the air force) came out saying, 'We lost! We ought to just go in there today and knock 'em John Frankenheimer adapted a Rod Serling, of Twilight Zone fame, script for Seven Days of May into a movie production. Kirk Douglas and Burt Lancaster played the leading roles. The military brass did not want the picture made and wouldn't allow the movie crew to go inside the Pentagon, but Kennedy was personally thrilled with the idea and left Washington one weekend for his home in Hyannis Portso that they could film in the White House. The movie ends with a speech by the president giving a defense of the US Constitution that today sounds overly sentimental, because most people do not have the faith and trust in the government that they did back then.

The subject of another book by Rodney Stich called Disavow, Rewald had a dark secret. He was just a front man for the CIA, an informant since college when he began spying on "subversive" organizations like the SDS (Students for a Democratic Society) during the late 1960's and 70's.

Later as chairman of BBRDW -- Bishop, Baldwin, Rewald Dillingham and Wong -- a Hawaii-based CIA front masquerading as a worldwide investment company, Rewald thought he had nothing to fear. But then came the setup and the fall. Today after spending ten years in prison as the fall guy for the CIA, Rewald is reportedly still in denial.

According to Stich, BBRDW was a CIA proprietary, a company wholly owned by CIA operatives, started, operated and funded by the CIA in 1979 using many of the same high level people that had staffed Nugan Hand Bank.

Nugan Hand was the infamous Australia-based money laundry used by CIA to disburse Southeast Asian drug revenues.

In a chapter of Defrauding America, Stich writes that "the CIA used BBRDW as an international investment company cover with 120 employees staffing offices in 16 countries including Hong Kong, India, Indonesia, Taiwan, New Zealand, Singapore, London, Paris, Stockholm, Brazil and Chile. CIA personnel opened and operated these far flung offices."

When his cover was blown by a Honolulu reporter, Rewald never saw it coming. Since he'd been working for the CIA since his college days, he just naturally assumed that the CIA takes care of its own. Rewald was wrong.

"Disavowed" by the way, means "once your cover is blown, pal, you're on your own."

The book Disavow by Rodney Stich and T. Conan Russell should be required reading for anyone who's even thinking about working for the so-called "intelligence" agencies -- CIA, DIA, NSA, FBI, ONI, etc.

Just as there is no honor among thieves, there is even less among "spooks" -- the double-dealing spies of the world.

With the planning for Indonesia already underway in 1957 and 1958 activities a key part of Pacific Ilsand planning is built by Sentorial bill sponsor Lyndon Baines Johnson. Looking at the picture again a Nixon oil and gold and Banana Republic plan for Indonesia by all accounts was underway. The CIA was operation behind front groups around the world for MKULTRA and the East West Center in Hawaii was to be a part of it all. US Senator LBJ co-wrote the legislation for the East West Center and broke ground with a shovel beginning the construction of the center. But it was exactly the kind of plans Great Brittian had used WASPS still liked and JFK opposed.

The Central Intelligence Agency while likely not the only influence or maybe not even the dominant influence did influence Lyndon B. Johson then a US Senator with Senator Prescott Bush and the influential Walker and Rockefeller families working with the Rockefeller Oil interests to form world-wide plans. This Bush-Johnson oil world plan crossed the political isle and included bipartisan planning for Indonesia and sleepers inserted into it and select leaders from Indonesia backed by the CIA. Investigative Journalist: Obama Grandparents CIA Connections; Bogus Harvard Certificate

By Wayne Madsen Wayne Madsen Report dot com

President Obama's grandmother, Madelyn Payne Dunham, the woman who actually raised the future President of the United States, served as the vice president and chief escrow account officer for the bank of Hawaii at an interesting time for the CIA's murky operations in the 50th state. Dunham retired from the Bank of Hawaii in 1986 but not before a massive financial network was exposed in 1983 as a result of the financial failure and Internal Revenue Service investigation of a major CIA proprietary headquartered in Honolulu, Bishop, Baldwin, Rewald, Dillingham and Wong (BBRDW), the Bishop being a member of one of Hawaii's landed gentry families and one that both Madelyn Dunham and her husband Stanley, as well as their daughter, Stanley Ann, had past interactions.

New York businessman Charles Reed Bishop married Bernice Pauahi Paki of the royal House of Kamehameha in 1850. Their descendants would play a major role in Hawaii to the present day. Charles Bishop, through the Bishop Trust, built a number of buildings at the elite Punahou School, where Obama attended. The Bishop Trust also funded the Bishop Museum for whom Obama's mother briefly worked as a Javanese history specialist.

For an agency that disavowed any connection to BBRDW, the CIA curiously maintains detailed files on the failed corporation that was involved, according to the editor's book, The Manufacturing of a President, in making pay-offs to Asian dictators who were allies of the United States. These payments were made via the escrow accounts overseen at the Bank of Hawaii by Obama's grandmother [who died and then burst into flames when alone with Barrack Obama on election night eve 2008.]

Among the CIA files is an obscure article on BBRDW written by John Kelly for the June-August 1984 issue of CounterSpy, a now-defunct magazine. BBRDW was an investment advisory firm on the surface but underneath its charade, it was a facilitator for various CIA clandestine operations.

Although the CIA vehemently denied that BBRDW belonged to them, One of the company's consultants and investors was John "Jack" Kindschi, the former CIA station chief in Hawaii who previously served in clandestine positions in Stockholm and Mexico City. More interesting, Kindschi's cover in Mexico City was the Robert Mullin Company, a public relations firm that employed one E. Howard Hunt, who would later emerge as one of conspirators in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Kindschi would most certainly have been known to Office of Strategic Services (OSS) and CIA veterans Stanley and Madelyn Dunham who arrived in Hawaii from Seattle just as Hawaii became a state in 1960. The CIA had cleverly provided Stanley cover as a "furniture salesman." In fact, Pratt Furniture of Honolulu, Dunham's alleged employer, never existed save for a filing in the business records held by the State of Hawaii.

When BBRDW founder Ron Rewald, CIA code name "WINTERDOG" and "R," attempted to commit suicide in a room at the Waikiki Sheraton in 1983, after BBRDW's financial collapse, the CIA's "plausible denial" machine went into full gear. CIA general counsel Robert Laprade stated in a sworn statement:

> "the CIA did not cause Bishop, Baldwin, Rewald, Dillingham & Wong to be created nor has the agency at any time owned, operated, controlled or invested in Bishop, Baldwin, Rewald, Dillingham, Wong."

End of the story?

Not quite.

While denying any CIA connection to BBRDW, Laprade asked that defense documents filed by Rewald in the government's fraud case against the firm be sealed. Not only did U.S. Judge Martin Spence seal all the defense documents but he ordered sealed all documents mentioning the CIA and all attorneys, parties, and their agents were placed under a court gag order.

Not coincidentally, one of the federal prosecutors, John Peyton, previously worked for the CIA's general counsel's office.

Rewald's court affidavit stated that BBRDW was used by the CIA to "shelter monies of highly placed foreign diplomats and businessmen, who wished to 'export' cash to the United States, where it would be available to them in the event of emergency." The CIA's man in Cambodia, Marshal Lon Nol, availed himself of the accounts after he fled Cambodia to Hawaii after the takeover by the Khmer Rouge. Rewald bought a house form Lon Nol in Hawaii, an address that was later used for CIA cover companies.

The accounts held by BBRDW for foreign officials were held in "negotiable securities, wire transfers, or checks, many from the Chase Manhattan Bank." Chase Manhattan was owned by David Rockefeller.

The Kelly article refers to letters between Kindschi and CIA agent Charles T. Connor that confirmed that BBRDW was providing such financial shelter for foreign officials, not just those in Asia but around the world. One letter from Connor to Kindschi stated that BBRDW provided a scheme for Greek elites to circumvent stringent Greek foreign exchange controls by investing in BBRDW. A CIA intermediary in Greece is named in the letter: Dino Goulos. Dino did not help the CIA because of his love for the agency. The letter states: " … if Dino can find investment friends seeking safe haven in dollar denominated investments with BBRD&W, we would be able to pay him a 'finders fee' of up to 5 percent …"

In other cases, BBRDW used joint business ventures to cultivate contacts with organizations such as the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC). At the same time that Barack Obama was working for the CIA's premier corporate liaison and contact-development firm, Business International Corporation of New York, BBRDW had signed on as joint venture partners billionaire Philippines banker Enrique Zobel, Sultan of Brunei Hassanal Bolkiah, Crown Prince Saud Mohammed of the United Arab Emirates, and wealthy Indonesian businessmen Indri Gautama.

These four provided critical oil price intelligence to the CIA, particularly to major oil investor Bill Casey, the director.

BBRDW established the Hawaiian-Arabian Investment Company and U.S. & United Arab Emirates Investment Company with Saud Mohammed and Gautama and the Ayala-Hawaiian Corporation with Zobel. Zobel, who founded the Ayala Corporation in 1983, was a member of the influential and wealthy Ayala family of the Philippines. All were registered with the State of Hawaii and were as phony as Obama's grandfather's furniture company.

The Honolulu Star-Advertiser spiked a story by reporter Charles Memminger on Zobel's ties to the CIA operation. The reason was that Zobel was part of the oligarchical opposition opposed to President Ferdinand Marcos, an opposition that was being groomed by the CIA. The CIA did not want Zobel and his allies burned. Eventually, Marcos, like Lon Nol before him, would flee to Hawaii in 1986 after being ousted. With Marcos came his massive wealth, much of it deposited in Hawaiian banks, including Grandma Toot's Bank of Hawaii, as the result of wire transfers from the Philippines National Bank.

Before Zobel broke with Marcos, the Philippines businessman helped arrange for BBRDW to obtain information on the purchase of two Hawaii estates by Marcos in 1977 and 1980. The first was an estate at 2338 Maikiki Heights Drive in Honolulu and the second was the Helen Knudsen estate, across the street from the first purchased estate.

Rewald was also a sleuth for the CIA. Court exhibits included information on Rewald filing a report to Langley with Tokyo CIA station chief Eugene Welsch. Rewald obtained the blueprints for Japan Airlines' top secret High Speed Surface Transport (HSST). Rewald was said to have obtained the prints from a BBRDW's client's son who worked for the Japanese Ministry of Railroads. BBRDW also was involved with a covert CIA funding contrivance in Japan called T&B International Co., Ltd.

On April 10, 1961, in a long conversation with Dean Rusk, Dutch Foreign Minister Luns said that he was going to “talk to Hammarskjöld about this whole problem-“26.1 He wanted the United Nations to send a visiting mission to West New Guinea. Kennedy, four hours earlier, had informed Luns that he had been in touch with Hammarskjöld since 1958 “and a number Of times since” but gave no details of the more recent meetings. Luns obviously had heard whispers that JFK and the UN secretary general had been discussing the future of the Dutch territory. In the opinion of the UN secretary general, JFK explained, only a bona fide JFK, New Guinea, Malaysian Confrontation old War tension was rising. President Eisenhower closed the US Embassy in Havana, January 3, 1961, the same day that General Nasution in Moscow was discussing the Soviet arms purchase that led to Kennedy's intervention in the Dutch-Indonesian dispute. DCI Dulles was personally involved in the Cold War crises brewing in both locations, Cuba and Indonesia. In Moscow, the list was impressive: TU-16 long-range bombers, fighter planes, motor torpedo boats, submarines, and warships, including a Skoryi-class cruiser transferred from the Soviet Navy. They were to end Dutch sovereignty Of the New Guinea territory. Sukarno claimed the long-range bombers had nuclear capability. The willingness Of the United States to support their NATO ally in a colonial outpost was now in the spotlight.

A National Intelligence Estimate was prepared on this arms deal by Major General Edward G. Lansdale (secretary of Defense deputy assistant for Special Operations) and was approved by the US Intelligence Board March 7. Lansdale was a close associate of Allen Dulles who was head of the Board. Lansdale wrote: The Soviet effort to capture Sukarno and Indonesia through personal diplomacy and military and economic assistance has reached substantial proportions and appears to be making significant progress. Indonesia is looking to the Communist Bloc for important contributions to its economic probably came also to the notice Of the CIA, judging by the careful wording in the briefing prepared for Kennedy prior to Sukarno's visit in April: "We are awaiting more conclusive data before associating ourselves fully with Professor Guy Pauker's thesis that the Moscow talks may have forced General Nasution into a de facto alliance with the Communist Party."

While Nasution's pro-US stance was conveyed in confidence to Jones and Rusk in March 1961, it

If the CIA already knew that Kennedy had been informed about Nasution, then the CIA briefing would have lost credibility altogether had it stood by Pauker's thesis. The briefing, titled "Indonesian Perspectives" had direct input from Allen Dulles but was signed off by Richard Bissell, CIA deputy director for plans. (His predecessor was Frank Wisner). Part analysis and part intelligence estimate, the briefing was clearly anti-Sukarno and advised Kennedy against placing any trust in the Indonesian president.

Robert Komer, from the National Security Council, disagreed with much of the briefing and bluntly expressed his opinion to the president's assistant for National Security Affairs, McGeorge Bundy: "The thesis is that Sukarno, the devil incarnate, will take Indonesia so far down the road as to make it a pushover for the PKI in (the) predictable future." For Kennedy's best option, Komer said that he preferred the same as Jones was recommending, that is, shifting to a "pro-Indonesian policy on West Irian plus more 'political' The Moscow arms deal forced Washington to rethink its role Of backing up the Dutch in the event Of Indonesian aggression. Australian support for a continued Dutch presence compounded Kennedy's dilemma because of ANZUS, the Australian-New Zealand-US alliance. Furthermore, if the United States supported the Dutch, the prospect of a majority of members of the United Nations decrying the United States as procolonialist placed another restriction on Washington's choice in the sovereignty dispute. Pauker warned that success in West Irian might convince the army to accept the PKI as a full partner, but this was implicitly contradicted by Nasution's stance.

Indonesia November 20 1963

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dutch%E2%80%93Indonesian_Round_Table_Conference

Dutch–Indonesian Round Table Conference (Dutch: Nederlands-Indonesische rondetafelconferentie, Indonesian: Konferensi Meja Bundar) was held in The Hague from 23 August to 2 November 1949, between representatives of the Kingdom of the Netherlands, the Republic of Indonesia and the Federal Consultative Assembly, representing various states the Dutch had created in the Indonesian archipelago.

Prior to this conference, three other high-level meetings between the Netherlands and Indonesia took place; the Linggadjati Agreement of 1947, Renville Agreement of 1948, and the Roem–Van Roijen Agreement of 1949. The conference ended with the cession of sovereignty to the United States of Indonesia.

Background

On 17 August 1945, Indonesian nationalist leader Sukarno declared Indonesian independence from Japan. The Dutch, who had been expelled in 1942 by the Japanese occupation of the Dutch East Indies, viewed the Indonesian leadership as Japanese collaborators, and wanted to regain control of their colony. The conflict between the Dutch and Indonesian nationalists developed into a full-scale Indonesian National Revolution.

By mid-1946, both sides were under international pressure to negotiate. The Dutch favoured a federal Indonesian state, and organised the Malino Conference in July 1946, which led to the establishment of the State of East Indonesia. In November, the Dutch and Indonesian sides reached an agreement at Linggadjati, in which the Netherlands agreed to recognize republican rule over Java, Sumatra and Madura, and that republic would become a constituent state of a federal United States of Indonesia. On 28 January 1949, the United Nations Security Council passed Resolution 67, calling for an end to the recent Dutch military offensive against republican forces in Indonesia and demanding the restoration of the republican government. It also urged the resumption of negotiations to find a peaceful settlement between the two sides.

Following the Roem–Van Roijen Agreement of 6 July, which effectively endorsed the Security Council resolution, Mohammad Roem said that the Republic of Indonesia-whose leaders were still in exile on Bangka Island-would participate in the Round Table Conference to accelerate the transfer of sovereignty.

The Indonesian government, in exile for over six months, returned to the temporary capital at Yogyakarta on 6 July 1949. To ensure commonality of negotiating position between the republic and the federal delegates, from 31 July until 2 August, Inter-Indonesian Conferences were in Yogyakarta between all component authorities of the future United States of Indonesia. The delegates agreed on the basic principles and outline for the Federal Constitution of 1949.

Following preliminary discussions sponsored by the UN Commission for Indonesia in Jakarta, it was decided the Round Table Conference would be held in The Hague.

Negotiations

Negotiations, which took place from 23 August to 2 November 1949, were assisted by the United Nations Commission for Indonesia. The Dutch, Republic of Indonesia and Federal Consultative Assembly delegations reached agreement resulting in a number of documents, namely a Charter of Transfer of Sovereignty-to come into immediate effect-a statute of union, a draft constitution, an economic agreement and agreements on social and military affairs.

The Dutch–Indonesian Union would not have any powers: it would be a consultative body with a permanent secretariat, a court of arbitration to settle any legal disputes, and a minimum of two ministerial conferences every year. It would be headed by the Dutch Queen in an entirely symbolic role.

The delegations also reached agreement on the withdrawal of Dutch troops "within the shortest possible time," and for the United States of Indonesia to grant most favoured nation status to the Netherlands. In addition, there would be no discrimination against Dutch nationals or companies and the republic agreed to take over trade agreements negotiated by the Dutch East Indies. However the two major areas of disagreement were over the debts of the Dutch colonial administration and the status of Western New Guinea.

Negotiations over the internal and external debts of the Dutch East Indies colonial administration were protracted, with each side presenting their own calculations and arguing over whether the United States of Indonesia should be responsible for debts incurred by the Dutch after the Japanese occupation of the Dutch East Indies in 1942. In particular the Indonesian delegations were indignant at having to cover what it saw as the costs of Dutch military action against it. Finally, thanks to the intervention of the United States member of the UN Commission on Indonesia, the Indonesian side came to realise that agreeing to pay part of the Dutch debt would be the price they would have to pay for the transfer of sovereignty. On 24 October, the Indonesian delegations agreed that Indonesia would take over approximately ƒ4.5 billion of Dutch East Indies government debt.

The issue of the inclusion or not of Western New Guinea almost resulted in the talks becoming deadlocked. The Indonesian delegations took the view that Indonesia should comprise the entire territory of Dutch East Indies. The Dutch refused to compromise, claiming Western New Guinea had no ethnic ties with the rest of the archipelago. Despite Dutch public opinion supporting transfer of Western New Guinea to Indonesia, the Dutch cabinet was worried it would not be able to ratify the Round Table Agreement in parliament if it conceded this point.

Finally, in the early hours of 1 November 1949, a compromise was reached: the status of Western New Guinea would be determined through negotiations between the United States of Indonesia and the Netherlands within a year of the transfer of sovereignty. The conference was officially closed in the Dutch parliament building on 2 November. https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dutch%E2%80%93Indonesian_Round_Table_Conference

In its early years, the province dealt with identity issues. The tension between local Jesuits and the missionaries culminated in the term, Indonesianisation, in the 1960s. Even as the locals served in more roles in the works of the province, the tension did not easily subside. Fr Woerkens, one of the Dutch missionaries, in 1974 wrote in the Indonesian Jesuits' internal newsletter, Internos: "The word Indonesianisation is sometimes understood incorrectly, using words like foreign workers, full time employees, and contracted workers. Such words hurt feelings. The polarisation of local and foreign Jesuits should not happen. It hurts the love among the Jesuits. The Church and the Society of Jesus is not a company consisting of local and foreign manpower." -https://jcapsj.org/2022/04/the-jesuits-in-indonesia-honouring-the-past-embracing-the-future/

This led to JFK being assassinated November 23, 1963 and RFK assassinated as he ran for president in 1968. Robert Francis Kennedy (November 20, 1925 - June 6, 1968), also known by his initials RFK, was an American politician and lawyer.

Indonesian mass killings of 1965-66

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Indonesian_mass_killings_of_1965%E2%80%9366

Large-scale killings and civil unrest primarily targeting members and supposed sympathizers of the Communist Party (PKI) were carried out in Indonesia from 1965 to 1966. Other affected groups included alleged communist sympathisers, Gerwani women, trade unionists, ethnic Javanese Abangan, ethnic Chinese, atheists, so-called "unbelievers", and alleged leftists in general. According to the most widely published estimates at least 500,000 to 1 million people were killed, with some estimates going as high as two to three million. The atrocities, sometimes described as a genocide or a politicide, were instigated by the Indonesian Army under Suharto. Research and declassified documents demonstrate the Indonesian authorities received support from foreign countries such as the United States and the United Kingdom.

The killings began as an anti-communist purge following a controversial attempted coup d'état by the 30 September Movement. It was a pivotal event in the transition to the "New Order" and the elimination of PKI as a political force, with impacts on the global Cold War. The upheavals led to the fall of President Sukarno and the commencement of Suharto's three-decade authoritarian presidency.

The abortive coup attempt released pent-up communal hatreds in Indonesia; these were fanned by the Indonesian Army, which quickly blamed the PKI. Additionally, the intelligence agencies of the United States, United Kingdom and Australia engaged in black propaganda campaigns against Indonesian communists. During the Cold War, the United States, its government, and its Western allies had the goal of halting the spread of communism and bringing countries into the sphere of Western Bloc influence. Britain had additional reasons for seeking Sukarno's removal, as his government was involved in an undeclared war with the neighbouring Malaysia, a Commonwealth federation of former British colonies.

Communists were purged from political, social, and military life, and the PKI itself was disbanded and
